HARRIET LA FOLLE

You don't have to join the Navy to see the world anymore.

Four young teachers from Manistique will be teaching in far corners of the globe next year in schools for overseas dependents operated by the Department of Defense.

They are:

Harriet LaFolle, daughter of Mrs. Harry LaFolle, 103 Arbutus Ave., who leaves Friday to teach kindergarten at Lakenheath AFB near London, England. Miss LaFolle has taught in Okinawa the last two years.

Joan Nelson, daughter of Mrs. Arvid Nelson, 201 Range St., who left last Friday to teach at a post near Manila in the Philippine Islands.

Stephanie Thompson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E.J. Thompson, 440 Arbutus Ave., and Ramona Kay Hentschell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Hentschell, 817 Oak St., left last Friday for Okinawa.

Harriet, a 1961 graduate of Manistique High School, was graduated in 1965 from Eastern Michigan University in Ypsilanti, and taught for two years in Warren, Mich., before going to Kadena AFB in Okinawa.

Child killed in accident

A 17-month-old Seney girl was killed Monday morning when hit by a logging truck being backed from the family driveway by her father.

Dead is Debbie Kay Musselman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Michel Musselman. The accident occurred at 11:45 a.m. at the Musselman home just north of M-28, on the Fox River Road.

The father told officers from the Newberry State Police post that he didn't see his daughter in the drive as he began backing.

Funeral services were held at 2 p.m. Wednesday from the Kefauver and Jackson Funeral Home in Manistique, with Rev. Bruce Handrich of the Germask Mononite Church officiating. Burial was in the Riverside cemetery in Germask.

Debbie was born Feb. 26, 1968 in Manistique. Surviving are her parents; a brother, Michel, and a sister, Cathy Sue, both at home; her maternal grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Phillip LeRue, formerly of Germask, and her paternal grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Musselman of Germask.

Cheer up, mother— school starts soon

It may seem like summer just got here, but the sound of school bells will be heard in a few short weeks.

Manistique High School Principal Marvin Fredericksen has announced that all students in grades 9-12 may pick up their class schedules and pay their books during the week of Aug. 25-29 in the principal's office.

Regular classes will begin Wednesday, Sept. 3, following a general assembly of students in the high school auditorium at 8:10 a.m.

Record school budget is approved by board

A record budget totaling $1,340,343 for the 1969-70 fiscal year was adopted by the Manistique Area Schools board of education at their August meeting Tuesday night.

The vote was 5-1, with Robert Knoph voting no and Leon Wood absent. Knoph explained that there were several items that were duplicated in the proposed budget, and said he felt these should be straightened out before approval.

Supl. Edwin Wuestle said that the budget as presented did not include any figures for negotiated increases with certified or auxiliary employees. Negotiations with these groups are currently underway. He added that the budget, by necessity, is amended and revised by the board as the year progresses.

Last year's budget for the district totaled $1,173,184. The largest increase comes from including the $114,000 U.P. Highway Safety Education grant from the state in the current year's figures. Manistique is acting as the coordinating school for the project, which involves 13 U.P. school districts.

Mrs. Margaret Waters said that she had checked the books of County Treasurer William Cowman, and that a copy of all payments made to the school through that office have been mailed to board member Leon Wood, who had questioned their accuracy at a special meeting with the auditors. She also reported she had checked the audits for the past six years, and that the beginning and ending balances were all verified.

The board also spent time in discussing methods of approving and paying bills, and instituting procedures that would make the process less cumbersome.

Also discussed was the board's policy on transporting students within the city limits, and a half from school are transported. Blacktopping projects at the Central and Lakeside Schools costing $23,250 were approved by the board. An earlier motion that a limited blacktopping project costing $13,160 be approved ended in a 3-3 vote, with Mrs. Waters, Jeanne Larson and Denton Nelson in favor, and Ralph Gillam, Robert Knoph and William Mueller opposing. The expanded project passed 5-1, with only Knoph voting no. He explained that he felt work was also needed at the Doyle and Germask schools, and should be given priority.

The board also approved installation of carpeting in the first floor main corridor of the high school building, from the library to the junior high addition, at a cost of $100. Head Custodian Joe Wood pointed out that maintenance and cleaning costs would be lower with the carpet than at present.

The offer of William Blakes to purchase the Putnam property at Main and Cedar Sts. for a price of $4,000 was approved. Blakes agreed to pay the special assessment of $465.50 for curb and gutters on the corner, and said he would give the Senior Citizens Center at least 90 days in which to find a new location, and more time if possible. The school has assumed the responsibility of moving the Post House museum, also located on the property, to a new location.

Will city sue?

Is the city ready to sue Michigan Consolidated Gas Co. for its failure to provide natural gas service to this community as promised?

Mayor Leo DeMars said Monday night at the City Council meeting that the city "definitely" would sue to recover damages. The council came after council had approved spending an extra $1,800 to convert the boilers in the new city hall to oil rather than gas, as originally planned.

DeMars said the city would list that $1,800, plus other damages resulting from having to change heating plants in other projects, such as the senior citizens housing project.

Before resigning two weeks ago, City Attorney William Wood had told council he felt the city would have a strong case against the utility firm.

Michigan Consolidated first announced plans to bring natural gas to this area in 1965, but was first delayed when pipeline construction was put off a year. Their latest delay results from a decision by the Michigan Public Service Commission to grant only a portion of a requested rate increase. The utility says it cannot afford to borrow money at existing high interest rates unless the rate increase is allowed.

Michigan Consolidated was agreed to pay the Manistique Area Schools the difference in cost between natural gas and propane gas for a second heating season. The schools installed gas boilers in anticipation of the service.

Before a suit can be filed, however, the entire council will have to approve a resolution calling for the legal action. A new city attorney will also have to be named. City Manager Robert Wood, who makes the appointment under the new city charter, said that he expected an attorney to be selected before the end of the month. Although Noe makes the appointment, the attorney's salary is set by the council.

THE SAGE OF SCHOOLCRAFT

That money talks I'll not deny; I heard it once, it said "good-bye." Middle age is when, if you have two temptations, you take the one that will get you home earliest. Or, when you worry more about your corn than your wild cats. As one caterpillar said to the other as they watched a butterfly, "Boy, you'll never get me up in one of those things."

Braeger told officers he swerved to miss a deer and lost control of his car. The accident occurred at 11:30 p.m. Kevin J. Vanatta, 30, of Jermask, was injured Saturday at 1 p.m., as he was pinned between two cars in a Germask service station. State Police said a parked vehicle owned by Lawrence Vanatta, Jermask, rolled back into a parked car owned by William Pogorzelski, Lansing. The youngster sought his own treatment, officers said.

Lake cottage hit by fire

Fire that started in a gas heater caused extensive damage to the Leonard Donaldson cottage on the west side of Indian Lake early Monday morning. Public Safety firemen responded to the alarm at 1:55 a.m. The Donaldson Bar-D ranch is located just off County Road 455 in Thompson Township. The fire caused extensive damage in the kitchen area, but there was heavy smoke damage to the rest of the cottage. Although the Donaldson family escaped from the blaze, Mr. Donaldson was taken to Schoolcraft Memorial Hospital to check for smoke inhalation. Firemen returned to town at 4:15 a.m. Continued on Back Page

Picture memories

A recent picture in the Pioneer-Tribune showing the church of the Reformed, Presbyterian, and querying when the church was built has brought a response from Thora Klagstad Jones, now of Toledo, Ohio.

"I was a graduate of Manistique High School 63 years ago and our class held the class day exercises in the Presbyterian Church (Church of the Reformed) and the baptist church. The sermon was also given there by Rev. Torbet. That was in 1906 and the church was there at least 10 years before."

"There were eight members in our class and I was valedictorian and received a scholarship to Alma College. It was sponsored by Rev. Torbet and signed by J.S. Pitman, president of the board of education, Lewis Reichle, principal and Prof. Hanson, superintendent of schools."

"Members of the 1906 class were Russell Norton, Herbert Zerbach, Norman Reed, Mabel Heimlar, Sigrid Silstrom Lundvall, Hazel Nicholson Barton, Katherine Krusic Lashich and Thora Klagstad Jones."

HOWARD HANDORF AND GIANT PLANTS

King-sized tomatoes raised in home-made hothouse

You too can raise tomatoes on plants six feet high. Just follow the example set by Leo Lillie, 147 N. Maple Ave., who has between 400 and 500 giant-sized plants bearing fruit in a plot behind his home.

His secret is an inexpensive plastic-covered "greenhouse," about 30 by 60 feet in size, constructed of clear plastic nailed over wooden frames.

He starts the tomatoes about February each year, raising them from seed and starting them in planters in his home. By March he begins heating his informal "greenhouse" with oil space heaters and some electric heat, and the small plants are transferred from the house. Last week there were some well over six feet high, and most of them bulging with green tomatoes.

Mr. Lillie, now retired, describes the project as a hobby that he claims helps his arthritis by keeping him active.

Four different varieties of plants are used, and the soil is tested each year--a must in a high-value crop, small area situation," according to Extension Agent Howard Handorf.

Foresters watch bugs

Foresters on the Hiawatha National Forest are keeping close watch of two important insects, The Red Headed Pine Sawfly and the ST. Ignace District and the Saratoga Spittlebug on the Rapid River District, to epidemic proportions in two red-pine plantations.

An egg bunch survey taken last week indicated that over 50 per cent of the trees in a 52 acre plantation near St. Ignace are infested with Red Headed Pine Sawfly. Such a population would kill so many trees that the area would have to be replanted. Ten percent infection indicates control measures are needed.

A 90 acre plantation near the Gladstone golf course is heavily infested with Saratoga Spittlebug. Originally three plantations totaling 205 acres were seriously infested but natural control has reduced this to one 90 acre plantation. Saratoga Spittlebug is an enemy of young plantations. If it can be controlled until the trees become 15 feet high the damage will only be a nuisance rather than fatal.

Foresters are watching the development of both outbreaks to see if natural control will reduce the populations. If it becomes evident that chemical control is needed, malathion at the rate of 10 ounces per acre will be used. Malathion is not a chlorinated hydrocarbon; it is a soft pesticide. Malathion breaks down easily and does not persist as DDT does.

BLANCHING IS IMPORTANT
If you're freezing vegetables this summer, don't be tempted to take short cuts and eliminate blanching before freezing them. This includes all vegetables -- green beans, peas, corn etc.

I've heard people say "I just wash them, cut them up and put them in the freezer. And they taste good." But do they really? During blanching many of the enzymes in food are inactivated. When these enzymes are allowed to remain active they contribute to deterioration of the product during storage. This results in off flavors, off odors and poor eating qualities. That's why green beans that haven't been blanched have a hay-like flavor. Corn is less sweet and has a musty odor.

Blanching also helps in two other ways. It helps set the color and prolongs the natural color of food during storage. It also wilts and softens vegetables and makes them easier to pack. Blanching times vary for each vegetable so check your freezing directions.

GIVE YOUR PLANTS A VACATION. I've often wondered just what to do with mine when I was going to be gone for a while. A USDA article I read today gave the answer: Their horticulturalists suggest that plants, like people, would benefit if they were moved out of doors for a summer vacation.

They suggest that they be placed in a lightly shaded spot in the yard or in the garden. The pots should be sunk to the ground almost to their tops, leaving only enough of the pot to provide a handhold so they can be twisted periodically -- about every two weeks. The roots will grow through the drainage hole in the bottom of the pot and they need to be broken off from time to time so the plant won't suffer shock when moved in the fall.

Plants will grow faster outdoors and will need regular watering and fertilizer. I'm going to put mine out and hope someone remembers to water them while I'm gone. You might like to try putting yours out even though you're going to be around.

Education and apathy

INVOLVEMENT IN EDUCATION and its processes is not common for the large majority of America's population, according to a preliminary report from the University of Michigan.

Last week the Associated Press carried a story saying that despite occasional protests by parents, most people just don't get involved.

The report covered research done by M. K. Jennings of the University of Michigan's Institute for Social Research and Harmon Ziegler of the University of Oregon.

They found that:

—Only 21 per cent of those responding in more than 2,000 interviews said they had taken part in any school activity in the past few years, and only about one-fifth of those did more than work with the Parent-Teachers Association.

—Both school officials and the public at large feel the federal government is too powerful in society.

—Most people feel teachers should have more say in educational policy.

—More than 65 percent of school board members and superintendents feel they should have greater power in setting policy, but most of the public does not agree.

—The typical school board member is white, middle-aged, well-educated, high-income, a homeowner, Protestant, a long-time resident of this community and more than likely to have school age children.

The Associated Press article reported, "Despite ample opportunity for public involvement in local school systems, there are great numbers of people who have only the slightest concern about their school boards," and added, "School officials overestimate the degree of citizen interest and involvement."

"On balance, the results on citizen participation do not suggest a highly active, attentive public," adding that even where school officials seem to be beset by a protesting public, "there are usually large numbers of individual citizens who are not at all involved."

Putting it simply, despite outcries and charges and counter-charges and heated public meetings, most people simply don't care. The Manistique Area Schools board of education conducts 90 per cent of its business before an audience you could fit into a large phone booth. Even on controversial issues, only a small percentage of those involved will bother to attend the meeting where decisions are being made.

Earlier this summer an extensive questionnaire was mailed to residents in Hiawatha Township, seeking responses on school issues. These responses will be used by the school board's Advisory Committee to help them with their recommendations to the board. The complete results of the questionnaire are now being tabulated, and should be helpful, but one disappointing factor is already evident. Less than one person in four thought it important enough to answer.

Certainly you cannot run a school district by questionnaire, public opinion and straw votes. Yet you can hope for public participation to the point where the wishes and needs and desires of the public are known to the degree that they are helpful to the school board in reaching basic decisions on education.

The study evidently offers no solution, and we aren't about to try and find one either, but it must be scant consolation to school officials and school board members that relatively few people really care what they are doing.

Onward Pierce, Pierce High School
You are doing fine. . .

Any weekly columnist who misses the opportunity to write a report of his high school class reunion deserves to be drummed out of the columnists association, if they have one.

This is the first time in 25 years that such an opportunity has presented itself, and I, for one, intend to take advantage of it.

This reunion was just a little bit different. John D. Pierce High School has been out of business since 1961, and the elementary section of the school will be closed down in 1971. Soon there will be nothing left but the memories, but they were rekindled to a farethell at the All-School Reunion in Marquette last week end.

Approximately 1,000 youngsters were graduated from Pierce between 1917 and 1961, and better than a third of them showed up with their respective wives, husbands and traveling companions for the event.

The program listed 26 members in the Class of 1944 and 11 were present, which is not too bad after a quarter of a century. Not surprisingly (considering that Pierce was a "training school" for Northern State Teachers College, now Northern Michigan University), eight of the 26 ended up as teachers. Five are in business or industry, three are full-time housewives, with several others combining jobs with homemaking. The list also includes one in government, a tool and die maker, a designer, one deceased, one at loose ends, plus a minister and an editor, which is sort of going from the divine to the ridiculous.

Don Bottun, principal at Pierce for many years before his elevation to Dean of Men at Northern, spoke briefly at the Saturday night banquet, describing a reunion most accurately as an occasion when schoolmates get together to see who's falling apart. I don't know about falling apart, but after 25 years it was obvious that several members of the Class of 1944 were at least bulging at the seams.

"What you don't eat you throw away," remarked one remembered as slim and trim, "and the trouble is I should have thrown more away."

Just as an aside, if I were promoting 25th reunions, I would make it a rule that every person there had to wear a name tag with letters at least two inches high. My neck is permanently strained from attempting to peer through the bottom of my bifocals at scrawled names on dinky name tags, and I still squirm in embarrassment when somebody pops up in front of you and says "I bet you don't remember me!" This is exceedingly painful for a man who can't remember his own shirt size, his children's ages or his sister's married name. I am amazed, in fact, that there were those who recognized that skinny little red-headed runt who had mellowed and pillowed to the point where the only resemblance is that most of the teeth and all of the hair remain weatherworn but original.

Perhaps the high point for me was the reunion with the faculty. Most of them had come back, God bless their dedicated souls, and for a moment in a crowded hallway I was able to present myself to them once again for their examination and approval. Olive Fox, Ethel Griswold, Vera Haven, Lucille Payne, Don Bottun, Martha Mehnert, Carl Slick... They all remembered, and they were all kind.

Ethel Griswold fixed me with those cool alert eyes that used to transfix me in the eighth grade and asked, "What are you doing now, David?"

I admitted that I edited a weekly newspaper.
"That's a surprise," she remarked, "I always thought you'd try politics."

I didn't have the heart to explain last fall's fiasco in my first venture toward elective office, but I did find the words to tell her, after all these years, that whatever poor mark I do manage to make in this world should be credited at least partially to her ledger. It was she, and her contemporaries at John D. Pierce, who helped to mold the lives of a thousand young people, and I doubt that this world, with its changing values and attitudes, will ever see their like again.

They accomplished much, but alas, much of what they told us fell on unhearing ears. If only we had listened.

I still recall the time during my freshman year when I was seized with the inspiration that what John D. Pierce needed was a school newspaper, with me as editor, of course. I presented myself to Don Bottun and explained this great idea, and after hearing me out he gave me a half-sad, half-speculative look and offered some good advice.

"If I were you I'd worry a little more about Latin I than newspapers," he commented.

I should have listened. After all these years the mysteries of Latin are still shrouded in perpetual darkness, and here I find myself, still laboring under the delusion that newspapers are the greatest thing since the wheel.

Sic transit Gloria.

SCHNICHELHAUSENBAUM AND EDUCATIONAL REFORM

At the summer superintendents conference at Northern last week, I saw my friend Joe Schnickelhausenbaum from the Department of Education walking across the parking lot.

"Hey Schnickelhausenbaum," I yelled to him. "Let's slip off to the Viking Ship at the Holiday Inn and you can tell me what's going on in Lansing."

"Somebody might hear us," "You crazy -- at the Viking Ship in the Holiday Inn? They turn on a record of wind and waves. Nobody can hear anybody."

We found the most out-of-the-way booth we could and I waited for the record to begin.

The wind roared and the waves waved and the lanterns on the ceiling started to swing and the waitress hadn't even taken our order yet.

"So, Joe," I said to him, "how're things going with the Commission on Educational Reform?"

Schnickelhausenbaum turned sea sick. "O! gevalt, Tone, if I'd of known you were gonna ask a question like that I wouldn't have come."

"Come on now. It can't be that much of a secret."

Schnickelhausenbaum's black bushy eyebrows went up and his voice rose two full tones.

"Secret -- secret you say. The problem's no secret. That's the biggest problem. Everybody's testifying and they all want something else."

"Well in the north we want full funding for transportation."

"They want it in the cities too."

"Why? they don't have any distance in the cities."

"You never heard of integration, Tone? They have to bus kids all over town."

He had a point there.

"So why doesn't the commission recommend it to the legislature?" I asked.

Schnickelhausenbaum's eyes beamed at this chance to develop his position. He started by shaking his finger in my face. "So you never heard of the Michigan Taxpayer's League? Their reform is to cut educational spending."

"How you going to cut spending when you have to negotiate contracts every year?"

"That's what the commission's trying to figure out," He answered.

"Is it like that with everything?" I asked.

"Everything," he replied. "Some people testify they want sex education in and the others want it out. Some want more reorganization and some want to bust up the districts. The people want more vocational education but the people want to cut the spending."

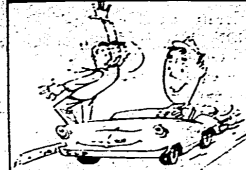

"You know Schnickelhausenbaum," I said, "I'm glad I'm not on that commission."

"You should thank your six-pointed stars."

"I guess our problem is we don't know what reform is."

"Tone, when we get done with this commission, we're gonna need a commission to reform the reformers."

counties to form housing commissions pending in the House of Representatives and is scheduled to be taken under discussion preparatory to a vote after the Legislature's summer recess.

The measure was approved as an amendment which Jacobetti added to a House of Representatives' bill on municipal housing commission membership.

Legislation to allow county housing commissions had been sought by the Upper Peninsula Commission for Area Progress, which asked Jacobetti for his assistance.

"This is overdue legislation," Jacobetti said. "Cities, villages and townships have for a long time been able to form housing commissions, but not counties. This bill is important to the Upper Peninsula and for all of rural Michigan."

If enacted into law, the Jacobetti proposal would allow county housing commissions to be organized so that the counties could acquire, construct, maintain and extend housing facilities. Schoolcraft County has backed such a proposal.

"This could make possible better housing for families who otherwise would be unable to afford it," Jacobetti explained. "Much housing in the Upper Peninsula is substandard. Generally speaking, conditions are worse in rural areas. While some cities in the Upper Peninsula have housing commissions do not have it feasible for them to go into public housing. They have to rely on the counties, but until now the law did not allow counties to form housing commissions."

Jacobetti pointed out that the housing commissions could be especially valuable in filling the need for housing units for senior citizens. "These older people," he said, are usually retired and on fixed incomes. It is difficult for them, particularly if they live in rural areas, to find adequate housing at a price they can pay."

By authorizing counties to form a housing commission, the entire county can be used as a population base, allowing the county housing commission to submit applications for federal funds for senior citizens and other public housing on a county-wide basis.

"This legislation would cost the taxpayers of the state nothing," Jacobetti added. "In fact, it would make it possible for counties to attract more federal dollars for public housing."

ATTEND THE CHURCH OF YOUR CHOICE THIS SUNDAY

This message is brought to you by the following local business establishments in the interest of strengthening community churches:

MANISTIQUE PULP & PAPER CO.

A "Perfect" Rose

Look closely at a so-called perfect rose! Scan the petals; you will find they are far from perfect. But uneven shapes, blemishes or misshapen stems will not spoil the delicate color, rich fragrance and sheer beauty of the total flower.

How clearly a rose illustrates that nothing in life is truly perfect!

But, rather than discourage us, this should give us fresh confidence and strength.

God did not make the rose perfect—nor did He make us perfect. Yet He thinks none the less of us for our faults and blemishes. In His eyes we always have another chance. But it is up to us to take it.

Start by going to the church of your choice next Sunday.

GI insurance aid offered

Robert M. FitzGerald, Manager of the Veterans Administration Regional Office in Detroit, said this week that more than half of the 183,000 Michigan veterans who hold $1,292,504,000 worth of government life insurance have not yet converted these policies from term to a permanent plan.

In 1968, he pointed out, Michigan veterans paid $18,810,000 in premiums to keep both term and permanent government policies in force.

World War II and Korean Conflict veterans hold most of the term policies, Mr. FitzGerald said. Now at an average age of 49.7 years, World War II veteran in Michigan who have not converted their insurance will soon find their National Service Life Insurance premiums going up as a result of advancing age.

Permanent insurance costs more to begin with, but the premium rates for permanent insurance never go up. Permanent policies also have loan, cash-surrender, paid-up and extended insurance values, whereas term policies do not.

Veterans can obtain detailed information about the various government life insurance permanent plans from their nearest VA office, Mr. FitzGerald said.

THE IMPORTANCE OF KINDERGARTEN

Modern kindergartens are much different from the first institutions of that name, they are better adapted to little children. School begins the minute your child arrives with active play and many toys to attract his attention.

Story telling will give him a chance to express himself. When weather is favorable your child will have outdoor play to exercise his active body. A rest period will give him an opportunity to relax from his many activities.

Your child will grow and mature his first year at school. He will learn much about the rights and feelings of others, how to take turns and the advantages of give and take. He will feel a sense of confidence in his ability to deal with other children and his emotional adjustment becomes more steady.

Research workers have found that children that have had kindergarten experiences progress faster in their grades, make higher scores on certain achievement and mental tests, show a lower percentage of failures in the grades and they receive better ratings on social traits than non-kindergarten children.

My year's service as a VISTA volunteer has ended and I'll soon be leaving the Manistique area. As I look around, I find much that I will miss:

The buzz of snowmobiles tearing the stillness of a wintry evening.

Looking for bears at the town-

Sawdust beaches -- and Editor Dave Rood talking and writing about them.

People who maintain, "There is no poverty in the Upper Peninsula."

Hi Folks,
Monday morning always finds me pondering and wondering what to write at this time of our summer season. Yet I know that mother nature with so many hidden treasures has taught me many things of her domain and I yet have so much more to learn.

Many of nature's scenes that I've seen time and again seem to appear more beautiful. Take the sky. For an instance it is just beautiful this morning in its color of blue and fleecy white clouds. Then take the day, as it slowly slips away to give us that beautiful crimson sky as the sun sets. Then the moon and the stars take over the sky and at times fleecy clouds go floating by slowly that give that buttermilk sky.

This morning it seems that the songs of the birds is coming from every tree of the forest. All are busy answering each other's melody. There really is a peacefulness Out Our Way and happiness I wouldn't trade any city folks. Being so close to all of Mother Nature's creatures, flowers, trees, lakes and streams have given me the riches of life wealth cannot buy. As Washington Irvine said, "There is a serene and settled majesty to woodland scenery, that enters into the soul and de-lights and elevates it, and fills it with noble inclinations."

At Blaze Trail enjoying their vacation is the family of Robert Anstaett, and Grandma Anstaett. Robert plans to join the family this week.

Mr. and Mrs. Bob Smith of Detroit are vacationing with the Joe Smiths at Gooseneck Lake.

By the way of the grapevine I received word that some of the O. T. fishermen have taken the route to Canada to try their luck at trout fishing. To try their luck are Storky Stoor, Wishbone (Ralph) Gauthier, Rocky Danko and Andy LeBash. Wonder what sort of a fish story they will have on their return.

Mr. and Mrs. Carl Lueck, formerly of Detroit have become permanent residents Out Our Way. Welcome Carl and Muriel, folks Out Our Way wish you happiness in your new home.

Word was received by Ev Mintonye that Clara Dishneau is laid up with a broken knee cap. Clara was a resident Out Our Way for many years. A word of cheer from her old friends will help Clara shorten her shut-in hours. Her address is 6419 Colmar, Bell Gardens, Calif. 90201.

Mr. and Mrs. Orval Smith and son Edwin of Coldwater, Mich. enjoyed a week's vacation at Ramsden's on Thunder Lake. Mr. Smith plans to return to try his luck at squirrel hunting.

Echoes of birthday greetings go out to Helen Johnson, Bill Bauman, Lillian Bockorny, Norm Jahn, Sr., Max Schuetter, Ezra Anstaett, Mary Margaret Livingston, William Cook and Gus Bloom. May the day for all of you be one of complete happiness.

Until next week's chat stay happy.
