Bibles Are Featured By Clements Library

Some of the earliest Bibles to be printed in America are in the University of Michigan's William L. Clements Library.

A notable collection of historically important Bibles from many lands and in many languages is also owned by the University's General Library.

Several Bibles of special interest are included in a current display in the Clements Library. There is the first American Bible to be printed, John Eliot's "Indian Bible" of 1663. Although the first Bible printed in the colonies, it was not in English but in the Algonquin Indian language for use in missionary work.

Another American "first" is the "Saur Bible", printed in German by colonists from that country in Pennsylvania, in the year 1743. It was the first American Bible in any European language. The first American Bible in English came in 1783 when the "Aiken Bible" was printed in Philadelphia by R. Aiken who listed his address as "Pope's Head, Three Doors above the Coffee House, in Market

From where I sit... by Joe Marsh
If They're Wild, They Belong To Tik!

See Tik Anderson last week and been like the rest of folks in town—remembered of the first time I was respectful of his right not to tell where "his" berries grow. From where I sit, respecting other folks' rights comes natural in our town... in America for that matter! Whether it's a person's right to enjoy a temperate glass of beer or ale, or whether it's Tik Anderson's right to keep secret where his berries are, it's all a big part of a real democracy!

Weekly News Letter Of Congressman Charles E. Potter

Many Republican members of Congress have been contending that the Truman administration tends to delay the refunding of $300,000,000 in national service over-payments until 1950, a Congressional election year. This over-payment has been the 16,000,000 veterans of World War II for several years and in June, 1948 the Supreme Court cleared the way for the Veterans Administration to make the funds and Republican members of the House Veterans Committee recently requested that the checks be sent out immediately. But the Veterans Administration, despite pledges and promises to the Veterans that they would mail the checks by Jan. 1, 1949, now informs members of Congress that because the agency is unable to obtain needed floor space the checks probably won't go out until late in 1950. mine whether or not lime is needed. It tests show lime is needed.

Before broadcasting the seed, should be raked lightly with a steel rake.

For sandy soils Cheving's fescue or creeping red fescue grass is recommended.

bluegrass normally produces the best results. On stony, fertile well-drained loam, a mixture of Cheving's fescue or red fescue with bluegrass makes a good mixture.

From a pound to a pound and a half of seed for each thousand square feet of yard is adequate if properly distributed.

It is recommended that the measured amount of seed for a section of the yard be mixed with enough dry screened soil to make sufficient bulk for even distribution.

Persons interested in more information about lawn planting and care can obtain "Growing Beautiful Lawns," an extension bulletin (Extension 224) by Dr. Tyson available from county agricultural extension offices.

Governor Williams is not Michigan's first governor to enjoy talking at luncheons and dinners, crowning festive occasions and otherwise being the answer to a program chairman's prayer. Kim Sigler used to thrive on these things over while the legislature was thrashing about at Lansing.

Williams stuck to the job faithfully while solons were in town. But he waived aside all arguments in June and July for a speaking schedule that resembled a barnstorming trip. Like Sigler, he prefers travel by airplane.

The governor's staff is now convinced that many voters prefer to have their governor "work at the job". Result: Power speaking engagements.

When to call the legislature into special session is a decision yet to be made. The governor insists Michigan should enact a new tax immediately if it is to avert financial chaos next spring. He plans vigorously for a corporation income tax rather than a personal income tax, and defends his position as not favoring "soak the consumer" levy.

Even if the legislature were to adopt a flat personal income tax, says the governor, taxpayers would soon favor a graduated income tax by constitutional amendment.

Victor Knox, speaker of the house of representatives, is convinced Michigan voters would never approve a tax boost or a new tax until actual need had been demonstrated. A treasury deficit will furnish such proof, says Knox. This reasoning influenced Republican legislators, he said recently, to sidestep the issue of new taxes until 1956.

If this strategy is adhered to,

Republican legislative leaders will await 1950 to see how much money is needed and then cut the cloth accordingly. To do anything now, so this argument goes, is to guess at a future development.

But 1950 is also re-election year for many legislators, as with state elective officials. To impose a new tax in an election year is regarded by some as something next to political heresy.

The more the Republicans wait, the more their opponents are going to lambast the party for protecting big corporations from a tax on their profits. Governor Williams wishes to put the GOP on the defensive in 1950. He has been hammering away at the corporation tax consistently in 1949 speaking tours.

A week or so ago we had the opportunity to swing into the Upper Peninsula as far west as Marquette and Escanaba. Everywhere we were asked about Secretary of State Fred M. Alger, Jr., and State Treasurer D. Hale Brakke, two prospective candidates for governor in the Republican primary next spring. Also: "Is Dr. Keyes going to run for governor this time?"

Aside from saying that Alger, Brakke and Keyes are ALL definitely interested in the nomination, we managed to stay neutral. Partisan politics have no place in this Main street column. But the inquiries do show an interest or anxiety of Republican observers about 1950.

Another point: Harry F. Kelly is a possible candidate. Would a "third term" issue lessen his proved popularity with Michigan voters? That is something for the hot-stove league to talk about this fall.

Cooperative efforts to curtail highway traffic toll are beginning to bring dividends. For three consecutive months a decline in traffic deaths has taken place. Maxwell Halsey, executive secretary of the Michigan state safety commission, reports the next objective is to make highways more safe for children. "More than 4,500 children were killed or injured in Michigan traffic accidents last year," says Halsey.

Does your community need a hospital? The Federal government will pay one third of the cost of construction, providing the local community raises the other two-thirds. This aid is limited to about $1 million dollars for Michigan.

Hugh J. McGoldrick, Williams-appointed director of the state office of hospital survey and construction, reports that seven projects are now under way and three more will break ground next Fall. The ten hospitals and hospital additions will add 1,000 beds to Michigan's facilities.

Parents Can Help Children Do Their Best In School

When your children are asked the standard question, "Are you glad to go back to school?" is their answer pleasing to you?

Their answer, whether yes or no, reflects back on you as a parent. Parents can do a great deal to help Johnny do his best at school and enjoy himself there, advises Mrs. Leman Backus, child development specialist at Michigan State College.

If your child brings home a poor report, what do you do? If Johnny is not doing his best then he needs your help and understanding rather than scolding. If it is arithmetic that bothers, let him help you with your use of it around the home.

Let Johnny keep score while playing game and his interest in numbers and spelling will take on a new meaning. Tying arithmetic in with daily living will make it interesting for him.

Interest in reading and liking books is developed more easily through the story hour when children are young. But it can be greatly aided at a later age by suggesting that they take turns with you in reading aloud. Here again encouragement rather than criticism is the recipe for success.

As Johnny goes back to school shared interest and shared activity is one of the best ways of helping him do his best. It may be a slower way of finding out some of Johnny's shortcomings, but if it helps him over some hurdles the results will be worth your time.

Debaters To Urge Direct Election Of The President

Michigan high school students will debate the merits of direct election of the president of the United States in contests to be held next year by the Michigan High School Forensic association, it was learned last week by Carl Olson, Manistique high school principal.

The association, which is sponsored by the University of Michigan, has endorsed the debate topic selected by a national committee for use in high school contests throughout the country. The question is: "Resolved, That the president of the United States should be elected by the direct vote of the people."

The issue was selected for high school discussion after debate coaches and advisers in all states were asked to submit suggestions. Other questions which received a large number of votes dealt with proposals for federal financing aid to college students and for union of the United States and Canada.

Tractors To Blame For Many Accidents

Tractors safely is one of the most important considerations on the farm, say Michigan State College agricultural engineers. Reports of the National Safety Council show that tractors may be involved in nearly 75 percent of all farm machinery accidents.

The main safety rules for operating tractors in the field is just good common sense, the engineers say. You can't afford to gamble with an accident by operating without the proper take-off shield in place. Cranking a tractor while in gear is another dangerous way to start a day's work. Excessive speed, and careless operation around ditches will also hurry a trip to the hospital.

Plans of Talk, Little Action Bridge at Mackinaw Was First Pledged 20 Years Ago

By Vernon J. Brown
The Mackinac Straits bridge, which has been discussed for 20 years, has passed through a number of the committees of the state legislature and the Republican party, but failed to accept a modified plan for crossing the Straits of Mackinac. The original draft had been prepared by the late William A. Cushman, then governor, Fred W.

promising employment to many on an direct relief and on other forms of welfare, were being sought. Unquestionably had the engineering for such a project been sufficiently well advanced, the bridge would at least have been begun.

Governor Cushman favored a structure to take off from a point just out of the harbor, high enough above the waters of the straits to clear the navigation channel between the mainland and Bois Blanc Island, then to follow a road to traverse the westerly shore of that island to its northwesterly point, then to again bridge the navigation channels and to traverse the higher portions of Mackinac Island, using Round Island as a footing for support of its carrying piers. Leaving the westerly end of Mackinac Island, the Cushman plan provided for the western terminus of the bridge to be located just north of the city of Saint Ignace.

Controversy among engineers called in for study and preliminary planning confused Washington authorities to the extent that no federal aid was available and Governor Cushman was forced to see his pet project die for lack of support.

Bridge Authority Named
The next step was the appointment of a Mackinac Straits Bridge Authority which engaged in considerable engineering and exploration of alternate proposals. Eventually a shorter and more direct route across the straits was accepted as the more feasible route. In consequence of these later developments some structural work was actually done when a causeway was built, judging out from the north shore of the straits east of Saint Ignace.

Arguments for the construction of this causeway included the proposal that such a causeway could be used to provide docking for the state ferries, this shortening the time required for crossing the straits and consequently increasing the capacity of the ferries by making more trips an hour. A change in highway administrators brought construction to a sudden standstill and the structure built at considerable cost has remained unused.

New Board Appointed
Now again the idea of remedying the congestion and delay in traffic across the straits between the two peninsulas is coming to the front. Governor C. Mennen Williams has recently appointed an inter-peninsula communications commission with directives to resume the study of travel conditions at the straits and to come up with an answer to the problem. Clark J. Adams, legal adviser to the governor, for several terms an able member of the state legislature representing the county of Oakland, and now considered one of the more able members of the governor's cabinet of advisers, has just written a piece for the papers giving his own ideas of what should be done. It is quite probable that the Adams ideas have some standing in the mind of the governor also.

Adams wisely points out that what is needed is not further long continued delay in study and engineering controversies but that immediate relief should be provided by completing the causeway from the north and by building another out from the south shore far enough to provide safe docking for the state ferries except for possibly those few days in the year when heavy seas would make their use impracticable.

Cities Fight For Advantage
The political implications involved in proposing any plan for relieving traffic congestion at the straits is well known. Entrepreneurs in Cheboygan, Mackinac City, Mackinac Island and Saint Ignace, either one or all, will be found in violent opposition to almost any plan that is advanced. The most direct route and the one to best serve the traveling public would leave all those places mentioned marooned so far as through travel is concerned. Local interests will of necessity be ignored and the general public interest will be substituted.

With the two causeways completed to put into the waters of the straits so far as a reasonable regard for cost and safety will justify and with adequate and properly constructed slips for use of the ferries provided and the ferries changed over to double end loading and unloading, the existing traffic could be accommodated and the long and tedious waits now endured could be avoided. Very few vacationists, hunters, tourists or business travelers complain of the boat trip. Most visitors to the north country like the trip across the blue waters of the straits and welcome it as an enjoyable break in the monotony of highway driving. What they do object to is sitting in their motor cars, either in the hot sun or cold winds, for hours just waiting with nothing to do.

Once these causeways have been completed and put in use they would still be useful even though a bridge sometime in the future will always be called for docking for ferry service and for cruising the adjacent waters. The causeways would of course provide the necessary approaches for the bridge and so no actual great expense or loss of investment would be involved.

The causeways and the ferries now owned and operated by the state, in combination will pay their own way if efficiently managed. No one has yet had the temerity to attempt to provide proof that any bridge will ever pay its way. On the other hand there is a value in physical connection of the two peninsulas. Such a bridge would attract worldwide attention and would draw millions of sightseeing tourists to the straits just to see and drive over the bridge. But none of the foreseeable results yet pointed to is of such a character that the revenues possible to be obtained can be made to amortize the cost and interest charges on the kind of a bridge required to connect the Upper Peninsula with the Lower Peninsula. I personally cannot see what Adams has pointed to as a reasonable and feasible answer to the Mackinac Straits bridge question, now for more than 20 years the subject of endless debate. It's time now to quit talking and begin doing.

NATIONAL GUARD MEMBERS BACK

Citizen Soldiers Praised By Governor Williams At Annual Encampment

Michigan National Guard troops, among them over 50 from Manistique, returned to their home communities Saturday, completing two weeks of summer training which won them commendation from both military and civilian officials.

Top-ranking army inspectors expressed surprise at the progress of Michigan Guardsmen during the 1920 encampment and praised recent improvements in training facilities at the state military reservation.

After witnessing a review of Michigan troops and their motorized equipment, Governor Williams complimented Guardsmen "for a job well done."

During his day-long inspection of the camp, the governor said he was "particularly impressed by the evident pride that the officers and men took in their several duties. With such spirit I know they will not only get into satisfaction from doing a good job but will reserve the state of Michigan and the United States well."

Payroll $940,000

Guardsmen drew their two weeks of active duty military pay Thursday and Friday before breaking camp for the trip home. Total pay roll, including the allowance for armor, who completed their summer training schedule last week, is estimated at $940,000.

Special troop trains moved out of Grayling Friday night carrying units making the trip home by rail, while motor convoys left Saturday morning with the remainder. During their stay in camp some 7,500 Guardsmen absorbed additional small arms and heavy artillery weapons practice, learned about speedy movement of an infantry division into combat zones by air, bivouacked overnight in the wooded areas of camp away from the main garrison and put into use for the first time the state military reservation's new armored training center.

At a Sunday morning memorial service honoring Michigan Guardsmen killed in past wars Governor Williams said, "You are demonstrating to all the world your faith in our way of life and your determination to defend it against all enemies. You are an object lesson in democracy under arms which our enemies cannot fail to understand. You are keeping faith with the heroes of yesterday and with generations yet unborn."
