GEORGE E. BISHOP

Michigan, and the upper peninsula in particular, will express tribute next Wednesday to George E. Bishop, of Marquette, secretary-manager of the Upper Peninsula Development Bureau since 1921, and by far one of the greatest and most long-visioned boosters this region has ever had. For twenty-five years Bishop has managed the bureau, and through his office he tackled the vast economic problems of this area with the zeal of a crusader and the vision of a prophet. By his unceasing efforts, his vast enthusiasm, his vitality and enduring spirit of youth, he figuratively dragged us to the mountain top and revealed the hope and the promise and the possibilities of the upper peninsula of Michigan. He saw where others could not see, and patiently, insistently and untiringly he taught the rest of us to love and believe in the upper peninsula, to see its possibilities, and to do something about it. Bishop has done a magnificent job as secretary-manager of the development bureau, and it is appropriate that after twenty-five years of service we should pause to honor him and to express to him our appreciation. The entire state is joining in this message of tribute. Public officials from the governor down, industrial leaders, men widely known in civic and resort promotional work, newspapers—all have voiced expressions of esteem to this man whose record of public service is unique in the annals of the state.

NATIONAL FIRE PREVENTION WEEK

National Fire Prevention week was ordained to impress upon the public mind the necessity of preventing fires—not just during Fire Prevention Week but during every week of the year. For the attacks of fire are unceasing, and our battle to prevent fires and to suppress them must be constant, day in and day out every year.

Fire departments operate to suppress fires and to teach people to always be on the alert against them. Insurance companies help ease the losses inflicted by fire, and they also constantly teach the necessity of preventing fires. But only YOU—the home owner or renter—can really PREVENT fires.

We appeal to you to help keep Manistique's fire record clean. Now, with the housing situation so acute, we need more than ever to keep fires from starting. Fire Prevention pays dividends to every property owner—in lowered insurance rates, in reduced fire fighting costs—in the elimination of wasted materials and labor.

So do your part—help prevent fires by removing the cause of fire. Follow the rules given you by your fire department and your insurance company.

A Thought for Home-Owners during National Fire Prevention week

Statistics show that all too often the cause of residential fires is faulty, poor or inadequate electric wiring.

Such fires are all the more dangerous because they start stealthily in the hidden, remote parts of the home. There is no warning . . . just a long smouldering and then, suddenly, a fire under your roof or in your walls.

You can take no greater safety measure during this Fire Prevention Week than to resolve to have a competent electrician examine your present wiring.

While he is at the job, have him do more than correct any inadequacies in your present wiring. Instruct him to modernize your entire wiring system so that your home not only will be electrically safe, but will be prepared to take full advantage of the many new electric appliances now coming back on the market.

Even if your wiring is adequate for present needs, it may not be able to handle an additional load. So be sure you have a complete job done.
