No health threat seen from hepatitis outbreak

The hospitalization of two members of the local National Guard company with infectious hepatitis last week does not pose a threat to the rest of the community, health department officials said Wednesday.

According to Dr. James Terrian, medical director of the District Health Department, there is no indication that other people have been infected with the hepatitis-A virus. "The first quick answer is that, with the information I currently have, it is not a health threat," Terrian said.

"From my point of view it doesn't pose an immediate health threat to the community," Terrian said that an investigation into the outbreak of hepatitis, an inflammation of the liver, indicates that it occurred during the local National Guard Company's annual training exercises held in Grayling June 13-25. However, it looks as if illness was limited to the local company and not spread to those from other parts of the state.

"The information trail leads to the National Guard camp but it seems to be limited to the Manistique Company. There has been no report of illness in a wider spectrum of people," Terrian said.

Also, he added, it is unlikely even that other members of the local company will contract hepatitis. A telephone survey of all the members showed none had yet developed hepatitis symptoms.

Since the time since completion of the National Guard camp will soon exceed the "incubation period" of the virus—from two to six weeks from time of exposure to development of the disease—Terrian said other hepatitis cases within the company are not expected. "Right now it is my hope at least that the people who are going to get ill are ill," he said.

Terrian has been in daily contact with a state epidemiologist to see if other cases of the disease crop up among other National Guard Camp participants. So far, he said none have. After first being notified of the hepatitis cases, Terrian said he contacted the state and National Guard to notify them of the possible danger.

The immediate families of the two patients have been vaccinated to prevent them from contracting the disease, Terrian said. Lab tests have confirmed the disease as hepatitis-A in one patient and Terrian said the other patient probably has the same disease although tests failed to positively identify the hepatitis-A virus.

Other patient probably has the same disease although tests failed to positively identify the hepatitis-A virus.

"In this outbreak, the relatively short incubation period suggests it is hepatitis-A," Terrian said.

Hepatitis-A is one of three types of viral hepatitis, according to Terrian. Also known as infectious hepatitis, it is a relatively common, mild disease that exhibits flu-like symptoms. It is usually transmitted by direct contact with a virus carrier—who may not even know he is infected. "Those individuals, without any malice toward anybody, can transmit the virus to anyone. That keeps the virus in the human population," Terrian said.

In rare instances, Terrian said, hepatitis-A can be spread through "a common vehicle" such as food. There is no indication that food or any other common vehicle was what spread the disease in the current outbreak, according to Terrian.

He has been identified, Terrian said further spread of the disease is not likely. "It'd be very surprised if people in the hospital are going to get ill. That's one of the reasons we have hospitals. It seems very reasonable from the public health point of view to make the statement that the individuals affected are receiving the proper care."

Specific symptoms of the disease include abrupt development of fever, general discomfort, abdominal pain and jaundice, a yellowing of the skin, Terrian said.

Terrian emphasized that there was little reason to fear further spread of hepatitis. "There is no reason to expect there is any community-wide illness threat. It's not as though the community water supply has broken down and become contaminated with the hepatitis virus."

Boy drowns after rescue attempt fails

A Perkins boy drowned Sunday at Camp 7 Lake after two local youths attempted to rescue him.

Dead on arrival at Schoolcraft Memorial Hospital was Milton Ira Broeders, 14, of Perkins. He was the son of Milton and Gladis Broeders.

Schoolcraft County Sheriff's Deputy Bob Fisk said that when he arrived at Camp 7 at 2:30 p.m. Sunday two people were giving the youth cardio-pulmonary resuscitation.

Ret. Irie, 17, and Dan Lemirand, 16, both of Manistique, apparently tried unsuccessfully to save Broeders before he drowned.

Irie said he and Lemirand had been swimming around buoys about 50 feet off shore when Broeders swam up to them. "He said he was diving for a sock and he seemed like he was struggling then," Irie said. "We gave him the buoy to hold on to and told him to rest. We swam over to the other buoy and by the time we got there, he was already trying to swim back to shore."

"We watched him because we knew he couldn't swim too good and he started going under" about 45 feet from shore, Irie said. When Irie swam to Broeders and told him to grab his hand, "he panicked, pulled me to him and grabbed me around the neck and pushed me under," Irie said.

After twice swallowing water himself, Irie managed to get away from Broeders and swim to shore exhausted. "I almost didn't make it," he said. In the meantime, Lemirand had gotten an inner tube for Broeders to hang on to, but by the time he returned with it, Broeders was laying on the bottom, 16 feet beneath the surface, Irie said.

Four other swimmers then dove and recovered Broeders' body. Broeders was pronounced dead on arrival at the hospital at 3:22 p.m.

Council adopts unanimously

City, county agree on dog pound contract

The city and county have both agreed to a contract governing operation of a cooperative animal shelter, following action at Monday's City Council meeting.

The County Board had approved the same contract at its meeting last week. It was the third version of the contract to be submitted to the council, which earlier this month had rejected the second version because it did not adequately address which government—the city or county—would have which specific responsibilities for the pound's operation.

In moving to adopt the contract, Council Member Wally Leggett cited the need for "a little faith and confidence" between the city and the county. The council voted unanimously to adopt the pact.

After the city's rejection last month of the contract, the county adopted a revised version to address the council's concerns. That version specified that the city is responsible for feeding and care of animals at the shelter and that the county animal control officer would answer complaints from police agencies and also be responsible for killing and disposing of animals not claimed at the pound.

Although Council Member Kathy Wilson, who had raised the questions about the old version of the contract said she still had questions over the specifics of operating the pound, she added "I have no objections to the revised contract." The county is currently working on a new dog pound on city property that is expected to be finished next month. Under the agreement adopted Monday, the county will shoulder the cost of the construction and pay a part-time animal control officer to staff it. The city is responsible for maintaining the pound and caring for the animals in it.

County Board Member Lindsey Frenette, present at Monday's council meeting, said "a lot of this is nothing more than the agreement we had before except that we built you a building." Before the city closed its animal shelter two years ago, the county also paid a part-time animal control officer to round up loose dogs and impound them.

Since the shelter closed, both the city and county have had many complaints over dogs running loose.

In other matters Monday, the council: --Agreed to fund one-fourth of the local share of a study to determine if a "district heating" plant using waste wood for fuel would be feasible in Manistique. Frenette told the council that the county had agreed to pay a fourth of the $1,000 local cost for the study and that he was seeking approval for $250 each from the hospital, school district and city.

The study would cost a total of $10,000, Frenette said, with the remaining $9,000 to be paid for under a grant. It would research the cost and practicality of a district heating plant that would be capable of heating all local public buildings and any industrial or business building that tapped into its hot water lines.

--Heard complaints over the condition of the railroad crossings in Manistique and the frequent break-downs of the warning lights on them. Frenette commented to the council that the Soo Line Railroad crossing on Deer Street was "one of the roughest in the county."

In addition, he said the warning lights at the crossings at Deer, North Houghton and Elk Streets often activate without reason. Frenette, a school bus driver, said the unnecessary activation of the lights was a safety hazard.

Council Member David Vaughan agreed, saying that "people are getting so blasé about these lights blinking that one of these days someone is going to kiss an engine" of a train.

Another complaint concerned Soo Line trains blocking the tracks. Public Safety Director Joe McDonough said that the maximum fine of $500 had been levied against the company three times last year for blocking traffic over five minutes.

Mayor Bill Hackney told McDonough "I ticket them every time you get a chance to, to the point of harassing them, I don't care. Just get them off there."

--Rejected a bid to improve the city's ski hill. The bid by Peninsula Contractors of Marquette, was for $17,400 to move two lifts at the hill and construct a warm-up shed. Recreation Director Rick Larson said the bid for the project—the only one submitted—had come in higher than expected. The city has received a $7,500 grant that requires the city to match the funds with $7,500 of its own.

Larson said with the higher-than-expected bid added to money already spent for planning by the city, the total cost would be over $11,000, instead of the expected cost of $7,500.

--Adopted an ordinance that prohibits city residents from raising livestock within the city limits.

US-2 detour hurts local businessman

The detour of US highway 2 may be a minor inconvenience to most of the travelers using the road, but Irwin Helmus claims it is a lot more than that for him.

Helmus is the owner of the P&M Specialties store 3 1/2 miles east of Gulliver and claims the detour has cut his business to the point that he is afraid he will have to shut down next month, normally one of the busiest for the variety store. P&M's location puts it within the detour area, which extends from Gulliver east to the Inland Quarry Road.

Not only is through traffic shunted around Helmus' business, and with it most customers, state police earlier this month ticketed Helmus for driving through a closed portion of the highway to get to his house and business. The enforcement of the road closing has in turn scared off any local customers that might patronize Helmus said.

Although Helmus is appealing the $25 fine from the ticket, the biggest pain in the pocketbook comes from the nosedive in business caused by the detour. "It was just like turning our lights off," he said. "I did approximately $13,000 worth of business during the month of May and in June we're down to a little over $5,000 and it should have been $20,000. We're down three fourths—we're 75 percent off."

It all wouldn't be so bad, according to Helmus, if he had been notified about the detour before he left on his annual trip to buy solvents to sell from his store. This year, between December and April he travelled through the western states, purchasing $7,000 worth of jewelry, leather goods and Mexican novelties.

After he returned in April, he heard from neighbors of the planned detour and contacted the Newberry office of the Michigan Department of Transportation (MDOT) to have his fears confirmed.

On June 2, the detour was set up and is scheduled to continue until Oct. 1. While on his buying trip through the western states, Helmus said "we had all our mail forwarded to us in Oregon and we got one letter saying possibly we might have to move a couple of our signs, but nothing about a detour."

Ernest Wiedenhofer, district engineer for the MDOT, said Tuesday that "we don't have a policy just because we're detouring a road" to notify all the residents of the detour. He noted that Helmus did not attend a public meeting to discuss the detour held in February by MDOT in Gulliver.

Without the detour, Wiedenhofer said, the repaving of that segment of US-2 would take over two years, "which would have been injurious to him, too." He noted that the state had provided a sign at each end of the detour advising that the store was still open for business. "We were trying to accommodate him with a sign because he's suffering some loss. We felt it would behoove us to do what we could for him," he said.

The Manistique post of the Michigan State Police also defended the ticket issued to Helmus—the only one given out since the detour began—on driving along the closed portion of the detour.

Lt. Jerry Bolt of the State Police said that the road paving company had complained of traffic in the County Dems endorse millage, Forstner

The Schoolcraft County Democrats met Tuesday, July 27 and endorsed the 2.0 millage proposal for Medical Care Facility operation to be voted upon at the Aug. 10 primary election.

The endorsement cited the human element as the first concern, followed by fiscal responsibility and loss of jobs as the three main reasons why this proposal needs the support and vote of all the people of Schoolcraft County, regardless of their political belief.

The party also endorsed Richard Forstner of Manistique as the party's choice for 107th District representative in the state legislature, who will replace retiring Charles Varnum.

"The party asks all the people of Schoolcraft County to get behind this local business man, and elect him to go to Lansing; citing the advantages of having a local man in the legislature to work for the interests of Schoolcraft County," the endorsement said.

County gets reprieve from Medicare bills

Schoolcraft County got a reprieve until after the Aug. 10 millage election from a state threat to shut revenue sharing payments if it did not pay up on some $200,000 it has been billed for operation of the county Medical Care Facility.

According to State Representative Charles Varnum, the state backed off from the threat to shut off the revenue sharing funds if the county did not pay its bills by July 30.

Varnum said he called the executive assistant to the director of the Department of Social Services and was told the state will wait until September to attempt collection of the money.

The county has never conceded that it owes the state anything. The bills in question have been sent as a result of a controversial change made in the way state aid is paid to fund operation of local medical care facilities. They amounted to $163,000 for 1981 and are expected to average about $206,000 a year for 1982 and later years.

Without admitting that it owed the money to the state, the county in February asked voters to approve up to 2 mills in additional property tax to pay the bills. That proposal was narrowly defeated in a low voter turnout and the county decided to still, it is not clear whether the county would continue not to pay the bills. Nor is it clear if the state has the authority to actually keep revenue sharing funds from the county in an attempt to collect the money. Varnum said that a bill in the state legislature that would specifically authorize the Department of Social Services to withhold revenue sharing payments had little chance of passage.

PREPARING FOR GLORY, hopefully, these alumni of Manistique High School began workouts Monday in preparation for the fourth annual football game against alumni of Big Bay de Noc high school. The money raised by the game next Friday, Aug. 6, will go to support athletics at the two schools. So far in the series, Manistique has the edge, two games to one.

At home with Sarah

by Sarah Bunnell

I have been asked for recipes to use with raspberries so I have been watching for something new and different. This one came from my sister-in-law from Danard, California and I saved it to share with you so that the raspberries will not be ready for picking. This one is easy to make. I'll dessert this with cream and delight.

RASPBERRY DESSERT

1/2 lb. Nabisco Vanilla Wafers
1 cup butter or oleo
1 cup powdered sugar
1 egg

Crush vanilla wafers. Line a 10" square pan with crumbs keeping out a handful. Cream butter with powdered sugar. Add egg of beat until smooth and creamy thick. Drop by spoonfuls over crumbs. Spread with fresh raspberries. Cover with whipped cream (sweetened and flavored). Sprinkle remaining crumbs over cream. Refrigerate for 4 hours before serving.

Double the recipe for a 9x13 pan, but remember, it is so rich so it goes fast. The single recipe will serve 8 or 9.

Sarah says... when you need to remove a tick, don't attempt to pull its body straight out. The tick's mouthpiece will break off leaving the head and mouthpiece still embedded. Instead flip the tick over and pull steadily with tweezers at a 45 degree angle. (S. Gray MD, family physician, Berkeley, CA.)

Downtown Mall

Why not?

Last week's successful sidewalk sale crystallized a thought that we've been tossing around for some time: why not permanently block off traffic from Cedar Street between Walnut and Oak and create a pedestrian mall? Last week's sale showed that the downtown area, with its numerous concessions can attract a lot of people to the downtown area to patronize local merchants. With the completion of a parking lot behind the stores on the east side of Cedar and the possibility of similar parking facilities on the west side, the idea of routing vehicles around the area looks more and more feasible.

Other cities have found the creation of a pedestrian mall in downtown areas just the ticket to halt their decline and begin a robust revitalization. The block on Cedar Street would lend itself to such development: vehicles could be shunted around it with minimal disruption to the traffic flow; parking is available and with the eventual rerouting of U.S. 1, anyone driving through Manistique will have a perfect view of what could be a unique and inviting pedestrian mall.

Although the first step would be to block off traffic from south Cedar, eventually the street would be paved with brick and brought up to the level of the sidewalks, landscaping and amenities added and the turn-of-the-century facades of most of the downtown buildings restored.

Interestingly, the architect hired to advise the east Cedar Street merchants on how to remodel the rear back entrances to their stores to attract customers from the new parking lot came up with a similar scheme—without being asked for blocking off Cedar Street. Although the details of that plan are more ambitious—reroute traffic around two blocks instead of one and cover the entire street with a giant canopy—the concept is the same.

At this point, the details of the scheme are not important. What is important is to determine whether the idea itself will fly.

To decide that, the following questions have to be answered:
 --Can parking be provided behind the stores on both sides of Cedar? The east side lot will be finished this year. City Manager John Matthews said he hopes to apply for another grant to complete a similar project on the west side once the east side parking lot is completed. Parking must be available on both sides so that merchants on one side do not have an unfair advantage over those on the other.
 --Is money available? What sorts of local, state and federal funding are available to finance a mall will of course determine how ambitious a remodeling, if any, can be undertaken.
 --Will the merchants themselves approve? Naturally, if the store owners do not see a mall-type arrangement as in their best interest, it shouldn't be built.

This last question is probably the most important. If the merchants—and area residents in general—don't think much of the idea of a downtown pedestrian mall, nothing will ever be done. The first step, then, is to build a consensus that the mall is a good idea and worth working for.
 To us, the idea is a good one. We feel it could provide Manistique with an attraction unique in the U.P. and be the basis for building up a thriving downtown area once again.

Inland Steel reports losses

Inland Steel Company recently reported a second quarter loss of $23,209,000, or $1.10 per common share, contrasted with earnings of $29,504,000, or $1.40 per share, in the year-earlier period.

The Company's third consecutive quarterly loss contributed to a first-half loss of $42,175,000, or $2.01 per share. Inland earned $50,925,000, or $2.41 per share, in 1981's first half.

The 1982 first quarter loss was $18,966,000, or 91 cents per share, and reflected the cumulative effect of a change in the depreciation method. Without that adjustment, the loss would have been $22,956,000, or $1.10 per share.

 Second quarter steel shipments of 1,080,000 tons were slightly below those of the previous quarter and the lowest for a second quarter since 1967. Shipments were the lowest of any quarter since 1971.

The paltry demand level accompanied by high levels of subsidized steel imports combined to reduce second quarter sales to $743,649,000, some 3 percent below first quarter sales of $763,421,000 and 20 percent below the $1,043,463,000 sales total Inland reported for 1981's second quarter.

Dog found strangled

On Saturday, July 25, the body of a large black lab-type dog was discovered by a Germfask resident in the woods behind his workshop. A short blue and white nylon cord had been knotted around a tree and was wound tightly about the dog's neck. Death was due to strangulation. Whether intentional or accidental, the result was cruel and unnecessary.

A woman who lives on the other side of the woods recalls hearing frantic barking throughout Friday night and assumed it was a neighbor's dog.

Anyone missing a dog of this description or having knowledge concerning this animal should contact the Humane Society (341-2806) or the State Police. The identity of informants will be kept confidential.

Tribes restrict Bay de Noc fishing

Following an unprecedented request by Upper Peninsula sport-fishing groups, the Chippewa-Ojibwa Treaty Fishery Management Authority agreed to close a portion of Little Bay de Noc.

The closing took effect Saturday, July 24.

The Management Authority was created in 1981 by the Sault Ste.

Marie Tribe of Chippewa Indians, Bay Mills Indian Community and Grand Traverse Band of Ottawa and Chippewa Indians to address conservation issues and enact treaty fishing regulations.

The closing was recommended by tribal biologist William Eger after consulting Michigan Department of Natural Resources biologists.

Indian leaders had met last week with representatives of a coalition of area sportfishing groups, and all parties to the meeting expressed a concern for the area's fishery.

That meeting represents a thawing of relations between Indian communities and sportfishermen in an area that has been the scene of vandalism and some vigilante activity directed against treaty fishermen.

Management Authority Chairman Joseph Lumsden said, "We believe that water pollution is impairing natural reproduction of the walleye stock in this area, and heavy sportfishing is stressing planted stocks. We do not believe that the present level of harvest should be maintained, and we are therefore closing the area to treaty fishing."

Indian leaders stressed their continued concern for the fishery resource which they insist has been more heavily fished by non-Indians. They note the closure of the area to treaty fishing is one indication of that concern. In marked contrast to allegations by the state's Department of Natural Resources that treaty fishers have been pursuing their fish harvest with no regard for the resource.

Threatened violence in the area was not a factor in the decision, according to Lumsden, who maintains that tribal concerns and sport-fisher concerns are not mutually exclusive.

34-INCH PIKE: This northern pike was caught by Cindy Henry, daughter of Leslie Henry, while fishing at the Marina Tuesday morning. Cindy used minnows as bait.

Today's uniforms might have shocked 1910 girls' basketbatters

About that photo the girls are (back row) Ruth Williams, Beda Highland (now Hougl) and Marion Rubin. Center: Lucia Bouschor. Front: Ruth Rahl and Ned Ledstrand. Beda graduated in 1910. This photo was taken and the girls played teams in Newberry, Munising and Gladstone. She doesn't remember who won, but she had a good time and traveled to the towns by train, which necessitates an over-night stay the night of the game. No team buses in those days, the girls paid their own way to the train.

Marion Rubin worked in a store in town. Many of us remember Robert Rubin and his deep bass voice. Ruth Williams was the sister of Laura and Lance. Ruth Rahl's dad was a pharmacist in the local drug store. Ledstrand later married Ben Gern Jr., and most of us know that Lucella was Les Bouschor's sister.

These uniforms were a dark blue serge and they had bloomers to match. Nobody caught a girl playing basketball in those days, I would think they would have dared appear in public in the uniform they wear today.

Memories Jack Orr

Beda lived on Chippewa Ave. and the usual route to school was over the "trams." The rules for girls' basketball included the restriction that the guards or was it the forwards, couldn't cross the centerline, but Beda says they sometimes prevailed on the coach, Mrs. John Forthar (nee Lindeman) to let them play boy's rules. The gym was the old Manistique Garage, now a part of Curran's. This building was also the army and was also used as the town roller rink. The high school at the time was the old grey frame building on Main Street, about where the school parking lot is now.

Beda recalls that on the day the photo was to be made she had a lapse of memory and forgot all about the appointment. She ran home to get her uniform, crossing as usual on the trams, and as she put it on she realized that the dicky was missing. That's why Beda's uniform is pinned at the top, as you can see.

You learned to get along with the other members of your family or you had problems.

John was hired as chore boy, he cut wood and ran errands and watered and fed the horses and helped in the barn a nice way of saying he shovelled manure and generally stayed hands for whatever came up. The camp was north of Remington, 30 cal. rifle with the stock busted off, he needed a drink and offered to sell the gun cheap. No one wanted a rifle without a stock so young John made him an offer of five dollars and got the gun. He then got a piece of black cherry from the woodpile and with an axe, drawknife and rasp fashioned an acceptable stock for his new weapon. One of the lumbertacks came up with an old very accurate, and one day soon he came back to camp with about a dozen partridge, and he and the camp personnel had a royal feed.

Well, the word got out that the camp people were eating better than the men in the woods, and when Jack John heard about it he had a message for John: Go out and get birds for the men or go down the road and get it come back.

Jack furnished the shells and the next day young John was out with his gun. He came back with a gunny sack of birds but the cook said he fed more than just those few, so out he went again with a new sack, which he also filled. They had the feed and everyone was happy and John kept his job. He had the gun for years until he "sore out the barrel"; his technique with birds was to "shoot their heads off" and you had to have a good eye and steady hand for this procedure.

Those were the Good Old Days.

P.S. You may recognize that large photo as one we've used before. You're right; it appeared with our column two years ago, but fit today's basketball story so well we decided to use it again. The locale is the same building and it's still there, and I think some of the same girls are in it.

More free cheese to be given out

In the third installment of the program to give away surplus cheese from the federal government, over three tons of American processed cheese will be distributed this Thursday, July 29, around the county.

According to Janet Hunter of the Community Action Agency, which is overseeing distribution of the cheese, the 1,260 five-pound blocks will be given out at five sites in Schoolcraft County.

Cheese will be given out at the Manistique area Senior Citizens Center's parking lot Thursday from 7 a.m. until 5:30 p.m. or until the cheese is gone. Four other sites will be open from 9 a.m. until 11:30 a.m. Thursday. They are the Gormfisk Senior Citizens Center, the Seney Senior Citizens Center, the Cooks Town Hall and Mueller Township Hall.

I didn't know until recently that John Lashich had spent some time in a lumber camp, as a young boy back in the early Twenties. He was fourteen, and now looks back on his sojourn in the camp as a valuable foundation for adult life and a true learning experience.

In those days when you went out to cut a camp, you were there for the whole winter. Unless you got hurt and needed medical attention in town, you settled in for the long stay 'til spring broke. Consequently, the men in camp became a family and

The Curtis Volunteer Ambulance Corps had three calls this past week. Two were to the Helen Newberry Joy Hospital in Newberry and one to the Schoolcraft Memorial Hospital in Manistique.

There were no fire calls reported. Mr. and Mrs. James Stevenson of Loris, Ohio are spending their vacation at the Turner cottage on Sprang Point, South Manistique Lake. Mr. and Mrs. Ben Kowalski, also of Loris, are their guests. The Stevensons have spent 34 summers in Curtis.

Voting study shows Varnum, Irwin pro-business, jobs

Both local state legislators scored high in a recent survey of voting records on business and job-related issues, according to the Michigan State Chamber of Commerce.

In the study of state legislators' voting record on 19 issues seen by the chamber as "vital to the job providers of Michigan," State Representative Charles Varnum of Manistique voted in accordance with the chamber's position 14 of 16 times, 88 percent, and State Senator Mitch Irwin of Sault Ste. Marie agreed with the chamber on 14 of 17 votes, 82 percent.

Overall, the voting record of state legislators on business and job-related issues ranged from a high of 100 percent to a low of 31 percent in the House and from a high of 100 percent to a low of 43 percent in the Senate.

The voting record is published as a "Job Providers" index in the state chamber's Executive Report, a monthly publication mailed to more than 6,000 member Michigan business firms. The index was compiled by the chamber following a study of key legislative roll calls on 19 job-related issues, ranging from worker's compensation to toxic waste disposal to property tax reform.

Five senators voted in accordance with the chamber's position on all votes that they cast. They are Sen. Richard Allen (Republican-District 30, DeWitt), Alvin DeGroot (R-28, Pigeon), John Mowat, Jr. (R-19, Adrian), William Sederburg (R-24, East Lansing), and Thomas Gustafson (D-9, Mt. Clemens). Scoring the lowest at 43 percent was Sen. John Hertel (D-2, Harper Woods).

In the House of Representatives, four representatives voted in accordance with the State Chamber's position on all votes that they cast. They are Reps. Mary Keith Ballantine (R-23, Jackson), Martin Butth (R-50, Rockford), James Hadden (R-40, Adrian), and Paul Hillegonds (R-54, Holland). Scoring the lowest at just 31 percent was Rep. Debbie Stabenow (D-58, Lansing).

The outstanding voting records of those legislators who voted in accordance with our position the majority of the time demonstrates their keen interest and concern in supporting legislation that encourages economic development and new job opportunities in Michigan," Chamber President James Barrett noted.

Barrett pointed out that nearly 74 percent of the Senators (28 of 39) voted in accordance with the State Chamber's position on more than 70 percent of the roll calls. In the House, on the other hand, only 54 percent of the Representatives (59 of 110) voted in accordance with the State Chamber's position on more than 70 percent of the roll calls.

Since the federal cheese giveaway program started, the local Community Action Agency has supervised the distribution of 10,510 pounds of cheese. When the current round of distribution is complete, the weight of cheese will top 16,810 pounds, over eight tons.

The cheese was originally purchased from dairy farmers by the federal government's Commodity Credit Corporation as part of the federal dairy price support program.

Senior citizens need caution in hot weather

Hot weather is an issue of vital concern to the elderly.

Most medical experts agree that as people age, they do not adjust as well as younger people to increases in temperature, in part because they sweat less. In addition, the elderly are more likely to have underlying diseases or take medicines which decrease their resistance to heat stress. As a result, during periods of very high temperature - especially if it is also humid - the elderly or those with certain medical problems, such as heart disease, stroke, or diabetes, may build up body heat which can lead to heat stroke or heat exhaustion.

Heat stroke is a failure of all body cooling mechanisms. It is a medical emergency requiring immediate attention and treatment by a doctor. The symptoms include: faintness, dizziness, headache, nausea, loss of consciousness, high body temperature (104 degrees F/40 degrees C or higher), rapid pulse, and flushed skin.

Heat exhaustion is the most common form of illness due to hot weather. It takes longer to develop and results from a loss of body fluids and salt. The symptoms of heat exhaustion are: weakness, heavy sweating, nausea and lightheadedness. It is treated by resting in bed away from the heat, restoring body water by drinking cool fluids, and lowering body temperature by taking sponge baths or applying wet towels to the body.

Two other heat-related disorders usually result from exercising in the heat, especially at the start of hot weather before the body has had a chance to become adjusted to the higher temperatures. Heat syncope is marked by dizziness, fatigue, and sudden faintness. Heat cramps are sharp pains in the abdomen, arms, or legs caused by loss of salt from the body due to heavy sweating. Both conditions are treated by resting, cooling off, and drinking extra liquids, or, under a doctor's supervision, replacing the salt that was lost. The Upper Peninsula has not had a wave of hot spells so far this summer, but it is important to be aware of what disorders the higher temperatures can cause and what some of the speedy remedies are - if and when the heat does arrive.

When a friend is ill

Visiting someone in the hospital isn't always fun. And when the diagnosis is heart or another serious illness, figuring out the right things to say and do can be especially difficult. Some guidelines for making the visit comfortable for yourself and the patient are offered by Dr. James Holland, chief of the psychiatric service at Memorial Sloan-Kettering Cancer Center in New York.

Knock before you go into the room. Dr. Holland advises it helps the patient retain a sense of privacy that often is eroded in a hospital setting. If you greet the patient with a handshake or a hug, do it. "Touching can be a very important way of giving reassurance," Dr. Holland notes. "Patients feel more isolated if they sense physical as well as emotional distance."

Sit down to show that you're not in a hurry - and avoid the discomforting appearance of hovering over the patient. Word your queries so that the patient isn't forced to talk about the illness. For example, instead of saying, "How are you?" ask "How are you feeling today?" or "How is the food?" And don't feel that you have to make conversation all the time.

"We all tend to be tongue-tied when we talk to someone with cancer," Dr. Holland said. "Do you talk about it or pretend you don't know?" Neither approach is entirely correct. Rather, let the patient know that you're a willing listener if he or she wants to talk.

When to leave? Trust your own instincts, Dr. Holland advises. When you think the visit has lasted long enough, make a move to leave and then go unless the patient urges you to stay. If the patient becomes fatigued, pale or irritable, the visit - no matter how short - has become too lengthy.

Remember when?

(taken from the July 26, 1962 Pioneer Tribune)

A three-mill, three-year tax levy, for school operation purposes, was approved by Portage Township voters in Curtis by a vote 64-24.

Manistique played host to the annual Upper Peninsula Conference of the Michigan State Historical Society last Friday, with large attendance at both the noon luncheon and evening dinner meeting. G. Leslie Bouscher, former president of the county Historical Society, spoke at the noon meeting, outlining the history and background of the Schoolcraft County area.

William E. Malloch, electronics technician third class, USN, son of Mr. and Mrs. Earl Malloch, Jr., of 542 Michigan Ave., is serving aboard the helicopter landing platform ship USS Boer.

Mrs. Dorothy Wieland and daughters Sally and Wendy have returned from Detroit where they visited relatives.

Mrs. Harold Klugstad and Mrs. William Gulman were hostesses to the ladies bridge group at the Golf Club Tuesday. Bridge awards were given to Mrs. William Corson, Mrs. E.T. Lundstrom and Mrs. Glen Critton.

Jan D. LeDuc, son of Mr. and Mrs. J.L. LeDuc, Indian Lake, will be graduated with honors from Northern Michigan College at Marquette this Friday. He will receive a bachelor of science degree in business administration.

John Misoff left Sunday morning for Winona Lake, Ind., to attend two-week course in advanced photography at the Professional Photographers of America school there.

Thursday is Party day at the Methodist Church. Orders may be phoned in advance to 224-J or 447-W.

The City Band concerts, shifted from Thursday to Wednesday, are presented at 8 p.m., much to the enjoyment of the crowd, most of whom listen to the program in their cars, and show their appreciation by knocking their horns.

The Air Search and Rescue Squadron held their annual dance and picnic last weekend. Clarence Gerlach, Larry Boyd, Vern Bernard and Ken Schurter, piloted the planes all afternoon for the rides for young and old. Ferd Gorsche is the band's director.

'Now is the time for Manistique to show whether they want a National Guard unit here,' Brig. Gen. Carson said.

Children can bring joy

Much has been written lately about meeting the special needs of the elderly. Children, too, can become aware of these special needs and, with guidance, can do much to bring pleasure to their more mature relatives and friends. Possible ways for children to do this include:

--Writing a letter. If the relative or friend doesn't live nearby, encourage a child to write frequent letters. You might suggest that he or she draw a picture of a loved pet or some flower, which could be included in the envelope.

--Visiting. Years ago I made regular visits to a member of our church who lived in a retirement home. One time I took my children, then ages four and six, with me. What a joy it was to see their presence bring smiles to residents sitting on the porch at the time. From then on I took the boys with me every time I could.

R. Neiffert of the Michigan National Guard told Manistique Rotarians Monday. Gen. Neiffert was introduced by John Moffat, co-chairman of the Army Support Committee, who said his group was organized "because we feel it is important to our economy that we have these facilities."

Mrs. George Romney spoke to a full house of more than 150 supporters who had gathered for a banquet in her honor in Liberty Hall Tuesday night. The wife of the Republican candidate for governor surprised no one when she told the group that she believed her husband George could do the job of bringing Michigan's battling factions together.

Learn pension rights - now

You and/or your spouse may be 10 many years away from job retirement that your company or union pension plan seems too remote a subject to be given much thought. At any rate, your rights are spelled out in technical terms that boggle you have tucked away somewhere in a bottom drawer. You can look them up any time you have a need to. That's true, of course. But it's a mistake to postpone learning about your pension rights until the need arises. By that time it may be too late, experts at the Pension Rights Center warn. To assist people in understanding the requirements, benefits and limitations of their particular pension plan, the nonprofit organization has published a twenty-eight page guide that leads the reader through the maze of terminology with ease. We learned, for example, that membership in a plan does not necessarily mean you'll be eligible for a pension. In most cases members become eligible only after ten years - and the years you worked before age twenty-two may not count. Furthermore, since participation in most pension plans requires that a person work at least a thousand hours a year, many part-time employees miss out on being covered by working nineteen instead of twenty hours a week - a mere sixty-minute difference! A GUIDE TO UNDERSTANDING YOUR PENSION PLAN is available from the Pension Rights Center, Dept. WD, 1346 Connecticut Ave. NW, Washington, D.C. 20036. There is a $2 charge for printing, postage and handling.

UP faces shortage of nursing care

Do you have an elderly parent who requires more care than you can provide? You are not alone. A shortage of adequate facilities for nursing care, or for domiciliary care is a problem that many families in the Upper Peninsula must face. 147 percent of the U.P. population is 65 or over while the state average is 10.1 percent. This higher proportion of aged is only part of the story. In addition, the U.P. has less facilities for nursing care than does the rest of the state. We have only 53 nursing home beds per 1,000 persons 65 or over. The state average is 69.4 beds per 1,000 persons 65 or over.

Michigan's eight Health Systems Agencies (HSAs) are working together on a study to develop a means of estimating the need for nursing homes. The methods used by the Michigan Department of Public Health show a surplus of facilities in the U.P. in spite of the fact that we have a higher proportion of aged and a lower rate of nursing home beds to population. The occupancy rates for nursing facility beds in the U.P. averages 97 percent. Many nursing homes have waiting lists of persons needing care.

Henry graduates from Navy course

Robert Henry, formerly of Manistique, recently graduated with distinction from a U.S. Navy course for hull maintenance technicians. Henry, the son of Sylvia Boda and Wallace Henry of Manistique, graduated fifth in his class in the 11-week Navy class, which included instruction in firefighting, damage control, arc welding, silver brazing, gas welding, sheet metal layout and fabrication and pipe layout and fabrication.

Henry was stationed in San Francisco for the course, which ended July 6, and has been transferred to Hawaii for an 18-month tour of duty.

Robert W. Henry

The UPHSA identifies a problem and takes action to alleviate the problem. The development of a home health care program is being considered by a local hospital as a result of one such study.

When there is a shortage of beds, persons requiring care are forced to go to institutions that are greater distances from home. This is undesirable as it is difficult for friends and relatives to visit and take them out for holidays or other occasions. The UPHSA will be studying the extent of this problem in the U.P. If it can be shown to occur frequently, it will be additional evidence that there is an unmet need for the care of our elderly population.

Copies of the studies done in Luce and Delta counties are available by calling or writing to the Upper Peninsula Health Systems Agency, Incorporated, 1500 W. Washington Street, Marquette, Michigan 49855, phone 909-228-7753.
