Production Of Toys Is Begun By New Manistique Industry

Motorists Urged To Be Careful Not To Hit Deer

Motorists traveling U.S.-2 or M-94 in the late hours of the evening during the past few weeks have been thrilled with the sight of dozens of deer feeding on the grassy shoulders of the roads.

As many as 12 deer have been seen on the road between Engism and Nahma Junction in the evening, including five with tiny fawns. One motorist counted 17 on M-94 on one trip. The highway near Finney Park are the same with dozens of the animals feeding every night along the pavement.

Motorists have driven slowly through these deer areas to avoid hitting the animals which often start across the road in front of cars. Nevertheless several deer already have been killed by cars, some of them does with little fawns.

The plant is equipped with four belt conveyors which most of the manufacturing operations are performed. It also has riveting machines and other smaller equipment. Although the present payroll includes only five penons, more employees will be hired as production facilities demand increased help. The productive capacity of the plant on toy parts is expected to eventually reach between fifty and seventy-five thousand monthly.

The plant will be installed this year, and by fall the firm expects to add another metallic toy to its output. Additional plant space, it is expected, also will be required. Foreseeing this the management of the company acquired lots adjoining the plant several months ago.

The Helman-Thompson company was incorporated in October, 1944, with Fred W. Helman as president and treasurer and Edwin Thompson as vice president and secretary.

The firm acquired the old Osterhout garage building on Deer street, near the M. and L. S. railroad depot; as a plant and during the past six months carried out extensive remodeling work, including new walls, roof and floors, and new machinery and productive activities. Machinery, too, was gradually acquired, as well as necessary raw materials.

Eleven operations are required to produce the aluminum pistol now on the local market, and soon will be distributed throughout the wide sales area. Plans already are being studied to utilize waste aluminum from toy run operations and also to introduce the production of other major toy units in the company's program.

ELKS WARNED TO BE ALERT AGAINST ISMS

Lodges Throughout Nation Must Keep Country On Guard, Says National Head

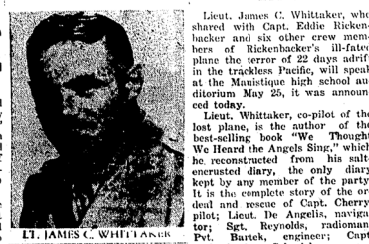

The Elks lodges of the United States must take the responsibility of keeping America "alerted" against the invasion of foreign "isms," Wade Kemper, Grand Exalted Ruler of the Elks, of Wheeling, W. Va., told top members of the Elks lodge at a dinner program Tuesday evening at Marquette.

The speaker told his audience that Nazism and Fascism are not dead; they are just dormant and are awaiting a new opportunity to appear in their alien philosophy throughout the world. Militarily, the United States and its allies should be alert against Russia and Japan he said, but the philosophy of life which drove those countries into an aggressive war is still being nurtured and will again threaten the peace of the world unless it is resisted.

The speaker said tribute to Soviet Russia as a fighting ally in the last war, and said that there should be no problem between Russia and the United States which could not be settled peacefully. However, he said, we should be alert to keep Communism in Russia; we want no part of it; we will resist it with all of our might and intelligence.

The following men represented the Manistique Elks lodge at the event: O. J. Schuster, exalted ruler; L. J. Crawford, leading knight; Thomas Grimsley, loyal knight; Leonard Males, secretary; Charles D. Manson, chaplain; John Girvin, inner guard; Ronald Piegel, tyler; George Stephens, treasurer; J. P. Prine, chairman of the Elks lodge; Neil Reese, president of the Elks lodge; C. E. Leonard, president of the Elks lodge; H. P. Norton, past exalted ruler; and H. P. Trieger.

"Cancer is a real and personal chronic or prolonged irritation, threat to every single one of us," declared Dr. George A. Shaw in a talk before the Manistique Rotary club Monday noon.

"Contrary to general belief," he said, "cancer is no respecter of persons, killing young and old alike. Cancer killed 697,000 Americans last year, more than twice as many Americans as were killed or listed missing in the World War. A total of 175,000 men, women and children in the United States are dying of cancer every hour."

To give those who now die needlessly, Dr. Shaw declared, there are:

1. Spread knowledge everywhere of the danger signs of cancer and urge people to consult a doctor as soon as they are detected.
2. Provide more and much better hospital facilities for prevention, diagnosis and treatment of cancer.
3. Expand widely the scientific men, the proper treatment and possibly even the elimination of cancer.

Dr. Shaw declared, there are:

1. Any sore that does not heal, particularly about the tongue, mouth or lips.
2. A painless lump or thickening, especially in the breast, lip or on the neck.
3. Irregular bleeding or discharge from the nipple or any natural body opening.

5. Persistent indigestion.
6. Persistent hoarseness, unexplained cough, or difficulty in swallowing.
7. Any change in the normal bowel habits.

9. About 2,000 American boys and girls die of cancer every year.

Veterinarian Gives 5-Point Program To Curb Mastitis

It is estimated that approximately 25 percent of the milking dairy animals are affected with mastitis, according to Dr. George Weaver, extension specialist in animal pathology, Michigan State College.

Mastitis is an inflammation of the udder, and dairy cows with the disease produce about 20 percent less milk with approximately a 50 per cent drop in quality.

Dr. Weaver makes these recommendations to help the dairy producer with his problem of mastitis:

- 1. Follow good sanitary milking procedure. 2. Develop good sanitary herd management procedures. 3. Hold a regular examination of the herd by a veterinarian.

The number of times milk cows should be tested depends upon the herd, but a suggested plan is monthly intervals for three months. This will be followed by every-other-month for about eight months and then every month thereafter.

With Michigan's dairy production estimated at $171,600,000 last year, it is important that the herd and the industry be kept to control mastitis.

Refugee money from Europe is partly responsible, according to Bookman, for the Florida resort boom. Michigan's number one problem, according to the Michigan United Conservation Clubs, is pollution of streams. Unless Michigan and other states act to put an end to the industrial practice of dumping chemical wastes in streams and require cities to install sewage disposal plants, the problem is likely to provoke Congressional action.

Although he may have lacked legal powers to do it, Governor Harvey P. Young successfully averted a strike of employees of a leading utility in Michigan. He did it by notifying labor leaders that the state would act to enforce the 30-day cooling off requirement in the state mediation law.

Worth thinking about: Minnesota's state labor net, which has a similar cooling off period along with the mediation law, has a 70 per cent decrease in the first six months of the law compared with the previous three-year average.

Sportsmen in the Oseola-Alcona and Josen area predict that federal foresters will lose their jobs because of negligence which resulted in the loss of approximately 22,000 acres of good timber in April forest fires.

Last fall the foresters set fire to piles of sawmill cuttings accumulated on mobile cutting of timber and hence constituted a fire hazard.

The winter's snow failed to check the smoldering embers in several piles, however, and a still April breeze fanned the sparks into forest fires that ravaged an area of around 50,000 acres. The Mackinac rangers' station was destroyed. As a matter of fact the sudden conflagration caught the rangers by surprise. Their own fire-fighting equipment was lost.

If a sportsman left a camp fire burning in the forest, he would be deemed as a fool. Yet this was exactly what the federal foresters did when they permitted the sawmill piles to smolder all winter long!

One million acres of Michigan land have gone out of agricultural use in the last five years. In 1880 Michigan ranked first in lumber production, today, Oregon holds the lead. A recent survey of Michigan houses disclosed that 50 per cent were built entirely or partially of lumber.

er and labor costs rise under union pressure. Michigan's second only in Florida in recent development of airports and landing fields, according to Bruce Anderson, chairman of the state advisory committee on aviation. At the beginning of the war Michigan had 124 airports and fields, during the war 72 more were built and put into operation.

There is no sportsman who will ever fly from the south to the north in Michigan without experiencing a great thrill when looking down on the great resources that nature has given us," says Anderson.

Twenty-two per cent of all crimes in Michigan during 1934 were committed by youngsters who had not reached their twenty-first birthday. These teenagers were responsible for 35 per cent of all robberies; 51 per cent of all burglaries; 35 per cent of all larcenies; 61 per cent of automobile thefts.

Representatives of 17 leading trucking companies operating in Michigan told members of the public service commission recently that they paid $1.05 for every $1 of revenue received during the third quarter, 1934. Union members have been demanding a contract clause that a company refuse to haul "unfair" freight as defined by the union.

Forest fires destroy timber, damage pasture, cause floods, ruin fishing and destroy wildlife. "There is only one way to liquidate that debt and that is through higher wages for all of our people."

Luecke Traces History Of Labor-Industry Relations

In his talk before the Manistiquin Rotary club last week on a recent-day labor strike, John Luecke, federal labor conciliator, presented an analysis of the situation as it exists today and his plan for community cooperation and understanding in solving labor-management difficulties.

Tracing the changing picture of labor-industry relations since the 1920's Luecke first classified strikes. There is the strike because of unmet grievances; there is the strike because of an unjust discharge; there is the strike because of jurisdictional disputes; there is the strike because of a provision of the agreement, and in normal times the strike for higher wages and classification of jobs," he explained.

"In normal times, such as between World Wars I and II, about 75 per cent of all strikes were for higher wages. The number, however, in comparison with the number of employees in industry, most industries worked 48 and very small. In fact, at one time a strike was something unusual and when it came to the community the average person could not understand what was happening and associated it with something sinister in our way of life.

"Today things have changed in the attitude of the average person in regard to strikes. They have come to look upon strikes as something which must come sooner or later.

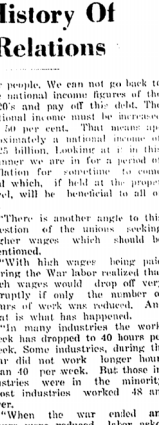

"What we are experiencing today is a period of economic readjustment as the result of war. As in the first World War so in the second wages went up to new highs. It must be remembered that World War II was a total war and a compromise figure of approximately half that demand was established.

Varying Increases Granted. "The result of this action on the part of labor was to establish picture today in wage adjustments. Because of the industry wide basis in a few instances more has been organized we have what amounts to a 'national pattern' for certain of our industries.

"In days past when the matter came up an settlement was reached or down on either an industry wide basis, industry rates, or some sort of system which increased production. Today ability to pay seems to have been bypassed and is no longer in the picture. Whether or not that is the wisest thing to do

"In countries where unions are much older than in our country wages are negotiated on an industry wide basis. This has resulted in strikes being all but eliminated in the Scandinavian countries. A strike in Sweden is not a management usually result in a strike in Sweden is not a competition in that country belong to the field of competition whether wages are high or low so that point is debatable.

"We have a new factor in the picture today in wage adjustments. Because of the industry wide basis in a few instances more has been organized we have what amounts to a 'national pattern' for certain of our industries. This points to the possibility way we can prosper together," he concluded.

BRING BED LINEN, TOURISTS ADVISED

Because many resort and hotel operators in the upper peninsula are finding it difficult to obtain sheets and pillow cases (they just aren't available in stores), the Upper Peninsula Development advises tourists coming into the peninsula as well as residents of this region contemplating trips to take enough bed linen with them. Vacationists looking for cabin and cottage accommodations are especially urged to take the "tip."

Contaminated Well Water Causes Distress in Infants

An Iowa City physician, writing in The Journal of the American Medical Association, reports a strange and previously unrecorded condition in infants which he says is due to water from poorly constructed unwatered wells.

Dr. Hunter H. Conly, from the State University of Iowa college of medicine, observed two infants whose condition resembled that of a "blue" baby with heart disease present at birth. (In "blue" babies, a malformation causes an insufficient oxygen in the blood, resulting in a bluish color to the lips and skin. This deficiency is due to the failure of the blood to contain adequate oxygen as it flows through the lungs.)

The two infants who were the subjects of Dr. Conly's report had gastrointestinal disturbances, but the author adds that diarrhea and vomiting may not always be present in such a condition. Investigation proved that the condition was due to boiled water which came from a poorly constructed and drilled farmyard wells with defective casings. The water contained large amounts of nitrate, especially concentrated in manure and other fertilizers. When these nitrate compounds are ingested and converted to bacterial action to nitrate, it produces the unusual symptoms in infants.

New Surfaces Require Several Paint Coats

New wood surfaces require several coats of paint. Have the first or primer coat thin, so it will penetrate and seal the wood, and allow it to dry for at least ten days before applying the next coat. A good grade of aluminum paint, unexcelled as a primer coat. After the priming coat has dried is the time to fill all nail holes and cracks with putty.

At least two additional coats are necessary. The first is of the undercoat, which is a light-colored primer, and the final coat is of the finish type, which dries with a certain gloss.

In painting over old surfaces, examine the old paint. If it is in good condition, a good brushing with a stiff-bristled brush and then application of a single coat of paint will be enough. Painting unnecessarily simply hastens the time when the entire accumulation of paint will have to be burned off. If the walls are unusually sooty or dirty, they will have to be washed, as the soot and dirt will work through a single coat of paint. After washing, be sure to allow the walls to dry thoroughly before painting.

Study German Processors

The forest service of the department of agriculture reports that a dozen forest products experts from the United States have been in Germany since early last June gathering complete information on all phases of wood processing, conversion, modification and use developed by the Germans. Much of the information acquired will be of value to U. S. industry, particularly in the use of wood preservatives, and as rapidly as investigators can prepare their reports, the technical details will be sent to the country for distribution to agencies and industries that can make direct application of the results. Informal summaries also indicate that findings will be of more value than was first expected. As an example, the Germans are reported to have produced nitrocellulose for explosives with superior stability qualities from low-grade softwood pulp. Preliminary reports also indicate that new and improved techniques in the production of wood sugar and its products—ethyl alcohol, feeding yeast and others—have been developed. Information of considerable value also may be collected in lignin utilization, wood modification and improvement, timber conservation and seasoning and preservation.

South American Hybrid

Verbenas—of our South American neighbors—is one flower that has many qualities to gladden the heart of a gardener. Our common garden verbenas owe its qualities to a complex ancestry: several varieties native to southern Brazil and Uruguay have been crossed and increased until now the range of color includes white, brilliant red, pink, lavender and purple with many intermediate shades. All are delightfully fragrant. For a generally use, the most subject to frost, the birds is a good choice. An annual, sun-loving plant, it flowers lavishly from May until frost, and starts early under glass. It is of prostrate habit, growing about 5 inches tall and covering a space of a square foot by the end of the season.

Sound Discrimination

A person can hear another's speech better amid loud noises if he puts his fingers in his ears. The ear or person has to about to be heard above the racket; but if he and the speaker are surrounded near the upper limit of the loudness, you can hear, with all your auditory nerve-endings working, when the whole mass of sound waves is stepped down, made quieter. When there is less auditory commotion in your ear, it can discriminate differences in sound better. You cannot hear what the speaker is shouting until you get the sound of his words.

Long Debt Cycle Faced by Britain

Must Borrow Large Sum To Meet Deficit.

LONDON—Britain must borrow a sum almost equaling 10 per cent of her already gigantic national debt if she is to meet the deficit the Labor government predicts for the fiscal year beginning April 1, 1940.

With a national debt of 23,700,000,000 (£24,322,000,000), the United Kingdom must borrow another 2,300,000,000 pounds (£9,200,000,000) to meet the deficit forecast by Hugh Dalton, chancellor of the exchequer.

Dalton estimated expenditures for the next fiscal year at 5,565,000,000 pounds ($22,260,000,000) and revenues at 3,265,000,000 pounds ($13,000,000,000).

A large part of the national debt is made up of obligations to be met on specific dates. A possibility that their cost may be reduced by re-funding is seen, however, in Dalton's budget message to parliament.

Britain finances a large part of her war costs by creating short-term bonds and floating debt.

Dalton presumably is considering refunding bonded indebtedness since he repeatedly has spoken of cheaper money in recent weeks.

One of the interesting points of his budget speech mentioned "the exploration in the field of future possibilities of raising money and lower interest rates."

"If the government should at any time decide to reduce rates of interest on new issues," he said, "such reductions would not, of course, affect terms of existing loans made before the change was made."

Development of Tube

Changed Sound Science
Development of the electronic tube has brought profound changes in acoustics and auditory sciences, according to research laboratories. After the invention of the telephone and the phonograph nearly three-quarters of a century ago, there was relatively little progress in the science of sound until the advent of the vacuum tube, which extends greatly the ability to propagate, transmit and to measure sound of desired frequency, intensity or complexity.

One of the first uses of the vacuum tube was to extend the range of the telephone and make possible transcontinental and trans-oceanic telephony. The vacuum tube also has been used to improve both the phonograph itself and the making of records.

The new science of electronics also has revolutionized hearing aids, which are now used by about 15,000 of every 100 persons in the United States. Formerly hearing aids were midjet telephones, but now they are efficient electronic devices.

Suits and Shirts Will Stay Scarce

Higher-Priced Stores Are Found Most Optimistic.

NEW YORK.—Returning war veterans, eager to swap their uniforms for civilian clothes, will have to be satisfied with a limited selection of garments at least until the early part of next year, clothing retailers reported.

All items that have been short in recent months, such as worsted suits, white shirts and shorts, will remain scarce for the rest of the year. Many stores said they never know from one day to the next what quantities of such articles they will have for anxious waiters.

The retailers emphasized, however, that if a man is not too fussy and is willing to do some shopping he probably can find at least one or two acceptable suits until a wider variety becomes available in the spring. Cheviots and tweeds will be more plentiful this fall than had-finish worsteds, which take longer to manufacture.

One chain of 70 clothing stores throughout the country with its own factories, selling in the $30 to $35 range, said its inventories are low but that it expects to be met next year.

Another and smaller chain, selling suits at $45 and up, reported that its stocks are depleted and uncertain as compared with a normal fall when it would have 75 per cent of its inventory on hand now.

Stores selling in the higher price brackets were more optimistic, but they also said that their stocks are not as varied or full as they expect them to be by early next year.

All stores reported that they expect to have overstocks on suits this fall and winter, but again there was caution in predicting what the quantity would be. The general feeling was that there will not be enough to meet any great demand.

THE MANUFACTURED CRISIS

As soon as each strike crisis passes, the inclination is to settle back and hope the worst is over. That is the way it was with the auto strike, the oil strike, the steel strike and the previous coal strikes. Now there is another coal strike. It is working up to a crisis. Production is slowing down again...

Until such unbalanced laws as the National Labor Relations Act are amended to treat both employers and employees impartially, and some measure of legal restraint imposed upon monopolistic union practices affecting the lives of millions of workers, there will be no end to "labor troubles."

Many businesses feel as does the coal mine operator who said: "Good intentioned people overlook the fact that as a type of government we now have grows and prospers as a result of manufactured crises, law violations, and shortages" of goods." For many years the American people have been pushed from one crisis to another, with each crisis becoming the excuse for the creation of a lot of new restrictive laws. The kind of government we now have as pointed out by this coal man, is a creature of self-made crises. Currently the oppressive controls of wartime are being continued to meet the crisis of shortages that red tape and one-sided labor laws are making steadily worse. Memorials in this country must be very short to not recall that the manufactured crisis was the stepping-stone to power of every modern European oppressor.

THE BEGINNING OF CIVILIZATION?

The state department has drawn up an American proposal for international atomic control to be submitted to the United Nations, which is encouraging. The proposal is based upon a report written for the state department by a committee of leading scientists and business men who literally worked night and day for two months as practical men trying to find a solution to a practical problem. Life magazine sums up their efforts in the following words: "Their answer" - sensibly recognizes that not even the atom can frighten nations into mutual trust. So . . . the report would set up an Atomic Development Authority which would work toward full international control by stages, none of them irreversible. It effect the U. S. would share its atomic secrets with the ADA only as fast as Russia and other countries give ADA personnel the right to free entry and inspection of all atomic facilities. The ADA would gradually take title to all uranium deposits and processing plants and would also build them in other countries. But it would do this on such a schedule that at every step "any nation such as the U. S. will still be in a relatively secure position, compared to any other nation".

"An important fact turned up by the committee is that fissionable material can be denatured," i.e., rendered useless for explosives while useful for peaceful applications. The ADA would distribute only denatured plutonium among member countries. To turn this into the dangerous variety can only be done by a difficult and hard-to-conceal process. . . . If mankind can adjust itself constructively to the atomic age it will for the first time be justified in applying the term "civilization" to its collective endeavors.

"Dad, what was your great ambition when you were a kid?" "To wear long pants, son. And I've got my wish. If there's anybody in this country that wears his pants longer than I do, I'd like to see him."

Willie Lives in an "Almost" Home

Willie Wells is one of many G.I.'s stationed overseas to keep the Peace. Not to forget them, let me describe a snapshot that he sent. It's the inside of a house where Willie's quartered . . . except the boys have fixed it up as much as possible to look like a typical American home. They've hung up pictures of their families, cultivated a stray puppy for a house pet.

And the snapshot shows Willie and his buddies sitting by their hearth, drinking friendly American beer and reading the hometown paper. "Almost like being back in flower corners," says the caption.

From where I sit, that "almost" packs a lot of meaning. Thousands of our boys are still overseas, trying to make their quarters homelike, even to the pet dog and the friendly glass of beer. Let's not forget to write them often-remind them that home is waiting-and it's not an "almost" home either.

On-The-Job Training Program For Veterans Outlined Here By Peninsula Consultant

Roy B. McCollom, Marquette, speaker at meeting of employers

The work program. It must contain the length of the "on the job training," the probationary period, the various steps of work progression in the program, the starting and concluding wages and the in-between wage gradations, the set-up on related instruction, and other factors in developing the type of training program the co-servicemen desire.

He directed particular attention to the probationary period during which the worker finds out if he can do the work and if he is interested to continue it as his life's vocation. If the worker finds that he does not like his job and believes he will not want to continue in it, he should abandon it at the end of his probationary period and seek counseling guidance at the Marquette center before he starts a new "on the job training" program.

The necessary related instruction here, the speaker said, will be under the regulations of the "on the job training" program, the school which has been approved as a veterans institute.

Pay Scale Set

The wages the workers will get are so arranged that he will receive the equivalent of a journeyman's pay as he starts the job. The employment will have an apprentice wage and the government will supplement this up to $65 a month for a single man, and $90 for a married man. As the program progresses, the amount paid by the government will gradually decrease as the real wages from the employer increase. The employer must make monthly reports.

The manner in which the program can be set up for farm workers and industrial workers in a unionized plant also was explained.

In concluding his talk, McCollom said that such a program, if full advantage is taken of it will bring new money into a community, will provide employers with an efficient labor, and, on the national level, will give the nation's industry thousands of additional trained workers.

Small fires look innocent and harmless but give them some dry brush and they will grow into a big fire. Prevent forest fires, it says.

GEORGE DUGAS, 63, STRICKEN MONDAY

Local Resident Dies Following Heart Attack; Funeral Held Thursday

George Dugas, 315 Center street, died Sunday evening following a heart attack. He was 63 years old.

Accompanied by his wife and daughter Mrs. George Patrick, Mr. Dugas had spent the day at the home of a son, John, in Iron Mountain, and became ill as they reached the Manistique city limits on their return trip. He called to his wife from the back seat where he was riding, and when she noticed that he had fainted Mrs. Patrick drove immediately to the hospital. He was dead upon admission.

Mr. Dugas was born in Kosice, Czechoslovakia, on April 24, 1888, and grew up there. He was married in 1907 to Rose Bugdigen and in 1912 they emigrated to America, coming directly to Manistique. For several years Mr. Dugas was employed by the Manistique Pulp and Paper company but retired four years ago.
