They are talking about the "New" Tammany. The man has an ancient and a fishlike smile. It was much in evidence a little while after the fall of Tweed, but we can't see that the new thing was any better than the old one. Nor is it to be expected that the new one will be less rascally than its predecessors.

What, another trust? The Plato Glass trust has been organized with a capital of $10,000,000. Still the Democrats revised the tariff less than a year ago under a pledge to the people that there should be no more trusts.—Cleveland Leader.

Contrary Course. British foreign trade increasing? Of course it is. And American foreign trade shrinking? Of course, also. What was the German-Wilson tariff for any other reason than to make the "old one" McKinley eat the relative drift of things in the two countries was exactly opposite.—Boston Journal.

The South Wants Factories. In the west and south there is just now an eager desire for more factories, especially in young growing towns. Why? Because most people in such places are convinced that factories increase the value of real estate and benefit farmers by putting money in circulation. Yet these same farmers who favor local industries oppose the national protective policy that promotes the public welfare in the most general establishment of factories throughout our country.

Here's Wisdom. The synod of the Reformed Presbyterians has decided that neither silver nor the tariff cause the hard times; that the financial troubles that have overtaken the country have all happened because of God's punishment on the constitution. By the same token, if the constitution were amended so as to acknowledge God as the source of all power and authority, we would have good times right off. What peculiar ideas of God some people have!—IX.

A Fish Story Indeed. Henry Crosswell has the reputation of being a good fisherman. He has long held the record at Hudsonville, Mich., but lifted his record on this Sunday. He has caught many fish and has been busy dragging his line through when he felt a sudden jerk and found up the reel. He did not get a fish on the end of the line, but instead a purse of woven silver wire, exquisite in workmanship. On opening the purse he found a diamond solitaire ring, the stone being nearly two carats and pure white, a pair of diamond earrings, containing large gems of considerable value, and a dozen of Spanish gold pieces. There was no engraving or writing on the purse.—New York Recorder.

Worth's Generosity. An anecdote of the great Worth's generosity has been going the rounds. Just when the generosity comes in, however, is what I have failed to detect. It was during the days of the Empire that a leader of fashion in Paris, finding that she had overdrawn her husband's account, and that a great family ball was imminent, went to the great man milliner and prayed him to hire her a costume.

He was shocked. Such mean expedients had never come in his line. The lady prayed. The great man denied. Finally the prayers of beauty prevailed. But she was to wear a costume entirely of his doing.

He dressed her as the flag of Paris. The tricolor fluttered in her skirts, on her shoes, in her emerald earrings. Her hair was dressed to represent a stormy sea in which rode the famous three masted galleon bearing the arms of Paris. The hair was combed novel. The great man only charged her 1,500 francs. The dress was hers for one night only.

Bought the skin that brought him. An interesting anecdote is told of the late Captain Theodor Julius. Some time ago Captain Julius went into a shipyard in Camden to take a look at the old paddle-ship Tomawanda, which was being converted into a coal barge. The captain took a particular interest in the old ship because of his having served as mate aboard her in the early '60s. While he stood watching the movement of the earth 500 meters around the ship, and nearly a mile forward with the sun.—Exchange.

receives 200 kisses—low calculator—and each kiss lasts ten seconds, in five years' time the lover would have 365,000 kisses and their lips would have been united for the space of forty-two days and six hours.

If the entire population is considered to be 1,400,000,000 the brain of this number of human beings would weigh 1,922,712 tons or as much as ninety-six ironclads of the ordinary size.

The air pressure on a person of ordinary size is thirteen and a half tons. A man of fifty years of age has in ordinary cases undressed himself 18,350 times, and of course dresses himself just as many times.

When a person on the street passes his hat, made a bow, the work of a season, he carried by the movement of the earth 500 meters around the planet, three miles around the sun and nearly a mile forward with the sun.—Exchange.

Restoration of Balfour's Oak. The Liverpool vessel, or hammer of, has not an exact opinion of "Crisman heres." It seems that a veteran soldier has taken refuge in the workhouse, and a Mr. Peet objects on the ground that the veteran has no pension. A Mr. Peet would not accept with this. He considers that it was "not right to encourage these people." "Crisman heres, that is, we suppose. And he is a member of the committee that is being made by Mr. Peet. We unite again to come to work the ship that brought me, practically penniless, to this country."—Philadelphia Record.

A Dream Verified. A remarkable statement was made at an inquest held in Birmingham on the body of a girl, named Rose Foster, which was found in the canal near Spring Hill. The deceased suffered from the effects of a fever contracted some years ago, and since her attack has been further aggravated by influenza storms. During the storm Wednesday week she left home, possibly to visit an aunt. She did not return, and the affair was reported to the police, who were helped by an aunt of the deceased, who related to them a strange dream. She dreamed that while passing the canal near Spring Hill she tripped the water with her umbrella, and the deceased at once floated on the surface. She visited the spot the following morning, and finding the police dragging the canal in another part, suggested that they should transfer operations to the part she had dreamed of. They did so, and immediately recovered the body.—London Letter.

Woman and Marriage. Lady Jean has returned to the charge in another reminder for a fresh article by a "new woman," who on this occasion maintained that marriage as a social condition had become repugnant to a majority of the sex. A remarkable thing about the composition which called forth the answer is that the alleged inconveniences of the wedded state described as nothing more than all examined at length by Balzac in the "Little Misery of Conjugal Life" in the early part of the century. That disposition of them so far as being characteristic of the century, and distressing is concerned. But Lady Jean demolishes the case of her opponent on other and lighter grounds. She denies that marriage is falling into disfavor with her sisters. She holds that the woman of today is just as capable of love as any of those who went before her. Lady Jean, on the matter of the relation of her sexes, is in a position to know her facts. Her husband is head of the divorce division of the English High Court of Justice. She would think she has succeeded in obtaining expressions of opinion from him, which are valuable even if delivered obiter, as the lawyers say.—New York Evening Sun.

Curious Statistics. A German lover of figures has made the following curious calculations: A man smoking a pipe of medium size blows out of his mouth every time he fills the pipe 700 drops of water. If he smokes four pipes a day for twenty years he blows out 20,400,000 smoke drops.

If two lovers spend four hours together and the lover takes or

Mr. and Mrs. Cornelius Vandenberg of Newport recently inspecting their new villa, which has taken the place of the Beacon, and in its contents, was destroyed by fire three years ago. The new house is a veritable palace, and in the matter of cost and general appointments is said to outrank any private mansion residence in the world. The building is of Italian lines, and there is not a particle of wood in it claimed to be absolutely fireproof. There are terraces all about the house, which is practically in three sections, the main entrance is toward Lawrence avenue, but there is another entrance from the cliff side within a second zone attractive.

In the house are superb carvings, massive pillars of oak and other valuable of the most delicate shades, and a wealth of beautiful paintings, which appear to have no more pretensions than the form wall or ceiling panels. Mosaic figures and borders abound, all of which, as well as the paintings and carvings, have been executed by a corps of Italian artists who came here from the island of Capri.

On the lower floor of the villa, besides the kitchen and pantries, there is a dining room, drawing room, billiard room, reception room and a hall. It is understood that the drawing room here is to be used for dancing, and on occasion demands, may not be opened this month. ## METHODICAL

She Was All Right In Principle, but Not In Practice.

They had come down town on a shopping trip and had dropped into a restaurant for a cup of tea. While they drank it they explained to each other their various scientific ways of doing the thing. "I go about it systematically," said the methodical woman. "First I find out just what I need and how much, then I make an accurate list and divide my money, so I know just how much I mean to pay for each thing, and I never take along any more than I need."

"But suppose you see some perfectly lovely bargains?" put in the extravagant woman, "but then you can take the money you had intended for something else."

"I never do such things. I buy just what I have originally decided upon."

"And I suppose you go straight to the department where they keep those particular articles," observed the careless woman.

"Of course I do."

"For my part, I think that's just like a man, and I do hate anything unless it's 'put in the window'."

"Silly and nonsense! Then I always keep my tickets until my purchases arrive in order that I can exchange them if necessary. As for Kate, she never even takes her tickets home."

"I don't," said the careless woman. "I just think I can always get my things exchanged if I ask pretty enough. Soft words are just as good as those rubbishy tickets of yours."

"I never return anything," said the extravagant woman. "If I don't like my purchases when I get home, I just give them to some deserving object of charity. We are entirely too selfish in this world anyhow, as I always tell my husband when he objects to giving me more money. I like to do a little good."

"Yes, how delighted the poor invalid was with the walking hat you sent her. She said she was really afraid she was losing all idea of style, and she was becoming hopelessly out of fashion," remarked the careless woman, with a smile in her voice.

The extravagant woman was busy putting sugar in her tea, so the methodical woman took up the conversation, saying:

"Then I always carry a number of cards with my name and address on them, just in case I should be out of town. Yes, but it didn't take time you give out one of Mrs. Jones's cards in mistake for your own and had all your winter dresses sent to her," observed the careless woman. "If I remember rightly, you almost had pneumonia, for the mistake could be so right."

"That was a mere accident," said the methodical woman severely; "the principle is all right."

"Of course, of course," said the widow soothingly. "I think I must be going now. I've lots to do."

"And I, too," said the methodical woman. "Kate does all her matching by eye, and it takes a long time. Just wait a minute, Kate, while I get out my list. After it is once made I depend entirely on my list, and I don't know where I must go first. Why, where can my list be?"

"At home on your dressing table, dear," said the careless woman blantly. "I saw it as you were starting out, but you were so busy lecturing me about a lack of system that I really hadn't a chance to mention it to you."—Chicago Times-Herald.

A Colonial Episode.
"What!" exclaimed Pocahontas in justifiable wrath, when she discovered Captain John Smith making love to the daughter of the absent warrior. "I thought you loved me alone!"

"I love you both," said John dreamily, stepping behind a tree.

"Then I am not your only girl?"
"No, my dear. This is my original; you are my aboriginal."—New York World.

A Treasure.
"There's a fine horse," said the owner of the animal proudly.

"Yes?"
"Most valuable animal in this track—no horse!"

"Father. But that isn't what makes him worth so much. It's his intelligence. All you have to do is to whisper 'Wag' to him, and he comes to the standstill."—Washington Post.

Likely to Remember.
Pond Mother—You haven't kissed the baby.
Bachelorette—Um—Um—It'll try to remember next time. It'll kiss her when it comes back from Europe.

"When will that be?"
"Let—me—see. About 16 years."—New York Weekly.

A Quick Response.
"Emancipator!"
Down, slender limbs shadows hovered o'er the earth, and every star upon the frown of heaven shone forth in opalescent grandeur.

"I'll live and all is well, I'll be a bell tinkling in an orchestra, look on the mantle proclaimed the hour of 8 o'clock, and night was now preparing for a final struggle with approaching dawn."

"I shall point the way," said the girl, and soon his soft courtesies beaming between himself and her. The Brooklyn man had been talking in his sleep.—New York World.

Calling For Extras.
I sat down to a tablin in a little eating house near the depot and called for a cup of coffee and a slice of pie. The proprietor, who seemed to be his own waiter, looked troubled for a minute and then said:

"Very sorry, sir, but I am just out of pie and coffee."

"I'll take a glass of milk and a doughnut, then."

"I have you a couple of sandwiches and a bottle of beer."

"No, sir. Not today."

"Then what's the matter?"

"Why, sir, you are calling for extras, you see."

"Extra! If coffee and pie and doughnuts and water and sandwiches are extra, what's your regular bill of fare?"

"Well, sir, there's mustard and salt and pepper on the table, and the hot is up town after 'tates, and the old woman will be sitting up a Johnny-cake pretty soon, and if you want to wait over and take the evening train there won't be any trouble about getting up a regular luncheon."—Detroit Free Press.

A Liberal Clerk.
An Austin colored pastor, named Block, has made himself very unpopular with Jim Webster. He was passing the house of Jim Webster on Austin last week when the proprietor called him in.

"Come, parson, and have a piece of cake and a glass of wine. Dis here am my buffet."

The reverend gentleman accepted the invitation. There a large meat-cake on the table, and the clergyman was urged to cut it.

"What shall I cut it?" he asked taking up the knife and seeing at the cake in a bewildered sort of way.

"You cut it whichever you please, parson."

"Which? Say that other one."

"Yes, cut it whichever you see fit, parson."

A smile lit up the dusky features of the humble toiler of the Lord's vineyard, and he remarked fervently:

"I'm much obliged to you, dear, but I've no time to cut it. I'll cut it when I get home, and I'll bring it to you."

"I'll cut it when I get home, and I'll bring it to you."

"I'll cut it when I get home, and I'll bring it to you."
