

May 18, 1978

Tribune E. Zaske

Former spring raft uncovered

GORDON ARCHER, Indian Lake State Park manager, examines remains of an old raft once used at the Big Spring. It and another raft were evidently cut loose and allowed to drift down the spring outlet, where they were caught up and remain today.

Archer noticed the raft after a wind storm had blown over some cedar trees growing on it. More on the Manistique area's celebrated natural attraction on page 5A.

RISKY RAFTING at the Big Spring appears to have been the "in" thing to do. Above, John Hruska, left, and Ed Hruska take a trip on the spring.