and business prosperity. His greatest favorite at every port along the coast from keel to top-mast. Go and see for yourself.

When "appeal day" comes around again, that it is the privilege and duty of every taxpayer to inspect the Supervisor's books. If you have any complaints to make about valuations, taxes, and only on that day, is the proper time to make them. That is the time and it is useless to find fault with either the Supervisor or the Board of Review. We have never been disposed to find fault with the valuations, but some people do. They are the ones that should attend when the books are open for inspection.

Thanks to W. C. Bronson for a beautiful and well printed copy of the "Story of the Dedication of the Indian Memorial Monument at Painted Post in 1894," copy of the "Story of the Dedication of that place." The book gives the speeches, poems and other historical notices connected with that village up to the completion of the monument. Copy New York should have a copy of this book, more especially those from Steuben county, and a number of them have been sent to Mr. Bronson, at the low price of 35 cents per copy. There is no charge for sale at any price.

Miss, on Sunday morning, Elizabeth, wife of O. M. Drake, aged 51 years. The particulars are well known from Mr. D. It is that his wife received from the Army nursing School, Sunday night and her little boy being sick, retired to sleep in the boy's bed. Not coming down to breakfast Mr. D. went to her room and she complained of not feeling well. She said she might bring her breakfast up to her, which she ate and laid down again. A short time after Mr. D. went to her room and found her dead. She had not been up after medical assistance, but nothing could be done, and her funeral took place Monday afternoon. Mr. D. says the doctor insisted "paralytic action of the heart."

Members of the Orient are to go to Thompson, Saturday evening, on the Avenue, for the purpose of conferring the degree upon Thompsonites, who have received the "boys" over. The A. O. U. Great Commander Lillian M. Hollister, L. O. T. M., arrived here yesterday morning and was the guest of Mrs. H. H. Weston. At 12 o'clock she accompanied a number of the members of the Hive here on a visit to the members of that organization at Thompson. A meeting for instruction and advice was held in the afternoon and all returned here in time for the evening session.

The County Clerk has had his office fitted up in a nice shape; the vault supplied with the latest improved scales, books, racks, etc. That office is now fitted up in grand style and we hope every tax payer in the county will call there and inspect the county. W. H. Hill, on behalf of the board of supervisors, has saved the county several hundred dollars in this transaction, alone.

We have heard many things about the action of the school board at its meeting last Saturday, in regard to the employment of teachers for the coming year, but from the numerous reports we have heard, we heard a word from which we can tell our readers what the program is, and we shall attempt it upon the unimpaired memory that we have recorded. By the way, and in the time all things will be made plain.

The Gladstone Delta began the 10th year of its publication last Saturday by a change of form from a folio or quarto to a 16 page pamphlet edition. The new edition is printed, type graphically neat, on book paper with appropriate cover. E. E. Mason is the editor and H. L. Bushnell one of the best printers in the state, being publisher. We are not "stock" on that shape; but still it will always be a welcome exchange on our table. We wish it great success.

A REMARKABLE WOMAN.

But Not When She Had Had So Much Previous Experience.

"Oh, what a perfectly adorable diamond pin!" cried the young woman with the violet bonnet.

"Yes, and my husband gave it to me of his own accord," replied the young woman with the black silk gown.

"You mean he thought he had?"

"I mean nothing of the kind. I'll die if I don't tell somebody, and it might just as well be you as anybody else, but don't tell your husband."

"I won't. I'll let him think your husband gave it to you out of pure generosity. He hates to have anybody get ahead of him."

"I know. Well, my new gown came home a ruin, an absolute wreck, and, to tell the truth, I took most of my rage out on Antonia because I wasn't afraid of him, and I was of her."

"Two later his suit came home from the tailor. It was a perfect fit except that the coat sleeves were half an inch or so too long. I told him that it didn't really matter much, for they could easily be shortened, but he replied that he wasn't afraid of his tailor if it was of my dressmaker."

"Haunt! He would be if his tailor was a woman."

"M'am. He said he would go right down and give him a good whipping—that he'd tell him he wasn't fit to make a pair of flycatcher blouses. Indeed he used such a language, and he was really alarmed. That made him more ferocious yet, and I trembled for the consequences."

"Oh, well, you know it takes nine tails to make a man."

"So Antonia remarked. I tried to calm him by reminding him that the poor man was probably a weak, nervous creature with a large family depending upon him, but he refused to listen and rushed off down town."

"Then he sent a messenger with the coat and a polite note saying the sleeves were too long."

"Nothing of the kind. He came back in a cab an hour or so later with an overcoat torn, a piece of coat plaster on his cheek, and, oh, such an eye!"

"How cross he must have been!"

"Oh, not as much as you might imagine. I didn't lose my presence of mind. I just cried out: 'Antonius Bittnerstein, I hope you didn't quite kill that poor tailor!'"

"And he got you the job the first day his eye was fit for him to go out well, I'm sure you are a remarkable woman."

"Oh, well, not remarkable as you might think," modestly replied the young woman with the black silk gown. "You must remember that Antonius is my second husband."—Chicago Tribune.

How Than to Regulate Food. Some years ago a regiment of volunteers was encamped on the outskirts of Weymouth, Dorsetshire. Among those whose curiosity led them to the campment were three hearty Parliamenters.

As these three were strolling round the camp they came across a large tent over which was written the following notice: "Dinner—as much as you like for a shilling." Being hungry, the three went in to dine. They began their meal, and after five other parties had come in, dinner and left again they were still very young.

Presently a young man, evidently one of the attendants, came and tapping one of them lightly on the shoulder said in a low voice, "Here, you saps, the government has just put that if you would like to go now he won't charge you anything for what you have already eaten."—Weymouth (England) News.

Doubtfully he was obliged to go to the lower side of the building about 1:30 o'clock, when his attention was attracted by voices.

He approached the doorway and saw three men engaged in detaching the brass work from an engine. He heard one say, "Oh, this wrench won't fit."

"The one nearest the fall and the one next to him let the engine start, drew a revolver and replied, 'Snap up your hands and duck your head,' accompanying his words with two shots.

All the men then turned their heads, he got toward the fall and the one in the same direction toward the park square. Though shot and bleeding and unarmed, Doubtfully pursued the latter, who was the shooter, until, weakened by loss of blood, he fell to the ground.

He was much exhausted from shock and the loss of blood, but his condition is not critical.—Philadelphia Press.

THE "THIRD DEGREE." How Superintendent Byrnes of New York Employed It in a Recent Murder Case.

What the "third degree" really is. Columns have been written about it, but I have never yet seen an accurate description of the process of extracting the criminal confession on the Byrnes plan. It is simple enough, however.

The famous New York superintendent merely organizes modern legislation in the shape of a series of questions to police headquarters and marshals his facts before the criminal.

In the case of Caesar, the negro who was recently arrested in New York for the murder of his mistress, a negro girl, he used first moral suasion, and later an exhibition of the merchandise appeared, from where is anastory, upon the wall of the room in which Caesar was confined with Byrnes.

The blood stained carpet was held up before his eyes. The superintendent told him to take hold of it and examine it. That settled it. Caesar broke down and made a full confession, and later an exhibition of the merchandise.—St. Louis Republic.

THE LOSSES. An Estimate of the Mortality in the Recent War in the East.

The close of the war between China and Japan, now apparently close at hand, makes an estimate of the loss of life quite interesting.

Mr. Matsui, secretary of the Japanese legation in Washington, has made a calculation which shows that the Japanese have had 912 killed and 2,061 wounded. The Chinese loss is about 8,000, not including the wounded. But the fact is that the reports in the districts regarding the casualties to the Chinese are not reliable, and they probably really lost twice as many as Mr. Matsui has stated.

The loss on both sides, however, is small, considering that the war extended over eight months. The Chinese were running most of the time, otherwise the results, so far as their armies are concerned, would have been far more disastrous.—Washington Post.

Biggest Western Land Lease. The territorial school land department recently consummated at Barrio, O. T., the largest lease of land ever made in the west. The lessee is D. Wagoner & Son, cattle dealers of Denton, Tex., and the land is for five years and covers all the school land in Roger Mills, Day and Woodward counties, or 525,500 acres.

The sum of $12,500 per acre and a man is paid for the lease. It is the intention of the lessee to graze cattle on the new lease, and on the land will be placed on grass within a few weeks.—Kansas City Times.

Where Are the others? Chicago's chain of over 500 pools lacks verification. There is Eugene Field for No. 1 and Harriet Monroe for No. 200, but if there are 150 between them they must have taken their several maces and gone into park.—San Francisco Examiner.

Maestro Who Simply Got Married. An English woman writer last appeared who is said to treat the subject of marriage in an entirely new way. Possibly she discloses it with dignity and common sense.—Chicago Post.

Baltimore's Trolley Fender. They have got a trolley fender in Baltimore that is picked up 20 people in as many days, but it isn't stated whether they likewise collected their fares.—Boston Herald.

After THREE MONTHS of Daily Wear

This Collar is Still in Good Condition.

That's because it's the "CELLULOSE" Collar. Its original cost was $1.00 and it cost the wearer nothing at all to keep it clean. With a simple daily wipe-off with soap and water, it was as good as new.

These collars are made of pure cellulose and are the only collars that wash and dry so easily. They are made of a special kind of cellulose that is so strong and so elastic that they will stand up to the most severe wear and tear. They are also very comfortable to wear, and they are very stylish.

THE CELLULOSE COMPANY, 127-29 Broadway, New York.

THE PATENTS. CAN I OBTAIN A PATENT? For a person to obtain a patent for an invention, he must first determine whether or not his invention is new, useful, and non-obvious. He must also determine whether or not his invention is eligible for a patent. He must then file an application for a patent with the United States Patent Office. He must also pay the required fees. He must then wait for the patent to be granted. He must then defend his patent against any challenges. He must then enforce his patent against any infringers. He must then collect the royalties on his patent. He must then use the money to fund his business. He must then expand his business. He must then retire. He must then live happily ever after.

Highest of all in Leavening Power—Latest U. S. Gov't Report

Royal Baking Powder

ABSOLUTELY PURE

Semi-Weekly Digest.

Forty-two Year Ago.

1843 City, Penn., April 17.
The President—I am so sorry to know that the senior editor has been stricken with the grip, or Grippé—it is mean enough whichever way you spell it, for I know by our experience and I sympathize with Major Clarke to the fullest extent. May he get the best of it.

Item in PROCEEDINGS of the 13th issue of the Oostaninkum? I can not mistake, he was named for his uncle, Reuben Pratt Foley, a noble soldier of the old-Democratism. Bucktails, what was killed at the battle of Fredericksburg, there to his ashes. If I am right in this, his father is Andrew Foley, Esq., an excellent gentleman, as I know, who was W. M. of Green Lodge in 1844, when I made the good. The boys gave me a good ride all the same, and think they had themselves out to put me through in good shape. Andrew Foley was a democrat in those days—the only fellow I ever knew him to have—but you know there are some excellent democrats.

Brother Clarke, you should pay a visit to the Oil Exchange in Oil City about now. Oil has advanced from about 40 cents to $2.25 within three months, and the way Rome looks in the Exchange is a caution. Some of the boys are making cords of money, and some of the fellows are still bent on hunting in the land and every body in the oil business is correspondingly happy. I enclose a clipping from the "Oil City Herald," and wish you a very good night.

SAMUEL HAYDEN.
[The correspondent is strictly correct in regard to his statement about the Foley family; and he will learn more about them by writing to E. P. Foley, R. P. Foley, Park Hotel, South St. Marie, or ex-Mayor Andrew Foley, St. Ignace. In our own case it is not so much a gripe as it is a pang. Please write us more about your early recollections of Manistique.—EDITOR.]

The Legislative Manual of 1895-96 is received. It is now excellent work of reference. It is now edited by Hon. Washington Gardner, Secretary of State, who deserves great credit for the valuable statistics, political and otherwise, which he has gathered into this beautiful Manual.

Capt. Dan Coffey, who is well and favorably known in St. Ignace, having sailed the steamer Hunter for the past three years, has accepted a position as mate of the steamer Eugene Hunt. Captain Dan will be greatly missed by his many friends along the north shore.—St. Ignace Enterprise.

People who live in this city, earn their living in this city, and who want the benefits derived from citizenship should patronize home industry. Buy home goods of home merchants and keep the money in circulation here. If no one would patronize you here how long would it be before you would have to pull up stakes and go? Myself.—Don't be so anxious to send away your money.—Ex.

In every speculative department business is growing, but this is really the least satisfactory feature of the situation. Cotton, oil and wheat are all above the export price, so that the marketing of products abroad must be checked, and money is absorbed which ought to be employed in productive industry and in distribution of products to consumers. Everybody knows that oil has not risen 200 per cent. because it is intrinsically more valuable, nor is wheat actually worth more than it was two or three weeks ago, but the speculative and uplifting forces has unfortunately taken to speculation rather than to production, and so we have higher prices in all speculative markets with out a larger demand for consumption.—Dan's Review.

Passing Events.
Papers received here in Manistique come to see among friends and relatives in Lower Michigan, while none go to far-away Ohio.
Really think we should be more considerate concerning our lives. Let those who use tobacco and liquor do so no more. Let those who repair to the steam or water's edge with fish

For Sale—First class lot in block 4 Lakeside cheap for cash.—Ed. Ashford, at Court House.

Projects which are utterly impracticable and yet look well on a map. The State of Superior is one of them. The population is to be taken from Michigan Upper Peninsula, from Wisconsin the northern tier of counties, and from Minnesota a good part of the section lying east of the Mississippi, including Duluth of course, and to make out of these slices of three States one Commonwealth, with Duluth as its chief city, and the production of iron ore as its great industry.

It is claimed by the advocates of this scheme that that part of Michigan which it is proposed to take from her is not connected geographically or otherwise with the rest of the State. It is asserted that Duluth and the territory tributary to it have no interests in common with Minnesota and St. Paul and the territory tributary to them. Yet Wisconsin, if she were tried, belongs naturally to the "State of Superior" rather than to the one that is a part of now.

This is a measure of faith in these countries is to take from Michigan the State were made, with its long stretch of water frontage, and with its enormous mineral wealth, and with its chief city situated at the head of the Great Lakes, and with its trade of a great section of the northwest, that State would in time be an exceedingly flourishing one. Nevertheless the scheme is impracticable.

The scheme could not be admitted into the Union without the consent of the three States it is supposed to deprive of territory. Not one of them will consent. Minnesota will not surrender Duluth, nor Wisconsin her frontage on Lake Superior, nor Michigan the Upper Peninsula with its mines and its harbors. Each of these States would consent to an extension of its boundaries, but not to shrinking of them.

Nobody will be harmed if the residents of the Lake Superior country discuss this scheme and all on the manifold advantages to be gained by its adoption. This will be an innocent amusement. But they ought to understand that the necessary consent of all the three States concerned here can be secured.—Chicago Tribune.
