Company Begins Service Survey

Believing that the automobile driver is the best judge of what motoring aids should be offered the public by the gasoline dealer, the Standard Oil company of Indiana, has launched a campaign of inquiry, called a "Service Survey," among car operations in thirteen central western states. In a series of advertisements in some 1,500 daily and weekly newspapers, the company is asking the motorist's opinion of the numerous services now given by Standard Oil dealers for his safety, comfort and convenience, and for suggestions which may augment or improve these aids. To more than 120 motorists who in the opinion of three judges submit the most valuable suggestions before the close of the survey on June 15th, the company will pay a total of $5,000. Standard Oil dealers who assist the car drivers who receive each award will be paid a like sum, making a total of $10,000 to be distributed.

PROFESSOR BUILDS RAILROAD

PROFESSOR William Rowan, dean of the Department of Zoology, University of Alberta, is the designer and builder of one of the world's most unique railways. Complete in all respects with motive power, passenger and freight equipment and laid out as an exact model of the line of the Canadian National Railways through the foothills of the Rockies, the miniature railway occupies nearly all of the grounds around Prof. Rowan's summer home at Lake Edith, Jasper National Park, Alberta. The line is incorporated as The Lake Edith Railway Company and has a Board of Directors and a Management Committee of the Professor's children and their friends. It is an absorbing point of interest with visitors to Jasper Park Lodge. The layout shows: (top) a train crossing a viaduct near Lake Edith; (center) a freight train crossing a bridge which spans a tree trunk and (bottom) Professor Rowan, with an interested friend making some repairs to the right-of-way.

CLEAN—COOL—CAREFREE SAFE ELECTRIC RANGE

Clean in the sense that they do not smudge up your walls, your curtains and your drapes with a film. Your decorations last longer. Uncontrolled heat causes excess temperatures which to a great extent creates smut in the form of steam, smoke, etc. Electric ranges may be completely controlled as to temperature. Excess smokey steam is reduced to virtually nothing.

Cool in the sense that the heat is applied to the work at hand. If cooking on top, the heat is applied directly under and through the utensil; if in the oven the heat is retained in the oven in a definite controlled way. There is no dissipated heat going to waste in the kitchen.

Carefree in the sense that there is not the need for pot-watching and guess work. Electric ranges actually cook the food whether it is baking, roasting, frying, broiling, FOR YOU. It is not necessary for you to control the food for it.

Safe in the sense that there is no flame.

Consider replacing with a modern electric range. They are inexpensive and economical to use.

CONSIDER THE HOME TOWN

The doors of high schools and colleges will again pour out great numbers of graduates within a few weeks who will become job seekers.

Probably most of them will be anxious to find their first positions away from home. If they are able to obtain even temporary employment in another town or city this first experience on their own initiative will be valuable.

Such experience serves to develop adult attitudes sooner than the semi-dependence which living at home accomplishes.

But I believe that the older generation should more often encourage their sons and daughters, after the first experience elsewhere, to return and establish themselves in their home town.

There are many small towns and cities which a few years ago were enterprising and progressive. Many of the same towns today are down-at-the-heel, not because of the depression, but because their young sons and daughters were not encouraged to return to the home town and continue its development.

Of course pre-depression ideas of large salaries and extravagant tastes sent many a youth to the city where great wealth is to be stored for every new arrival. A different set of standards now and the low-salary expectation are aids to help the older generation to persuade the younger that opportunity abounds right at home for them. There they have far greater chances to obtain their goal of "work, marriage, security, world peace and personal leisure."

PROCRUSTINATION

Men may be roughly divided into two classes: Those who do their best work today and forget about it; and those who promise to do their best work tomorrow—and forget about it. The world richly rewards the one—and forgets about the other.—Grit.

THE COURTS

The success of democratic institutions lies in the success of the processes of reason as opposed to the tyranny of force. Between these society must choose. If society chooses the process of reason, it must maintain the institutions which embody those processes. Institutions for the exercise of the law-making power and for the execution of law must have their fitting complement in institutions for the interpretation and application of laws, for the safeguarding of individual rights, through a competent and independent judiciary.—Chief Justice Hughes.

WHAT IS A BOY?

He is a person who is going to carry on what you have started. He is to sit right where you are sitting and attend when you are gone to those things you think are so important. You may adopt all the policies you please, but how they will be carried out depends on him. Even if you make legacies and treaties, he will have to manage them. He is going to sit at your desk in the Senate, and occupy your place on the Supreme Bench. He will assume control of your cities, states and nations. Your reputation and your future are in his hands. All your work is for him, and the fate of the nation and of humanity is in his hands. So it might be well to pay him some attention.—Author Unknown.

SUMMER RECREATION

Regularly each summer many clubs, church organizations and school systems co-operate in promoting supervised playgrounds for children. Many children who have no facilities for outdoor play are thus given an opportunity to develop a sound child life, and they are relieved of a great anxiety with the knowledge that their children are playing under supervision. When leisure time is taken up in this way no city need fear that its young will learn the ways of crime. There is no finer civic movement for any town to sponsor than this.

SPEAK ENGLISH

Many of us were surprised when in recent months we listened to the voices of Edward, his successor George VI, and of the Bishop of Canterbury. We could scarcely help noting that these gentlemen spoke in a manner not at all unfamiliar to us. There was no slurring of 'r's or any affectations. Were we of the middle west to improve our voice quality and drop our slang and idioms, we would speak more like these Englishmen than would people from other sections of the country.

The Easterner frequently accuses us of our harsh manner of speech. But from now on we may pride ourselves on the fact that we come nearer to speaking the mother tongue as it should be spoken than do the folks afflicted with dialects. All we need is a little toning down.

Enjoy each day as it comes along. A man's most valuable asset is his reputation. Better spray! The moths are beginning their annual sit-down.

A mechanic away from home is one who can't fix the lawnmower at home. And now we wonder if the Coronation parade was properly stream-lined.

A monopoly of jobs in this country is just as bad as a monopoly of bread.—Ford. Now that the depression can no longer be blamed for ill-luck, a lot of folks are in a bad way.

Oh, for the good old days when a sit-down meant no time before the seventh inning stretch. A genius would be the man who could bring 1929 wages and 1932 prices together for a marriage in 1937.

The reason a lot of the socialistic minded folks are against competition is that they are too lazy to furnish any themselves. This newspaper is a safe guide to prudent buying. As the ads appeal to a sense of economy, and if faithfully followed leave a comfortable surplus, they should be read first.

Menominee Cops Golf Tournament

Menominee high school golfers won the Upper Peninsula title in a journey held at the Riverside club in Menominee Saturday. The Manistique team finished fourth, Escanaba was second, and Sault Ste. Marie, third.

Only two schools were represented in class C, with Newberry winning from Crystal Falls. Archie Snow, of Detroit, arrived Monday to attend funeral services for R. B. Attwood. Mr. Snow is a brother of Mrs. Attwood.

Reels Prepared by Michigan State Highway Department Seen At Auditorium

A large crowd attended the showing of three safety films presented by the state highway department at the high school auditorium Wednesday evening. The films were "Horse Power and Horse Sense," "Safe Roads," and "Highways Are Happy Ways."

"Horse Power and Horse Sense," a reel prepared by the National Safety Council while the other two were prepared by the Michigan State Highway Department.

The motion picture "Safe Roads," produced by the Michigan State Highway Department, depicts the three factors in the highway safety equation, the vehicle, the driver and the road.

After opening with a brief introduction of automotive road evolution, the film proceeds to evaluate the responsibility of each of the three factors. The lack of balance in the safety equation is delineated by an animated graph.

This graph pictures a ninety mile an hour automobile being driven by a fifty mile an hour driver, on a forty mile an hour road.

The automobile which is shown to be responsible for very few, if any, highway accidents. Faulty maintenance of the automobile such as under-inflated tires, bad steering, alignment, poor brake adjustment, accounts for too many highway accidents.

The sound film, "Highways Are Happy Ways" produced by the Michigan State Highway Department, presented an informative study of Michigan's road construction and the tax dollar during the past three years.

The film was introduced and concluded with a direct recording by State Highway Commissioner Murray D. Van Wageningen.

Opening back in the days of the depression when a road building holiday was in vogue, out of Michigan, the film revealed by means of the animated graphs just how sound business management and close cooperation with the federal government have made funds available for an extensive road construction and maintenance program.

Golden Jubilee Committee Reveals History of Gladstone

Gladstone, Mich., Fifty years ago the eyes of the nation were turned to Gladstone that thriving boom town in Delta county in the upper peninsula of Michigan, her normal life through the country as it unfolded.

Backed and promoted by such a Mid-West fame, the city grew with surprising rapidity, connected by water and ran the product of the north-west from those of the west. Within a year after the first lot was sold on Sunday's Point.

With 2000 people, the lot made their homes in Gladstone. Great houses, built early life was filled with such optimism and rapid growth.

When the traffic was diverted from its harbor on beautiful Little Bay at Soudan, it was one of the finest harbors on the Great Lakes. Gladstone still enjoys the lumbering industry played an important part.

With 50 years of a colorful past behind it, and a promising future before it, Gladstone prepares to observe its founding with the large, held conference.

Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Shofield and daughter, Helen, left this week on a motor trip Detroit and Cleveland. In the former city they will visit their son, Earl, and in Cleveland will attend the graduation exercises at Glenville hospital where their daughter, Grace, will graduate as a registered nurse.

The Manistique fire department was called out about 9 o'clock Sunday evening to extinguish a bludge charcoal stored at the plant of the Charcoal Iron company. Although the fire in the charcoal was a slow one it was also a stubborn one to fight and required considerable time to put out.

Except for the burning of the charcoal no other damage was done.

Firestone TIRES GIVE YOU GREATER PROTECTION AGAINST SKIDDING AND BLOWOUTS

YOU will know the minute you see this tire why car owners everywhere call it the greatest fire ever made to sell at these low prices. The deeper, wider, flatter non-skid tread made of tough, long wearing rubber will give you protection against dangerous skidding.

But tires cannot be judged on tread alone. Under the tread of Firestone Standard Tires are two extra layers of Gum-Dipped cords. This Firestone patented construction feature binds the tread and cord body into one inseparable unit. Every cotton fiber in every cord in every ply is saturated and coated with pure liquid rubber which counteracts the internal friction and heat that ordinarily destroy tire life. This Firestone patented process of Gum-Dipping gives you greater protection against blowouts and is used only in Firestone Tires.

Come in, join the Firestone Save A Life Campaign today by equipping your car with a set of new Firestone Gum-Dipped Tires.

DO YOU KNOW That last year highway accidents cost the lives of more than 28,000 men, women and children? THAT a million more were injured? THAT more than 40,000 of these deaths and injuries were caused directly by punctures, blowouts and skidding, due to unsafe tires?

STARRETT SEES TOURIST BOOM IN U. P. THIS YEAR

Many Will Visit Manistique And Scenes In Schoolcraft County

The upper peninsula's tourist industry will have a boom this year according to Mayor Howard Starrett, State Representative and Director.

Residents and business men of the upper peninsula, "The Land of Horrors," expect a boom to be left by tourists that has not been seen in past years.

Civic groups have disseminated information throughout the United States about the benefits of forest resorts.

The campaign carried with the aid of State funds will probably have a great effect here. Industrial civilization hasn't taken as great a toll of nature's beauties in this large area and there are enough modern conveniences to make ideal vacation locations, local people point out.

As a matter of fact, the tourist trade is now looked upon as the third industry along with mining and logging which have long been regarded as the basic industries.

Major State funds will be available for the development of the area. Many people will visit Manistique in Schoolcraft county.

Named for Henry Starrett, Schoolcraft, historian and Indian authority who lived in northern Michigan a century ago, the county is everywhere reminiscent of the ancient Indian occupation.

Here many will visit one of the largest fish hatcheries in the United States, and one of the largest Federal nurseries. Driving through the Hiawatha National Forest, tourists may see CCC boys at reforestation and fire prevention. This is the land where the Ojibwa raised their tents, especially on the shores of Indian Lake just north of Manistique.

Sault Ste. Marie, advertised as the "Summer Convention City," will be host to the U. P. Development Bureau, U. P. Lions Club, Standard Life Insurance, Michigan Sheriffs' Association, Baptists' State Convention, U. P. Teachers' Association, Standard Accident Insurance, Outdoor Advertising company, Detroit Board of Commerce and others.

With these conventions come increased jobs. The local NRS office is preparing to furnish workers for restaurants, hotels, gas stations, garages, tourist homes, beach resorts.

as well as carpenters, painters, electricians and Mackinac counties, the effects of summer activity will be felt. Many have suffered from a long winter. The pollution-free air in this vicinity offers relief.

Sight seeing and fishing will attract great numbers to Manistique. The scenic and historic wonders here give employment to cooks and waitresses for hotels and restaurants.

Dickinson County, the "State way to Hiawathaland," lies on the border of Wisconsin and opens a vast expanse of lakes, rivers, forests, hills and valleys. There are twenty million lakes, more than fifty streams, all heavily planted each year where fishing is good.

Three railroads, bus and freight lines, and four county parks and 22 miles of State-owned game preserve.

Auxiliary Nets $102.16 In Poppy Sale

Sale of badly poppies by the American Legion Auxiliary Saturday netted $102.16 for the aid of disabled veterans in Schoolcraft county. The shipment from headquarters totaled 1000 poppies and were sold.

Mrs. Anton Weber, general chairman of the sale, said this week and for that reason, the artificial flowers will not be on sale again Saturday as originally planned.

Mrs. Georgia Halsey was chairman of the sale on the West-side, and was assisted by Mrs. Frances J. McGuffin, Mrs. Albert Ackerman, Mrs. E. J. Carrington and Mrs. Ernest Smith.

On May 11 the local organization of the American Legion Auxiliary will decorate the graves of soldiers and sailors of all wars who lie in the Lakeview and Fairview cemeteries, a practice which has been a Memorial Day custom with the group for the past several years.

THIS WEEK—150 YEARS AGO

The Story of the Constitutional Convention of 1787

BY RAYMOND FITZGARRIN

One hundred and fifty years ago this summer a group of fifty-five Americans planned and wrote an historic document that stands one of the high lights of human achievement.

It secured a new note in government. It made government of the people by the people for the people practical and lasting. It became the inspiration and the model of democratic governments throughout the world.

It was the Constitution of the United States.

In this and succeeding articles will be told each week the story of how, on the same dates of 150 years ago, these fifty-five men wrought through a sweltering Philadelphia summer, to give the American ideal of freedom both reality and permanence.

The Convention that wrote our Constitution opened formally on May 29, 1787, at Philadelphia, in the historic structure already famous as the birthplace of the Declaration of Independence. Its purpose was to achieve a more practical form of union than was provided under the Articles of Confederation, often called "indefinite" as to be called a "sordid."

To many contemporary observers that opening session seemed relatively unimportant. But later historians learned to acknowledge its importance. The first sessions of the entire summer. For on that date the Convention chose George Washington as its presiding officer. Although his voice was seldom heard thereafter in debate, into the final product of that Convention, the American Constitution, was woven much of the strength and grandeur of his character.

Realizing, but undaunted by the difficulties ahead, Washington faced them with a soldier's simple faith and courage.

WASHINGTON COMMENT

By Congressman John Luecke 11th Michigan District

WPA—The House concluded action on the Relief Bill appropriating $1,000,000,000 plus an unexpended amount of $223,000,000 of this year's fund. The final vote will be taken Monday. Passage of the Bill is assured. Allocations of the funds appropriated are as follows: For highways, roads and streets, $415,000,000; public buildings, parks, recreational facilities, public utilities including sewer systems, water supply and participation, airports, flood control, conservation and other miscellaneous projects, $580,000,000; assistance for educational, professional, and clerical persons and women's projects, $380,000,000; Youth Administration, $75,000,000.

The Bollean amendment, calling for an appropriation of $3,000,000,000, was defeated, 130 to 46.

Labor-Secretary Frances Perkins predicted yesterday that Congress would enact new minimum wage and maximum hour legislation during its present session.

She spoke as Congressional sources said they anticipated President Roosevelt would submit a wage and hour program next week that would call for a 40 cent per hour minimum wage and a 35-hour week in inter-state commerce industries.

Agriculture—Extension until 1942 of federal jurisdiction over the soil conservation program with continuation until the date of benefit payments for cooperation in the land reclamation plan (H. R. 3687), moved a step closer to becoming law during the week through passage by the Senate.

Already passed by the House, the measure, which was amended in the Senate to provide for an annual specific accounting by the Secretary of Agriculture to the Congress for all money spent on date soil conservation projects, has been sent back to the House for concurrence in the amendment, which appears likely.

Action on sugar legislation (HR 5326) on the surface remained unacted during the week. Rep. Jones (D-Tex.) chairman of the House Agriculture Committee (which is considering the legislation) saw President Roosevelt early in the week to talk over the deadlock that exists because of controversy between the administration and continental sugar interests concerning the measure as it now stands.

President Roosevelt is understood to have told the Agriculture Committee chairman that he was unalterably opposed to the legislation as it now stands.

Textile Regulation—A subcommittee of the House Labor Committee, headed by Rep. Keller (D-Ill.), began open hearings on Tuesday, May 19, on the Ellenbogen (D-Pa.) Textile Bill, H. R. 228.

ADD FERRY BOAT TO STRAITS FLEET

Will Re-constitute "The Ann Arbor Four" For Service

The latest addition to the state-owned fleet of ferry boats at the Straits of Mackinac will probably bear the name "The City of Cheboygan."

During those first days, too—on May 29—the Convention received two plans which contained many of the fundamental principles finally incorporated in the Constitution. They were significant proposals for the ideas of government by the people.

One was the "Virginia Plan," introduced by James Madison, then Governor of that state, though largely developed by George Washington.

An outstanding feature was its proposal of a National Legislature in which the people should be represented, rather than the separate states.

Its basic principle was probably best expressed by Madison when he wrote: "The genius of republican government seems to demand that all power should be derived from the people."

It proposed too, a National Executive and a National Judiciary.

All these proposals were and at variance with the Articles of Confederation under which the new nation had lived since the close of the Revolution.

The second plan came from another southerner, youthful Charles Pinckney of South Carolina. Similar in general principles to the Virginia Plan, it was more specific in detailed provisions.

It was, however, the famous Virginia Plan which formed the basis of the early debates. Where was the line between states and how from them developed the Constitution under which our nation has risen to greatness, will be told in succeeding articles.

Next Week: Unique in Government.

committee was Gregory Haskin, former attorney for NRA. Haskin drafted the original textile bill, which provided for a 40-hour work week, and a minimum wage of $15.00 per week.

In his testimony before the committee, Haskin stated that he still favors the 40-hour work for textile workers, but said he was willing to compromise on the Ellenbogen bill, which contains a 40-hour week in the event it is found that a 40-hour week "adversely affects the public welfare."

Guterson, President of the Carpenters' Association, testified that the Ellenbogen bill "very probably would be declared unconstitutional, because of the broad powers proposed to be invested in the textile commission."

Guterson said: "This measure would vest in the Commission judicial, legislative and executive powers."

Straits that it too deserves the honor.

"The City of Cheboygan" is the fourth state-owned vessel in the Straits service. A leased boat is also in operation while a sixth vessel, the ferry "Chief Wawatam," is available for emergency service or during peak traffic periods. The ferry "Cheboygan" will be in operation at the Straits, July 1.

Treat Trunklines To Lessen Dust

Lansing, May 27. Michigan's gravel trunklines will be given a $125,000 dust-busting treatment this week of calcium chloride.

Murray H. Van Wagener, state highway commissioner, announced that gravel trunklines in the lower peninsula will be treated. The first application in the Lower Peninsula will follow about the first week in June.

Nearly 6000 tons of the pulchritude will be used in the first application. Average costs of spreading the chloride approximate $22 a ton.

Commissioner Van Wagener said that all gravel state roads will receive at least two additional treatments this year. In some cases, four or five treatments.

Capital newspaper correspondents probably will be necessary, depending on the volume of traffic and the condition of the particular highway.

The riveted seam is the reason why a Lennox furnace is safe—not for just a year or two, but throughout its life. Every seam is made this way—hot-riveted under 35 tons pressure and then caulked with a pneumatic leak-proof seal.

They Write of High Adventure while living 'Away from It All'

THE World War was dragging along through its bloody middle years. Two young American flyers in the famous Lafayette Escadrille, decided—like some hundreds of thousands of other fighting men—that they could do with a large slice of peace and quiet, once the war should be over.

So they made an agreement, these two, that if and when the war ended—if both of them survived—they would cut loose from civilization, go to the quietest and remotest spot they could find, and devote their lives to writing.

The war ground its way along and finally came to its end. The two young flyers, somewhat to their surprise, were still alive. They collaborated on one writing job and found it good. They recalled their old war-time compact. And eventually, along in 1920, they pulled up stakes and went to Tahiti.

Years passed. The two friends, writing separately, produced several books and magazine articles. As writers go they were moderately successful. They never hit the best-seller lists, although their work enjoyed decent sales; and they never applied themselves to "serious" fiction, although the critics recognized them as sound craftsmen.

Then, in the fall of 1932, the Atlantic Monthly Press received from the two friends a new manuscript—an historical novel, based on a famous incident in the British navy. The book was published, as all Atlantic books are, by Little, Brown and Company, and the public snapped it up. Within a few months it was one of the most talked-of books of the day and its authors were famous.

The book was "Mutiny on the Bounty." The authors were James Norman Hall and Charles Nordhoff.

THESE two men are today considered the most remarkable writing team in existence. Beginning with "Mutiny

It was the famous mutiny on H. M. S. Bounty that provided Hall and Nordhoff with the plot for their first best seller.

decided to join forces more or less permanently.

It seemed important to them to get away from the falsities and conventionalities of modern civilization. They were ardent admirers of Stevenson and Melville, who had written glowingly of life on Tahiti; and when they visited Boston, Mr. Sedgwick strongly urged that they follow their already-formed hunch and go to Tahiti themselves.

NOW that island is full of young white men who go there to "get away from it all," succumb to the island's easy life, and never thereafter do anything worth mentioning. But Hall and Nordhoff were different. They went to the mid-Pacific to work, not to loaf, and work they did—diligently and to some consequence.

A great deal of research was necessary for their book on the Bounty. For a time Hall thought he would have to go all the way to England to examine the files of the British Admiralty—for only there could he read the records of the mutineers' trials, the statements of Captain Bligh and other officers, and other essential documents. But he wrote to admiralty officials first—and found them so generous of their time that the trip to London was unnecessary.

Photostatic copies were made of the mutineers' trial and other important papers. A British naval officer sent plans of the ship's deck and rigging, copied her log, and even made a detailed scale model of the ship, and sent the photographs along.

Armed with all of the facts, the two authors started then the method of collaboration which they have used ever since.

First they spend hours talking the story over until they have the characters and the plot thoroughly in mind. Then they divide the prospective book into chapters and decide what action shall take place in each chapter. That done, they go through the list and each man picks the ones he would especially like to handle. When both pick the same chapter, they toss a coin to see who gets it.

Then the actual writing begins. As each one completes a chapter he hands it to the other, who reads it carefully, suggests revision where he thinks it advisable, and hands it back. It is in this way that they make their books read like the work of one man, eliminating individualities of style.

Working in this way, "Mutiny on the Bounty" was at last completed. Its success with the reading public was immediate and sustained. Hall and Nordhoff at once turned to the task of continuing the story of the famous mutiny, and two years later brought out "Men Against the Sea," telling of Captain Bligh's trans-Pacific voyage in an open boat. A year later they finished the tale with "Pitcairn's Island." And in 1935 came "The Hurricane."

Both Hall and Nordhoff have married since going to Tahiti. Hall was married in 1925, to Sarah Winchester, and lives with his wife and their son and daughter in a fairly new and (for Tahiti) up-to-date house. Nordhoff married Pepe Tearai of Tahiti in 1920, and now has three daughters and a son.

on the Bounty" they have written four successive best-sellers—which have the peculiar property of continuing to sell year after year.

Today all four of these books are in wide demand. In addition to "Mutiny on the Bounty," they are "Men Against the Sea," "Pitcairn's Island," and "The Hurricane"—which last sold more than 22,000 copies before publication.

Altogether, more than 200,000 copies of the "Bounty" books have been sold. A moving picture made from the first book has been shown all over the world. The two authors have become famous and wealthy.

But the desire for peace and solitude, born of the war, is still with them. They continue to live in Tahiti. Their photographs are rarely seen; interviews with them are never published. Instead of returning to America to bask in the public attention which goes to literary lions, they stay on their island, attend strictly to their work, and shun the publicity and adulation which could be theirs for the asking.

Wouldn't you expect two such men to be unusual individuals, with unusual records? Well, you'd be quite right if you did. They are unusual—particularly so in the way in which they are able to unite their separate talents in one literary personality, working together so skillfully that the most careful critics have never been able to tell which part of which book was done by which author.

BORN in Colfax, Iowa, in 1887, Hall was educated at Grinnell College, also in Iowa, receiving a Ph. D. degree in 1910. In 1914, at the outbreak of the war, he enlisted in the British army and went to France with Kitchener's famous "first hundred thousand," serving as a machine gunner in the 9th Royal Fusiliers. In the fall of 1916 he transferred to the famous Lafayette Escadrille and became a pursuit pilot in Groupe de Combat 13.

It was there that he met Nordhoff.

Nordhoff was born of American parents in London in 1887. He grew up on his father's ranch in Lower California, Mexico, was graduated from Harvard in 1909, and raised sugar cane in Mexico until the revolution of 1911 interfered. He went into business in California, and in 1916 went to France as an ambulance driver with the American Field Service. Then he joined the French Foreign Legion, went to two schools of military aviation, and transferred to the Lafayette Escadrille.

He and Hall became fast friends at once. When the United States entered the war they transferred, together, to the U. S. army flying corps.

In May, 1918, Hall crashed behind the German lines and was carried off to a German prison camp, where he remained until the spring of 1919. He escaped and rejoined Nordhoff in Paris. Both men were decorated for gallantry by this time; Nordhoff won a Croix de Guerre, and Hall a Medaille Militaire (awarded twice); a Croix de Guerre and an American Distinguished Service Cross.

The literary partnership between the two men began there in Paris, when they were commissioned to write the story of the Lafayette Escadrille. Hall had already won his spurs as a writer, having published a series of papers on "High Adventure" in the Atlantic Monthly and having interested the editor of that magazine, Ellery Sedgwick, in his work. And then, the history of the Escadrille out of the way, the two

TELLING the TRUTH about the LIE DETECTOR

Father W. G. Summers of Fordham University manipulates the psychogalvanometer—and although the man being questioned maintains a blank expression, the machine probably will tell if he fibs.

By Marjorie Van de Water

A SCIENTIFIC instrument that would look behind the poker face of the criminal into his black heart and record on photographic film the secrets of his guilt!

That would indeed be a potent weapon for law-enforcement officials.

But scientists cannot lie about the lie detector. Lest they be trapped by their own invention, perhaps, they do not claim for it any such magic performance. The so-called lie detector is no infallible detector of lies. It is not a modern substitute for the ancient "trial by ordeal" in which the suspect submits to a painful test and by his performance is judged blameless or guilty.

G-Man and scientist agree in regarding the psychogalvanometer, as the lie-detector is technically termed, and also the various drugs used for "truth serums," as promising tools for scientific research, not as legal evidence to be presented in court as the basis for determining the guilt of the accused.

Although no magic properties are claimed for the psychogalvanometer, the things it can do are interesting enough.

It is actually being used in increasing numbers of criminal cases. It has in some cases led investigators to the guilty person in an almost uncanny fashion. It has betrayed the guilt of some, and confirmed the innocence of others.

Recently it gained prominence in the use on a Negro charged with the murder of a woman in New York City. This was the murder of Mrs. Mary Case. The murderer, Major Green, was given the death penalty.

Rev. Walter G. Summers, professor of psychology at Fordham University, who is one of the leaders in research on this instrument, examined the accused with his psychogalvanometer at the request of the New York authorities. The information disclosed by the instrument was a great aid in investigating the case.

STRIPPED of superstitious notions about its omniscient powers, the psychogalvanometer is a simple instrument designed to measure and record photographically, or in wavy lines drawn on paper, the tiny electric currents present in the human skin.

All the processes of life, physiologists have found, are accompanied by electric impulses. Each message sent along the nerves of the body is accompanied by a minute electric impulse. Muscle action has its parallel in the tiny current. And the complex activity of the brain takes place to the accompaniment of electric signals, beating out a characteristic rhythm which can be tapped and measured.

It is not the brain waves that are measured by the psychogalvanometer. It is the much more easily studied currents taken from the skin. These skin currents are a clue to the hidden emotion going on beneath the surface.

. . . If the examiner casually mentions "red curtains," an innocent suspect will not react—but the guilty one very probably will.

How? Because emotion is all tied up with the action of the autonomic nervous system. When a danger signal sounds alarm, the body's emergency system goes instantly to work.

The hard-boiled criminal who comes before the police for examination may long ago have learned to keep a poker face, to hide his alarms behind a veil of apparent calm. He holds his breathing steady and appears to be unmoved. But few have ever learned any way to control the beating of the heart and fewer still know any means to keep steady those tell-tale electric currents that go pulsing through their flesh.

When the police officer strikes home with his question, the criminal may not wince, but the jump of the needle in the "lie-detector" shows that the arrow has hit its mark. It is this sort of situation where the lie detector aids.

Suppose a man has been killed during a house-breaking and robbery. He was stabbed with a kitchen knife, and an attempt was made to delay discovery of the crime by hiding the body behind red velvet curtains in a bay window.

HALF a dozen suspects are picked up. Each is asked a series of questions. After routine queries as to name, address, occupation, the suspects are asked whether they live in a second-floor apartment; whether the house has red velvet curtains; whether the house has a bay window; whether the kitchen knives are sharp. Other questions mention details present at the scene of the crime, but no clue is given to indicate that they are significant.

To the innocent man who was not at the scene of the crime the questions must seem trivial, meaningless, stupid. But the guilty man sees the point. He may bluster and hold his innocent pose, but his mouth becomes dry, the palms of his hands grow moist and clammy, and the electrodes he is holding send their damning message to recording apparatus.

Most courts refuse to accept the evidence of the machine as legally acceptable. It does not prove the man to be guilty, just because he is emotionally stirred by the questioning. Perhaps he is a nervous man anyway. Who would not be scared by such an ordeal?

Nevertheless, though the evidence of the machine may never go to court, it has served some useful purpose in narrowing for the police their field of investigation.

A striking example of the use made of the machine came recently at Chicago, where Joseph Rappaport occupied a condemned cell awaiting execution for a murder of which, he insisted, he was innocent. His sister made a frantic appeal to Governor Horner for clemency, just seven hours before the time set for her brother's electrocution.

Governor Horner explained that he had already postponed her brother's death six times, and that he could not find it in his conscience to do it again. He added, however, that he had great faith in the lie detector.

THE girl immediately set to work to have her brother given a test by the machine. Accompanied by lawyers and officers of the law, Prof. Leonard Keeler of Northwestern University, inventor of the apparatus, took the machine to Rappaport's cell.

But alas! The machine gave Rappaport a highly unfavorable verdict. After more than an hour's testing, Professor

Mrs. Mary Case, whose murderer was brought to book through use of the lie detector.

Keeler called Governor Horner.

"On the basis of my findings," he said, "Rappaport is guilty."

The difficulty in using the psychogalvanometer as an instrument for crime detection is not that it fails to show up the emotion of the guilty person, but rather that it shows too much. Only the expert can sort out those wavy lines and read the story written there.

And so Rappaport was executed. The machine showed only a suspicious rise in his blood pressure while he denied his guilt. But this evidence, added to what convicted him, reassured the governor.

Somewhat discouraging to those who would use the psychogalvanometer for crime detection was one of the results of these experiments by Dr. T. W. Forbes, formerly of the New York Psychiatric Institute. He found that some individuals seem to be lacking in emotion, at least as far as it is revealed by this device. Only very intense startle, as when a gun is fired unexpectedly, will cause a flicker in the instrument's recording on these persons.

On the other hand, those who do respond in a way that makes its mark on the psychogalvanometer record sheets respond to every sort of excitement. When these people lie, the emotion connected with the effort to keep the story straight makes a change in the normal rhythm of the electric response. But so also does embarrassment due to some other cause than guilt.

Balanced against the discouraging findings is the latest research of Father Summers, of Fordham, who has been stepping up the sensitiveness of his apparatus until he believes it is delicate enough to distinguish between the person who is guilty and the one who merely has guilty knowledge of a crime.

The patient, cod-fearing Miller learned to unpack, head, split and gut codfish until every cat in Los Angeles would follow him.

What KIPLING and CODFISH did to the MOVIES

By Paul Harrison
HOLLYWOOD

WELL, they finally have finished shooting "Captains Courageous." Thousands of fathoms of film are being reeled in the cutting rooms and stowed in round tin bulkheads. Freddie Bartholomew is still spitting curves in the wind, and Spencer Tracy remains drydocked in a barber shop for extensive repairs. Old Cap'n Lionel Barrymore is figuring on retiring, with his trusty sextant and his memories, to a little vine-grown cottage on the Cape Cod dunes. And the studio supercargos who have been auditing the enterprise is still pretty seasick.

It was a long voyage, mates. It made Columbus look like a week-end excursionist. Also it was the most expensive fishing expedition recorded in all the history of seafaring. The cost has run to something like $2,000,000, and the elapsed time was 18 months. In that period the principal ship sailed a total of about 25,000 miles and didn't catch enough fish to make salad for a Wednesday afternoon bridge club. But it did catch a good deal of excitement, together with one of those hyper-tremendous pictures which will have a place in the nautical season with "Souls at Sea," "Slave Ship" and other epics of the ships-of-wood-and-men-of-steel tradition. It was a year ago last autumn that an M-G-M crew left Hollywood for Gloucester, Mass., to set sail on the salty saga. There were a couple of marine technicians, two business managers, and cameramen Harold Morzaroti and Bob Roberts. Also Capt. J. M. Hersey, a Metro skipper who sailed

H. M. S. Bounty to Tahiti and back. FIRST thing they did was plunk down $23,000 for a ship, the Orelha F. Spurney, a 110-foot two-masted schooner. It was refitted, renamed We're Here and ballasted with scrap iron because everyone suspected that the holds never again would be filled with fish. First they took lots of shots around Gloucester. Then they sailed to the Newfoundland Banks, proper locale of the story. Some genuine codfishing scenes were taken there, with a hired fleet of as many as 13 schooners. Next to Nova Scotia for a bit of heavy weather, thence to the tropic West Indies for some fancy cloud shots off the Cuba Keys and in the Gulf of Mexico. After a good many months of atmosphere photography, the We're Here cleared the Panama Canal and began combating the Pacific Coast for likely locations. After actual production began it was necessary to sail off Washington and Oregon for fog and wind, and off California and Lower California for rugged shorelines. The We're Here has a rival in the story, and for the role of the Jennie Cushman the studio rented the Mariner, a schooner once owned by John Barrymore. In 1928, in the annual race to Honolulu, this schooner established a record of 11 days and 23 hours. Other members of the movie fleet included two camera barges, a tugboat, two 50-passenger water taxis and five speedboats. For a few of the sequences some Alaskan halibut boats were sailed down from Seattle. There were times when the company wasn't quite sure what it was doing, because the weather was perverse for weeks at a time. Periods of idleness would have been even longer but for occasional shots which were made at the studio. The Gloucester waterfront was reproduced in detail on M-G-M's back lot. A partial replica of the We're Here also was constructed on a studio sound stage. While wind machines whooshed and waves poured down wooden chutes, Spencer Tracy met a hero's death when he was caught and drowned in a welter of wrecked rigging. Galley, fore-castle and aft cabin also were reproduced in detail at the studio. The sets were mounted on rockers. THE flicker actors didn't always accompany ships on the longer voyages. Part of the time they were headquartered in Hollywood and went down to the sea in limousines. And for several intervals of several weeks they lived at the leading hotel on Mr. Wrigley's Santa Catalina Island. The hotel didn't mind that they tramped into the lobby of an evening in redolent oilskins and boots slimy with fish scales and gurry. It was, fortunately, the off-season, and the screen players were the sole guests in the establishment.

A camera platform was built out from the port side of the schooner so that the lens might take in the ocean, the side of the schooner and the entire deck. In the fore-castle Harold Min-near, a school teacher, conducted classes for Bartholomew and Mickey Rooney, for they're obliged to study a minimum of three hours a day even while at sea. The property man on this picture was Johnny Miller. As property man on "The Good Earth," for which he collected and handled some 10,000 items ranging from joss sticks to water buffalo, Miller figured he had encountered all the headaches to be had on this mortal coil. But that was before he found out about codfish. Since this is a codfishing story, even though mostly filmed off the Grand Banks of Hollywood, it was apparent that genuine cod would have to appear in the picture. So he began by shipping them in from Boston, 1000 pounds at a time, packed in ice. Pretty soon they were arriving a ton at a time. The patient, cod-fearing Miller learned to unpack, head, split and gut codfish until every cat in Greater Los Angeles would follow him wherever he went. They had a tough time getting the final storm sequences, for although the weather was beastly, the sea was calm. Up and down the coast cruised the We're Here and the Jennie Cushman. In despair they finally proceeded to Mazatlan and lay there awaiting orders to proceed through the canal and find a storm off Florida. And then, simultaneously with the sailing orders, came a hurricane off Cape San Lucas. It nearly wrecked the ships. That storm and the deliberate dismantling of the We're Here during a race with the Cushman provided the most perilous moments of the long voyage. Breasting of the mast was accomplished by sawing it half in two and then piling on canvas until it popped and came down.

What Happens
When a Young

Her Lawyer

THE elevator door clanged open and Jane Lytell darted out into the corridor, caromed swiftly from a leisurely messenger and apologized so sweetly he forgot to be angry.

"Where's the fire, baby?" he queried good-naturedly.

"False alarm," she parried brightly. "I bet you ain't." His young eyes wordlessly admired her. Which wasn't at all extraordinary, for masculine glances generally did pay silent tribute to Jane Lytell, who was small and lovely with little golden lights flecking her short, glossy hair and dancing in the depths of her glowing eyes.

By the time the elevator well yawned and swallowed the messenger, Jane was several feet away. She stopped presently before a door which bore the inscription in neat, precise lettering: "Jerald B. Lytell, Attorney at Law." It gave her a pleasant sense of importance seeing Jerry's name there with its dignified legal appendage; made her temporarily forget that being the wife of a struggling young barrister was a dubious honor at best.

She entered the anteroom. A murmur of voices came to her through the partially closed door that led into Jerry's private office. The chair behind Miss Kathleen Moore's desk was vacant, which she knew meant that Jerry was dictating to his distractingly beautiful secretary.

Jane sat down to wait until he was free. She glanced at her watch in sudden anxiety and hoped he wouldn't be long. In less than an hour Sonny would be home from kindergarten, impatient at her absence, and possibly a little frightened, too.

Cloth Window Shades Are Selected For The New Rockefeller Apartments

By BETTINA J. VIGLEZE

These new Rockefeller apartment houses, each having six-room duplex apartments, are one of today's outstanding examples of modern architecture.

Designed by the noted firm of architects, Harrison & Foulhoux, they extend from fifty-fourth to fifty-fifth streets, between Fifth and Sixth Avenues—almost directly across the street from the homes of Mr. John D. Rockefeller, Sr., and Mr. John D. Rockefeller, Jr.

You will notice that the stark simplicity of the building has been relieved with four columns of bay windows. These semi-circular bays, almost entirely enclosed in glass, serve as solariums and as dining rooms.

Bay window lend themselves most perfectly to cloth window shades, and if you will observe the photograph carefully you will see that almost every window is hung with white window shades.

Mr. J. André Foulhoux is a great advocate of effective color in window shades as part of the decorative ensemble of the building. Witness the fact that the News Building which he designed in conjunction with the late Mr. Hood has bright organdy red shades; the McGraw Hill building, another of his, has green and tan window shades; and the third, the Chicago Tribune building, has window shades striped in grey blue to accent the verticality of the building.

When so brilliant an architect recognizes and stresses the decorative importance of color in cloth window shades, it is time for those of us who have our own homes and apartments to sit up and take notice.

Larkspur blue is an outstanding new color in cloth window shades and while it looks very magnificent with white Colonial houses, it looks equally well in summer bungalows; in the kitchen of your own town apartment; in the bathroom and in the bedroom. For it is a beautiful cool blue tone that keeps out the glare of summer sun and makes your rooms look cool and restful.

Blue as you know is one of the outstanding colors in home furnishings this summer, and this particular blue cloth shade is a perfect tone, neither too light, nor too dark. It is again appropriate for nurseries, for it softens the light, and any doctor will tell you how important it is that glaring light be kept from the eyes of sleeping children.

(Courtesy Rockefeller Center)

There are other soft tones for summer shades; a cream with a touch of rose in it. A No-lite shade that lets in absolutely no light and may be ordered from any department store or window shade shop in a single color or in a duo-tone, one tone facing the interior of the room, the other facing the street.

Pastel tones and the soft lovely willow greens; peachskin, that has a touch of pink; cornflower blue; Colonial gray; a tone called old red or poppy that is actually a lovely rusty rose; coppertone that goes perfectly with beige, yellow and brown; lavender; delft blue and a great many more.

"Treat Children As Grownups" Says Grandmother

By MRS. PENROSE LYLY

"Whenever I hear of bad children, I can never believe it's not the parents' fault. Intelligent parents don't have bad children, except once in a million."

Such is the opinion of Marie Belloc Lowndes. Safely past the meridian of her life, a grandmother, a noted author of book (and this should be wider you) in which horror is the popular theme, sister of the internationally known essayist, Hilairc Belloc, and wife of a London newspaperman, Mrs. Lowndes has seen life pretty fully and with calm and appraising eyes.

"Yes, I think life is a balanced ration," she says "a bad youth usually gives one a good old age, long periods of trouble seem to be followed by days of pleasant calm, sorrow and happiness, tragedy and romance—they all get mixed up over the course of years and the result is a balanced ration which seems to keep the soul fairly healthy."

"You ask me what I would say to young mothers. Well, first, don't talk rubbish to your children. Reason with a child when possible. And don't, above all things, say to him 'I'm your mother, therefore I am right'. Treat those little children much as you would treat grownups. They are reasoning human beings, even though they are small. They respond to decent and understanding treatment."

Marie Belloc Lowndes smiles with the quiet grace of an older woman who has tasted deeply of life. "Tell them this—my best advice about children is have 'em, love 'em, and leave 'em alone".

Mrs. Lowndes does not believe marriage is a natural state. "No, people confuse marriage with mating. Mating is natural, but staying with a man years after the first glamour has faded is not natural."

"To make a marriage last through a lifetime, a man or woman needs all the help heaven and human decency and a sense of values can give. I think the French idea actually works out best. If parents are intelligent and unselfish, they usually can select a husband for their daughter and a wife for their son who will fit best into the marriage span, a partner who brings them qualities most needed to carry the unnatural state of being married into a higher and more permanent human companionship.

"And of course, there must be children. Please tell your readers for me—and I am old enough to have some experienced judgment—that these women who are waiting until it is convenient to have babies, will find that it is never convenient. And in the end they will only be cheating themselves."

Miss Shefer started, in Winnipeg, grabbed an education at Savage School of Physical Education and Columbia University.

Miss Shefer thinks she has the fashion angle right. "Airplanes are the right answer the seasonal fashions," she says, "Modern women want things at once, not in a few weeks or a month. Put the newest and smartest clothes aboard a plane, fly around the country showing women everything new within a few days of its appearance in New York, and they'll thank you and pay you for the fun."

"The American woman understands such things these days. She's an active type, alert, likes to go places and do things herself, has a passion for sports and health, and admires new ideas and fast moving changes."

Flower Borders Improve Gardens

That path leading up to the house would look lovelier with a flower border. How about a combination of dwarf scarlet sage edged with blue ageratum, or perhaps scarlet sage edged with coleus?

Of course, only the larger and wider borders should be planted with two or more kinds of flowers of similar or different heights. When the heights differ, the taller ones should be given central rows, while the dwarfs should form the edge.

What flowers are best? A matter of taste, but David Burpee has a few ideas. "Try these combinations petunia alderman with phlox Isabelline, lilliput chlosia, fire feather with sweet alyssum, or rose of heaven petunia with sanvitalia."

For the very narrow border it is wiser to use only one kind of plant. "Select flowers which will, bloom continuously until frost," Mr. Burpee advises. "Try petunia, portulaca, scarlet sage or zinnia."
