PICNIC TABLES IN ROADSIDE PARKS

Several Sites In Manistique Are Ready For Service To The Public

Picnic tables have been placed along trunk lines and in roadside parks in the Manistique area, and the parks cleaned and put in shape to service the public. Tables have also been refrained.

The state highway department requests the cooperation of the public in helping keep the roadside parks and picnic table sites neat and clean. By placing refuse in containers which are located near the tables, picnickers will aid the department greatly in keeping these sites clean. Whittlers and amateur engravers are asked to refrain from pursuing their activities on picnic tables and rustic buildings and bridges in the parks.

Picnic tables will remain along the trunklines and in the roadside parks until the latter part of October, when most of them will be removed and stored for the winter. A few tables will be left along the trunklines throughout the deer season to accommodate hunters.

In view of the many requests received by the state highway department for plans to construct the picnic table, the department has prepared a pamphlet showing construction details of the table. These pamphlets may be obtained free of charge by writing the Public Relations division of the Michigan State Highway Department, Lansing.

They will indicate that the bathing beach is without pollution and that the resort has provided for the general safety of its visitors.

An index of cities, village country seats and counties are included on the map.

Vacationists And Fishermen Avoid Dunking Dangers

Dunking may be permitted in some social circles, but it's unannouncedly frowned upon by fishermen and summer vacationists who love boats and other small craft. To prevent unexpected dunkings and consequent danger of drowning, American Red Cross Water Safety Service recommends:

At the start of the season, make sure seams of boat are tight, seats firmly in place, rowlock sockets and oars in good shape. Attach a strong line to the bow. On fishing boats inspect condition of anchor and anchor line and check air tanks of metal boats. Carry a spare car and boiling tin at all times.

To an engineist: patch all leaks, refinish crank inside and out. Tighten loose tie-rods. Fit bow with light line. Inspect paddles, especially soft wood ones which may have tiny compression cracks in the shaft near the blade. Carry a kit to repair breaks in the hull.

To all small craft users the Red Cross recommends: if you capsize, stick with the ship. A wooden craft has enough natural buoyancy even when full of water, to support several people if they keep calm.

The U. S. Navy has developed a new steel cutting torch using electricity and an oxygen jet to operate. The new torch avoids the dangers inherent in using the highly explosive acetylene torch.

FLY CONTROL BEGUN NOW WILL REDUCE PESTS IN SUMMER

"Every fly you kill right now means thousands less to endanger you and disturb you in August. Now is the time to plan for a fly-free summer," according to Lawrence, environmental engineer of the Michigan Department of Health.

A housefly beginning its reproductive activities, now, in early spring, may have over five billion descendants by autumn if all its offspring live and reproduce. One pair of flies, mating now, will have become the ancestors, by late summer, of more flies than 1,000 men can swat in the same period.

Flies transmit the germs of typhoid fever, poliomyelitis, dysentery, diarrhea, tuberculosis, cholera and certain other diseases. For the most part flies are born in manure piles, cesspools, outdoor toilets and rotting garbage. They spread disease when they carry filth from these places and from other human and animal refuse and excreta in the food on your dining room table, food being prepared in your kitchen, or food stored in your cupboards. Some flies feed on excreta and refuse, other just walk through it.

The first step in controlling the danger and nuisance of flies is to eliminate their breeding places—the manure pile, rotting vegetable cans and dumps, decaying human and animal excreta and refuse, cesspools and urinals, chicken coops, pig pens and cow sheds.

Another step is to adequately and tidily screen all buildings where food is stored and prepared, where milk is handled, or where humans live.

The first step in control is to spray inside and outside surfaces of buildings with a 2 per cent solution of DDT and retail screens with a 5 per cent solution of DDT once every six weeks. DDT is no more dangerous than the ordinary household spray materials. Do not let it on your, wash it off. Spray porches, the overhang of the roof, around the garbage can, all outside stables, toilets, milk, lousers, pet houses, chicken coops, pig pens and the like.

SPORTS AFIELD

By Ted Kesting

For years the quail population of this country has been steadily decreasing. No one quite knew why. No hunting laws, refuge systems and release of pen raised and wild birds failed to result in more quail.

Now an answer has been found by the U. S. Soil Conservation Service. According to Verne E. Davison, biologist with the SCS, we have grossly over-estimated the food supply. Quail have been starved out. Or, maybe we have only failed to realize what food conditions a covey requires. At any rate, while experimenting with bicolor speckle, now acknowledged as one of the best foods for bobwhite quail, the SCS has proved that a serious food deficiency exists in almost every field, pasture and woods from Texas to Virginia.

It has only been within the past two years that the value of bicolor as quail food has been recognized by both wildlife and agricultural circles. Today, bicolor strains hold the distinction of being the first plants developed and improved for the primary aim of benefiting an American game species. The future for quail throughout the south is getting brighter and brighter as new strains are introduced, and there will soon be harder varieties for northern planting.

The SCS began gathering superior strains in 1910, and by careful selection several new strains have been developed that are much better than their common bicolor. Four million plants of these new strains—enough for 4,000 coveys of quail—were planted afield this year. A perennial shrub, it grows six to 10 feet high. It can be established by transplanting nursery-grown plants or by direct seeding. It has proved to be a most dependable and inexpensive shrub for erosion control purposes—a fact which is helping farmers recognize game production as a farm problem they can solve.

Louis Bromfield, noted American author, in his new book "Malabar Form" points out that abundant fish and game are linked directly to good agricultural practices, and that there is no greater beneficiary of good agriculture and proper land use than the sportsman.

A fact frequently overlooked by sportsmen and farmers is that game animals and birds will not stay on eroded and depleted lands, nor will fish live in silt-filled streams.

Writing about farm-game reclamation problems, Bromfield discusses the program of the Ohio Conservation Commission which has developed a policy based primarily, not upon artificial propagation, but upon natural habitat and food.

This Ohio program depends for its success upon proper land use by farmers, upon proper disposal of industrial and city sewage wastes, upon maintaining suitable parks, sanctuaries and game propagation areas, and upon the establishment of headwater lakes as fishbreeding areas.

The Muskingum Valley Flood Control project is an excellent example of how this program works. Set up after the disastrous flood of 1913, it resulted in the establishment of 12 lakes for impounding flood waters and the setting aside of lands surrounding the lakes for recreational areas and for development into state forests.

The project was revolutionary for it sought to control floods at their source rather than by expensive and futile dams, levees and other means at the bottom of rivers. The dams and lakes constructed along the Muskingum River served to impound flood waters absolutely and in a year or two virtually paid for themselves in prevented losses.

The efficiency of a joint federal, state and local watershed development, managed autonomously by a local control board, was proved in a score of ways. Within the area principles of good land use are followed and enforced. The imposition of these rules has greatly increased the fish and wildlife populations of the area. So besides proving a great economic asset, the District has proved a paradise for sportsmen.

It is unfortunate that the effectiveness of the District has had little publicity, for it is a pattern which could well be followed with great benefit by most of the secondary watersheds of every state.

MICHIGAN RENEWS 4-H SOIL PROGRAM

Gerald Gray, Of Cooks,
State Winner Last Year;
Prizes Announced

Announcement has been made that the 1948 National 4-H Soil Conservation program will be conducted in Michigan for the fifth consecutive year.

The activity is designed to encourage 4-H Club members to develop a farm family program of soil conservation, for present and future production, which will help prevent soil wastage and deterioration on the home farm.

Typical of the achievements of the 4-H soil conservationists are those of Gerald Gray, 17, of Cooks, state winner last year. At the present time the crop rotation method on the 40-acre farm of Gerald's father is on the three-year cycle but plans contemplate early adoption of the five-year cycle. The long range conservation program calls for reforestation of a section of the land now used for pasture and the building of a permanent pasture. In a section now devoted to woodlot it is expected that some contouring will be necessary within the next five years.

Testing entrants in each state then selected state winners to receive a sectional award of $500 to the Chicago 4-H Club contest next November. Eight sectional winners are chosen for national honors, each receiving a $500 prize scholarship.

Multiple Death Accidents Send Up Traffic Toll

The downward trend in traffic fatalities in recent months was reversed in March, when 24 persons lost their lives on Michigan highways, an increase of nine over the same month a year ago, according to a summary prepared by the state police and announced here by Sgt. Kenneth White.

The change, however, was attributed largely to a series of multiple death accidents. Six persons were killed in one mishap and three in each of three others, a total of 15.

In all there were 12,925 reported accidents during the month and 2,891 persons were injured. Accidents increased 9.5 per cent and injuries were up 11.6 per cent over the same month of 1947.

Rural deaths gained sharply, mostly as the result of collisions between vehicles, while urban deaths increased one third. Pedestrian deaths also declined.

There were 244 persons killed and 8,924 injured in 37,824 accidents reported during the first three months of the year. Compared with the same period a year ago, deaths decreased 5%, injuries increased 10.6%, and accidents were up 4.7%. Fewer deaths resulting from collisions with railroad trains accounted for most of the cumulative fatality reduction.

Mileage for the first two months of the year increased 12% over the same period a year ago, and the death rate of 5.74 per 100 billion miles of travel was down 22% on the same comparative basis.

Memorial Honors Old Sea Captain, Jonathan Walker

(This is one in a series on historical spots and monuments in the Michigan Historical Collections at the University of Michigan.)

Capt. Jonathan Walker, said to be the only person a U. S. Federal Court ever ordered branded, is remembered by a monument at Muskegon.

Standing near the entrance to Evergreen Cemetery, the memorial bears a replica of Capt. Walker's right hand with the initials "SS for 'Slave Stealer'" branded on the palm.

The sea captain had been arrested in 1844 off the coast of Key West, Florida, while transporting seven runaway slaves to the Bahama Islands and freedom, according to information in the Michigan Historical Collections at the University of Michigan.

His arrest climaxed a colorful sailing career begun at 17. Among the high points of his life were the

IRON ORE RESERVES HIGHEST SINCE '37

Over 150 Million Tons Estimated In Four Upper Peninsula Locations

Exploration encouraged by the big demand for steel and the new state law deferring taxes on newly discovered ore deposits has boosted Michigan's iron ore reserves to the highest point since 1937, according to the annual mine valuations report by F. G. Pardee of the conservation department's geological survey.

During the war years, exploration was suspended while mine operators concentrated on production, and by 1946 reserves were down to 131,737,006 tons. This year reserves are estimated at 150,000,859 tons—558,540 in Dickinson county and 50,004,279 in Iron county in the Menominee range, 21,937,142 in Gogebic county in the Gogebic range, and 66,639,928 in the Marquette range.

Total valuation of the state's 35 operating iron mines and other iron ore reserves is up from $53,041,000 in 1947 to $84,960,000 in home demonstration supervisor 1948.

Finnish Visitor Glad To Be Back In United States

There was considerable talk of war when he was abroad. "I got out of there in a hurry because I thought there would be war. But now I think it looks better."

Old villages and landmarks he remembered as a boy were almost unrecognizable. Mr. Hegglom said, "I had to stop and look myself around," he laughed, "and only a few things I could tell."

Don't mind Midge Korstis in Wassa, on March 5, 1875, Mr. Hegglom was 18 when he came to America in 1891. His brother, John, now 81, was already here, and young Charles came directly to Manistique. He worked in local sawmills and in the woods for five years, and then went out on his own.

Mr. Hegglom married a native Norwegian, Olga Almdahl, after he left here, and they had two sons, Carl, of Minneapolis, and Harold, who is in the armed services. Mrs. Hegglom died 11 years ago.

Last March 24, Mr. Hegglom left Finland and for the past month has been visiting in Detroit with Mr. and Mrs. U. S. A. Hegglom. He returned to Minneapolis Wednesday night.
