G. S. JOHNSON REELECTED TO CREDIT BOARD

Local Man Named To Three Year Term By Farm Credit Associations

Hearty Ford is not pessimistic about the business outlook, despite the current industrial recession. He interviewed in Detroit the famous auto magnate said: "No one need look at next year with any uncertainty. The present slow-down is not a setback; it's a pause before another climb."

These are encouraging words from America's foremost industrialist, and should serve to dispel some of the gloom which has gripped the public since the stock market went into a tailspin several weeks ago and the business barometer commenced sinking to new lows.

Roger Babson, America's foremost economist, believes the current business recession is attributable to high taxes, labor troubles, governmental abuse of public utilities and business, and unhealthful expansion. "Basically, the nation is still on the upswing," he stated. "Fundamentally, we should not be entering a major depression. There is no over-expansion in industrial output. Commodity prices are stabilized. Inventories are turning off. The banks are in a sound position. Farm income is the highest in ten years."

He continues by saying the future for the next 12 months lies in the hands of the administration in Washington. "An honest program in their experimental program would do more for business than spending five billion dollars on armaments, public works or 'bondage'."

MRS. C. S. HOVEY IS TAKEN BY DEATH

Prominent Manistique Clubwoman Dies Friday In Escanaba Hospital

Mrs. Charles S. Hovey, prominent Manistique clubwoman, passed away at St. Francis hospital in Escanaba, Friday after a brief illness. She was 68. Although she had been in ill health for the past two years, Mrs. Hovey was active until within two weeks of her death. Mrs. Hovey, nee Jane Campbell, was born in New York state in 1869, and her girlhood was spent in Fort Wayne and Elkhart, Ind. She was married in Chicago to Benjamin Hovey, moving with him to Geneva, Ill., in 1900. Following Mr. Hovey's death in 1911, she operated a mail-order and art work shop in Chicago. In 1916 she married Charles S. Hovey and the next year moved to Italian Lake where she and Mr. Hovey have been engaged in a resort business. Besides her husband, she is survived by one son, Benjamin H. Hovey, of Chicago. Mrs. Hovey played an active part in club and social activities in the community, and was known as an accomplished pianist. She was a member of the Good Will club, which is composed of neighboring farm women of Hiawatha township, a character member of the Deloitian society and a member of the Manistique Women's club, of which she was a former president. For the past 10 years she was a reader in the Christian Science church. Christian Science services were conducted Sunday at 2 o'clock at the Boyce Funeral Home in Escanaba. Several Manistique people were present for the last rites. Mr. Hovey accompanied the body to Escanaba for cremation, and her ashes were taken to Geneva, Ill., for interment.

Matt Kills Big "Bear" On Sunday

Friends of Matt Kaso are kindling him about the "bear" he shot Sunday morning in the Duck Creek swamp. According to the story, Matt and one of his hunting companions spotted an uprooted pine tree in a clump of evergreens in which Matt thought a bear might be lurking. Careful investigation proved that there was a large hole at the root of the over-torn tree which looked a probable den. Matt peered into the hole carefully and saw something move in the semi-darkness. Gripping his gun nervously and excitedly telling his companion to "watch out," he fired into the hole. Quills scattered in all directions and a porcine gasped and fled. Matt had got his "bear."

Bratschi Bowls Score Of 275 Pins

Rolling with the Browns Wednesday night on the Keweenaw, George Bratschi topped the maples for one of the largest bowling scores recorded here in a game which was featured by Bratschi's huge score. The Browns had a total of 831 pins with only four men rolling. This is better than an average of 208 per man.

Howard Is Speaker At Lions Meet

The Lions business and entertainment are so interrelated that your peninsula cannot expect to be "cash in" on its summer vacation unless particular attention is given to the conservation program, Charles Howard, president of the Schoolcraft Conservation club and chairman of the board of supervisors of the Manistique Lions club, Tuesday night.

DENTAL EXAMS ARE BEGUN IN COUNTY

During the past week dental examinations were given children of the Niles, Steuben, Dodge, Drick, Woods, Kendall and Redwing schools, by Dr. Milton M. Keckic, dentist with the Algerton conservation department. Schoolcraft's 150 children were given dental examinations. "Of this number five, or three percent were found not to require any dental correction and 14 or 97 percent.

Dr. Keckic said, "There are some that do not require a great deal of work. They are not in need of fillings and some require extractions as the decay has gone beyond corrective work. It is not very healthy for a child to have diseased teeth and roots in the mouth. Sometimes the advanced teeth become painful, other times they are draining into the system and they are not. There are areas if not taken care of may cause systemic disease later in life."

The following table shows the results by schools of the examinations:

Exam-	OK	Per-
Results	cent	cent
Alldrich	12	100%
Stouven	8	100%
Dodge	26	100%
Drick	24	83%
Woods	24	100%
Kendall	23	100%

Lions Club Seeks Additional Talent For Minstrel Comedy Show

Several local amateurs are entered in the Manistique Lions club minstrel contest, which will be held as a feature of the club's holiday comedy and minstrel next month, but many more are expected to register before troupes are held. George Morton, committee chairman, has announced the lists at the Pioneer Tribune and Daily Press offices are the following: Thelma Toyser, acrobatic dancer; Donald Bulic, singer; Gladys Gilbert, actress; Margaret Lalonde, actress; and Erin Wandy and Winifred Winandy, dance trio; Thompson; Gertrude Brager and Vera Smith, vocalists; Joan and Margaret, singing and dancing; George Foughton and Kenneth Henderson, instrumental and vocal; Agatha Frankovich, vocalist; Joan and Helen Jean Volsine, piano selections; Viola and Jean Bowman, songs and guitar, and Herbert Morris, Camp songs, whose name was entered by Mrs. Grace LeRoy. Contestants will compete for three cash prizes—$16 for first, $10 for second, and $5 for third. Prizes will be determined from ballots to be cast by the audience at the minstrel show. There are no restrictions as to who may enter. Troupes will probably be held soon. Mr. Morton said, with outstanding performers to be selected by a club committee and the sponsor of the show, Miss Rose Green.

800 DEBATERS TO COME HERE DEC. 17

Date Changed From Dec. 10; Negative Team Represents Manistique

Manistique high school's scheduled debate with Sault Ste. Marie Dec. 10, has been postponed to Dec. 17, it was announced this week by Preston N. Tantis, forensic coach at the local high school. The contest will be held at the Manistique high school auditorium. The local trio, Jane Cayin, Edwin Sundell and David Shinar, will argue the negative side of the question which concerns the adoption of a unit-general, or one-house system of state legislature. The Manistique affirmative team met the Gladstone negative in a preliminary debate Thursday evening. Local speakers were George Eriksen, Lawrence Heinz and Duane Waterbury. Thursday's preliminary debate has won one contestant and lost one this season, winning from Felch, and losing to Iron Mountain. Manistique was represented in both debates by Priscilla Powers, John Solar and David Shinar.

RICOCHETS and BACKLASHES

Good binoculars or field glasses have in recent years become an almost necessary part of every deer hunter's equipment.

Just try to recall how many times you have raised binoculars or field glasses to determine distant objects.

If you are one of those hunters who shoot first and investigate afterwards you will not be interested in this information.

Class as an optical aid in hunting have been used in the western plains country for years.

In recent years however, the deer hunters of the lake states have found both the binocular and telescope sights real aids in hunting.

Like guns glasses are made in a variety of styles and grades to suit as wide a variety of tastes and pocketbooks.

The deer hunter had best choose a glass of around six-power with an objective lens having a diameter of about 25 millimeters or one inch.

If you plan to invest in a good binocular spend some time investigating the various makes and types and choose the one which best suits your individual needs.

But don't be misled into buying one of the cheap glasses sometimes advertised. If you purchase with the privilege of examining and try out several different kinds.

Bridal Party
The wedding of Miss Thelma Boudry, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Boudry, of Manistique, and Clifford Lied, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Lied, also of this city, Rev. B. J. P. Schewers read the 6 o'clock marriage service at the St. Francis de Sales parsonage. Attendants were Miss Bernita Doubanski, of Manistique, and Clarence Boudreau, cousin of the bride. The bride's three-piece red cord suit was fur trimmed, and with it she wore sequin brown accessories. Her corsage was of tall-hip rose and lily breath. Miss Doubanski wore a fawn brown three piece tailored suit with dark brown accessories and a corsage of sweet peas in pastel shades. Following the ceremony a wedding breakfast was served at the home of the bride's parents for thirty guests. A four-tiered white wedding cake, decorated with various colored roses, and topped by a miniature bride and groom, centered the table. A 1:30 o'clock light luncheon was served at the Lied home for which the table centerpiece was set in a nest of ferns and sweet peas. are making their home at 292 Stephen street.
Mr. and Mrs. Walter of Delta avenue, became the bride of Anthony Carnack, of Detroit, Wednesday morning, Nov. 24. The marriage service was performed by Rev. B. J. P. Schewers at a 7 o'clock nuptial mass at St. Francis de Sales church. The bride, who was attended by Mrs. Russell Robertson, was adorned in a gold colored dress with which she wore brown accessories. Mrs. Robertson wore an aqua colored dress with blue accessories. Mr. Carnack was attended by Walter Eckley, brother of the bride. Following the ceremony a wedding breakfast was served at the home of the bride's parents for thirty guests. A four-tiered white wedding cake, decorated with various colored roses, and topped by a miniature bride and groom, centered the table. A 1:30 o'clock light luncheon was served at the Lied home for which the table centerpiece was set in a nest of ferns and sweet peas. The young couple is well known here, having attended local schools. Following a short wedding trip to points in Wisconsin they

QUESTIONS THAT ARE ASKED ABOUT BANKING

"Is it important to write checks carefully?"

OUR answer to this question is emphatically "yes"—for your own protection. Here are a few simple, but important, rules:
Never write in pencil! Be sure the date is correct with the month spelled out. See that the amount, as spelled out and in figures, agrees and is legibly written. Fill in all blank spaces, particularly the amount lines. Never erase! Write a new check and destroy the spoiled one. In signing checks use the same signature on file at your bank. Never sign blank checks! Make them payable to "cash" or "bearer" only when you personally present them at the bank. Safeguard your bank checks—for your signature might be forged on them. Guard your cancelled checks. Careful observance of these rules enables us to give you greater protection for your deposited funds.

THE FIRST NATIONAL BANK AT MANISTIQUE

Mr. and Mrs. Adam Gierke, of Grayling, parents of Frank M. Gierke, Sr., Manistique postmaster, observed their golden wedding anniversary Tuesday of last week. Mr. Gierke was born in Mielchhase, Germany, Dec. 15, 1861, and Mrs. Gierke, formerly Mary Anne Lamont, was born in Hylth, Canada, May 12, 1869. They were married Nov. 29, 1887, in West Bay City by the Rev. N. G. Lyons, pastor of the First Methodist Episcopal church. Mr. Gierke retired as conductor for the Michigan Central railroad in 1930. They have eight children, Frank, postmaster at Manistique; Mrs. Elmer Eismann, son of Marlette; Mrs. Leo Jeanbert, of Detroit; Earl, instructor in Saginaw business college; Anna Jloyd, Charles, Edward and Mrs. Jerry Lars of Grayling. The couple were honored last week at many social events.

Manistique In Former Days

Fifty Years Ago
Manistique is bound to be in next season as a summer resort.

It is a shame that Manistique has not a regular season of coaches here to give "color" to the town. That will be a little more pleasant than riding 10 or 15 miles on the stage.

The chimney of the new Presbyterian church, an impressive affair, is about completed. If the people that attend meetings at that house ever get snaked it will not be the fault of the chimney.

Forty Years Ago
Mrs. Joseph Mason of Ford River, has been in the city the past week visiting friends and relatives.

Mr. Waters, of Norway, Mich., has accepted a position in the clothing and goods' furnishing department of the Weston Lumber company's store.

Thirty Years Ago
Charles Cowman discovered a tarantula on a bunch of bananas this week and has it on exhibition at his Oak street stall.

Twenty Years Ago

Throughout the country holiday preparations are keeping Girl Scouts and their leaders busy with hammer and nails, paint brush and varnish, needle and thread, and "sugar and spice, and all things nice."

Throughout the country holiday preparations are keeping Girl Scouts and their leaders busy with hammer and nails, paint brush and varnish, needle and thread, and "sugar and spice, and all things nice."

Miss Evelyn Kerns, who has been in Virginia, Minn., for the past few months, returned to the city Thursday and has accepted a position as cashier for M. Winfield.

Word has been received by friends of Archie Darno that he and George Bruchmeyer and Charles Nagel, members of the 123rd U. S. Infantry at Camp Cody, Denning, N. M., have been made corporals.

Miss Margaret Johnson spent the Thanksgiving week end at the home of her parents in Marquette.

guest of his mother, Mrs. J. B. Gonyea, of Lake street.
After being expected for some weeks, the chimney sweepers arrived in the city this week.

TIMBER WORKERS HOLD CONVENTION

Eighty Delegates Attend Organization Meeting At Escanaba

Eighty enthusiastic delegates of Local 15 of the International Woodworkers of America, C. I. O., completed a two day convention November 20-21 held in the North Star Hall at Escanaba.

A trade union boycott of Japanese silk was the reason for the delegates wearing linen jackets rather than the silk jackets of their order.

The constitution went strong for democracy or rank and file control in the union. Membership in union was made obligatory on all workers regardless of color, religion or political affiliation.

Various speakers welcomed the delegates, the most prominent of whom were Raymond E. Garvey, City Commissioner of Ironwood, Michigan, and C. B. Johnson, mayor of Escanaba.

Min Margaret Johnson spent the Thanksgiving week end at the home of her parents in Marquette.

Ask Support for 1937-Christmas Seal Sale

MAKING HIS initial public appearance under the auspices of two attractive young ladies appeared before a great deal of attention to the town center, whose heavy figure appears on the 1937 Christmas Seal.

Rev. Patrick J. Boyd, returning to Quebec, Canada, after a tour of the United States, spent three days in Manistique this week as a guest of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Holland and Peter Wilson.

Dayl Crookery spent the holiday week end at his home in Elwin.

OFFICIAL PROCEEDINGS OF THE MANISTIQUE CITY COUNCIL

Manistique, Michigan, November 22nd, 1937. The regular meeting of the City Council was held on the above date...

Minutes of the previous meeting were read and approved as the same.

Mr. Hulse submitted an application for operating his "Trolley" on 113 River street for not to exceed six months.

Mr. Hulse was granted permission to operate his "Trolley" on 113 River street for not to exceed six months.

Mr. Secors appeared before the council in regard to a disapproval of the length of block B, Village of Hawatha, which appears to be a lot which he had sold to Mr. Clinton Wick, six feet in width and depth called for. He requested that the council take action to remedy this condition.

Mr. Secors was informed that the council could not take any action on this matter until the following resolution was offered by Councilman Abramson, supported by Councilman Sellman:

FAK out in the Pacific Ocean there is a sprawling chain of saltwater lakes in a tropical island. A winding lagoon leads past a coral reef to the open sea. Purple mountain ranges form a background, and the whole is as peaceful a bit of South Sea landscape as one would care to see.

To be more exact—it used to be peaceful. Go there now and you will see oil tanks, airplane hangars, barracks, dry docks, warehouses, machine shops and all the other shore-going implements of a great fleet. You will see great warships at anchor in the harbor. You won't see the gun emplacements around the entrance but they are there all right.

This peaceful bit of island water goes under the name of Pearl Harbor. Situated in the island of Oahu, Hawaii eight or ten miles from Honolulu, it is one of America's greatest naval bases, the center of one of the two or three mightiest military and naval strongholds on earth.

You can get an idea of the extreme importance America's army and navy men attach to this Hawaiian Gibraltar by reflecting that no less than $56,000,000 of the taxpayers' money has been spent on Pearl Harbor, with an added $18,000,000 going into nearby Hickam Field, the army's airport. In addition Maj. Gen. Hugh A. Drum, commander of the Hawaiian department of the army, urges a $49,000,000 five-year plan to strengthen the island's already formidable defenses.

How come? Is the rich territory of Hawaii worth that much to Uncle Sam? Undoubtedly; but the point is that these great sums are not being spent to protect the Hawaiian Islands but to protect the mainland of the United States.

For Hawaii is not simply an outpost of the American defense system; it is the key point of the whole Pacific Coast defense. It protects Washington, Oregon, California and the Panama Canal. Army and navy men say confidently that as long as it is maintained as a great army and navy base, no invading foe will ever strike American shores from the Pacific.

A glance at the map shows why that is so. America's line of defense in the Pacific forms a great triangle. At the top there is Alaska, with its chain of islands stretching off to the southwest. At the bottom there is the highly-fortified Panama Canal zone. At the center, forming the apex of the triangle, is Hawaii.

ANYONE coming to America from the Arctic or the South Seas has to pass within effective range of the Hawaiian base. Instead of spending untold millions to make the harbors on the mainland impregnable, it is far simpler and cheaper to make Hawaii itself impregnable. No hostile fleet would dare steam for the mainland, because in so doing it would have to expose its flanks and communications to direct attack. Hawaii would have to be taken care of before anything could be done to the mainland.

Now it happens that military men say that the island of Oahu, locale of Pearl Harbor, is capable of defense against a entire division—20,000 men—is housed. Inland, also, is Wheeler Field, an air corps stronghold. Military reservations dot the landscape. There are military roads winding up into the mountains. There is an immense munitions depot at Luahulu, near the western shore.

The defensive system is constantly widening out, with Oahu as a center larger force than the Allied military and naval expedition that tried to storm Gallipoli during the World War. Two hundred warships, transports and tenders, it is said, would be required to carry and support a force capable of attacking Oahu at all.

Hickam Field, for example, when completed, will be the largest U. S. army airport. Each of its 12 big hangars, 600 by 125 feet, will accommodate an entire squadron of land planes. Two big double hangars will house seaplanes which will alight in the waters by Fort Kamehameha, commanding the entrance to Pearl Harbor. A landing apron, on the side toward the fort, will measure 5400 by 800 feet.

And Hickam Field is only one of Hawaii's defenses. There are five coast defense forts. Inland, there is the military city of Schofield Barracks, where the navy has taken over Kure or Ocean Island, beyond the new commercial air station at Midway and more than 1300 miles northwest of Honolulu. It also holds the French Frigates Shoal, potential seaplane base, halfway to Kure, and Johnson Island, which is 8000 miles to the southwest.

And while the army is co-operating in the development of flying fields on the other islands in the Hawaiian group, the tiny islets near the equator, which Hawaiian schoolboys recently colonized to establish American sovereignty, also fit into the picture. At present, these islands are observation and radio stations for a commercial air route; in case of war they would serve admirably as advance military posts for observation work.

Of all of this elaborate network of defense, Pearl Harbor is the center. It is the snug and secure anchorage where the whole fighting fleet of the nation can lie at anchor, invisible from the sea. On its shores are a navy yard, a submarine base, a powerful radio station, fuel storage plants, barracks, dry-docks and so on.

ABOUT to be built is an enormous $10,000,000 floating drydock which will be moored in Pearl Harbor. This huge contrivance will be 1018 feet in length, 175 feet wide and 70 feet high. It will be able to berth the largest naval craft afloat.

When the navy decided to build it, it discovered that the building would probably have to be done on the west coast—for the drydock will be too big to go through the Panama Canal. It is reported that the dock will be self-propelling, so that if necessary it could steam out into the open sea and pick up a disabled warship. However, it is believed that when completed it will be towed to Pearl Harbor.

It seems almost as if nature had laid out Pearl Harbor with an eye to its naval uses. Its haven is completely hidden from view from the sea. A landing force coming ashore on the opposite side of the island could not get at it because of the towering mountains of the Koolau range. On the western coast of the island the Waianae mountains form a similar natural barrier. Only a short stretch of coast needs to be protected.

The producers who originally turned down Gable, Shearer, Taylor and Astaire get the jitters thinking of those lost millions.

MILLION DOLLAR Headaches

★ By Frances Morrin

HOLLYWOOD'S worst headaches can't be cured by a mere box of aspirin. Bromos may relieve morning-after effects, but when it comes to the super-colossal, million-dollar type of headache suffered by all of Hollywood's producers, they are of no avail.

The headaches I mean are brought on by costly errors in judgment. Look at the producers who passed Clark Gable up before M-G-M nabbed him. Look at the fortune they lost thereby. Those are the million dollar headaches. And it is amazing, considering the number of astute producers in the film city and the neat fortunes they have piled up, how many of these costly pains they have brought upon themselves. Even Sam Goldwyn, considered by some the shrewdest of them all, has made a couple of expensive mistakes that must have sent him to bed groaning more than one night.

PROBABLY Sam's worst headache was brought about by his oversight of that now No. 1 box-office attraction, Robert Taylor. When he was just plain Arlington Brugh back in 1933, he was taken to the Goldwyn studios for a test for the Eddie Cantor picture, "Roman Scandale." Cantor himself made the test with Taylor and says it is the only time in his life he had his back to the camera. When Goldwyn saw the test with Arlington doing his stuff in a Roman toga, he shook his head and told the boy, "Go home and put some fat on your legs and then come back."

But Brugh didn't have to worry about his calves because Louis B. Mayer and the late Irving Thalberg saw possibilities in the boy, and signed him to a $35-a-week contract. Within three years that $35 was run up to $3,500, and Goldwyn can figure that he is out a million anyway.

The Warner brothers and Carl Laemmle have had some choice headaches over Clark Gable. Gable was playing in "The Last Mile" on the stage in Los Angeles when a scout from Universal saw him and offered him a test. Laemmle couldn't see him as a screen actor. Later Warner Bros. gave him a test and it is said that when Jack Warner saw it he said, "I'm hiring actors, not ears." However, Gable did appear in one Warner Bros. picture, "Night Nurse" with Barbara Stanwyck.

If he didn't register with Warners he apparently did with Mayer, because M-G-M grabbed him the minute he was through at Warners. As soon as he had punched Norma Shearer on the chin in "A Free Soul," millions of fans were signing over him.

The M-G-M boys, however, will have to go to the bottom of the class when you consider the case of Fred Astaire. Likewise Paramount. Fred, with Ginger Rogers, rated third in the list of the 10 leading boxoffice stars last year.

Paramount made a test of Fred

Astaire several years ago. Written on his card in the Paramount files of actors' names is the following: "Fair screen personality—hair thinning—he also dances." M-G-M used him in one scene in "Dancing Lady" and then let him go. Some time later RKO got his contract. As for his red-haired dancing partner, Ginger, she is another million-dollar headache shared by the Messrs. Warner. For they had Ginger under contract and didn't renew it. Now Ginger is the fair-haired girl at RKO and is showing her heels to most of the beauties on celluloid as a money maker.

THIS and Gable were not the only expensive blunders made by those clever fellows at Burbank. They once had under the roof of their screen menage that million-dollar boxoffice team, Bill Powell and Myrna Loy. Myrna had played Orientals so long she said she began to feel like one. She was dissatisfied. Warners felt that her screen career was washed up and didn't renew her option. Powell, too, had made a number of mediocre pictures at Warners and was fast losing his ability to pull the nickels and dimes into the boxoffice.

But Louis B. Mayer and the late Irving Thalberg took Powell and Loy under their wings, teamed them in "The Thin Man" and now they are two of the biggest money makers in this celluloid era.

Mayer, though, must have developed a splitting headache when he looked at the boxoffice returns on "Three Smart Girls." M-G-M had Deanna Durbin under contract for six months and all she did there was to make a short. When M-G-M didn't take up her option, Charles R. Rogers, executive vice president in charge of production at Universal, was waiting right around the corner. And if she isn't a gold mine, I never saw one.

Even more interesting is the story of Charles Boyer, now sought after as a leading man by some of the biggest stars on the screen. He was a big star in Europe and was brought to Hollywood by M-G-M to play in the French version of "The Big House." Then some one did a very stupid piece of casting. Boyer played a bit, the part of Jean Harlow's chauffeur in "Red Headed Woman." He was so humiliated by this comedown that he left Hollywood and said he never wanted to see it again.

But time and Hollywood money eventually lured him back. Now Boyer is under contract to Walter Wanger and is making big money for himself and his producer.

PARAMOUNT executives believed that Wallace Beery was through a few years ago. M-G-M signed him and it took "Min and Bill" and "The Champ" to make those Paramount big-wigs realize that they had made a pretty expensive blunder. They, too, turned Margaret Sullivan down.

The story is that it was the late Irving Thalberg who let Norm Shearer later to become his wife, out of Universal. He offered her a small salary to do a picture there with Reginald Denny and she asked for more money. He fired her. Later when he had moved to M-G-M and she was there playing bits, he was responsible for elevating her to stardom. She eventually came one of M-G-M's biggest money-makers.

Bette Davis, the No. 1 bad girl of the screen, was playing sugary ingenues at Universal a few years ago. She was dismissed. Broken-hearted and feeling that Hollywood held no future for her, she packed her trunks and was ready to go back to New York. Then Warner Bros. called her to make a test for "The Man Who Played God," in which George Arliss was to play the lead. Arliss liked Bette's test and was responsible for her being cast for the picture.

Even then Bette had to be loaned out to RKO to make "Of Human Bondage" before Warner Bros. realized her full possibilities as a dramatic actress. And if you think Warner Bros. don't realize what a juicy boxoffice plum they have in Bette, remember how bitterly they fought to keep her from breaking her contract with them last year. This did Universal make a blunder which has lost them shekels galore.

These are some of the most extravagant of the financial headaches suffered by major producers. There are numerous others, not in the million-dollar class but severe enough to cos. the men in question more than a few wakeful hours.

TAKE the case of Adolph Zukor's minor brainstorm, for instance. He brought out to Paramount from the East a seventeen-year-old socialite by the name of Carmen Barnes who had written two sizzling novels on boarding school life. Zukor, so they say, planned to star the cunny lady in a screen play of her own authorship. He launched a huge publicity campaign. Carmen's pictures and stories of her life were plastered over the newspapers of the country. This cost Paramount studios thousands of dollars. But nothing was ever done with the fair Carmen. She never appeared on the screen.

Carl Laemmle footed the bills on several of these minor financial catastrophes at the old Universal. He hired John Murray Anderson, famous scenic designer, to do the sets for "King of Jazz." Then, expecting to do another big musical, he signed Anderson to a year's contract. He stayed at Universal for a year drawing a salary of $1,500 a week and never made another picture.

Another high priced publicity campaign was launched by Warners a few years ago on a foreign importation, Lili Dagover. She was brought to Hollywood with a great blare of trumpets and columns of hussas. She made one picture, "The Woman from Monte Carlo," with Walter Huston, and that was the last of Lili.

Costly experiments all these. And what conclusions are to be drawn from these super-colossal headaches? Do they prove that the big-wigs of the industry are nitwits? Not at all. But it does prove that making motion pictures is the greatest trial-and-error business in the world; but that, even with mistakes it's nice work if you can get it.

A Master Detective whose Evidence is --- Wood

Koehler's investigation afforded absolute proof that shavings used in the bomb came from the same suspect's workshop, where more of the shavings were found.

Though time's treating obliterates outward evidence of a tree's having been marked as a "witness" to a boundary line, it never destroys internal traces so completely that Mr. Koehler's eye cannot detect them. "Witness" trees are customarily blazed with an ax and described in survey notes as being so many feet in a certain direction from the corner stake. If they still stand many years later, alive or dead or badly decayed, Mr. Koehler can cut into

By Mary Brandel Hopkins

IT is as questioning the oracle at Delphi to ask Arthur Koehler, to identify a sample of wood. The authoritativeness of the answer is taken for granted.

Although separated in time by many centuries, the famed oracle of Greek mythology and the present master mind of Uncle Sam's wood identification service have in common the singular faculty of revealing certain information hidden from the world at large.

In nearly a quarter-century of service in the United States government's war on criminals and unfair trade practices, a keen nose and the microscope have been Mr. Koehler's chief weapons. In that period, from his office in the United States Forest Products Laboratory at Madison, Wis., Mr. Koehler has solved more than 50,000 puzzling problems for the government by positively identifying samples of wood. Last year alone, he made 1988 identifications.

So widely varied have been the demands on him and so accurate is his judgment of woods that today he is acknowledged as the man who knows more about the identity of the approximately 800 American species than anyone else. Moreover, he can differentiate between several hundred foreign species which are imported into the United States. So sensitive has his sense of smell become that he is able to name many species simply by their odor.

Yet it took the Lindbergh kidnaping case to bring him fame. Instrumental in sending Bruno Richard Hauptmann to the electric chair, his well-remembered kidnap ladder testimony made his name a household word the country over. But of the man and mind behind the name of Arthur Koehler comparatively little else ever has been told.

It is unlikely that 1 in 10 who hungrily read of his spectacular courtroom revelations in New Jersey courts that it is he who safeguards the public against unscrupulous manufacturers by settling for the Federal Trade Commission all questions of furniture woods being as represented.

By his ability to search out blazed "witness trees" and to determine when

The wife of a Wisconsin highway commissioner was killed by an explosion as she opened a Christmas package. Metal contained in the home-made bomb which the box concealed was traced to the workshop of a suspect. But further evidence was needed and Mr. Koehler was called in.

the ax marks were made long after they have been completely overgrown by new wood formation, he ends many a boundary dispute between belligerent landowners.

He can locate and date fields of battle by determining how long ago a bullet that now is lodged deep in a tree trunk was fired.

He can tell in what season of what past year a tree bowed to a hurricane, storm, or cave-in.

It is possible for him to date prehistoric ruins from trees which still live or grew into the ruins.

CASES involving thousands of dollars and sometimes life itself, may hinge upon Mr. Koehler's reports. But he is blessed with the faculty of translating his opinions from the scientific means by which he arrives at them into terms which laymen, jurors, and manufacturers understand and accept. To shadowers understand and accept. To shadowers understand and accept. To shadowers understand and accept.

Let him study under a microscope a little of the wood flour used in linoleum, dynamite or as filler in phonograph records and telephone parts, and he will name the tree from which it came.

With so capable a man on the side of justice, makers of home-made bombs in several criminal cases have been made to pay for their crimes.

Koehler's nose knows wood. Here he is identifying a piece of ship decking by its odor, as white pine.

Not many years ago the wife of a Wisconsin highway commissioner was killed by an explosion as she cut the twine which bound a parcel dressed up as a Christmas box and addressed to her husband. Metal contained in the home-made bomb which the package had concealed was traced by ballistics experts to the workshop of a suspect. But further evidence was necessary for conviction. Mr. Koehler was called in, and his investigation afforded absolute proof that shavings used in the bomb's construction came from the same man's workshop, where more of the shavings were found. The additional evidence was substantial enough proof of guilt to clear up a murder which might otherwise have gone down as another unsolved crime.

Just recently a police chief in a neighboring state sent to Mr. Koehler a pocket-knife and a section of an electric wire conduit from the burglar alarm of a department store. The conduit itself was of wood, painted green with a copper wire run through it.

"Was this wood cut with this knife?" the chief asked. "Telltale marks, which might have indicated that it was, were missing. But the microscope revealed that the knife edge was tinged with copper color, and small green particles of the paint adhered to the blade. Here was proof beyond doubt.

them, find the ax marks and definitely prove the trees the "witnesses."

RECENTLY rightful title to 30 acres of improved land claimed by two parties was established by his proof of a "witness tree" as hickory and not oak. In submitting another dispute to him for settlement, one claimant made a point of the fact that a line of trees blazed in 1921 formed the boundary. By counting the number of annual growth rings subsequently formed by the wood which gradually enclosed the scar from either side, he proved conclusively that the blazing of the trees claimed by one party as the line had been done in 1928 and not in 1921, and that the trees, therefore, were not the original boundary.

Since repeal of prohibition, enough oak staves to make many barrels have been sent to him by manufacturers who want to know if the staves are white oak or the inferior, more porous, red oak.

The accuracy of the Koehler nose in wood identification is remarkable. In general, the microscope is his most trusted instrument of identification, revealing as it does certain, though minute, differences in structure. But in northern white cedar and western red cedar there are no visible distinguishing traits. But Mr. Koehler's nose knows.

RODEO ROD

Illustrated by
Henrietta McCaig Starrett

By PHYLLIS MOORE
GALLAGHER

He Might Tame Bucking Mustangs With Ease, but He Had a Lot to Learn About Women

ROD BRAXTON tied an orange bandage round his sunburned neck, snatched his spurred boot heels a jubilant click. There was nothing, he told himself gayly as he slouched his ten-gallon hat over his young blue eyes, that he had better than a rodeo. That was easy, too. You'd think he'd got enough of bronc busting, calf tying, steer riding and all the other range-dust stuff on the B-Q Ranch, where he was a cowhand.

"Maybe it ain't just the rodeo," he thought, studying his lean dark face in the warped mirror of his slouch. "Maybe it's what a rodeo does to the town. The crowd! The excitement!"

Rod cast an appreciative eye at his reflection. He was 23, gritty, hard-packed, stocky-strong and tall. Girls liked him. That is, practically every girl he had ever known outside of that school teacher up to Cowtown.

When he had first seen Lois Walters he had wanted to herd her right into marriage. Her eyes were so beautiful and dark, her bobbed hair had such a fine sorrel glint. But after these first few dates, when Lois had talked horses in a man's lingo, when she had done trick riding that was champion stuff—bronc busting and flash twisting—he had begun to think she was hardly a girl at all and certainly not one to be rushed into double harness with him. A man wants a feminine dame for a wife, and Lois Walters was no clinging vine nor spurter of lady-like tears for all her beautiful eyes and her silky curls.

ROD'S dark eyes began to gleam. Maybe at this year's rodeo there'd be a girl, a soft and gentle one.

He began to dream. He saw himself ranching on his own; gray-blue smoke curling in lazy tendrils up to the sky from his chimney; a lovely girl waiting for an evening; soft red lips raised for his greeting kiss and young tender arms curled shyly around his broad shoulders.

And behind all this beautiful picture was security. He still had the money that his father, the best cowhand in Wyoming, had left him. He had some money he had managed to save on the infinitesimal wages he earned at the B-Q.

"Gosh," mumbled Rod, and still in a daze he turned out of the cabin, sprang limply onto the saddled pinto grazing by the fence and started on his way.

In town, Rod hitched his pinto to the pine rail before Kimbrough's Dancing and Eating joint and kicked the loose range-dust from his heels. He stood a moment in the dark outside the door, studying the few figures in the long, brilliantly lit room. A crowd of punchers, whisky-mean and looking for trouble. Only you gotta promise you won't laugh at me."

Lois promised, and he told her all about Lolita.

"Some one," said Lois, "ought to organize an expedition to take you away from that menace before it's too late."

At 1 o'clock in the afternoon the show was on. Horses' hoofs thundered, steers bellowed, pistol shots cracked out and drowned some of the boys. Half professional, half amateur, it was a thrilling institution of the dramatic past revived in the vital present. The first day of the rodeo had begun in full blast.

ROD won himself the name of "ace contestant" that first day. The next, he did even better. He rode Phoebe, the maverick of many ranges, and was still on him when the whistle blew.

He tried his hand at cow tying and roping and steer riding. He became a celebrity. Wranglers hauled him with deference as he walked the streets. Punchers crowded around him and clapped him on the back with, "Fine work, kid. That was some ride. You're going to be the champ of this show, all right. Hoot had better watch out for his Hollywood contracts!"

On the third and last day of the rodeo Rod was out of bed at 7 A. M. He hurried down to the final drawing at the top-horse tent and found that the miracle had happened. "You're the guy," said the clerk, proffering the hat. "Everbody's drawn, 'cept you. This is the last slip. It's Dynamite you're drawing!"

"Whoopee-e-e-e," screeched Rod. "Boy, I'm gonna ride Dynamite!"

"You only think you are," said the clerk, glumly. "That's a plumb nutty boss-feller. He's killed and hurt more guys than the World War!"

Three o'clock finally came. The announcer was finally gone. "Get ready, ladies and gents! Out o' Chute Ten in just one minute comes Dynamite, the famous killer, the worst horse rodeo ever knowned. An' Rodeo Rod—Rod Braxton, folks—is gonna try an' ride him!"

Dynamite was everything his name implied and then some. From the moment the doors swung open Dynamite cut loose. His back arched to the stiffness of whalebone, with a whiplash convulsion at the end of each bound that jarred Rod's insides. Dynamite wasn't any ordinary buckler; he landed at all angles; he pawed the air; he reared skyward, then toppled straight back and in an attempt to crush Rod and his horse. Over and over Rod came that plunging from the saddle, over and over broad spans of daylight, over

WHO PAYS

The BILLION DOLLARS ?

$1,000,000,000 is a lot of money. In motorists of this country will pay next that amount this year in gasoline tax. Chart shows the sky-rocketing year by year.

AN old fable tells the story of a man who invented a perpetual-motion salt-making machine. In universal use, salt until recently was a relatively precious article of commerce, and many fortunes were made in it by traders the world over. The inventor of the salt machine put it in a ship and started it working. Unfortunately, once started the device could not be stopped. It kept turning out salt until the ship was filled. Under the heavy weight of the salt, the vessel sank, carrying down with it the salt machine, which still keeps working and, according to the legend, that is the reason why the sea is salty.

In the United States a modern version of this old fable now is being re-enacted. A tax machine was set in motion in 1919 that now is far out of control and is running wildly, like an engine without a governor. That machine is the gasoline tax. This year it will pile a billion-dollar burden on the users of automobiles - an amount equivalent to seven per cent of the total wages received by all industrial workers in manufacturing pursuits in the entire country, an amount of money equal to what will be collected annually in social security taxes on industrial payrolls. That billion dollars is greater than the amount of individual income taxes currently being received by the federal government. Yet most of the 20,000,000 car-owning families in the United States who pay gasoline taxes have incomes of only $20 to $30 a week. They possess no such financial ability to pay taxes as do those who pay income taxes. Contrary to popular thought, most motorists in the United States are persons with modest means.

When the gasoline tax machine first started grinding in Oregon in 1919 the rate of the tax was 1c per gallon and the yield was approximately $1,000,000. The principle of that tax was that motor vehicles need better roads and that real estate, which previously had borne virtually all taxes for roads on the theory that they are needed for access to and from homes, farms and factories, should not be required to pay the entire costs of roads as in the past. Other states adopted the gasoline tax and by 1929 all the states were taxing gasoline. In that year, the pre-depression peak year, the states collected $431,000,000 in gasoline taxes.

In 1932 the federal government, despite the fact that all the states were taxing gasoline heavily, imposed a duplicating tax on motor fuel. The states generally increased their rates and the average state tax the country over today is about 4c per gallon. The duplicating federal tax, currently at 1c per gallon, brings the tax burden on gasoline to an average of about 5c per gallon. This is more than one-third of its average retail price. The gasoline tax has become the highest sales tax imposed upon any generally-used essential commodity.

While the tax rates on gasoline were being increased, the automobile was becoming more and more an integral part of American life. When the states first imposed their 1c per gallon gasoline levies, the automobile was still largely a luxury. Only one out of every six families owned a car. But all that has changed. Two out of every three families in this country now own automobiles. Not only do more families own automobiles, but they depend upon them more to get about. Fifteen years ago the average annual consumption of gasoline per motor vehicle was about 400 gallons. Now it is about 650 gallons. And increased use of motor vehicles, plus a five-fold increase in gasoline tax rates, have pushed the annual gasoline tax burden on automobiles from $5 to more than $30.

Motorists of the United States will pay in 1937 nearly $1,000,000,000 in gasoline taxes to the state and federal governments. That is four times what they paid 10 years ago and approximately $100,000,000 more than was paid in 1936. Automobile ownership is increasing by 2,000,000 cars a year and now there are about 30,000,000 automobiles on the highways, of which about 25,000,000 are passenger cars and 5,000,000 trucks. Besides paying $1,000,000,000 in gasoline taxes, owners of these motor vehicles will pay an additional $500,000,000 in registration fees and other levies.

Who will pay these taxes? The rich? Far from it. The little fellow carries this tax burden. Surveys have indicated that more than half the motorists in the United States earn less than $30 a week. Less than half of the motorists have ever owned a new car. There are millions more "used-car motorists" than there are new-car motorists. The value of the cars operated by these "typical" motorists with medium incomes is less than $200 and the average annual tax burden is more than $50, or 25 per cent of the value of the vehicle. The "typical" motorist, earning as a class less than $30 a week, must work nearly two weeks to pay his share additional motor taxes.

GET A HORSE. That's exactly what some motorists are doing in states with excessive gasoline tax rates. Photo shows an ex-motorist with the car's rubber-tired wheels on the buggy. That's one way to beat the tax collector.

RICH MEN? NO! Chart shows that most motorists earn less than $30 a week. Yet they pay the bulk of the $1,000,000,000 gasoline tax bill. Studies also show that most motorists in the United States have never owned a new car.

But you say, despite the high tax burden, some must pay for the roads. True enough. But the motorists of this country are paying about $2 for every $1 of road they get. Misuse of highway funds divert non-highway purposes, burdensome highway debt wisely incurred, unsound division of funds with pol sub-divisions of the states, competition of the state federal governments for the motorist's tax dollar, other tax-wasting policies depreciate automotive dollars and give less roads. If tax-squandering eliminated in some states, the gasoline tax could be sufficient to carry out the state's highway program. In other states the gasoline tax rates could be cut half—if wise financing methods were introduced misuse of funds stopped.

Expansion of automobile ownership and use pushed up state gasoline tax receipts by 25 per cent during the last three years. That in itself should encourage most of the states to lower their gasoline tax rate 1c, or one-quarter of the average state tax rate per gallon.

How long will the gasoline tax machine keep grinding out a heavier and heavier burden on the nation's motorists? This year it is one billion dollars, or more than twice that of the pre-depression peak year of 1929. The average gasoline tax bill per vehicle has increased in the past 15 years from $5 to $50. THE 'TYPICAL' U.S. MOTORIST

"Divorce Insurance"

recommended by MME. KAREN MICHAELIS

Mme. Karen Michaelis of Denmark, author of "The Dangerous Age," is now in this country giving a course of lectures in which she presents her plan for "divorce insurance."

"I am working for the woman who finds herself involved in an unhappy marriage with no hope of ending it because of the economic side," said Mme. Michaelis when seen in the apartment of her sister, the Baroness Dahlerup.

"There are many such marriages which both husband and wife are desirous of ending, but as the husband's money is limited it is impossible. Sometimes it can be solved for the woman who can obtain alimony, but this ties to the man an unbearable burden. In many cases the amount of alimony which the court orders him to pay prevents the man from building a new life for himself by making it impossible for him to set up a new establishment.

Onerous to Women
"This situation is also onerous for the woman. Very few women feel that it is possible to demand subsistence from a man whom they no longer love. Women should not be put in the position of having to demand this.

"How are we to solve this question? I have talked to many of the best statisticians in Europe—and the only thing that is feasible is divorce insurance. When a baby girl is born, it should be compulsory for the father to take out insurance to meet this situation. When the girl marries, it should be compulsory for her husband to continue paying for this policy. The rate should be low, but the whole problem could be solved without difficulty.

She Married

"The woman has her side—luck of training and inability to earn her own living, but the man is also to be pitied. I know of one case where a divorced man had to pay his former wife a very high alimony, and although he was in love with another woman could not afford to marry her.

"There came to him one day the announcement of his former wife's marriage. He was free at last. He invited all of his friends to a great fete, celebrating her marriage and later made over his own life. But if she had not married he would have faced an unsurmountable barrier for the remainder of his life. If there had been in existence a form of insurance such as I am advocating, this situation would become impossible."

Mme. Michaelis is not only interested in love, marriage and divorce, but in all of the problems that involve the happiness of the human race. One of her most interesting projects was to succor the unwanted remnants of the Austrian aristocracy, some of whose members she found to be starving. With the aid of Austrian friends, she took over the care of several half-ruined castles and opened them as co-operative homes for these people, many of them formerly in the Austrian high command.

Aristocrats Did the Work

These co-operative castles were run on a very simple scale, with the starving recruits acting as gardeners, cooks and housemaids. In recognition of this work by Mme. Michaelis, they called themselves "Nielsenin," based on her mother's name of Nielsen.

Mme. Michaelis has herself been married and divorced twice. Her book, "The Dangerous Age," sold over one million copies and was translated into twenty languages and is still being translated into others.

She has lectured in many countries. She now lives on a little Danish island, where she is visited by people of all nations.

"Although I am 67 years old," she says, "I feel that the opportunity to live has just begun."

Tomato Juice Ring

TOMATO JUICE RING

- 1 bottle tomato juice (4 cups)
- 1/2 cup chopped sweet pickles
- 2 tablespoons onion (chopped)
- 2 pigs. gelatin (4 tablets)
- 1 cup cold water

Soak gelatin in the cup of cold water until thick and smooth, place mixture in top of double boiler and heat until dissolved. Add the gelatin mixture to the tomato juice, to which has been added the chopped pickles and onion. Pour into a rinsed ring mold and chill until firm. Unmold and serve with center filled with potato or any other type of vegetable salad.

WILD DUCK FOR DINNER

One can take gun in hand, fare forth into the country, and perhaps come home with a box of wild ducks around his neck. You can continue to enjoy them, if you or some of your friends are good marksmen, until the season closes.

Roast Wild Duck

Wipe the duck after cleaning with damp towel and rub inside and out with salt and pepper. Fill with a stuffing of equal parts of chopped apple, crumbs and partly cooked onion, highly seasoned with salt, pepper and minced pork (salt pork). Some authorities add a little chopped celery or put a generous cube of butter, rolled in seasonings, inside.

Brush outside with melted butter, set in a hot oven (450 deg. F.), add a bit of boiling water and roast until rare, not, however, so rare that the blood follows the fork.

Garnish with cooked turnips cut in shape of olives and rolled in melted butter with sprigs of cress or with overlapping thin slices of small oranges, each topped with a bit of red jelly.

Blend in Flour

Pour off most of the fat in the pan, shake browned flour over the remainder, stirring, until well blended. Add a cup or two of boiling water and boil down until smooth and thickened; then add a half-cup of coarsely chopped olives, a teaspoon of lemon juice and salt to taste.

To roast small birds, rub well with salt and add dressing. Lay strips of bacon across the breast of each duck and set in pan containing a little water and roast. The time for roasting depends on the size of the bird (about 30 to 45 minutes).

JUNE LANG'S BEAUTY DIET

The diet we give you is that of June Lang, one of the most beautiful of all Hollywood stars.

She has been called the modern Venus by a number of artists who are always eager to portray her lovely face and figure in their work.

Miss Lang is one of the younger stars and started out with the intention of becoming a professional dancer but, after the producers saw her on the stage, they lost no time in securing her for the screen, and as her pictures show, they made a good selection.

The graceful little June is one of the fortunate ones who does not have any extra poundage to take off, but she is careful of her diet, nevertheless, as she feels it is far better to avoid overweight than to be obliged to reduce, so her method is to follow a diet low in calories.

Her breakfasts vary slightly, such as:

- 1 soft boiled egg with a slice of bacon, or milk toast, but she always has a glass of orange juice and a small cup of coffee every morning.

Luncheon: A generous helping of tomato and asparagus tips salad, with lemon instead of vinegar for the French Dressing.

- A glass of milk.
- A baked apple.
- 2 crackers.

Another Luncheon: 1 cup of cream of tomato soup.

- 4 thin wafers.
- A large vegetable salad.

Dinner: 1/2 small broiled chicken.

- A large helping of string beans.
- 1 baked potato.
- Cole slaw.
- A small portion of rice pudding.
- Tea with lemon.

Other dinners are similar, but fish or another meat may be substituted for the chicken.

We believe, however, Miss June will always be too active to put on more than her normal weight as she loves to dance and is one of the good swimmers.

As a matter of fact, she likes all the sports such as tennis, riding and beach games.

Barbaric glitter marks this gown worn by Miss Young. The effect is gained by use of gold cloth and multicolored stones over black velvet.

HAVE RIGHT-SIZED RUG

A rug that is too small lessens the spaciousness of your room and throws your entire decorating scheme off balance. Generally speaking, the margin of polished floor about the edges of the rug should be about twelve inches or a little less. The margin need not be exactly the same all around the rug, but the distances at each end should be the same and the margins at the sides should lengthen the life of your rug, as well as give it a more luxurious trend.

TO REFINISH FURNITURE

Remove all old varnish from furniture before trying to revarnish it. A cup of sal soda to two quarts of hot water will help. Scrub each piece with a stiff brush. Wear rubber gloves to protect your hands.

Go Ahead and Spoil Your Windows with Dingy Shades—if you want to!

By BETTINA J. VIGLEZE

Certainly the window shade doesn't give a hoot! We think possibly he has a lot of fun leering at the new curtains and winter draperies, for he is such a mean little fellow sometimes, he takes a delight in spilling a decorative setting, getting full of pin holes, and thumb tears, and crinkling up like fury when the least bit of rain touches him!

But not a good cloth window shade!

Do Your Window Shades Look Dingy Like This?

—or Are Your Shades Fresh and New Like This?

They tell us they're the safest investment in beautiful windows you can make. Certainly you know you can dress up your home for Christmas and New Year—those times when guests will be flowing all over the place—but the most important part of any home is the window space. Do you realize it takes up about one-fourth of the wall space?

It should then look a very decorative and charming one-fourth shouldn't it? Well here is a tip to you smart women. Select the new Sunroos window shades—that seem to bring the sunshine indoors on gray days! They are in the coral range—a rich rosy-golden tint that harmonizes so well with almost every color curtain and drapery you can think of. We know, we tried them at our windows and we were so enthused, we had Sunroos cloth shades put up at every window in the house!

Here's another well known fact. Cloth window shades are woven on a loom, then they are processed for long life. In fact for years of life, if you buy really excellent quality! Another saving in buying a really good cloth shade is that they can be cleaned with lukewarm water, a mild soap and a sponge.

Remember to dress-up your windows for the holidays and see if you aren't the recipient of a great many compliments!
