Fewer Hours Work Buy More Food Today

Food prices today are high. But, for the average industrial wage earner in the United States, it takes fewer hours of labor today than it did before the war, to buy an average family weekly food basket. Dr. Eugene Craven, Michigan State college research economist, says the so-called white collar workers and others with less desirable incomes have been less fortunate. Many of these people must now buy more hours of their work for food than before the war.

It took 27 hours of factory work in 1917 to buy the same amount of the same items of food that can be bought today with 10 1/2 hours of work. In 1937 it took 13 hours of the industrial workers' average earnings to buy the same food basket, Craven's survey shows. The average food basket is the

Flames Swept Michigan At Time Of Big Chicago Fire

Flames cut a 250-mile path of destruction across Michigan in 1871 at the same time the great Chicago fire occurred. That's according to the Michigan Historical Collections at the University of Michigan which have information on the Michigan disaster as well as personal letters describing the Chicago holocaust.

The Michigan fire flared into being at Manistee, October 8. In two days, flames swept from Lake Michigan to Lake Huron, cutting through some of the state's finest pine stands, destroying twelve communities and making about 18,000 persons homeless.

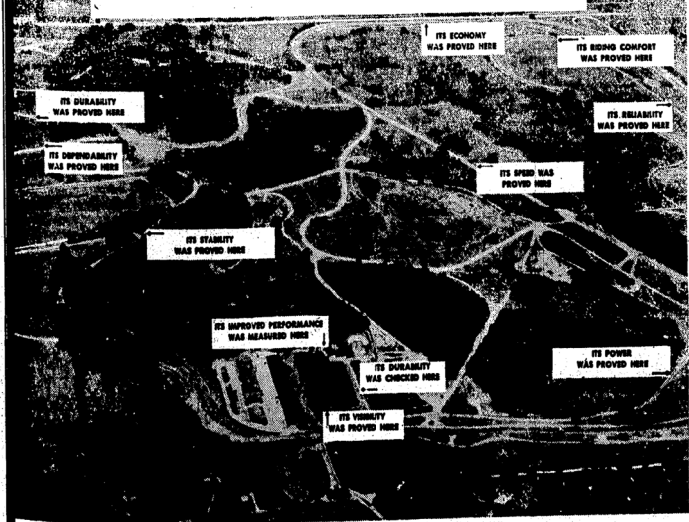

Holland Burns Out The Holland fire burned out the town except for a few buildings within two hours on October 9, and an aged widow was killed. Fires started on the southern and western parts of the city first.

Thousands of persons fought the fires. But lashed on by a gale, the flames swiftly consumed the forests. Hundreds of farm animals were killed and thousands of dollars worth of crops were burned.

U.S. Health Survey Urged By Taxpayer Organization

Nationwide survey of U. S. health and medical problems is urged as a necessary first step toward their solution, in a study just released by the Michigan Public Expenditure Survey, a state taxpayer organization.

The study, titled "Uncle Sam, M. D.," summarizes the pros and cons of government proposals for compulsory health insurance, including the latest plan announced by Secretary Administrator Oscar R. Ewing.

"There seems to be no evidence that any one person or group in the country knows the exact nature or extent of our national health problem today," says Henry Steffens, Michigan Survey director. "Figures from previous surveys are sadly out of date, incomplete and unreliable. Yet, in Senate committee hearings on various compulsory health insurance measures, plans," says Steffens, "make broad claims that voluntary insurance organizations cannot do the job that has to be done."

"They overlook the phenomenal growth of Blue Cross and State Medical Care plans, as well as that of the compulsory indemnity and involuntary health insurance and group plans, draft figures, often quoted to support the claim that half of 16 million youths examined were unfit for military service, and that lack of medical care was responsible."

Need Accurate Estimates The Michigan Survey report "have been repeatedly deluged, yet they are still being used as an argument for compulsory health insurance. Testifying before the Senate Finance committee, Dr. Maurice H. Friedman of Washington gave an expert analysis of the figures, and concluded that only about 20 per cent of rejections were for causes that could have been influenced by medical care."

OUR DEMOCRACY—by Mat

FREE MAN

IN A COUNTRY THAT WAS TO DEDICATE ITSELF TO FREEDOM, IT IS SIGNIFICANT THAT THE FIRST PIECE OF PRINTING IN AMERICA WAS THE 'FREEDMAN'S GAIN'—A BROADSIDE ISSUED BY STEPHEN DAY, PRINTER, IN 1639.

AS THE AMERICAN IDEA PROGRESSED, THE PRINTED WORD BECAME A GREATER AND GREATER FORCE IN EDUCATING THE PEOPLE IN THEIR PRIVILEGES AND DUTIES AS CITIZENS OF THE NEW REPUBLIC—AND LATER, THEIR NEW RESPONSIBILITIES IN AN INCREASINGLY COMPLEX WORLD... AND YET—'FREE MAN' IS THE SIMPLE STANDARD BY WHICH WE ALWAYS HAVE MEASURED—AND ALWAYS WILL—MEASURE TRUE DEMOCRACY.

report declares that: "most medical men not only agree that the federal government has a place in the health picture, but believe its work should be expanded—in certain directions."

"Government's job, they say, lies in such fields as statistical research, epidemic control, immunization, maternity care, laboratory work, and so on."

Suggests Federal Lead In conclusion, the study states: "It is to be hoped that federal government will take the lead in surveying the national health problem—in providing complete, unbiased, up-to-the-minute facts about its every phase."

"It is to be hoped that government will give such questions as sanitation, diet working and living conditions the attention which they deserve as factors in public health."

"It is to be hoped that government, at every level, can work closely with the medical profession and with the public to put together a program that is good for everybody."

SPORTS AFIELD

By Ted Ketting

It is seldom that the solution of a game problem is to increase the kill, but we are offered such a solution today—and experts from coast to coast agree upon it.

"What is this unusual problem? It's the same in 30 states. We've got too many deer. According to Durwood L. Allen, wildlife technician, we are holding our herds at too high a level. We are letting them run ranges by overbreeding, and we are letting thousands die every winter from starvation."

Big-game specialists say this is the answer: Kill more deer. Reduce the herds to what winter forage will support. And bucks-only won't do it. Does and fawns must be taken in many areas.

It could be done—except for the well-meant opposition of a host of people who have not recognized the issue: Shoot them and use them... or let them starve.

A deer range is no better than it's winter food supply. Moreover, the herd must live on the browse that will grow every year. If they eat more than that, the range goes downhill. That means a permanent reduction in the capacity of the range to support deer. It takes 30 acres of good land to support one deer for one year.

In the minds of many people the thing to do for starving deer is to feed them. That has been tried. It's no go. Plant winter food? The plants are killed before they get started.

Maine and Minnesota are examples of states that are doing a good job of managing their deer. They shoot both sexes. Their herds hold up and are in good balance. Minnesota had the country's highest 1947 deer take—an official 102,873.

Administrators in the states who want to adopt a more progressive deer management program are being stalled by an opinionated minority that blocks efforts to increase the kill and allow the taking of deer. We must recognize the fact that rigid buck laws are outdated. If game men were permitted to apply their management knowledge, the useless waste of starvation-killed deer would cease. A great many more sportsmen need to inform themselves and then get things moving.

With the 11th Airborne Division in Japan—Private First Class Burton J. Grondino, 22 year-old parashutist of Manistique, Michigan now serving with the 408th Airborne Quartermaster Company stationed at Sendai, has recently participated in the one week's course of Air-transportability training held at the 11th Airborne Training Center at Yamoto. He is the son of Mr. Edd Grondino, 121 North 2nd street, Manistique, Michigan.

The one week course of training consisted of loading and lashing of cargo in U. S. Army transport planes, C-46, C-47, C-54, and C-52. Highlights of the course came when the trainees participated in tactical air plane flights in the C-46 Troop Carrier loaded with troops and cargo.

Back in the days when Germany was occupied by only two powers, instead of four, and those two were called the Vandals and the Ostrogoths, the game of bowling got its start. It was about 300 A. D., just before those two occupying tribes were broken up into 23 different Germanic peoples, that chessman first began to "set them up in the cathedral cloisters."

In those days, the game had a definite religious significance. Each priest represented a heathen. The priest handed a rough stone or a wooden ball to a parishioner and told him to strike down the heathen. If he missed, or failed to knock down all the pins, the infirmation was that he was guilty of sin. More than a thousand years later, when Martin Luther wasn't posting notices on the doors of the Wittenberg church, he found time for bowling. Luther experimented with a number of pins and finally decided that nine could be arranged in an order most appropriate for the game.

Robert Hontschell has returned to Manistique following a holiday visit at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. R. G. Hontschell.

Big Texas Navy Four small vessels, the Intrepid, the Brutus, the Independence and the Liberty, constituted the Texas navy during the revolution against Mexico. It harassed Mexican commerce and made partly ineffective the Mexicans' attempt to blockade Texas ports and prevent the bringing in of supplies from the United States. The Independence was captured and two other ships were wrecked shortly after close of the war. Because of threat of blockade of Texas ports by the Mexican navy, after founding of the Texas republic, the government of the republic purchased five or six vessels from the United States.

Texas Rainmaker Sprinkles Crops 24 Hours Daily ELISA, TEX.,—Making rain by de-stroying clouds with dry ice doesn't interest W. A. Harding, owner of the unique Evergreen farms. For 11 years he's been making a ton and a half inches of rainfall. Harding does his raimaking on his 1,000-acre farm, where he grows alfalfa and sudan grasses for de-stroying and manufacture into chicken and horse feed and vitamin pills for humans. It is the only farm in the world, Harding believes, that operates a constant 24-hour a day, seven days a week, year after year. Continual sprinkling, harvesting and dehydration is going on at the T-shaped farm in the lower Rio Grande valley. Every 24 hours the sprinkling system lays down two and a half inches of rain on a 120-acre block. The next day another 120 acres are showered.

Interest High in Building, Forestry

Construction of rural buildings with native materials has gained great interest in Michigan. This shows a barn raising near Fairview, Michigan State college is offering a new short course in rural building.

William Dodge, Royal Oak, Mich., and Bruce Cooper, Lawrence, Kans., forest practice students at MSU, learn the fundamentals of felling timber while operating two-man power saw.

Utilization of native lumber from Michigan woodlots for farm buildings and more efficient handling of forest lands are two fields in which great interest is being shown by young men today. Using lumber milled from their own woodlots, many Michigan farmers have constructed valuable farm buildings at less than half the normal cost. County Agricultural Agent Casper Blumer, Antrim and Otsego counties, says more than 100 barns have been built in his counties in the past few years. Most of the material came from farm woodlots. Recognizing the interest in rural building as well as forestry practice, Michigan State college has opened two short courses which will begin on January 5, 1949. Ralph W. Tenney, head of the department of short courses, says the one year Forest Practice Training course is designed to train men in the skills required in administering a forest and harvesting the products of the forest. Three months of instruction by the forestry department at MSU will be followed by three months at the State Forest near Cassopolis and six months at the Dunbar Forest, Sault Ste. Marie. Opportunities for graduates of the one year course would include those of forest guards, assistant rangers, fire and game wardens, conservation officers, woodmen, sawmill operators, cruisers and lumbermen, according to Paul A. Herbert, head of the MSU forestry department. Farm buildings in Michigan are being streamlined to keep pace with modern agriculture according to M. L. Bailey of the Michigan State college agricultural engineering department. More attention is being given to the construction of buildings to meet specific requirements for increased efficiency and convenience. The Rural Builders training course, new this year, will include college instruction and work experience training which will enable those who complete the course to specialize in farm building construction. Veterans may enroll in either of these courses under the provisions of the G. I. bill of rights. Director Tenney reports the Department of Short Courses will be glad to give additional information to any persons interested.

Baboon Causes Holey Sprawl in Philadelphia Pet Shop

PHILADELPHIA—A five-year-old baboon, came up with her own version of the "bull in the china shop." Working diligently during the early morning hours, Babe succeeded in picking the lock of her cage in a pet shop. First she freed a canny which promptly found its way to a fire escape door and headed for the wide open spaces. Babe opened the cages of two sets of puppies, scrambled them thoroughly and as a result, one of the wire-haired terriers got mixed up in a dog fight and killed a 2-month-old chow. While pandemonium reigned on the first floor, Babe ventured up stairs to the kennel where dogs are kept for owners. Meanwhile, a passer-by who saw the dog fight downstairs, sent out a call to the shop owner, Mrs. Bertha Docktor. After calming the dogs and getting them back in their proper pens, Mrs. Docktor's helper, Edward Krinnel set out after Babe with a net. But Babe dodged Krinnel and was about to follow the canny through the fire escape door when Mrs. Docktor succeeded in luring Babe downstairs with bananas and grapes.

'Foodless Girl' in China Raids Pantry at Midnight

NANKING.—Yang Mei, 20, who swore she had not eaten for two years, was exposed by the official Central News agency as a midnight pantry raider. The agency said nurses, feigning sleep at the Chungking hospital where the girl has been under observation for weeks, caught her slipping into the pantry to feast. She had insisted she lost all appetite for food nine years ago after an illness, but the agency said she had had midnight snacks of chicken, pork and potato stew, porridge, cooke's rice, pickled dried beans and other food. The report said the girl, realizing that she would be unable to maintain her pretense, had threatened suicide. Subscribe for the Tribune.

Welfare Baskets Made Many Needy Families Happy

Several needy families in the county had a happy Christmas because of the success of the annual holiday project of the Manistique Women's club welfare committee.

Mrs. J. J. Herbert, welfare committee chairman, reports that a total of 43 baskets were distributed by state police in the Women's club project. The Elks lodge contributed a chicken for every basket.

Mrs. Herbert expressed the committee's appreciation to J. L. LeDug, theatre manager, Manistique firemen, the state police and individuals who gave cash donations for the welfare project.

The committee's welfare work continues throughout the year, Mrs. Herbert said. A layette loan closet for the needy is now being started, nightgowns for the ill are being made, and various other welfare work will be carried on in the coming months.

CANCER WORKERS RECEIVE PRAISE

Plans Being Made Here For Spring Campaign; Dr. Shaw Will Talk

Congratulations to the volunteer men and women of the Michigan division of the American Cancer Society.

That is the New Year's greeting from William A. Hyland, M. D., chairman of the board of directors and of the professional committee of the division, announced here this week by Mrs. J. J. Herbert, commander of the Schoolcraft county unit.

"In the last five years," Dr. Hyland said, "we have made great progress in organizing the fight against cancer. I wish I could thank each of the 18,000 volunteers myself for the fine work they are doing."

"As a physician I know that our educational work is bringing results. More and more men and women are having periodic physical examinations, more and more cancers are being diagnosed in the early and potentially-curable stage."

Three-Pronged Program
Dr. Hyland laid special emphasis on the achievements of the service aspects of the three-pronged cancer control program—search, education, and service—of the Michigan division.

"The record of our county units in helping the cancer patient and in furnishing funds for the improvement of medical facilities is impressive."

"In 49 counties devoted women have been untold hours in making dressings for bedridden patients. Last year they distributed 350,000 dressings, an increase of 100,000 over 1932. Loan closets, where items of comfort and necessity may be secured, have been established in 25 counties.

"Radium has been purchased for hospitals in six of our counties. "Home care of patients by registered nurses is provided by seven county units.

"Transportation for cancer patients, to and from their homes to the nearest hospital is supplied by sixteen counties.

Seven Detection Centers
"Detection centers are financed by seven counties.

"The Michigan division of the American Cancer Society is an unusual combination of lay leaders and physicians, working together as volunteers to share the fight against cancer. Funds raised in the April drive make possible this extensive service program, finance the year-around educational endeavor, and help support national research. A good job is being done. Let us do an even better job in 1934!"

In Schoolcraft county, Dr. George A. Shaw is medical director and a member of the upper peninsula executive board, Walter

Moon is finance chairman; and Miss Helen McLaughlin is in charge of publicity. The group is already planning for its spring fund campaign, which will be preceded by a series of educational talks before various organizations by Dr. Shaw.

Mrs. Herbert has ordered several cancer films which organizations may borrow at any time. Further information may be obtained from her or from Miss McLaughlin.
