50,000 jobs are forecast

The Upper Great Lakes Regional Commission (UGLRC) sees 50,000 new jobs necessary in the region by 1980, Alfred E. France, UGLRC Federal Co-Chairman told UCAAP Delegates at the Winter Quarterly Meeting held Dec. 2 in Escanaba.

The Commission is in the process of formulating a five-year plan which aims to make the region attractive to private investment through public works expenditures and tax incentive programs, said France.

"We foresee," said France, "public works expenditures of $450,000,000 in order to bring in the $1,250,000,000 in private capital necessary to create the 50,000 jobs." The tax incentive program, which features federal tax credit applied to the region, would have more impact than the public works funds, said France.

The Commission also has a role in coordinating federal and state programs relating to economic development, in trying to do this, said France, we have found coordination a difficult task--so large and so complex it almost defies coordination. Nevertheless the Commission sees this as an important role pointing the way toward the elimination of duplication and confusion.

France cited a proposal made to the UGLRC by the Central Upper Peninsula Economic Development District to develop a model for coordination by setting up a priority system for project implementation.

At the regular business meeting, UCAAP Delegates approved proposals to extend two existing programs funded through the Office of Economic Opportunity (OEO). They are the proposal to provide technical assistance to six U.P. Community Action Agencies; and the proposal funding Upper Peninsula Legal Services, Inc., which provides legal services to indigent persons.

UCAAP Delegates also supported the U.S. Forest Service program to develop multiple use of the Sylvania Tract, and supported a Resource Conservation and Development Program (RCAD) proposal, sponsored by the U.P. County Boards of Supervisors and Soil Conservation Districts. If the program is approved by the Department of Agriculture, more funds will be made available to existing agencies for land and water conservation projects.

The Delegates also voted support for more research to improve methods of underground mining and for an intensive promotional campaign for the Copper Peak Ski Flying meet to be held February 27, 28 and March 1 in Ironwood.

UCAAP Chairman Harold Dettman, St. Ignace, and Treasurer Fred Hahne, Manistique, were both cited for outstanding work with the agency since 1965.

UCAAP Delegates also toured the Escanaba Paper Company, Harrisfleger Corporation and the Escanaba Industrial Park.

Hunting in Germany is different story

Editor's note: Col. Phillip E. Lowry, son-in-law of Mr. and Mrs. Harold McNamara of Manistique, is an avid sportsman and a big booster of hunting and fishing in the Upper Peninsula. (He was one of the first fishermen to hit it big when the salmon first began running at Thompson Creek). In this letter to the editor he tells a little bit about deer hunting, German style.

Dear Dave,
"All you lucky citizens of Schoolcraft County are about finished with your annual deer hunt. I hope you had much luck. I also hope you, DAR, found something better to rhyme with "caribou" than "craie" (Ugh).
"Let me tell you a little about hunting here in Germany. In a nutshell, it is different.
"For one thing, the season is rather long. For the deer (Hirsch), which is equivalent to your beloved white-tail, the season begins in October and ends in January. But you can't just pick up your gun and go hunting.
"First, you must go to school for about 20 hours. You learn the rules and the customs, you learn the habits and habits of the animals and birds; and you learn safety. After you pass a very comprehensive examination (I nearly failed it) you pay approximately $15.00 for your annual license, good anywhere in the Federal Republic of Germany. You also must buy liability insurance. Think how lumpy the insurance industry in America would be with a law like that, (and, sadly, how much better off many widows would be after every hunting season).
"Now that you have your license, you still can't go hunting. All the land in Germany is divided into hunting preserves. These preserves are leased to citizens on a seven to ten year basis. Even the landowner cannot hunt without permission from the preserve leaseholder. The leaseholder submits an annual hunting plan to the state. This plan shows how many of each species and sex can be shot. After approval by the state, the leaseholder is required to shoot that much game.
"The leaseholder hires a gamekeeper to keep track of the game. Periodically during the season for various species, the leaseholder will hold hunts. They may be large scale drive hunts for small game--rabbits, hare (10 pounders) would you believe) pheasants, fox, and wild pig--or individual hunts for red deer stags or does. Individual hunts are almost always done in the company of the gamekeeper who actually tells you whether or not you can shoot a stag which happens to wander into your sights. As you no doubt have deduced, hunting the big game species is done on a very carefully controlled and systematic basis with the leaseholder weeding out barren does, stags with deformed racks or animals having other undesirable characteristics. The truly magnificent stags are reserved for either the leaseholder himself or his favored guest.
"After you have shot "your" game, can you take it home? Not without paying for it! A pheasant, for example costs $15.00. A deer costs about $50 a pound (dressed), and all the game belongs to the leaseholder. If you don't buy it, he sells it on the market. You then can eat it in your favorite restaurant in the form of pheasant under glass (watch out for the third shot) or Jaeger Schmitzel.

"Is this hunt, you better believe it, in your favorite restaurant in the form of pheasant under glass (watch out for the third shot) or Jaeger Schmitzel.
"I still get the same up-tight feeling when I hear or see a pheasant, like you. I still have the same feeling of excitement when I'm on a stand waiting for a fox or hare, to bound out of the woods. But, there is something more. Earlier, I mentioned the customs. These are what make hunting over here far safer, and certainly as interesting as at home. For example, before the hunt begins, the gamekeeper or the leaseholder explains what can be hunted and where not to shoot. A short ceremony is held with hunting horns blowing old and special hunting songs. The hunt ends with the laying out of the game and more hunting songs to signify what was killed. Then, all adjourn to the local gasthaus (restaurant) to you--the Stur would do nicely for the "last stand."
"There the hunters gather for a meal and a "few" drinks. If you can survive the "hunters court" where you are tried for violation of custom, rule, or whatever; and can handle the wine and beer that flows so freely, you will admit that the hunt was truly successful (even if you didn't get a shot). I'm sure all of the above concerning the last stand reminds all of you of hunting camp and well it might. Because the companionship of the hunting camp or the last stand is part of what makes hunting such a truly rewarding sport.
"One last word on safety. It was said that last year in all of Germany, one hunter was injured--he accidentally shot himself in the leg. I don't know how true that statement is, but I do know these people hunt safely. They must go to school before they can be examined for their hunting license, and they are constantly observed by each other for safety violations. Make one mistake and you won't be invited to hunt again. Make two, and you probably won't get your license next year.
"Dave, this is a long letter. I hope I have explained enough to show the differences between our way and the German way. Some day, when our population density approaches that of Germany, we may be forced into the same controls. We may be forced to hunt sooner if people aren't more fully. But, even with controls, hunting can be fun. As we say in Germany--Waldmann's Hehl (Hunters Hello).
"Auf Wiedersehen,
"PHILLIP E. LOWRY
"COLONEL US ARMY
"P.S. Lillian and Harold McNamara, my in-laws, have been trying to get me to send you a story on my promotion. This letter is more interesting than that.

School votes treated better, survey of U.P. districts shows

School tax elections in the U.P. were treated a great deal better by the electors during the past year than they were during 1968.

Figures released by the Michigan Association of School Administrators Region 1 Study Center showed that 74% of operation millage elections received voter approval. During 1968 only 58% of the elections were successful.

In 1968 school electors passed only 32 of 55 issues held while in 1969 the results show that 41 of 55 issues received voter approval. Building issues also were better received in 1969 than in 1968. Three of the six elections were successful this year while only one of five passed in 1968.

During the past two year period local school districts placed 121 issues on the ballot in the 83 districts of the U.P. Of these 121 issues, 71, or 64% were successful.

Voter resistance to tax increases is still with school districts. Following World War II it was news to find a school tax issue turned down by the voters. Today nearly half are being defeated.

Five counties, Chippewa, Delta, Schoolcraft, Benewah and Houghton, passed 11 school issues presented to them in 1969. Iron and Genesee counties had no issues presented this year.

Bertrand and Menominee had the greatest trouble in 1969 with three defeats apiece before passing the tax issue.

In 1968 Adams Twp. had four defeats and was unable to pass their millage issue, Escanaba

Seek solution to problems facing U.P. wood producers

Two factors, one purely economic and the other a human element, are contributing to the sub-standard levels in which the wood industry of the Upper Peninsula finds itself. The companies extend to northern Wisconsin and to northern Minnesota.

The price structure today prevents the average pulpwood producer from making a profit, and when he does have a profit contract shortage of labor is hampering him. One of the reasons for short supply of labor is that the younger saw saw operators who would normally assure the continuity of a labor supply can find more regular work, easier hours, and better working conditions in the regular than they can bucking and man weather and the woods operations.

Timber, Inc., a project working under agreement with the Upper Great Lakes Region Commission, is setting out on a program to see what can be done to relieve the two conditions. It is agreed little can be done about improving price structure itself.

The woods industry is bedeviled by the fact it is at the mercy of the market. Wide fluctuations in price and demand are the history of the operations. Another economic problem is that cost of equipment is rising at a snail's pace. The increase in price of lumber, which is a major cost of equipment, must look elsewhere for relief. They believe they have an answer.

It will call for demonstration. The only means is better management, greater use of mechanized equipment and an upgrading of the "image" of the power saw operator.

Peter Grievens, manager, and William Henriksen, field manager for Timber Inc., believe that with the assistance of producers they can prove the worthwhile gains to be made through greater mechanization of woods operations.

At present, rough aspect for pulpwood commands a price of $15.50 to $16.50 a cord on railroad car at landing, generally sticks to be 100 inches long with five to six inch diameter. But the costs don't allow the producer to come out even unless he is an independent operator or a partner and he works under conditions.

hauling to the landing, on an average distance, is another $5.50 per cord, which gives him an operational cost of $22.00. But to this he must add workmen's compensation, social security and unemployment taxes which call for another $2.50 per cord, which brings him to $24.50. And he has not yet figured stumpage.

It follows he can only go bankrupt if he works solely with rough aspect. Bred people will bring him a moderate profit because the increased price is more than additional hauling costs.

The picture is a little brighter with balsam and spruce. Cutting costs are higher because the operator has to go into rougher country, but the other costs remain the same. Stumpage will add $5.50 to balsam and ranges from $5 to $8 for spruce and he gets an average of $21 a cord, and about $21 to $24 cost per cord in balsam and a return of $25, which is a narrow margin.

These figures are average and form the basis from which any program must start.

The answer lies in some improved management. Few operators know what their costs are. The larger and better ones use accounting systems, but many of the independents work out their shirt pockets with memos and notes. It is a rough road to travel at month's end when trying to figure out where the money went.

But improvement must go further and the managers of Timber, Inc., are convinced that mechanized harvesters should be given an extended trial over a variety of conditions to test their claim: this will step up production and cut costs.

A harvester can be handled by one man. He will have to be experienced, or trained. Here the image of the operator can't be improved from power saw operator to harvester operator. And he can get more money for his efforts, work for their wages.

To hire the work done, a producer must pay 10 cents a stick for cutting, which means $5 to the cord. Skidding from the cutting to the loading area is $3 per cord, loading and work under another and more protected conditions.

For the employer, there would be greater production. One power saw operator can bring down and cut about 4 cords of wood a day. Some of the best can go as high as six, but the industry must work on averages. A machine can harvest 18 to 20 cords a day with one man. The producer has only one man instead of four or five protecting the same amount of cordage and his insurance costs go sharply downward.

If 12 producers will enter the project, Grievens and Henriksen feel that a leased machine will prove its work in production, cost saving and improved status for the woods worker.

Ray Pfeiffer, staff forester for the evaluation committee with Timber, Inc., said recently: "If good men with unselfish motives can be induced to bring together their experiences, judgments, and intimate knowledge of the problems of loggers, then definite advances and improvements should result for the benefit of all, if even a few new ideas prove to be workable, the effort will have been worthwhile."

It is his thought that has spurred Grievens and Henriksen to seek the cooperation of men with intimate knowledge and to get them to share it with fellow workers so that there can be an improvement.

Frank Holobik, president of Manistique Pulp and Paper Company and president, also of Timber, Inc., a non-salaried responsibility, said "We believe there is an opportunity to serve and we appreciate what the Upper Great Lakes Region Commission and the Economic Development Administration are doing to help this project. To all of us associated with the venture, this is a constructive way in which the government can help; to make funds available to those who want to help themselves and to assist dedicated men to lift the level of living for their fellow men and the sister communities of the affected areas."

Plan vaccine for measles

An epidemic of German measles (rubella) is predicted for this school year, predicts the Alger-Schoolcraft Health Department, but adds, you may be able to help stop it.

Andrew Sabol, Jr., Public Health Administrator of the Health Department announced that a recently developed vaccine has been shown to produce good immunity against this disease. The State of Michigan, through its Department of Public Health, local health departments, schools, and other cooperating agencies, is making this vaccine available to all children in the kindergarten through the third grade. These grades have been chosen since this age group is regarded as the major source of epidemic danger.

Sabol said that "German measles is a special threat to women who contract the disease in early pregnancy since it can cause children to be born with severe mental or physical damage."

He went on to say, "You can protect the health of your child and the health of all children by simply authorizing your child to receive the German measles vaccine. All children in the kindergarten through the third grade are eligible even though you may suspect your child has had German measles since this condition is often wrongly diagnosed by parents. However, children who are allergic to eggs or have certain medical conditions, or are receiving certain drugs, should not receive the vaccine, unless they get approval from their private physician. The program will be held in January; although no final date has been established."

Sabol asks the cooperation of all parents who have children in the age group of kindergarten through the third grade. Children will bring home a Department needs the reply as soon as possible so it should be signed and returned to the teacher.

Aircraft registration in Michigan has increased by more than 50 per cent during the last five years. The State Aeronautics Commission, a division of the Michigan Department of Commerce, reports there were 5,333 aircraft registered in 1969 compared to 3,569 in 1964.

Surf Sounds

Christmas parties have long provided cartoonists and joke writers with a fertile field, but believe us they're a serious item here at the Surf.

Oh sure, we have our laughs and there's always fun during the holidays, but we're dead serious about the job of making sure that your Christmas party is fun for you and your guests.

A bowling party? You'll have a ball. Bridge club? We'll suit you. Church groups? They'll have a divine time. Office party? We'll work overtime.

It doesn't really matter what kind of a group or club or organization comes along—we can arrange a festive affair. It doesn't have to be a large party—although we can handle those—but even a small group can have a very large time with us.

You'll find that usual good Surf food (and if you have some special dish in mind, talk to us) plus vintage wines, cocktails, cordials and other beverages, all served to you and your group in the friendly, relaxing atmosphere that is topped by what we view of the lake and woods.

The holidays are a time for fun, so don't let worrying about your Christmas party spoil your holiday season. Just call Nat at 341-5115 and tell him how many in your group and when the date is. He'll take care of the rest. As for an assurance of the best Christmas party ever, 'Tis the season to be jolly, remember?

LOOK OUT!—Ernest Williams is a brave man, but not brave enough to venture out into the woods during deer season in this get-up. He brought it to the Tribune office last week in a plea for gun safety, with the following advice: "Be sure and don't shoot at moving brush or a noise. Always point the muzzle of your gun towards the ground when loading or unloading."

Bank debits show increase

Bank debits in Manistique during October showed an increase of 13 per cent from the same period a year ago, according to figures released last week by the Federal Reserve Bank of Minneapolis.

In dollars, Manistique bank debits volume for October was $7,729,000, compared to a total of $6,823,000 for October, 1968. For the first 10 months of the year bank debits here total $66,525,000, an increase of six per cent over the same period a year ago.

Bank debits for the most part are checks against depositors' accounts and represent payment for goods, services and debts. They are regarded as one indicator of business activity in the area.

Mr. Wayne Richards was present and requested information on the street near his business and he said he thought it was a dedicated street but it has never been repaired or plowed by the city and he thought it should. The matter was referred to the City Manager for study and recommendation.

City Manager Noel praised city crews and Superintendent Ray Linderoth for extensive work done in locating and repairing water lines in the city with the result that the pumping station is at the lowest in twenty years. The daily pumping had dropped to about 550,000 gallons, whereas in the past it has averaged over a million gallons and the drop means a saving in chlorination, electricity and processing at the wastewater treatment plant.

Mr. Noel reported that he had attended a Recreation Bond issue meeting with Mr. Bonitas in Marquette recently and that the city could possibly be eligible for $18,000 in funds under the program.

Mr. Noel reported on the following items: that the State Citizens Housing Program is almost ready except for zoning and installation of the street most complete; a formal complaint had been filed with Michigan Public Service Commission and a hearing is covering natural gas; some of the townships had made a presentation in the matter of fire protection payment; and Gulliver Marine Company had made proposals in the harbor and a permit should be received by them soon.

A discussion was held on downtown Urban Renewal program and a committee of seven members of them must reside in the district. Mr. Noel would request a 10 per cent extension of the district boundaries in Chicago in order to enlarge the area and that it would be necessary to hold a public hearing to set the boundaries of the district.

Moved by Councilman Carlson, supported by Councilman Cayia, DeMars, Reine, Wagner, Noe, and Noel.

Moved by Councilman Carlson, supported by Councilman Cayia, that meeting adjourn at 7:30 p.m. at the City Hall.

RESOLVED, that a public hearing be held on December 10, 1969, at 7:30 p.m. at the City Hall for the purpose of setting the boundaries of the Urban Renewal District.

Senior Citizens Corner

Thanksgiving is over and all of us will really begin to prepare for the Christmas season. At the Drop-In Center we are making plans for a bake sale to be held a few days before Christmas, and I will announce the date in next week's paper after I consult with my executive committee and decide what day will be best for both our prospective buyers and for those who wish to prepare food to be sold.

Friday the 5th is social security day again. Mr. Han will be here from 10 a.m. until 1 p.m., then on Wednesday evening, Dec. 10, at 7:30 p.m. he will be here at the center to help those of you who have medical bills that must be filed before the Dec. 31 deadline to be paid by Medicare. These are bills made during the last three months of 1967 and during the year 1968. If you have such bills please come to the center that evening and Mr. Han will file them for you.

We will be having a movie at the center that evening also, so you can combine business with pleasure. We have asked for three films for this evening, one about "Leisure Time in Russia," one called "People of the Amazon" and the other one is "Tuna Angling."

Letter to the Editor

To the Editor:
Your recent story on the losing, finding and returning to the fold of your dog Sam was at the same time one of the most heart warming and heart wrenching yarns I have read in a long, long time.

Your reactions when Sam came skittering through the kitchen door and jumped up and licked my nose were downright gut-wrenching, if I may use that term. As you said later in the story, "If you love animals, you'll understand..." As the owner (actually, I don't know who owns who), of an ancient 14-year-old Pekingese, acquired on the island of Guam more than nine years ago under some odd circumstances, and who is a major member of the family group, I can appreciate your feelings when Sam absconded and was gone for so many days. Also, the relief and weakness in the pit of the stomach when he finally turned up. I'm happy the story turned out so well, but would suggest securing a more substantial claim for Sam -- maybe even a few feet of logging chain. Again, thanks for a fine story. Sincerely
Cerald J. White

Visitor returns
Mr. and Mrs. James Marks, Star route, are wondering if they should take a passenger to Florida for the winter. A brown dove that first appeared in their yard early this spring has shown up again to accept the hospitality of their bird feeder. The dove returned Nov. 31 and seems quite content to feed with the normal winter residents.

"OUT OUR WAY"

News from Road 437

There is a silence out our morning as the deer are out on Sunday evening. The traffic of the hunters' cars come to an end. The sky is scattered with clouds and snow falls with a strong wind. At the end of the day the trees, showing shrubs and the trees with the drab of late autumn with glass. What miracles could perform for this winter world of ours. The Thanksgiving holiday is and I hope you all enjoyed a traditional kind of our forefathers. Verna and I joined the Bass and I and my visitors have started and their table again in its usual place. The deer are the first ones out in "early bird gets the worm" they prefer sunsets. The downy woodpecker, and of course the blue jays are also guests at the feed table. The state-colored and the gosbeaks are late in arriving but they are not late.

Armory plans

THE GOOD WORD last week from Rep. Charles Varnum was that the Manistique Armory, a long-dreamed of addition to the community, is on the verge of becoming a reality during 1970.

Such reality would cap a long string of community capital projects that have come about during the past several years—the Senior Citizens housing, the new Lakeside School, the low-income housing project, the new city hall.

We have long supported the armory project, not only because it would provide a new and modern facility for our local National Guard unit, but also because it would make available a large and spacious building that could be used as a community center and for school events.

Building of the armory, for instance, would have a major impact on the needs and plans of the Manistique Area Schools. If the armory is built to accommodate large crowds in the main hall it can be used by the schools for basketball games and other events, and lessen the priority for a new gymnasium at the school. It makes far more sense to utilize an armory for this purpose and thus make any school funds available for other pressing needs.

Much credit is due to the local armory committee which has kept the faith during the almost 10 years that the project has been a'bornin'. Much credit is also due to Representative Charles Varnum, who has worked hard on behalf of the project here as well as in Gladstone.

There is still much to be done. Is the local share of approximately $30,000, raised by a one-mill levy for three years, still adequate? Will more funds be needed locally if we are to make this a truly full-time facility? These are questions yet to be answered.

There is also the question of what will be done with the existing armory.

It has served this community well, and still has the potential of continued service.

There is the possibility that it can revert to its original function as a small industrial plant—if some industry can be induced to move here. This is always easier said than done, but the fact that the building has been well-maintained through the years, and is still an excellent facility for some manufacturing purposes, should make this task easier. Surely our Chamber of Commerce, already working hard on many new projects, will want to devote some extra time and energy to this question.

There is also the possibility that it could be utilized for other purposes—a county building annex or a vocational school are two possibilities that come to mind off hand. There are probably other suggestions that should be considered.

Manistique has been fortunate in the amount of state and federal aid it has received in recent years for these various projects. This good fortune can continue and even multiply if we not only make sure that the new armory will truly be a full-time community facility, but also bend our efforts to ensure that the existing armory building is utilized in a manner that will continue to benefit the entire community.

James M. Tagg--Co-Publisher and Business Manager
David A. Rood--Co-Publisher and Editor

A prize-winning weekly newspaper published every Thursday at Manistique, Michigan, at the Top O' Lake Michigan in the heart of Michigan's beautiful Upper Peninsula.

My friend Harold the stone salesman was telling me the other day that just lately he's had trouble getting to sleep at night.

This surprised me considerably, for I'd always thought he'd be dead tired after eight hours of lugging his sample case around, but he said no, he thought his problem was mental, not physical. (I was tempted to make a funny about a worried stone salesman having rocks in his head, but my basically sympathetic nature kept my tongue in check...I mean check.)

The greatest asset to a good night's sleep is an active imagination. That old idea of counting sheep is pretty humdrum and dull stuff, but if you let your mind run riot you can drift off to dreamland in no time at all.

You're on this plane, see? Flying from Hawaii to New Zealand, when all of a sudden a tropical storm engulfs you. Lightning knocks out the plane radio, so they can't call for help and nobody knows where you are. Suddenly there's a big crash, and you are thrown clear right next to the life raft. There are four survivors--you and the three stewardesses, and right there on the horizon is this small tropical atoll with white sand beaches and waving palm trees and a waterfall and breadfruit and yams and...

"I don't travel much between Hawaii and New Zealand," explains Harold sadly. "That's not my territory."

I pointed out that I don't travel much between Hawaii and New Zealand either, but as a true newspaperman I never let the facts stand in the way of a good story. But I can see a new approach is needed.

You're in Toledo, see? There's this big dock operator who's in the market for 50,000 tons of three-quarter to inch and a half. You're staying at the Holiday Inn, where the martinis are very, very dry. The next morning you present yourself down at the dock at the prospect's office. He's out of town, but wait! His secretary is very helpful and understanding. She's a redhead, 5'10", about 38-24-36, and very sympathetic and intelligent. She really doesn't have to work, you see, because she's an heiress...to about $8 million, but she wants something to do with her time. She's always admired older men and sort of has this father fixation and...

"How about Ashtabula instead of Toledo?" asks Harold. "I sell some stone in Ashtabula."

Well, he's not with it yet, but he's getting closer. I've never been in Ashtabula in my life, but then, I've never been on a plane flying between Hawaii and New Zealand either, come to think of it.

So let's try a different tack. They've just robbed the First National Bank in Manistique of $500,000 and...

"Fred Hahne doesn't keep $500,000 in the bank here," says Harold.

They've just robbed the Second National Bank in Toledo of $500,000 and made their getaway amidst a flurry of bullets, and you're driving along this deserted stretch of highway outside Toledo and come upon this big black car riddled with bullet holes and the sole surviving gangster is slumped behind the wheel drawing his final breathe (he was wounded) and you stop to offer help and he is so grateful for this noble gesture that his last words are, "The money's in the trunk..."

"And nobody can find the key?" asks Harold.

Good grief. No wonder he has trouble getting to sleep at night. Half a million simoleons right there, and already he's lost the key. It's probably because he has scruples about taking the bank's money, so let's change the story around.

There's this quiet little book-keeper who works for the Mafia in Chicago, see? And he figures out a way to make off with $500,000 in fives, tens and twenties and heads north to escape the vengeance of the mob. He's driving along Oak Street when he has this heart attack, and his car runs up on your lawn where you're fertilizing the hedge and you run over to see if you can help and his last words are, "The money's in the trunk." Now this is Mafia money, you understand, and you're doing a public service by taking it away from them, and...

"Oh Lord," says Harold. "What am I going to do with all that money. My wife will never let me keep it."

So let him toss and turn, that's what I say. If he can't drift off to pleasant dreams figuring out different ways to spend half a million bucks, he's never going to get to sleep, no way.

Meanwhile, I think I'll start on a new plot. I'm driving on the expressway, see, and there's this big accident in which a car is pinned underneath a gasoline tanker. The driver of the car is trapped, and you jump out of your car and pull him away from the flames, and you look and discover it is Henry Ford II and he says, "How can I ever repay you?" and...

ZZZZZZZZzzzzzzzz. Sweet dreams.

Tony's Topics

It's fun to dream---to speculate---to play the game "What would you do if?" Thoreau suggested that we put foundations under dream castles we build in the air. A number of us would like to put foundations under some dreams for remodeling the Manistique High School.

Let's try a few dreams for size:

A carpeted library as large as the gymnasium, a place where a person could browse, where he could curl up in an armchair with a book, a place where he could listen to records and tapes and view movies, slides and film strips.

A gymnasium which could accommodate four classes at a time; a swimming pool; a little theater; a greenhouse; a planetarium.

How's that for openers? If we dream a little more we see a series of small conference rooms; carpeting in all of the halls, most of the classrooms, and on the stairs and landings; a lounge for students; places in the halls where people could sit and talk; an office for every teacher.

A lunchroom where young men and women eat and converse in small groups at round tables, instead of in long rows.

A plastic dome under which a carpentry class could build garages, cottages, and maybe even houses.

An auto shop big enough to accommodate five cars at a time, and a galaxy of small engines.

Separate rooms for the Crier and Yearbook staffs and the student council; a speech laboratory with mirrors, lecterns, a stage, and all kinds of recording equipment.

Small labs around big science labs where would-be scientists could set up experiments and leave them until the work was done.

A museum which emphasized lumbering and shipping to remind everyone of his heritage and the historical richness of the area.

Closed circuit television; individual study stations; a lecture room large enough to accommodate the entire high school population, but which could be partitioned off to take care of six groups of a hundred.

Murals on the walls painted by art classes; bulletin boards and showcases up and down the lengths of the corridors; a student-operated store; a gas station run by vocational co-ops; a gigantic art room; individual music practice rooms; a photography dark room; a language laboratory.

An office machines room in which everyone had his own calculator and a typing room to accommodate 100.

Okay---so, some of it's a dream and some of it is far out, but then so is space. Nearly every student who will graduate in June started kindergarten about the time the Russians put the first Sputnik up.

Schools are charged with the responsibility of preparing their clients for a rapidly ever-changing world. But because of the peculiar structure of finance and controls, schools are slow to change.

Despite the structure, changes do happen. Every one of these "dreams" is already in existence someplace. Many of them can be here too, if we'll dream a little and work a lot.

Sally, the girls, and I had an enjoyable trip over the Thanksgiving weekend. We went down to Highland Park, Ill. to visit with her brother, a sister, and a cousin. Surprisingly M-35 is in better shape than US-2, and from M-35 south the roads became increasingly better, however, this being my first experience with Wisconsin and Illinois interstates, I do believe that they could learn something from Michigan about signs and the run-on strips. Speaking of signs, I noticed that there was an abundance of bill boards along the roads, something which I really have not missed here in Michigan! For those of you who are not familiar with Highland Park, I can tell you it is not a place to go looking for a nickel cigar - there is just no such animal down there but I did see some nice ones at $1.61 apiece.

BRAIN RESEARCH

Research of the brain will increase our knowledge in making our organs work more effectively for us. Someday we may be able to arrest the loss of intelligence in the aging or to improve our memory.

The limbic lobe of the brain is the seat of all our emotions, it controls fear, anger, gaudiness, pleasure, joy, and sexuality.

Scientists are now extensively exploring this area of the brain in animals. They have found the electrical stimulation of the nerve tissues can change a furious bull into a contented animal. Neurosurgeons use electrical probes in the treatment of epilepsy, cerebral palsy and parkinsonism. The instrument, locates the troubled nerve tissue and then it is removed carefully.

The only thing that really puzzled me was a sign on the way coming back coming into Menominee - the sign read "Welcome to Coho Country." Could it be that we're here in Manistique should take some sign space down on M-35, one of our main entrances to the Upper Peninsula?

know which to play with first and go quickly from one to another without really enjoying each one fully.

My nephew has two little boys ages 4 and 6. I like to send gifts to them at different times - before the big day. Some of you saw the clowns Mrs. K. J. Broberg from Daggett makes. She made two for me and I'll send them to the boys about the middle of December. The clowns are lovable and luddy and can be a bed decoration in between. They're so jolly looking, one can't help but smile at them.

Books, too, are a good preliminary gift, especially stories about Christmas. Children love books. And children are just thrilled when they get a package in the mail, one addressed to them.

Or how about working out some of that excess enthusiasm and energy with finger painting? You may not like the mess but they do and if you have a time and place for it, it can be fun for you too. Children can be very creative if you let them express themselves freely. The drawing may be a puzzle to you but it means something to your youngster.

Cranberries are in season now and because of a good crop, they're very reasonable in price. Make your favorite relishes, either cooked sauce or cranberry-orange relish. Both can be frozen! Or you can freeze cranberries just as they are. Just put the plastic bag into another that doesn't have holes in it and have them for future use, to use in any way you wish.

who can drive
nail?

No heartache surpasses that of earnest parents trying to mold the character of their child . . . and seeing daily the ominous signs of failure. But all the urging, pleading, coaxing and punishing we can muster is unlikely to change the course of a life that lacks spiritual backbone.

Who can drive a crooked nail?

The sooner religious training begins, the earlier its results become evident in a child's attitude and behavior. Your child's readiness to respond to parental encouragement and discipline is merely the reflection of those deeper qualities of personal integrity which spiritual growth will foster.

Let the Church help you raise your family. God never meant you to try it alone!

MANISTIQUE

In Former Days

65 YEARS AGO

Victor Deemer had bad luck on his hunting trip. He secured a nice deer and consigned it to Manistique. Enroute it was transferred at Scott's camp, where the hogs ate it up.

Alex Blizzel of this city, aged 13 years, killed his first deer in the vicinity of Whitedale recently. It was a big buck and he downed the animal with one shot. He is justly proud of his success.

The propriety of publishing birth notices under the head of "social events" certainly is a debatable question.

55 YEARS AGO

A large number of Manistiguans attended the dance at Birthday Grange hall Friday evening. All report the usual good time that the grange in question always gives those patronizing its functions.

Miss Laura LaChappelle returned to this city Wednesday morning after a four months stay with her uncle, Mr. A.V. Billings, of Chicago.

45 YEARS AGO

Mrs. H.T. Baker left Monday for Minneapolis where she joined Mr. Baker. They expect to make their future home in that city.

Orville Waterman, of Detroit, is expected to arrive tonight for a brief visit with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. Waterman of Marblehead. Mr. Waterman will also visit with his sister, Mrs. Ira Crawford, in this city.

25 YEARS AGO

Dr. and Mrs. N.L. Lindquist returned Sunday from Madison, Wis., where they attended the Minnesota-Wisconsin game.

Men in Service

Machinist Mate Second Class Ronald L. Haberstich, USN, son of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Haberstich of Gulliver, returned from a five-month Western Pacific deployment aboard the destroyer USS Taussig.

While serving as a unit of the Seventh Fleet the Taussig provided naval gunfire support to Allied forces in South Vietnam, participated in surveillance operations in the Sea of Japan, and acted as a defense and rescue unit in support of naval units in the Tonkin Gulf.

Jehovah's Witnesses planning conference

Jehovah's Witnesses in this area have been invited to participate in a three-day ministers' conference to be held in Ishpeming, Jan. 2-4.

The conference is sponsored by the Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of Brooklyn, New congregations have been invited. Arvid Carlson, presiding minister of the Manistique congregation, said the purpose of the conference is to provide specialized training in the Christian ministry. The practical instruction and Bible counsel will be applied to the ministerial training program conducted in each congregation. Emphasizing the theme of the Ishpeming conference, "Right Kind of Ministers," Carlson explained the delegates receive counsel to improve their per-
