Interest to hunters and anglers of more interest to the area is a new bulletin "Vanilla, Upper Peninsula," by G. Bowers, Commission Director, Manistiquet, is the primary focus of dressing, hanging, and cutting. This bulletin may be of interest to the area and takes the first pages of the bulletin. The remaining 14 pages will be primarily of interest to the wives. As there are 38 recipes for delicious methods of disposing of the interior of the game trophy. These recipes range from deerburgers to casseroles, jerky, pasties, Chinese ribs and venison smothering.

At the moment we are approximately 20 copies on hand for disposal and another 25 are on order. We hope to be able to pick up another 50 in October as the first come, first served and I believe it is worth a special trip.

News from Road 437

Hi Folks,
Our much-needed atlas came out our way last Friday and this morning it is drizzling. A good day for trout fishing. The boss says, so he and Larry Salte are preparing to leave.

Have had much time to go exploring in the forest on my trips to Manistique. I'm always alert to see what new progress is made by mother nature, as the summer slowly comes to its end.

The seeds of the fireweeds with white hairs will soon be carried through the air by strong winds. There still is color to be seen among our wild floral bouquets. The tall purple asters, the daisy (feeban, come in with colors of white and blue and there a black-eyed Susan seem to look you and even a oxeye daisy. They all seem to look sort of lonely as there aren't too many around now.

Autumn is a wonderful time of the year to leave the busy living of city life, and walk the quiet ways down a forest trail to gather peace of mind.

Then along will come hulan summer and Jack Frost's paint-brushings to help the summer retire with grace. With its beautiful colors, autumn will cover the drab look of summer's end. And after India's summer's beauty will come winter and all mother nature will be groomed for its winter's rest. Much joy can be found in each of our four seasons. One must just reach out for his share each day before it ends, for the tomorrow may not bring it.

Mrs. Mildred deCassin of Detroit spent the past week at her cabin. Her guest was Mrs. Marion Singuino.

The Area Council is a big help to me in planning programs and activities for the three county area. The group has been in operation now for about four years and I don't know what I'd do without them. Their big project now is planning the fourth annual "College Day" to be held in Escanaba, Tuesday, Sept. 23.

Do mark the "College Day" date on your calendar now and plan to attend. It's open to all women, not only to Extension homemakers. This year's theme is "Looking Your Best Self." The morning program will be on selecting the right clothes for you, your figure and your personality. Emphasis in the afternoon will include grooming, hair care, styling, wigs and wiglets.

Miss Bernetta Kahabka, one of our favorite Extension clothing specialists and the Escanaba Beauty Academy will act as resource people.

The 12 members of the Area Council - all different shapes, sizes, and ages - will serve as clothing models and other homemakers will assist with showing hair styles. Special music and a noon luncheon are also being planned.

Reservations for "College Day" must be made before Sept. 19. Each Extension homemaker will be receiving a registration form in the mail.

If you are not a member and would like to come, contact a member or the Extension Office in the Manistique Post Office building for further information. The phone no. is 341-5050. Seney homemakers have attended every "College Day" thus far. We do hope you can come again. It's a good outing, a learning experience, and a fun day for all women. Do plan to come. The cost is only $2.25 and this includes your noon luncheon plus coffee and a "go with" when you arrive. Registration will begin at 9 at the Central Methodist Church in Escanaba.

Teachers and money

IT IS IRONIC to report that services for extra-curricular activities, donated by volunteer teachers several years ago during the school district's austerity period, are now being withheld by the certified employees until a contract settlement is reached.

Withholding such extra services is about the only weapon left to the teachers in their contract negotiations. The three-year contract they signed a year ago left only monetary issues to be settled this year.

Manistique is fortunate not to be among the districts closed by strike or lockout. Although our teachers are negotiating hard and firmly, we think that most of them are more concerned with the quality of education being offered than in walking a picket line.

As in all arguments, there is merit to both sides.

The board of education has been under some rather indiscriminate sniping in recent years from a variety of critics, most of them still smarting from the effects of a reorganization plan that they voted for and approved but did not understand. The board cannot be blind and deaf to the legitimate demands of the teachers, yet they cannot supinely accept every request that is made. If they fight teacher pay demands too long and too hard, education will suffer, school spirit and morale will sag, and valued faculty members may start making plans to move elsewhere next year. If they accept all the teacher demands they will be roundly criticized by taxpayers who feel, rightly or wrongly, that they are already paying too much in school taxes. They could also face possible legal action for running a deficit—something that is forbidden by state law.

Speaking of state law, it is a funny thing that they have given teachers (and other public employees) the right to bargain collectively, but denied to them the right to strike. It's sort of like telling them to learn how to swim but forbidding them to get wet.

We can understand the teachers feeling they are entitled to wages that are equal to and competitive with salaries in similar-size school districts. There may be critics who bitterly oppose the increasing militancy of our educators, but it is a fact of economic life that we and our school board are going to have to face ultimately. Teacher pay demands are likely to continue, and there is the probability that there will be attempts to take over some educational functions that have up till now been the province of the school administration and the board of education. Size of classes, for instance, may be something that will be determined at the bargaining table instead of by the principal, superintendent, and school board.

The board of education, as so often is the case, is caught in the middle. A "taxpayers' revolt" makes the job of boosting or even continuing school millage increasingly difficult, yet the pressure continues to boost teacher pay and benefits, and provide more services in education.

Perhaps the governor's blue ribbon committee on educational reform can come up with answers when they make their report this fall.

Until they do, however, our schools, our educators, our teachers and our school boards are going to be increasingly frustrated as they attempt to solve what at this moment appears to be the insoluble.

A prize-winning weekly newspaper published every Thursday at Manistique, Michigan, at the Top O'Lake Michigan in the heart of Michigan's beautiful Upper Peninsula.

This is a farewell to a beautiful summer.

The approaching equinox will have its own bag of goodies; of brilliant autumn colors, cool and crisp nights, hunting season, and the end of lawn mowing—all things of joy and a wonder to behold.

Yet there is that certain sadness as summer dwindles and dies, watching the bracken turn to brown, listening to the leaves rustle and blow and start to lose their grip on their summer tree house.

The changing of the seasons is always one of bright hope and promise, yet the tinge of nostalgia is there as well, for man, being what he is, remembers the good and closes his memory to the bad.

When winter's winds are bit-

Goodbye to summer

ing across the frozen lakes he will remember the warm summer sun, the late-season haze across the water that obscures the far shore to a shadowy outline, the utter refreshment of a plunge into the cool waters at the end of a hot and sticky day. He will forget the biting flies and the sweat trickling down his nose and the heavy summer traffic that clogs the highways and byways.

It is typical that he will remember the three-iron shot to the green that gave him a birdie on No. 6, and forget the horrendous four-stroke excavation in the sand trap on 7, or the putting whammies that ruined his round on No. 1 before he even got started.

January's short days and bitter cold will bring back memories of early sunrises that roused the birds and their songs, but the sunburn that came from a too-long nap on the beach on a lazy afternoon will be conveniently filed in the unreachable depths of his cranial wastebasket.

The thunder-like grumbles on the interior horizon of the small intestine will bring back blissful thoughts of bratwurst slowly broiled over a charcoal fire, of hot-roasted sweet corn that dripped with butter, and large, vine ripened tomatoes that made a summer salad a meal to remember. Conveniently forgotten will be the time that somebody forgot to put the radishes in the potato salad, or when a particularly good batch of old-fashioned products such as conviviality that the grilled meat ended up with a carbon exterior that didn't taste too bad at the time but later produced some curious duodenal reverberations during the process of digestion.

Even those approaching middle age (now projected to include those years between 60 and 85) can recall the artless simplicity of a schoolboy's summer and no more school, no more books, no more teacher's dirty looks. The only decisions that faced you were whether to play ball or go swimming, or gee whiz maybe even a keen camping trip with a blanket, a pound of hot dogs, three loaves of bread, and a good supply of pork and beans. Those are the things you remember now, forgetting the chores of mowing the lawn or weeding the garden or washing the windows.

Now is the time, of course, when we start anew—when we tie up all those loose ends of the summer fizzle. It is also the time that we stop and wonder just where the time did go. Whatever happened to August, anyway? Here one day and gone the next, a fair weather friend if there ever was one.

Consider the things you were going to do and didn't. On second thought, don't consider them. It's too discouraging. It might be better emotionally to look ahead and plan on all the things that you plan to do this fall. There are still plenty of warm days ahead, and the opportunity to take that walk in the woods or that canoe trip down the Big Indian.

There is only one flaw in this approach. Next December, when the ecstasy and the agony of deer hunting have passed, and the waning of the early December moon heralds the oncoming winter solstice, Santa Claus and Super Bowl, then will come the question of whatever happened to autumn, and were those too-few, too-brief days all we get of Indian Summer? Then to consider the things we were going to do and never did, and then to forget all that and look ahead to the bright, crisp and invigorating challenge of winter and beyond that, to the promise of spring.

When worse comes to worst, close your eyes and conjure up the smell of the season's first arbutus and its fragrant promise of summer.

So here it is barely autumn and already I've got arbutus blooming. Whatever happened to winter, anyway?

AN EDUCATIONAL ROSETTA STONE

The secret of educational writing is to say the obvious with obscurity.

There is a pattern to the pattern. You never use an unqualified noun. If we cannot think of a proper qualifier the word "effective" or "meaningful" will do. For example, we write or talk of a "nutritious" school lunch program, as if it were possible to have a "non-nutritious lunch program."

We are conditioned to use the euphemism, double negatives, redundancies, amorphous generalities, unnecessary qualifications and complex phrases with a degree of expertise which truly amazes the unfortunate readers. We have been accused of having taken Language Obscurity Linguistics 209. Those who garnered A's in this subject also have developed the ability to be endlessly repetitious and skillfully employ as "innovative," "creative," "implement," "supplement" and "compensator."

As a service I will translate some of these mystifying usages into English.

Creative new Programs - different than what we did last year.

Disadvantaged - poor. Non-disadvantaged - well off (note the double negative).

To more effectively meet the educational needs of children - to teach better.

Group Interaction - playing together.

Unique - means anything we want it to mean.

Dissemination - spreading the word.

Utilize - means the same as use, but is harder to read.

Implement - make it work.

Diagnostic intake - find out what's the matter.

Documentation and evaluation of the variables that are operative - (That's a beauty) It means the same as diagnostic intake.

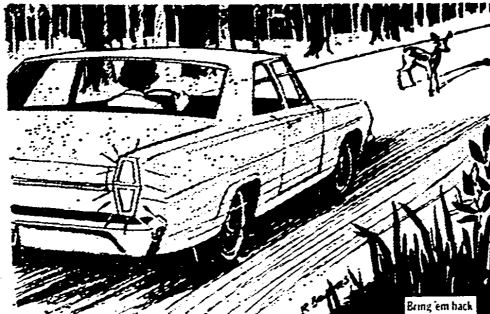

Paraprofessional - A mother who helps the kindergarten kids with their overshoes.

Let me demonstrate how to translate a paragraph of educationese into English.

If you hear an educationist say "To understand a delinquent's behavior and assist him to adapt so that he does not come into conflict with the legal-societal normative system, you need to be aware of the normative system, of the youngster's primary group and interplay of the forces within his milieu."

Translated this means, "If you want to understand a kid you better know what kind of neighborhood gang he runs with." (It isn't grammatical but it's clear.)

In conclusion, my "unique" expectation is that today's column will provide a "creative, meaningful, educational experience" for everyone, who made it to the end. (From educationese, that means hope you liked it.)

Tommy Thompson J.P. Quick Hospitals - And Your Child #1

Advance knowledge of medical procedures are very important when your child must go to the hospital. A child knowing what to expect will be less apprehensive and more cooperative.

Start by explaining the hospital setup long before your child gets sick. This method of hospital - education is seldom used because most of us don't think of trouble until it happens. Also, when a child is hospitalized, it usually is an emergency and during the excitement, the youngster's emotional reactions are relegated into the background.

Hospital personnel have learned that it pays to tell a child the truth. As an example, when wheeled into X-ray many children become alarmed. This is understandable as the room is very spooky and the machines look like monsters.

All this will not prevent tears when a child is hurt, but it may help him to develop a more mature attitude toward hospitals, doctors and nurses.

and experiment, even if what he is creating doesn't have any significance to you. Let him expand his horizons in every direction. He was, after all, meant to explore three worlds: the physical, the mental and the spiritual.

Don't stint on any of them. Be sure he gets a good start in every area. If your son isn't going to church school and to church services with you, why not start now?
