Take Notice!

We do not blow hard about prices on cheap goods. For inferior goods are dear at any price. Neither have we any money to give away as we have to live the same as other people. But we can buy good honest goods as cheap as the next man and our light expenses will enable us to sell them at as close a margin of profit as the largest dealers. We will do so. Call and be convinced.

R. L. Scott, who will appear in "Chip O' The Old Block" at Opera House Monday July 10, is surrounded by a company that will feel any previously seen in that popular comedy. Several modifications and alterations have been made in the play. Specialties up to date are introduced and the entire performance now goes with a rush from start to finish.

David Stolemacher of Cooks, was a pleasant caller Wednesday morning. He was married in St. Mary's church, Ottawa, Ont., Monday, by Rev. Father Cole. Mr. and Mrs. Spillman arrived in the city Tuesday evening enroute to Cooks. The Tribune wishes the happy couple abundant success and prosperity which will increase the size of his patch next year. His success in this direction may be attributed to the fact that he sets out his plants in May instead of in the fall. By doing so the plants get sufficient growth to withstand the heavy frosts of spring.

Capt. Geo. Tucker the cedar king of Whitehall was in the city Sunday for the purpose of becoming acquainted with his family. Mr. Tucker says that he is the man working for a cedar company at Whitehall, quit work Saturday on account of not receiving their pay. Mr. Tucker, however, is conducting his business in an entirely different manner. He sells for cash or not at all, and if he is unable to pay his men promptly he settles with them. He has found it necessary to do this for several months past, and says that he has enough work in hand to keep the mill busy until winter sets in.

"It rained Tuesday."

Jan. F. Johnson has begun building a house on his Oakland addition lot.

There are at least thirty civil cases docketed in Judge Bowen's court.

Mr. Hill will shortly begin the erection of a handsome business block west of the Commercial hotel. The building will be 34x73; and will have a French plate glass front. It will be occupied by the popular firm of Ross Bros., who have a fine line of dry goods to their present stock.

People with heart affections are advised not to see "Chip O' The Old Block" at the Star Opera House Monday July 10 as they are in danger of laughing themselves to death; ladies with a love for the beautiful who see the costumes of the handsome young women of the company are apt to derive their husbands into bankruptcy striving to buy similar apparel, while newspaper humorists and "subsequent" comedians may commit suicide through envy of the comic fellows. "Chip" is a great comedy achievement but dangers lurk in its enjoyment by the ambitious.

Our bicyclists at the Soo. Fifteen members of the Cycle club visited the Soo Tuesday, and some of them entered the races held that day. The boys who were met at the train by the Soo bicyclists and escorted up town. They all speak in terms of highest praise of the treatment accorded them by their neighbors. Manistique carried away three prizes. The following persons won prizes.

Carl Estrom, 2nd prize in 1/2 mile race, prize, a sweater.

Gus Estrom, 2nd prize, 1 mile race, prize, mud guards.

Harry Boyton won second prize in a foot race, (2-1 mile). For his efforts he received a racing suit.

Our club is anxious that the local track be completed so that they can invite the Sooites here to participate in a tournament.

One local enthusiast says that at least four members of our club are more speedily than any one belonging to the Soo club, but that timidity and a bad track was responsible for the failure of our club to participate in a tournament.

The following wheelmen were there: Elmer Orr, Chas Orr, B. Hafford, Mr. Whitaker, D. G. Currie, Gus Estrom, Arthur Estrom, Axel Estrom, Carl Estrom, Harry Clark, Walter Buchanan, Will Thomas, William Graham, Miller Orr, Carl Gunnerson.

A Mock Marred Man.

A deserted wife made it extremely difficult for a South Manistique individual Tuesday evening.

About seven years ago Henry Taylor was married to a lady at New London, Ontario. After two years he tired of her, deserted her, and she drifted to Detroit where she, by hard labor, succeeded in supplying her wants for the last four years. Through acquaintance she learned that her husband was living in South Manistique with a Mrs. Alice McDaniel, purported to be his wife. With No. 1 arrived on the scene and ordered Taylor's arrest. Under-Sheriff Orr made the arrest and placed his prisoner in jail.

Henry Taylor proper, is anxious to complete his matters. Taylor will abandon his South Manistique admirer and forever live with her. As this writing the case still hangs fire, but indications point to an amicable settlement.

SPOLIING A ROMANCE.

How a Mischievous Chance Got Prevalent in an Engagement.

A certain young lady who lives in the annexed district, says the Chicago Inquirer, has had her romance spoiled by the unexpected and gratuitous interference of a glib and somewhat inclined girl. This young lady had a parent who had proposed to her. Her parents are eligible bachelors and for a long time the young lady was not to be won.

The young lady was to be under his roof as a boarder. It was a signal by means of a card. It was the largest number to state that the other party was not to be won.

WOMAN'S INGRATITUDE.

Her Boy "Thank You" for a Bank, If One Stationed This Truth.

"Thank, gentlemen," said the red-haired man as he reflected that "about in a cable car to one of the gentler cars and came out on the rear platform," "is the girl's woman to whom I have given up my seat in a car with a month's time, and how many of the five were courteous enough to thank me?"

"Oh, better than that, my friend," said the red-haired man. "She was the twenty-first to thank me."

"Yes, played in great luck," remarked the tough individual sitting on the bench.

"Well," exclaimed the red-haired man, "about a month ago I determined to keep an account of just how many women would thank me for giving up my seat to them. The one in a cable car to one of the gentler cars and came out on the rear platform, 'is the girl's woman to whom I have given up my seat in a car with a month's time, and how many of the five were courteous enough to thank me?'"

A COURT OF NATIONS.
A HIGH COURT OF LAST RESORT TO DETERMINE DISPUTES.

New International Differences Might be Adjusted if the Nations Did Not Prefer Arms and Destructive War to Peace.

There is a great deal of enthusiasm in certain popular domains for referring questions between nations to arbitration. We all know what arbitration is in business. It is a very convenient way of settling disputes. It is the settling of a dispute between two firms, each of whom wishes to do what is right, but who take different views of the same subject. It is a very convenient way of settling a dispute between two nations, each of whom wishes to do what is right, but who take different views of the same subject. It is a very convenient way of settling a dispute between two nations, each of whom wishes to do what is right, but who take different views of the same subject.

But for practical purposes we do not suppose every person who has a question settled with another to create a court which is to try that question. If a policeman catches a pickpocket in the street, he does not appoint one person to try the pickpocket and another to appoint another, while these two shall appoint a third. If Mr. Cheshire in London is not satisfied with the account which Mr. Goodchild of Kansas City sends him, if Mr. Goodchild cannot make Mr. Cheshire understand that account, they do not appoint a court which shall determine how much is due and how much is not due. There is a court existing to which that question can be referred and there are processes perfectly understood by which that court can decide it.

This is a fitting illustration of the necessity which now exists that the great nations of the world shall have a permanent tribunal, before which shall be brought the important questions that must arise in the affairs of nations with each other. It is to be a permanent tribunal. There is not to be one tribunal for boundaries and another tribunal about boundaries and another about extradition. There is to be a tribunal which shall gradually gain the process of settling the whole world, and which shall decide these questions which have been left hitherto to a vague public opinion and to what is called the arbitration of states. Clearly we are approaching nearer and nearer the creation of such a tribunal.

The greatest success was achieved when in 1793 different nations, here on the coast of the Atlantic, united together and established the supreme court of the United States. The thing has worked so perfectly and simply ever since that we have many readers to whom it has never occurred that there were mighty have been between Massachusetts and New York, or between Missouri and Iowa, as bitter as any that have been between the ages in Europe were. There might have been such wars if it had not been that the supreme court of the United States has determined at least the important questions arising between different provinces and independent states and has so determined them that each of the states has acquiesced in the decision. Now it has so determined them that half the citizens of those states did not know that any such questions existed. Between my state of Massachusetts and the state of Rhode Island there was a question about boundaries some 20 or 30 years ago which was more important than many of the questions which have thrown European states into war with each other. The supreme court of the United States determined the question, and I do not believe that half the people now living in Massachusetts who were living then ever knew that there was any such question at issue.

The six great powers of the world are the powers who should agree on such a high court of justice, to exist as a permanent tribunal. It would be easy to arrange some system by which its judges should be appointed. Perhaps a good system would be such as is indicated in the custom which has been spoken of above. Each of the six nations might name one of these judges, and the six judges might nominate six other judges, to be approved by a majority of the high powers forming the court. At first the new court would have nothing to do. Everybody would be busy of men, but it would exist. It would consist of the very highest rank of the best distinguished leaders before the world by their equity and wisdom.

At first a court would meet simply for its own organization and to give the reference to it of questions arising between great nations. In this period of leisure these jurists might well be employed in digesting the certain principles they might determine certain principles which they would rely in the judgments which should eventually be brought before them. Before long, however, some real question would be submitted to them. There would arise a question whether the San Carlos river was a dry brook, running and empty to the sea, or whether it was a dirty brook running from the southwest to the northeast, or whether it was a dry brook running from the southwest to the northeast. As things stand now, two armies have to be called out to fight about the proper definition of some old treaty, and a thousand good fellows have to be killed before we can determine which of two dry brooks is the San Carlos. —Edward Everett Hale in New York Recorder.

AN RECONCILIATION.

During a session of exceedingly cold weather in a frontier town west of the commanding officer issued an order to have limited rations of whisky issued to the town.

All went well until one day a soldier, an Irish-American, was arrested and placed in the guardhouse for intoxication. The quantity of whisky allotted to each man was sufficient to produce such a result, and a brief investigation which followed developed the fact that the soldier had stolen the rations of a comrade.

In course of time the matter was brought to the attention of the commanding officer, and the private was discharged before him for trial upon the following charges of stealing.

The man was a conscientious man who appeared before the officer, but was still in possession of his family and native wit. He denied having stolen the whisky, but frankly admitted the double allowance and his subsequent drunkenness.

"No, sir," he said, when asked to explain further, "sure I'm not after stealin the drink. It was this way, sar. You see, he asked me to get his rations, but I shure I didn't see an ounce of bottle. Both rations were poured in the was bottle."

"Now, sar, I have it for ye honor, what was I do? Me own whisky was in the bottom of the bottle, an I couldn't get it but by drinkin what was on the top, but shure I didn't see an ounce of bottle. This original explanation secured an exceedingly light sentence for the culprit. —New York Herald.

Strolling a Hedonist Story.

The incident often illustrated in plays of a man carrying off a woman who has no logic truth, said Halman Curdsey. "Still the idea seems so preposterous that people never fail to laugh at the incidents when placed before them on the stage. The nearest theft that I ever knew to parallel it occurred not so long ago in an Italian crime which took place in New York City was given six months in the penitentiary for stealing a thief's store. The evidence proved that the criminal had taken the thief's store, everything from the theft of a paper of pins and a steam wheel down to a water jug and a wagon and the store in question."

The thief's store was shown in court. It was a very old fashioned, large and antique looking, which one might imagine would be the last thing that would attract the attention of even a chronic burglar. The top was cylindrical and fastened with a key and a lock. To this top was attached the handle. Now, the store had a good fire and had been set out on the pavement to obtain extra flame. The thief must have found it a very hot object to handle, and yet he ran with it a dozen blocks before he was caught and arrested. —St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Phillips Brooks as a Schoolteacher.

It is related that the first attempt of Phillips Brooks to begin a career was a discouraging failure. After he left college, he became a tutor in the Boston Latin school, but the principal was so little impressed with his capacity that he asked for his resignation. When young Brooks then decided to enter the ministry, the pedagogic predicted his failure on the ground that he had never known any one to succeed in anything else who had failed in schoolteaching. —Chicago Herald.

A Paired Youngster.

Harry is the youngest of the family, the only boy among several girls, and sometimes the superior advantage of girls seems to weigh heavily on his delicate mind. The other day he himself, however, thought to himself: "Women always first, I wonder why God didn't make 'em first, but he didn't. He made Adam first." —New York Tribune.

A RECONCILIATION.

The custom of collecting "Peter Pennies" or "Bones coin," as it is sometimes called, is of ancient origin. If the custom is fairly widespread by the outside world, it consists of setting aside one day out of each year for taking up a collection of money for the purpose of being sent to the pope as a bone, which is supposed to be in defiance of the expense of the holy see. Chambers' "Book of Days" and Brand's "Popular Antiquities" neither mention the custom, but I have succeeded in tracing it back to the twelfth century for a certainty. One authority even goes so far as to ascribe its origin to Ina, king of the west Saxons, who went to Rome in the year 727 and offered to the pope a fish pilgrim to the sacred city, the expense to be defrayed by "each man's penny" giving one "small copper penny each year."

This mighty collection of pennies was forwarded direct to the pope. Others claim that the bones placed before the pope were sent to the pope at Eborac. At a very early date the most laborious search fails to locate these things as far as the year, month and day are concerned) the penny penny case was changed until the tribute was understood to consist of "small copper pennies" contributed by every family who possessed land or cattle of a yearly value of 20 pence. This probably means upon which a yearly tax of 20 pence was levied. —St. Louis Republic.

How Squire Bond Was Fooled.

Squire Bond, whose descendants are foremost in Springfield affairs, kept a general store in the early part of the century out on the borders of Worcester county, and like all storekeepers of the period he sold rum. One old tippler whose credit was very good had badly in arrears, and Mr. Bond got way about trusting him. The tippler came one day with his pig half full and wanted it filled clear up as he was getting low. The liquor was poured in until it came up to the eork, but when the squire asked for the money it was not forthcoming. No place could induce him to trust any longer, so he poured out as much as he had put in and the tippler went away. The liquid which had half filled the hog beforehand was the rumper, but water. —Springfield Homestead.

Different Schools of Music.

Each generation has its own school of music which furnishes its processor with excitement, demands never and strange effects to stimulate the musician. As the lovers of the classic grow up, the listening public demands a romantic school with new forms and strange progression. The romantic school would be a success in turn by a chaotic school, and in the long run new generation all weights of artistic form would disappear. —Macmillan's Magazine.

THE DECADENCE OF OUR RACE. One of the Lessons We Can Learn from the Rise and Fall of Early Civilizations.

The French race, which has been dominant in the world, has already reached its decadent period. The French race, which has been dominant in the world, has already reached its decadent period...

The Roman civilization, which embraced the countries extending along the shores of the Mediterranean sea, was a civilization in many respects of a high order...

But yet the Roman Empire, the great governmental structure ever reared for the glory of many centuries, came to no more. It was overrun and conquered by the hardy and savage barbarians of the north...

These savage barbarians, from their turn, became civilized, and from them has sprung the great modern countries of Europe. The English, the American and the Frenchman of to-day, the Frenchman the German, and the Scandinavian are all descendants of the men who were barbarians and savages when the old Roman empire was in its vigor...

Roman civilization in its turn replaced Greek civilization—a civilization the highest in many respects that the world has ever seen. Greek civilization supplanted the Persian and the Babylonian and the Assyrian...

So it will be seen, that the world has thus far evolved by the alternations of civilizations. A dominant race is overthrown by a less conspicuous one, which in its turn, flourishes until it is overthrown by some other less conspicuous race...

And so the process has gone on. Whether it will continue to go on in this way until the end of time, of course, the foresight of man can not determine. But if we reason from the past the argument from analogy is strong that it will continue...

Of course this is not pleasant thoughts for us to contemplate. None of us wish to have our race transformed into a decadent and dying condition. But the way to avoid this is to make a study of the conditions which brought on their decay and ruin...

We find that these great nations of ancient times were surpassed by luxury and overreached by excess. Men grew wealthy, luxurious and arrogant, and lost the strong and sturdy qualities that made their nations dominant. They assimilated themselves to the decadent and vicious indulgences, and so made themselves easy victims for the northern barbarians, who came down with vigor uninvited and strength undiminished by excess...

If modern nations do not wish to suffer the fate of the ancient nations, they should be warned by their example and avoid their vices and their follies. In the mountains, let the savage nations of Africa, and the partially barbarous nations of South America, come forward. There may be qualities in these races which no civilization has yet developed...

Alcohol as a Food. And now a word about alcohol. Of all the substances that enter into the diet of man that are used for stimulation, to check waste and promote repair, none is so important as alcohol.

Like iron, it is good if properly used and harmful if abused. It is scarcely necessary to say much for or against alcohol. It is too well-known to all of us to need much comment, and I shall confine myself to speaking of its use medicinally by those who never tasted it before a physician prescribed it for some disease.

Here, as long as the actual waste is compensated for, alcohol does good. Beyond that it is worse than useless. Unfortunately such restricted dosage does not satisfy the careless doctor of average conscience. He gives it by the ounce repeated tablespoonfuls without stopping to discover that the result which he has been attained in the slower, farther pulse and stronger heart.

Hundreds and hundreds of men and women in all walks of society contracted their tipping habit by regarding as unrestricted the advice of their physicians that wine or stimulants of some kind are necessary for them to take. The advice in itself is justifiable, but the lack of restraint in the use of these potent, delirious convalescents goes on taking stimulants, which they find not only agreeable, but desirable, until they become slaves to drink.—New York Herald.

As an Appetizer. "I had long been taught that cold contracts and head expends," said Harold Barwell, "but I have had an experience that is different. In my office I use incandescent lights, and on my desk I have an upright bulb, with a standard. The shade was broken on it, and I placed it on top of the desk in a corner between the wall and a cabinet of pigeonholes. The other morning on entering the office I hung my derby hat on this bulb. Later on I went into an adjoining room, which was dark, and needing some light pushed the button in the wall that set the electric lamp aflame. The lights gave the photo such a cheerful aspect, it being a stormy day that I did not turn them off. At noon, when I was going out to lunch, I reached for my hat, and it was blacked.

"The incandescent lamp, which had been blown all the while, had made it very hot and the leather band was so drawn and contracted that I couldn't get my hat on my head. It stuck fast on the top of my cranium like a mule's nose."

There is no doubt that some of the most brilliant planets, such as Venus and Jupiter, are capable of casting distinct shadows, as may be seen any fine evening in the tropics. Not long ago Mr. L. G. Whitcomb observed that Jupiter threw a distinct shadow of his hat upon a wall, and that he was able to read a newspaper by the light. Mr. Moran also finds Mars is able to cast a shadow, but a much larger one than Jupiter. He was also able to count the number of stars in his newspaper placed in the light of the planet entering by a window, but he could not read them.—Exchange.

Two Recent Inventions. The varied trend of men's minds is well illustrated by the recent invention of two policemen's lilies, one of which contains knife blades that shoot out from the interior if the prisoner grasps the instrument, while the other is fitted with a trap to prevent the infling of money.

President Angell of the Society for the Preservation of Credit to Antislavery prefers the latter.—Boston Transcript.

The Mule's Lesson. "Your little daughter, as she went out awhile ago, seemed, the very picture of misery."

"She was going to take a mule lesson."

"And your older daughter, who is now going out, looks even more miserable."

"She is going to give a mule lesson."

Constantine, 110 pounds; Calhoun, 118 pounds; and Brownwood, 115 pounds. Boundless won by a margin of one and one-half lengths...

When the final arrangements were made with Garrison to ride Boundless, Trainer Nicholas said: "While I do not forsake my faith in Lookout, I think very well of our chances with Boundless. I have a line upon the eastern colts, as well as upon Boundless through Morello, and I believe the son of Harry O'Fallon gave the Futurity winner a harder race than any of the eastern colts are capable of doing."

are the same ones which were originally put in. The ground floor has been somewhat changed in front, as the present owner, Mrs. Amelia Lind, has her tobacco counter there and the usual show window has replaced the ones of former days.

SIR GEORGE TYRON.

The Famous Admiral Who Went Down With the Victoria.

Vice Admiral Sir George Tyron, who went down in the wreck of the British battleship Victoria, was one of the best and bravest of the British navy. He had vast experience, his service beginning in the days before steam was a prominent feature in naval architecture.

HOW SALMON TAKE THE FLY.

And How They Fight After They Take It. The Salmon Tactics. "A salmon doesn't take the fly as a trout does, and it never rises to one which it is washed up to."

"The excitement begins. It is divided between the fish and the fisherman. The more the salmon tries to get out of trouble the deeper he gets the angler in. The fish no sooner feels the hook in his jaw than he seems to realize that he has got to get it out as soon as possible or it will be laid for him."

But the little room in the rear and the upper rooms are unchanged. The little room has a floor of heavy oak boards, called down with hand-made nails. The two small paneled windows on the right have broad sills, which have often been the resting place of the thimble of Betsy Ross.

"The one thing in a fight with a salmon that the fisherman most fears and dreads is the liability of the fish to sink. A salmon is always a big fish. He will not show fight at once, but will sink to the bottom and lie there. Whenever he does make up his mind to fight the fisherman knows that the fight will be a long one. But the sinking fish may lie for half a day or more, despite all the angler's efforts to start him."

Thomas Jacobus has sufficiently recovered from his indisposition so as to be able to resume his duties as frorman of a Soo locomotive.

N. H. Collidge of the Collidge Supply Co. of Minneapolis, was in the city Friday last, interviewing the representative of that company, Mr. Day.

Harry Rose of the firm of Rose Bros., leaves for Chicago Sunday to purchase full line of goods for the fall and winter trade. He will be absent about ten days.

W. L. Jeffs of the W. L. store returned from Chicago Monday after a two weeks sojourn in the White City. He witnessed the burning of the cold storage building where so many warm firemen met their fate.

Lyman Carr and wife of Portville N. Y. are visiting the families of Sheriff Carr and Fred Smith. Mr. Carr has not been in the city for six years and seems much improved and endures of later which they took the steamer City of Alpena for this city and arrived Wednesday morning. Notice of their coming was sent in advance and Mayor Sherwood fairly outdid himself in arranging the initial chamber. Wreaths of flowers were hung on the walls and turlurture, which presented a beautiful appearance.

On arrival of the boat, Harry Sherwood and a number of friends met the party as they landed and escorted them to the hotel. As they passed up the steps, a number of young ladies from the balcony, which scattered bouquets of daisies, which fell on the leads and in the path of the bride and groom. After a stay of a few days, they will journey to Chicago to visit the World's Fair. To Sam and his beautiful brides, The News joins their best wishes in wishing them long life, happiness and prosperity.—St. Ignace News.

Cheap and Effective Improvements.
The White Marble Lumber Co. and the C. L. Co. completed its contract for furnishing and piling 607 tons of crushed stone on the street running north and south, east of the line kilns. The work was done under contract, and cost the city only 75 cents per ton delivered. Three years ago a similar amount of macadamizing was done at $1.10 a ton. The city saved no less than $225 by accepting the figures of the Lime and C. L. Companies. The stone was furnished for 40 cents a ton and delivered for 10 cents a ton. The teamsters, at that low price, averaged $3.50 per day each. They were Nick Decker, Bob Curran and Joe Fountain. A man is doing a big day's work when he handles as much of stone in a day.

We can never expect to have good streets unless we liberally use crushed stone, and it is hoped that the village council will spend all money on such street improvements in this manner.

The Elmer returned from manitowish last evening.

There were 23 cases on Judge Down's docket this morning.

How Not to Esterminate the Indians.
Let us not vigorously crowd the Indians to abandon their own government. If this is done before they are ready for it, they will surely lapse into degradation. Let us remain in compact bodies on reservations to help one another over the change and do not compel them to congregate and compete with the white race in a struggle in which they will be hopelessly defeated. Slowly, but surely, by instruction teach them the value of our property laws. Do not force citizenship upon them, but let them see that it is to their benefit. Show them that the white man did as he was bid with all good possible, and in a brief time as he takes to sell the sale slow with few cheap perfumers exposed to public eye while in an opposite direction her former misdeeds walked away, bearing in triumph the stolen property.—Kate Field's Washington.
