Town Meeting to air pollution problems

The Upper Peninsula — one of the cleanest in the country — is being attacked by air pollution, according to Bruce Turner, producer for the Town Meeting of the Air Series.

Turner reports that filming for the next Town Meeting program, which will be broadcast on times on April 21 and 22, was completed. The subject for this Town Meeting program is pure air and water in the Upper Peninsula, and what the individual citizen can do to keep them pure.

In order to concentrate on problems of our own area, the camera crew of WSMR-TV, Northern Michigan University's public television outlet, have concentrated on examples from the Upper Peninsula. As part of the program include Stambaugh, Escanaba, a Manistique, Newberry, Houghton and Marquette. In addition, L. S. King will visit and get statements from state officials.

Persons interviewed for the coming program, third in the series, include: Cletus Caron, Northern Michigan Office of the Michigan Department of Health; Boyd Briggs, Chief Sanitarian, Alcona-Schoolcraft County, Paul Hannula, SNU scientist from Marquette; David Arpl, Michigan Tech sophomore from Marquette; Dr. Kenneth Alexander, Economics Department, Michigan Technological University; William Wynd, associate professor of Forestry at MTU; Dr. Howard Tanner, Director of Division of Natural Resources of Michigan State University; and Robert Courchaine, Regional Engineer, Michigan Water Resources Commission, Lansing.

During the program itself, telephone numbers for local calls concerning the needs of the local areas will be shown. Anyone wishing to comment on conditions, L. S. King will get statements from state officials.

ings, or ask questions concerning local conditions may call these numbers. Local follow-up activities will be based on the results of these calls.

Anyone who calls or writes in to the program or to the local coordinators will be sent a packet of materials on what can be done to maintain and better our environment, Harford points out.

The schedule for showing the TV portion of the Town Meeting program is at 3 p.m. on April 21, and at three p.m. on April 22 — 11:30 a.m., 3 p.m., and 5:30 p.m.

New program at Refuge

Seney National Wildlife Refuge has announced a new program on environmental problems to be offered at the Refuge Visitor Center, Entitled "Man and His Environment." The program will be conducted by Conrad Fjeldt, the Assistant Refuge Manager.

Fjeldt has described the purpose as follows: "In recent months, tremendous new emphasis has been placed on ecology and environment by our news media. Radio, television and newspapers have all taken up the cause of environmental quality.

"The result has been a tremendous flood of information that has left many people somewhat confused and bewildered. Schools are beginning new programs to teach the basic concepts of ecology to students, but many adults have never learned these basic concepts, and are thus unsure of the reason for this new environmental crisis.

"This program is designed to introduce basic ecological concepts, show why environmental problems exist and how they developed, and explain what must be done to solve the problems."

The program will be conducted in three sessions, the first beginning at 7 p.m. on Tuesday, April 21. The second will be at 7 p.m. on April 22, and the third at 7 p.m. on April 14. Each session will be conducted on an open discussion basis and will include movies, slides and other visual aids.

There will be no charge for the program and everyone is invited. For further information, write the Refuge Manager, Seney, Escanaba. May 12, 1970, concerning petitions on Michigan Consolidated Gas Company furnishing natural gas to the City of Manistique.

Rotary hears Renewal story

Quinton Mitchell, Urban Renewal Director, speaking at the Manistique Rotary Club Monday noon, urged the members to cooperate with officials in their efforts to improve the downtown business district.

Mitchell outlined the steps that have been taken thus far in a meeting held at the headquarters of the Urban Renewal. He emphasized the tremendous amount of detail work that must be accomplished as the program develops. They will require the cooperation and support of the public if Manistique is to benefit from this program, Mitchell stated.

Mitchell was introduced by Robert Noe, City Manager, who emphasized that Manistique now has an excellent opportunity to develop an ever improving central business district. He stated that it is vital to the continuing progress of the community. "We are in a competitive situation in attracting tourists, as well as new commercial industry," Noe pointed out.

RESOLVED, that the City of Manistique shall be responsible for the construction of said facilities to the Director of the Michigan Department of Public Health and obtain his approval thereon on or before July 1, 1971.

White Cane week planned

This year White Cane week will be observed in Michigan from April 19-25. The Manistique Lions Club and over 500 other Lions Clubs throughout Michigan will team together during this one week which is set aside to acquaint the public with state laws which have been adopted for the protection of the blind.

The white cane calls for thoughtfulness, friendly appreciation and a personal responsibility for the safety of the individual carrying it. Thousands of white canes have been furnished free of charge to blind people throughout the state. It is the aim and policy of the Lions to provide every blind person with a white cane -- the symbol of blindness -- as a measure of protection for him.

State Legislation in 1936 included an ordinance granting the right of way to a person carrying a white cane. The purpose of the ordinance was to protect the blind.

Senior Center gets funding

The Schoolcraft County Senior Citizens Service Center in Manistique received $6,425 in Title III funds from the Michigan Commission on Aging at its March meeting...

The Upper Peninsula program, which is entering its fourth year of operations, has a wide range of educational and recreational activities including an information and referral system, a book lending library, food stamp information, and a part-time employment agency.

One of the unique projects of the center is the preparation of a cook book. Seniors are collecting their favorite recipes which will be compiled and sold in book form.

Manistique seniors -- name who are familiar with the area -- also served as city "hosts" for tourists by pushing them to off -- the -- beaten -- path areas suited for fishing, camping, scenery, rock hunting, and other special interests.

CALF VACCINATION: Last Saturday had the pleasure of accompanying Dr. Kaski on a vaccination trip to Escanaba, on our Cal Vaccination Tour. We made ten stops and I, therefore, had the opportunity to visit with the farming farmers. Most of the cattle appeared to be in good shape and it was nice to see the snow gradually disappearing. Thirty heifers were vaccinated at this time, next year will be in August and those of these jumping calves that we saw will be eligible at this time. In addition, Dr. Kaski did some other veterinarian activities, such as administering, pre-natal testing, and some general diagnostic work. We are both reminded of the need for high attendance in Schoolcraft County to limit a head gate. For those of you who do not know, a head gate is a device in which one can back the head of the cow and call being inspected thereby immobilizing it. I would recommend that any of you who are thinking of building one look at Jim Johnson's set at Thompson as Jim has one of the best that I have seen.

4-H News: Two years ago a teacher of handicapped children in a metropolitan junior high school near Detroit began supplementing her regular classroom teaching with 4-H programs.

Now 15 special education teachers in the area have 4-H clubs, and more are expected soon. Some of the participating young people are mentally handicapped or hard of hearing and others are slow learners.

"There has been a good response to 4-H programs among special education teachers because they see 4-H as an opportunity to enrich their special education programs," explains William Collins, extension 4-H youth agent for Manistiquette County.

Collins credits Mrs. Marie Remer, 4-H youth program assistant, for much of the program's success. "Too often special education programs take children out of society and isolate them," says Mrs. Remer. "The 4-H program provides an opportunity for these children to become a part of society."

"Also, the 4-H program provides these children with a sense of belonging and a feeling of achievement," she adds. "They have little opportunity to receive either of these essential factors that most young people take for granted."

These 4-H clubs have the same structure as other clubs and the teacher serves as the club leader. Club meetings are held once each week during class time due to transportation problems. For most, it is their first participation in a business meeting or a group activity.

"This certainly aids personal development and will help these young people become part of society as adults," points out Mrs. Remer.

"Becoming aware of a business meeting and parliamentary procedure is an experience they probably wouldn't otherwise get. Even filling out membership cards is a learning tool. It prepares them for later life when they will be dealing with many forms to fill

"OUT OUR WAY"

News From Road 437

Hi Folks!

We've had some lovely weather the past week with sunny days, but rather cool winds. We were having March winds in April, with no snow as were predicted.

Daily signs of spring can be seen everywhere. The pine trees needles are starting to get back their color of deeper green. The birds can be seen on many of the trees. The white birch has its shaggy look at it makes way for the new bark. We have several beautiful white birches on our land. The white birch is known to reach a height of about 70 feet. Now it is time to hang the brackets on the maple trees as the sap has started to flow from them. The beaver trappers are on the go every day now trapping the clever engineer whose marvellous skill builds dams that change the landscape in many areas of our woodlands. The soft pine needles are starting to open up their coats, to show off their curly silky catkins.

Mornings I listen to a musical opera using song by a chorus of many different birds. Their melodies come from all different areas of the forest and they never seem to tire singing their simple little tunes over and over again. They just want to share their joy with us human folk.

The deer have started to roam a bit in open areas looking for much-needed food.

So our door to spring has opened up and if we'd get a warm rain, we'd soon be seeing some of our wild flowers coming up to get ready for the parade. Yet while the cold we'll just have to be a bit patient until it starts to melt with soft and warm breezes.

The crew, Lee Lake, have started to arrive merrily on their way to meet up with larger boats of water. For road 437 I must say it has been a fairly good shape this spring. Having windy days and freezing nights has kept drying it. Sunday being a lovely day, many folks went for a drive out our way.

The Jerry Edmonds of Standish spent several days at their cabin at Thunder Lake.

The Vernon Amundson visited with Mrs. Amundson's mother, Mrs. Elmi Amundson of Ishpeming.

Last Tuesday the Boss and I and Mrs. Eleanor Daniels were dinner guests of Mrs. Marie LaFave. This was a birthday treat for us as our birthdays are several days apart. We enjoyed our evening very much and our dining at the 3 Mile Supper Club with Marie.

Edwies of birthday greetings go out to George Lakoski, Karen Lassius, Betty Clemons, and Freddie Linkson.

Anniversary wishes go out to the William Keeners. May the day for all of you be one of complete happiness. Until next week stay healthy and happy.

Mrs. Scop Michigan has 1,400 miles of limited access freeway, affording greater driving ease and safety for visitors.

Anniversary wishes go out to the William Keeners. May the day for all of you be one of complete happiness. Until next week stay healthy and happy.

Letters to the Editor

To the Editor:

Please renew my subscription to your very likable paper for three months. My daughter and I enjoy your editorials, Dave Rood's column, the Out Our Way column, in fact, the whole paper.

To the Editor:

The coho salmon fish is considered a trash fish in the ocean but the DNR (Dept. of Natural Resources) planted them in the Great Lakes and they go up our rivers and streams to spawn or lay their eggs then die.

Mr. Lang of the DNR says that the spring rains and melting snow will wash them down the streams and rivers and that is probably right, but where does it go, into our bays and lakes... where walleyes, northern pike, perch and other game fish feed. They pollute the water where people swim along the shores. At Thompson west of Manistique the shore is lined with dead coho.

The DNR are planting 100,000 coho's in the Haymeadow Creek which flows into the Whitefish River and into Little Bay de Noc. We will say that about half or 50,000 of them survive, they stay in the bay and Lake Michigan for three years, feed on every fish that swims in the Great Lakes, they have found muskrats and ducks in the stomachs, then when they go up the Haymeadow Creek to spawn or lay their eggs after eating about "ten times" their weight during their cycle. They will die and about 3,000 will be snagged by sport fisherman because then they can't open their mouths to eat, that leaves about 47,000 fish that average about 10 to 15 pounds apiece to die, that's about a half million pounds or better of dead fish to wash down our streams and rivers to pollute the waters.

If the DNR would plant walleye, northern pike, perch and trout that are native fish to these waters, they wouldn't have to plant every year because these fish produce by themselves where coho they say don't reproduce and thank heaven they don't because in five or six years you wouldn't be able to catch nothing but coho, which are not good when they go upstream to spawn or lay their eggs because they are beginning to die as they go up our streams and rivers, they've got sores on them and are ragged as they go up there. 4. Always tell your doctor if you don't have a prescription filled, or if you don't use the medicine after you buy it. Otherwise, he might think you are not responding to that particular drug product. If your condition is serious or even relatively mild, not taking a medicine prescribed might allow a condition to get worse while the doctor assumes it is being cured or helped. YOU'RE ALSO WASTING YOUR MONEY IF YOU PAY FOR A DOCTOR'S ADVICE AND THEN DON'T FOLLOW IT.

5. Don't stop taking a prescription after you begin to feel better unless your doctor approves. Often anything less than the full course of treatment may prevent the medicine from completely correcting the condition. For example, not taking the prescribed amount of an antibiotic allows either the "bug" or your body to become resistant to it. Not enough of the required medicine could be worse than none at all.

Although April is making inroads on the area snow cover, there was still a good supply several weeks ago at Colwell Lake, where this sign directing the way to the beach was deep in snow—with very little traffic to heed its directions.

Personal platforms

Political parties are great on platforms. For each campaign they carefully construct a political foundation on which to build a better world, and the brave words and stirring phrases would normally provoke a surge of adrenalin and the galvanizing call to the barricades if experience hadn't showed us that this stirring rhetoric is quickly and quietly forgotten once the campaign ends.

We don't mean to sound cynical about it, only realistic. We can't afford to be too harsh on the issue in the light of our own performance regarding New Year's Resolutions. After all, nobody's perfect.

But while perfection may remain unattainable, striving toward it should remain constant. Part of this paradox can be attributed to the fact that each of us, as an individual, has a different concept of perfection. It may be an absolute, but it is individual rather than collective.

Man's historical urge to improve is grounded not only in respect to the creature comforts but also in the crannies of our conscience, and too often the consolations of the latter are forsaken in favor of the indulgences of the former. Part of our current problem is that we want to do both at the same time . . . a juggling act that may be dazzling while it lasts but based on precedence is apt to be short-lived.

Yet we progress. A nation's conscience was a weak and puny thing a century ago. In this decade it has toppled governments.

This collective conscience is in many ways at odds with the glorification of the individual, for it proclaims that the race goes not only to the swift, but to the lame, the halt and the blind as well. Its theory is that the thrust of personal rights and liberties is not unlimited, but that lines must be drawn when that thrust intrudes upon the rights and liberties of others. Freedom of speech does not include the right to shout "Fire!" in a crowded hall, a Supreme Court justice once wrote.

If we were to construct our own personal platform much as the political parties construct theirs, would our words be any less glittering, or our proclamations any less pious? If it were somehow required of each man to periodically set down on paper the goals that he and his community and country should strive for, which among us would ask for less?

Would there be opposition in your platform to the concept of providing educational opportunity for all, regardless of financial means? Would there be advocates of denying adequate food for those who are hungry on the basis that there are some who are undeserving? Who would set limits on health care for our aged and indigent—those poor souls who usually need it the most? Would there be opposition to any man living in financial dignity despite his circumstances of employment and opportunity and education? What would receive the highest priority—industrial development or clean air and water? Which is better, law and order or law and justice?

Most people reach their own decisions on these questions without going through any formal routine of assessment, evaluation and public commitment. The answers are usually grounded in our upbringing, background, education, awareness and a host of other such intangibles.

Each man must provide his own answers, and the future of our society will depend on whether or not we care enough about our problems and our answers to them, or whether we will eventually be overwhelmed by our own indifference.

A sense of history

Today's news is tomorrow's history, and only time's passage enables us to sort out the important from the trivial and the meaningful from the trite.

The subject of history came up over the week end when for the first time I made the acquaintance of my paternal grandfather.

Frank Edward Rood has been dead for more than 40 years, yet I met him when my father burrowed into his family file and came up with some faded pictures and some excerpts from his father's diary.

It is not that my grandfather's biography is unusual or unique. Indeed, it is probably a fairly accurate report of the average man of that time. However, because you can relate to the time and the sequence, your sense of history becomes a personal thing with far more meaning.

My grandfather was born in the waning months of the Civil War, in the small community of Glen, just north of South Haven in Van Buren County. His father worked as a lumberman with an uncle, and they shipped via boat, first from Glen and later Covert, further south, to timber markets in Chicago and Milwaukee.

Today, of course, Glen is a sleepy resort and fruit farming community and Covert has evolved into a farming area with a large black population that fled the urban ghettos to return to the land. The timber has long gone, and the forests are now farms. The lumber schooners were supplanted by narrow gauge railroads which in turn were replaced by trucks, and paved roads now criss-cross the townships where horses once plodded on dirt pathways.

Because events today move so fast we have a tendency to live largely in the present, thinking of the past as gone forever and remote as Tasmania.

Yet it was only 109 years ago last Sunday that the first shots were fired at Ft. Sumter to start the Civil War. My grandfather had finished at the Covert Academy, gone on to take courses at Michigan Agricultural College, come home and been married four months when he noted in his diary, "April 30, 1889--- Washington's Inauguration 100 years ago today, in 1789." It was meaningful to my grandfather because his father had been born in 1808---less than 20 years after that inauguration.

It is tragic that we find ourselves so involved with the present and so intrigued by the prospects of the future that we have little or no time for the past.

Shakespeare noted that "What is past is prologue," or that man does not live in a moment, but in a series of related episodes through time.

Not all of us have this genius of affinity for the past and its relationship to the present and the future, and this week our community is the poorer for the passing of one who could and did relate enthusiastically.

History was important to Imogene Herbert, for she felt herself to be a part of it. Her father was a lumberman and she grew up in lumber towns here in our Upper Peninsula. Somewhere along the line she developed that special awareness of history that enables a person to put things in a continuing perspective; that perception that can see more than dates and events, but can relate to people and customs and habits and living styles; that ability to see history as people at work and at play, in childhood and old age, in homes and families and businesses, in all seasons and in all circumstances.

Imogene Herbert was much more than an historian, of course. I found her kind and lively with a sense of humor as rich and as deep as her awareness of life and her interest in it. She was one of the best-read people in town and cheerfully admitted that her reading interests ranged from the sublime to the ridiculous.

She had an abiding pride in the state university that she attended and that her husband served so well as regent; she had a tenderness and compassion for the young and the afflicted; she had a deep-seated confidence in youth and their potential.

The events of now tell us that Manistique, Schoolcraft County, the Upper Peninsula and the entire state will miss Imogene Herbert. How great that loss is, and how much she truly meant to this area and to the people she came in contact with, will be left to the judgement of history---a circumstance with which she would enthusiastically agree.

RUN IT LIKE A BUSINESS

One of the solutions of the uninitiated to the problems of public education is "run it like a business." When this is suggested for any government service, it should be recognized that one of the reasons that these functions are not already part of private enterprise is that it is unprofitable to do so.

If money could be made by providing jails, prisons, public mental hospitals, public education, sewage disposal treatment, police and fire protection, social welfare, etc., some enterprising individual or group would already be doing it -- for a profit. These activities, especially when the service must be provided for all, are poor profit risks, so no one is interested in the undertaking.

Also, one of the difficulties in comparing public service with private enterprise is that it is like comparing apples and horses. The two aren't comparable. The objective of private enterprise is to make a profit. The objective of public administration is to provide quality service as efficiently and economically as possible. It does make sense to use proven business methods, e.g., cost accounting, quality control, performance ratings, quantity buying, automation, etc., when they work; but because these methods have been developed for private business and industry, they don't always work for public institutions.

For example, collective bargaining functions better in the private sector because of the profit motive. Each side has the power to directly hurt the other financially. This is not true in collective bargaining in the public sector. The people who control the money available for a contract settlement (the state legislature, the voters, the Congress) have no direct relationship to the enterprise.

Also, some of the government services are so essential and the consequences so severe in case of strike, that the money becomes secondary. Witness the recent postal strike. Most people didn't care what it cost; they wanted the strike settled. They would feel the same way if the guards at Jackson prison walked out. The private enterprise model of collective bargaining does not fit the public sector because profit motive and competition are absent.

Even carrying it further, if we were to run them like a business, whose business do we run them like? The implication in the exhortation is if we "run them like a business," all will be well. But, everything isn't always healthy in business either. (Even some successful corporations have bad years.) Some businesses go out of business. The admonition "run them like a business" does not mean to run them like a business which is failing. It means to run them like a business which succeeds. But if it were possible to run them like a business which is succeeding, somebody would be doing it -- for a profit.

Family Living

INGRID TERVONEN
Extension Home Economist

ARE YOU in a Mealtimé Rut? My sister spent 4 days of her Easter break visiting me. While I was at work she entertained herself and I bet she spent half the time looking through cookbooks. She ended up asking to take a couple with her for a while.

Are you a recipe reader too? I wonder how many new recipes she will actually try. When did you last try a new recipe or introduce a new food to your family? For those of you who are "Extension Homemakers" how many of the recipes have you used from the "Bone Up on Meat" lesson that we had last year? All of them are very good, the kind most families would enjoy.

Courage and adventure can add variety and interest to your meals. A few experiments can broaden your family's eating pleasure and add adventure for you. It can make preparing meals more fun.

CHECK OCCASIONALLY. Even for the most thoughtful of you, meal planning can get monotonous. That trip to the grocery store is just another chore, preparing three meals a day becomes tiresome, and the same combination of foods continually appear on the table. We prepare the same dishes because they take less thought and effort.

If this happens to you, check yourself. Were your meals a pleasure this week? Did you buy the foods that met various mealtimé situations? Did you try a new recipe? Did you enjoy preparing and serving meals this week? Did you add a special touch to a family meal?

ATTEND 4-H Achievement Day on May 2. Schoolcraft County 4-H members will be displaying articles they have made in their various projects. Girls will be modeling garments they have sewn or knitted. It's a big day, so do watch for more specific details and do plan to attend. Open House is from 2:30 p.m. to 7 p.m. in the Manistique High School gym, this is the time for the public to see what the 4-H'ers in Schoolcraft County have done this past year.

Are You Making the Best of Your LIFE

Sunday Hebrews 12:1-13
Monday Jude 1:17-25
Tuesday Revelation 2:1-11
Wednesday Psalms 19:7-14
Thursday Psalms 119:1-16
Friday Psalms 119:23-48
Saturday Psalms 119:129-144

"That question has a double meaning!" you protest. Yes, it has. Either you're letting life carry you along its bumpy road, just shrugging your shoulders and "making the best of it" . . . or you've discovered the secret of making the BEST of life by choosing God's way and letting Him do the steering.

It isn't really a secret. Anyone can find it if he searches with complete sincerity. Through prayer, through regular church attendance, through Bible reading, the answers will come if we persevere. Gradually we will accept God's plan for us and understand the full, triumphant meaning of the words of Jesus: "Nothing shall by any means hurt you."

There is no voyage of discovery more exciting or challenging than this one. And our God-guided efforts will bring us to the BEST of life . . . a reward greater than any worldly goal we could name.
