LOST IN ALCONA CO. WOODS

Brother of Atty's Dutton loses his life in a Blizzard While Returning to his Home-land.

Alton C. Dutton, foreman machinist in the Nichols & Sheppard harvesting works at Battle Creek, and brother of our popular townsmen, Attorney Carey W. Dutton, was lost in the woods of Alcona county near South Branch on Monday, January 31st, at the time of the terrible blizzard which visited this state and impeded shipping both in the n. p. and lower Michigan. A telegram notifying Mr. Dutton that his brother was missing was received on the evening of Tuesday, February 8th, and the following morning he took train for South Branch.

Mr. Dutton returned home Thursday afternoon after spending several days in the vicinity where his brother was lost.

On Wednesday, a reporter of this Courier called upon Mr. Dutton and was given the following particulars: Owing to ill health Alton C. Dutton for some months past had been living on a homestead in Alcona county, near South Branch, with a son of 12 years of age, his family in the meantime residing in the old home in Battle Creek. On the morning of the 31st of January he left his little boy at his cabin and started out to the station, a distance of ten miles, to mail some letters and get some provisions. He arrived there on Monday night about 12 o'clock, got provisions and got some mail. An invitation to take dinner with a friend was declined by him, assuming as a reason that his little son was alone in the cabin and that he desired to get back to him as soon as possible. Putting his provisions in a bag, he started out on foot for home in a severe storm. Several parties met him on the way and noticed that he was plodding ahead at a rapid rate. It is claimed by a settler that at four o'clock of that day he reached a South Branch creek, to a settler residing on the opposite bank, noticed that he had some mail for him, deposited the same in the snow at the foot of a pine tree and waved his hand towards this cabin, a distance of two miles. The settler claimed that he took his hat and went across the river and got his mail. He stated that he saw Mr. Dutton on his trail toward the cabin, walking strong and brisk.

He failed to reach his cabin that night and his little son remained alone. Early next morning the lost settler twice for the landing, but on account of the extreme cold and great depth of snow was compelled to turn back. At noon he again started out, this time making the landing and asked if his father was there. Finding that he was not, he then started off in a different direction to a lumber camp two miles further on where later he was joined by the settler. The camp foreman did not think the man was lost and directed the settler to make an immediate investigation and report at once.

The settler started out at once, followed the trail to within a mile of the cabin and over a deep ravine, where he claims he found the bag of provisions lying high upon a stump and the bundle where an effort had been made to build a fire. From here the tracks led at a right angle to the trail for a distance of about forty rods, where two sticks were found stuck in the snow and three old tracks suddenly disappeared. Two days later the settler conveyed the intelligence of what he found to the camp foreman, who presumed an account of his not returning that the lost man had been located. The camp crew were then ordered out to make a thorough search, but of no avail.

A week later, C. W. Dutton arrived on the scene and with a crew of twenty-five men scoured the country for four days, covering a space of from six to ten miles. They were unable to obtain the slightest clue as to the course out of all knowledge as to his having reached there at all was based upon the statement of this settler.

Many residents of the vicinity think that Mr. Dutton's brother was a victim of foul play, hence done away with for his money, it being known that he had a considerable sum on his person. The settler in question had been on intimate terms with him and only a few days before had money of him, and made remarks as to the amount of money which he had. It is highly generally believed that he never got beyond the landing, and that the bag, the effort to build the fire and the sticks driven in the snow were planted for the purpose of conveying the impression that he had perished. They assign their reason for believing that the man was foully dealt, with the cruel treatment of the settler in sending the little 12-year old boy through the deep snow to the camp and then his failure to report what he had found on Tuesday until Thursday, also the indifference shown by him in the matter. Atty Dutton does not share the belief of the kind friends who aided him while there, but thinks that his brother's body is in the snow somewhere within a mile of the cabin.

A reward has been offered for the recovery of the body.

Alcona citizens have taken a great interest in the matter and their kind acts to Attorney Dutton and their diligent, untiring work in the search, was more than appreciated by him and also the snowing widows and children whose hearts are broken over the disappearance and probable death of a kind and loving husband and father.

Knights Entertain Friends.

The Knights of Evergreen Lodge, No. 91, K. of P. of this city, gave a complimentary entertainment and supper at their hall, Tuesday evening. Thirty-four invitations were issued the week previous and the response was gratifying to the Pythians, the number in attendance reaching nearly 300.

That the guests had an enjoyable evening is certain, at least the members of the organization have since been congratulated by many who claim they were royally entertained.

The program, although short, was excellent, each number being heartily endorsed. P. C. C. Geo. E. Barber opened the evening with a few remarks, on Pythianism and stated that the social was given in honor of the 30th anniversary of the organization of the society, which today is one of the leading fraternal orders of America. Then followed the program: Piano Solo, Misses May and Edith Goodrich; Vocal Solo, "Last Night," Miss Peterson; Recitation, "The Desert," Miss Goodrich; Vocal Solo, "The Desperate," Mr. and Mrs. Peterson.

After the completion of the program, supper was served and fully 250 persons were seated at the tables set in the dining hall.

Later in the evening dancing was enjoyed by many of the younger people and was kept up until far into the "small hours."

INDOOR BASE BALL.

The Invincibles and the Terrors played ball for Sweet Charlities Sake.

Two teams, the Invincibles and Terrors, captained by Charles Coon and A. C. Maclaurin respectively, played in door ball at the Star Opera House, Monday night, the proceeds from which after expenses are paid, goes to charity. The former team won the game, eleven innings by a score of 11 to 1. In the neighborhood of 200 people witnessed the contest.

The game was a spirited one, from start to finish, and from the spectators' standpoint was brim full of excitement. Coon's team went to bat first and was retired to the field without a score, then the Terrors in turn were retired without "finding" the ball. In the second inning two of the Invincibles made the circuit of the bases giving the club two tallies. During the 2d, 3d, 4th, 5th and 6th innings Maclaurin's nine were "goose eggged," the result of which is credited to the excellent hot-colded playing of the Invincibles, but by the Terrors.

The first run for the Terrors was given them in the 7th inning when the third baseman muffed a ball from the catcher. The 3rd error was certainly excusable, for the reason that this was the first of the Terrors to reach that part of the diamond, and the third man was excited. A repetition of the first inning was the result of both halves of the 8th. Coon's side brought in three scores in the ninth and the other fellows beat their record by adding two tallies. Score 11 to 4.

This by rights ended the game, but by some compact of the score with Maclaurin's "smooth" players or some error of the score two more innings were rung in, which resulted in the Terrors adding six scores and the Invincibles getting 0 0 twice. The result 11 innings, 11 to 9. The score follows:

But very little kicking was done on the umpiring by Dr. Burdick, although many of his decisions were questioned by the players. He did the best he could do, but the game was so different in many instances that getting rattled was excusable on his part. Two umpires should be provided one for the bases and the other for the battery. Those who witnessed the contest were highly pleased with it and from the interest evinced the games of the future will be larger attended.

MACLAURIN CHALLENGES WINNERS.

At the close of the game Manager Maclaurin challenged the winner to meet his Terrors on the diamond in the near future, and it was at once decided to pull off the second match on Monday evening of next week at the same place.
