DRY GOODS.

Take Notice!

We do not blow hard about prices on cheap goods. For inferior goods are dear at any price. Neither have we any margin to give away as we have to live the same as other people. But we can buy good honest goods as cheap as the next man and our light expenses will enable us to sell them at as close a margin of profit as the largest dealers. We will do so. Call and be convinced.

"Doc" Allison of the Oliver house Escanaba who assigned last week was a $7000 creditor of Dennis Hutton of Manistique. The latter who saw no chance to play even took it out of Allison's hide and the poor old-fashioned Danny did him up.—Menominee Democrat.

Major Clarke felt extremely sorry that he was compelled to miss an issue of the Pioneer this week. He says this is the first time he has skipped for fourteen years. The public will forgive the Major if he will promise never to write his autobiography in a serial form and publish it under the euphonious title of "The Crack in the Mud," or "A Soldier's Story."

Frank Wardfield, assistant street commissioner did a good job in raising the Oak street sidewalk to grade. The street should be filled as the present elevated sidewalks may be the cause of serious accidents. A lady fell off the walk Monday evening and was considerably shocked. Either fill in the street, or place a street lamp in front of the new Schuman block.

A camp of gypsies have been camping near the lime kilns this week. Hundreds of people visited the camp Sunday afternoon and nearly every one had "their fortune told," at $1 a head. Fortune will come to us in a more satisfactory manner were we to "plant" our $1 bills instead of giving them to gypsies who know as little concerning your future as you do yourself.

At a meeting of the Board of Corrections and Charities, held at the office in Lansing, July 8 it was determined to visit the Upper Peninsula for the purpose of selecting a site for this new asylum the second week in August. As yet only the titles of South St. Marie and Escanaba have been applied for by the institution, and the board has notified the county seats of each county that all places desiring to apply for the site must file a written application at the office in Lansing not later than August 1, 1898. Manistique which has been claiming the asylum has not even filed an application for same. The Soo is in a fair way to capture the prize.

Rev. Lester after going through a severe course of training this week, may now be classed as one of our bicyclists.

The farmers will begin cutting hay this week. The crop will not be very heavy. Root crops are unusually good this year.

Mike Cochran and August Miller purchased Mr. Bestman's miller Tuesday and will continue the business at the old stand.

H. P. Howell is continually receiving new invoices of summer dress goods, hosiery and everything in the line of dry goods.

Lovers of Limburger cheese and Bricketts should call at Weitz & Thompson's meat market. The genuine article for sale.

A son of August Swenson, aged nine months, died Saturday. Funeral services were held Sunday afternoon, Rev. Johnson officiating.

For gents furnishing goods, hats, caps and dry goods, go to H. P. Howell's Bargain House. He has no sweat shorn goods, and keeps up with the styles.

On account of rain, Tuesday evening the grand ball at the Lakeside hall was postponed to this (Thursday) evening. Everybody invited. Admission 50 cents.

John Peterson was appointed postmaster at Thompson Monday. This is a straw which shows who will undoubtedly be appointed postmaster at Manistique.

Two boys captured a porcupine near the furnace Tuesday. One of the boys caught the tail of the animal's tail, and learned to his entire satisfaction that porcupines have quills.

Anderson, the shoe dealer, and Julius Peterson, the tailor, are contemplating erecting a building on Oak Street, opposite the Keystone House, to be occupied jointly by them.

The contract for Blumrosen Bros brick block will be awarded tomorrow. The building will contain four large store rooms, two of which will be occupied by the firm. The other rooms will be for rent.

Mr. Constantine of the Booth Packing Co., reports that large quantities of fine fish are being caught at present. Much of the catch is being placed in cold storage, but owing to the brisk market at Chicago this season the shipments to that city are large.

No less than 500 persons have visited the gipsy camp for the purpose of having "their fortunes told," at $1 a head. All of these $1 people were told by the gipsy that he was in possession of a fortune as some future time. Our foreman Jones was told that he would come into possession of a million dollars shortly. He and Mr. Hightstone will, no doubt, soon write their friends to that long promised feast.

An incident which savored very much of Mark Twain's "Tom Sawyer" story, happened on the street yesterday. Mr. Wardfield had a very heavy load of lumber on a wheelbarrow which he was moving up street. Several lookers on began to discuss their ability of moving the weight. As a result the timbers were moved without any exertion on the part of Wardfield. N. Goldberg, in consequence of his desire to demonstrate his strength "hasn't done anything since."

THE NEW ARMY RIFLE

American Inventors Fail to Produce a Satisfactory Gun.

The Krug-Jorgensen Magazine Model Adopted After Long Delay—Disappointment Great Elsewhere—The Weapon Described.

The decision to arm the soldiers of the United States with magazine rifles of the Krug-Jorgensen type is one of considerable importance. It declares in effect, says the Chicago Tribune, that American inventors have not yet made a magazine rifle which can compare with this model of foreign design. Awaiting only the final approval of the War Department, it will come as a surprise to many soldiers who have been waiting for a new rifle which has been waiting for a long time.

Under the provisions of an act of Congress passed in February last the sum of $400,000 will be spent in the manufacture of these rifles in the national armories, the royalty, of course, going to the foreign inventors. In the establishment of the War Department at Chicago are models of rifles in every stage of development, from the first invention in China, hundreds of years ago, to this same Krug-Jorgensen gun, which is placed at the top of the list as the highest type of modern magazine rifle.

Early in 1891 a special board of army officers was appointed by the War Department to investigate and examine models of magazine rifles, and reports as to which one seemed best suited to the needs of the United States Army. Magazine rifles of every kind and type were submitted to the board for its examination, and its report after two years' work was in favor of the Krug-Jorgensen gun. American inventors and makers of firearms were, however, not satisfied. They argued that it would be only a matter of time before arms for the national army of home manufacturers, and they succeeded in passing through Congress the following bill, which was approved February 27, 1893.

For manufacture of arms at the national armories, $200,000 provided, that no part of this appropriation shall be expended in the manufacture of magazine rifles of foreign invention as may be recommended for test by the War Department within the next thirty days shall have been tested by the War Department at the national armories, which board shall report to the Secretary of War, which report shall be submitted to the War Department on or before July 1, 1893. If the decision of said board of officers shall be in favor of the Krug-Jorgensen gun, the Secretary of War shall have the approval of the board of officers and the Secretary of War, then the appropriation, or such part thereof as the Secretary may direct, shall be expended in the manufacture of such American arms, provided that if no such American invention shall be recommended by said board or the approval of the Secretary of War, this appropriation shall be applicable to the manufacture of magazine arms recommended for trial by the board referred to and approved by the Secretary of War.

The Krug-Jorgensen gun that was accepted was made especially for trial by the American board, and is an improvement over the gun that was adopted by Norway and Denmark. It is therefore considered that in the new rifle the American army will have the best gun in the world, and will consequently have an advantage in the engagement with the land forces of any foreign power. The magazine is of the box type, is placed horizontally below and to the left of the receiver. It holds five cartridges, which are loaded from the right hand. Closing the cover brings the magazine spring into bearing against the cartridges, which are pushed around under the receiver until they enter it in succession through a cut at its left-hand upper surface. A cut-off permits use as a single loader, and the light metal charges for loading the magazine are available to be replenished quickly. The gun weighs nine pounds eight ounces and is thirty caliber. The barrel is surrounded by an outer metal casing, that it may be handled during rapid firing, and has a knife bayonet attached to this casing by an ingenious clasp.

A Washington dispatch says: In army circles the failure of American inventors to present an acceptable gun to the army is deeply regretted. Every rifle loaded, magazine detached to show firing mechanism. The facility has been afforded them. Their complaints have been heard, modifications have been made in the original plans, fresh tests have been given, but the superiority of American inventors has not been demonstrated. While this is regretted from a national point of view, nevertheless the army could not afford to arm itself with an inferior gun merely as a matter of patriotism. The Krug-Jorgensen small arm shows its superiority in the view of the most competent experts, and there was nothing to do but select it.

It does not look reasonable that six to twelve months should be needed to make a billion ball, but a first-class ball cannot be manufactured in less time, owing to the tendency of carved wood to shrink. If it shrank equally a ball could be cut and polished in a few hours, but it does not, the shrinkage being greater in the direction of the width than of the length. The standard ball must thus be roughly shaped, then kept for a number of months, until the shrinking process has been completed, when the fine cutting and polishing may be done.

FARJEON, THE AUTHOR.

The Most Active and Widespread of English Literary Men.

B. L. Farjeon, the celebrated English novelist, is a tiny man—short of stature, thin of body, dressed after the fashion of the literary man, but with the tendency to drop into the dress of the born story teller. But in his mind, such electricity, such quicksilver in his blood that he can remain still for a moment; and when you think you have pinned him down to a subject, he will take three leaps and bounds, and has taken three leaps and bounds in the story he is now composing in a long distance championship match. Overlooking about the main points of his extraordinary vivacity of mind and body.

B. L. FARJEON.

and body. The eyes—small, brown, twinkling—never really at rest. When he wants to tell you a thing he grabs you by the collar and wags his finger at you as though you were a naughty schoolboy. Every word is illustrated by a gesture; he has an eternal cigar, which almost always has a companion in his hand, which is constantly opened and shut in the unavailing effort to talk with the dignity of an Italian improvisatore and to enjoy the tranquil joy of a smoke. And Farjeon's character is pretty much what you gather from this restlessness and vivacity. T. P. O'Connor, who interviewed him recently. Amid all the hard work there is none the less a certain ease. One of the first to discover the magnificent possibilities and the mimental self-sufficiency of the typewriter, he has a whole storehouse of these "mime reduction" and composition. "I have in my room," says Mr. O'Connor, "had an very close to the typewriter, and Farjeon has five—all within the narrow compass of his house in South Hampstead, which mine have been scattered between my house in my country and the house of commons. I have done almost all my work and some long stretches in keeping the head cool. Many officers favor its adoption, while not a few are opposed to it with disfavor, owing to the fact that it is almost the exact counterpart of the typewriter, but of a material, of those so frequently met with on the heads of emigrants from the old world.

MILITARY HEADGEAR.

Proposed Substitutions for the Caps and Helmets of the British Army.

The War Department of the United States has now under consideration a plan for the substitution of the soldiers and officers to replace the forage cap and helmet now worn in the service.

INFANTRY CAP. CATALYBY BERRY.

The Detroit Free Press publishes one of the proposed innovations. The forage cap, intended for all branches of the army, is what is known as the forage pattern, and it is claimed for it that thevisor, being turned down instead of being raised, gives more protection to the eyes. The top is soft and pliable and has the advantage of keeping the head cool. Many officers favor its adoption, while not a few are opposed to it with disfavor, owing to the fact that it is almost the exact counterpart of the typewriter, but of a material, of those so frequently met with on the heads of emigrants from the old world.

The other design, known as the bayonet, is for the cavalry and is exactly similar to that worn by the Eighteenth century of the British army. It made of black astrakhan cloth and will weigh, complete, about ten ounces. It is a simple affair, but very small. The cut shows it for officers. For the enlisted men the pompon or top ornament. Every cavalry officer at Fort Leavenworth, Kan., twenty in all, favors its adoption.

TRICKS OF THE OPOSSUM.

How a Well Known Reporter Originated a Hoax.

Perhaps every human being who speaks or understands the English language, has frequently heard the expression, "playing possum." It is perhaps not one in a hundred knows how it originated or what it has special reference to. It is a natural trick of the opossum, or possum, a night prowling little animal very common in this country, and seems to be the principal weapon of defense which it employs as it approaches and it cannot get away. It defends itself by becoming entirely motionless, as if motionless, and runs away, but drops dead in a moment, and remains as still as death until the last enemy disappears, when it comes suddenly to life and gets a lively move on it—for a possum. Not long since some children, acquaintances of the writer, were visiting at a neighbor's, and during after nightfall through a piece of wood with their dogs, came across a possum on its way to get him no chance to get away, and it therefore dropped, as they thought, dead. However, the dog came and shut it up for the night. By morning it had ceased to play dead but the admitted possum to perfection, so much so that the children concluded he was badly hurt, or really sick, and with but little life left in it, and having compassion it concluded to give it the freedom of the yard for the benefit of its health. The change was beneficial—immediately, for just as soon as Mr. Possum found himself free, and all eyes turned away from him, it became at once the healthiest, most active and the fleetest of its kind, and before any one was aware of it was slipping away at such a rate that he could not be overtaken, and made good. It was taken, and made good. They seem to have no disposition to bite, although well fixed for it. The writer once found one in a trap, and had been set for catching rabbits. The snare pole was too slender to raise it off the ground, and it was resting in a half-crouching position with its string around its neck, and all appearance dead, when I approached it, supposing it had died, and to unloop the string from around its neck without care. After getting it out it was discovered that it was not dead, nor even hurt, but had been engaged in cutting the string along the loop and it had been a few minutes later would have been free. It was very aggressive and bit me while taking it out of the trap I would probably have parried, as it would have taken me by surprise. Although playing dead it will be observed that they watch you very closely through their half-closed, little eyes, in carrying them, by the tail of course, they keep a rigid look-out on the end of the tail, which is in case of a fall. They also raise their heads and keep their noses very close to the ground, clearly to avoid the bell effect of the blood running to the head. These manifestations are proof of life, and not death, and the possum seems not to understand that, and so furnishes the evidence of life while feigning death.—Medical News.

CASH THAT GOES AROUND.

It is Estimated That American Spend $100,000,000 in Europe Each Season.

It is interesting to inquire how many American tourists usually go to Europe every summer and return in the fall, and how much money they spend on their travels. Just a year ago the San Francisco Argonaut collected statistics on the subject, which we published at the time of the spring legions, in order to give point to an argument in favor of domestic travel. It appeared that about 80 per cent. of the cabin passengers arriving at San Francisco from Europe were Americans returning from a foreign tour; in other words, the total arrivals of cabin passengers at New York being 100,000, that 80,000 Americans visit Europe in the course of a year, mainly on pleasure bent. It further appeared that these traveling Americans spent on their voyage across the ocean an average of $100 each, or $200 for the round trip, which would mean $16,000,000 for each transportation for the whole. As all the passenger steamships were sailing under foreign flags, the total of millions went into foreign pockets. How much American travelers spend in traveling through Europe varies so much that it is difficult to strike an average. College professors, young ladies traveling alone, young men of limited means, but bent on a grand tour, often make a heavy tour of Europe covering fifty or sixty days for $100 a head. Men who have means, and want to enjoy themselves, rarely find that they can cut down their expenses below $20 a day. And rich men who have there a prodigious number in Europe every season, put their minimum expense at $10,000 for a four months' trip for a party of three. If we say that the average expenditure of American travelers in Europe is $15 a day per head, and the average length of the trip four months, or 120 days, we arrive at the total of the aggregate expenditure of the tourists amounts to the enormous sum of $144,000,000. Add to this $16,000,000 for ocean transportation, and the total outlay of money by Americans in Europe each season is $160,000,000.

REMOVING A STONE OF PEST.

Danger is near when the kidneys grow inactive. The source of pain is removable. Dr. J. C. Carter, of New York, has been successful in removing the stone of pest, which is the most dangerous of all kidney ailments, and is the cause of the most excruciating pain. A healthy impulse to the performance of the functions of the kidneys is especially commended by the writers, which likewise remove constipation, malaria, liver troubles, rheumatism, and other ailments. It is truly gratifying that the tramp probably puts some sale into his profession. New York, N. Y., higher aspirations.—Herald.

THE WEALTH OF LIFE.

It Does Not Consist in Ostentation and Display.

Some lives are lived so quietly, so uneventfully, that their close ends, so unobtrusively, that they are known to those who have known their influence. They remain, in the memory like the odor of violets. No newspaper writes their history; that is written on the hearts of those who knew them. What has been said of the poet, "The outside of the home, the history of the life, of the band and children, friends and neighbors. Poverty has not been an ennobling factor in their sympathy and help have been common. Poverty has been loved with calmness, for the spirit of life and patience has entered with the neighbor. Joy has been intensified, for the friend and neighbor rejoiced with those who rejoiced.

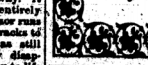

"All the life in the homes they influenced, believing that wealth increased responsibility, made the holders stewards only, not owners; that education was each man's privilege; that character each man's salvation, reputation the capital of each man's life, and to be most carefully guarded. That Caesar's wife must be above suspicion was the foundation of each daughter's creed and each son's charge. Neighbors, grew more kindly, friends more loving, kindred more true, who have met the personal power of those who quieted lives. Hospitality is the duty of man to man, this is another creed of these homes—not forbearance merely, but as a debt to humanity. Not only the known but the unknown have felt the touch of kindly grace and help.

The rush of life may separate the busy one from those whom kindly fate has left to grow old in the sweet dignity of a home life. But even the rush and hurry of life can never drive from heart or brain the memory or the influence of the home-made rich of the presence of one who held that gift of all gifts—the gift of a homelike, a home-keeper.

Every thought of such a one is a revelation of the better impulses, the higher soul, that often are hidden, if not buried, under the business cares, the social demands, of every-day life.—Christian Union.

MAKES ITSELF FELT

Not only when you take it, but unpleasant from first to last, and it only gives you a little temporary good.

The things to take its place are Dr. Fildes' Pleasant Pills. One of these at a dose will regulate the whole system perfectly. They're tiny, sugar-coated granules, scarcely larger than mustard seeds. They act in Nature's own way, and they do permanent good. Indigestion, Bilious Attacks, Sick Headaches, Constipation, and all derangements of the liver, stomach, and bowels are prevented, relieved, and cured. They're the cheapest, for they're guaranteed to give satisfaction or money is returned. Nothing can be "just as good."

They End this way

—the names of most so-called washing compounds. And it isn't an accident, either. It's to make them sound something like Pearline. That is the original washing compound—the first and in every way the best. These imitations are thus named in the hope of confusing you—in the hope that you'll mistake them for Pearline. For most people, that ought to be enough. It ought to convince them that the article so imitated, so copied, so looked-up-to, is the one that is best to use. If your grocer sends you an imitation, be honest—send it back—demand Pearline. JAMES TYLLE, New York.

Not only when you take it, but unpleasant from first to last, and it only gives you a little temporary good.

The things to take its place are Dr. Fildes' Pleasant Pills. One of these at a dose will regulate the whole system perfectly. They're tiny, sugar-coated granules, scarcely larger than mustard seeds. They act in Nature's own way, and they do permanent good. Indigestion, Bilious Attacks, Sick Headaches, Constipation, and all derangements of the liver, stomach, and bowels are prevented, relieved, and cured. They're the cheapest, for they're guaranteed to give satisfaction or money is returned. Nothing can be "just as good."

As the result of a "coupon contest" a lower peninsula paper sends two ministers, three sporting men and a chinaman to the World's Fair.

Retribution is slow in many cases, but sometimes it comes, and comes with a roar. The man who wrote "I Am the Man Who Wrote 'Tha-ra-ra-boon-dee'" and "My Sweetheart's the Man in the Moon" was locked up for a plain drunk in New York the other day.

The recent Parisian riots are destructive to life and property, had its inception in a ball given by the students. A nude lady riding a horse around the dance hall shocked a Parisian Anthony Comstock that the police were called in to stop the exhibition.

The Cosmopolitan and The Tribune are sent for only $2.50. This advantage of this offer at once as it will not be open long. This offer applies to new subscribers and such as pay one year in advance.

Joseph E. South, editor of the Menominee Democrat, was married to Miss Christina Quilty July 5th. A good way to celebrate the Fourth.

C. S. Bannay, editor of the Cheboygan Tribune, celebrated the nineteenth birthday anniversary of the Tribune by making it six columns paper.

Tom Hanna of the Range-Tribune states that he has gone to the World's Fair. It is his duty for an editor to make a note of his absence, for a newspaper generally improves by the absence of the editor, and the readers wonder why the foreman is not allowed to edit the paper all the time.

L. M. Miller, chief clerk of the late house of representatives, will next week commence the publication of a semi-monthly journal to be called the "State Affairs." It will deal with transactions of the state government, the laws of the state and the judicial interpretation of them by the supreme court and state politics.

The Peter Parson Dialect Letters, which appear weekly in the Argosy, published at Harbor Springs, reflect great credit on the editor, Robt. H. Wright. Wright should sell his letters to a syndicate of metropolitan papers.

Your Chance to Visit Chicago. If you want to go to Chicago for a week you should see E. W. Miller, agent of the Hart line of steamers, with office at the docks. He says the Fannie C. Hart will leave for Chicago about the 21st, spend one week there, furnish lodging, breakfast and supper to the passengers; will call at the dock near the Fair grounds at night and return there the next morning, and the expense of the entire trip will only be $22.

A rather pointed story is told of Senator Blackburn, of Kentucky, and the late Senator Hoek, which is given in "The Editor's Drawer" of Harper's Magazine. Upon one occasion it was necessary to taste some old bourbon whiskey before shipping the Simon pure to a fastidious customer. The wretched dealer brought him of these two great men, who were universally admitted to be connoisseurs in the article, and begged their indulgence in the matter of tasting the liquor.

TOIStOI WILL COME.

The Great Russian Intends to Visit the World's Fair.

Called Away by the Grandeur of the Building at Jackson Park and at the City of Chicago's Fair.

There is little doubt that Count Leo Tolstoy will visit America and the Chicago world's fair during the latter part of the summer.

In an interview with him the count speaks of the rumors about his visit to the United States. The count's latest interview is as unique as is his life. The count was sitting in his library when the interviewer called. After a brief general conversation the subject of America was mentioned. Upon this the count took from a drawer a copy of the September Occurrence which was the first Russian Illustrated weekly to print the different views of the world's fair grounds and buildings. Opening this he looked across the table and said:

"Is it not grand, beautiful? How great is the power of man who could accomplish so much in so little time! Why, it seems almost incredible! Truly, as wonderful as this appears on paper, how much greater, nobler, must it appear in reality! Have I any desire to see it? Who would not? But with me it is not merely a matter of seeing these wonders. I also wish to learn."

He then proceeded to enlarge on the fact that the only culture for the Russian majesty lies in adopting all the western methods of working the soil. Regarding the probability of his visiting America he said:

"God has seen fit to lighten the burden of Russia this year, although He has not taken it away altogether. Happily for us all, so far the epidemics which threatened us have been limited with right royalty and the experience of the people has been less than their violence. Furthermore, the condition of the crops is not so bad as it was last year and year before last. On this account I think that my people will be able to spare me for three or four months during this year. You may be sure, therefore, that under a great anxiety befalls us before that time I shall give myself the extremely great pleasure of visiting the States. My energies will be directed mostly, when I am there, to studying their methods of irrigation and fertilization. Still, I should not neglect the other branches of their progress. Ah, that reminds me! What grand steps they have made in the way of electrical development! I should like very much to meet their what they call 'Little Wizard,' is it not? I mean Edison. I admire the man very much, especially his indomitable energy."

As the count was talking his eye suddenly rested upon a picture of the great Masonic temple in Chicago, which was printed on one of the pages of the September Occurrence. He stopped and, looking intently at the cut, said:

"Here is a characteristic trait of these Americans. Ever climbing upward, more restless and more ambitious than the Frenchmen. I am no architect, yet I cannot but feel the greatness of a building like this. Why they say they had to put down a layer of steel plates under the foundation in order to support the immense weight of this monstrous building. I wonder (with his characteristic smile, half gay, half ironical), 'how much higher the Tower of Babel was than this central tower?'"

Referring to the various tall for and against the czarowitz visiting America and the Chicago exposition, the count expressed himself very much grieved at the unfavorable attitude of the czar on the subject, as he is sure such a visit would prove very beneficial to the czarowitz directly and, consequently, to the Russian people indirectly, besides serving to cement the friendship between America and Russia.

How a Snake Bite Was Cured. Whiskey and rattlesnake bites are supposed to be inseparable, but a Riverside (Cal.) doctor recently successfully treated a rattlesnake bite without the aid of the infamous. The treatment was the hand and arm were first thoroughly cleansed in a hot medicated wash, and the place where the fangs entered were lanced, so that the poisoned blood might escape. It was again washed clean, and 25 percent city solution of camphor and phenolic acid was injected into some twenty-five places in the hand and arm. The only remaining treatment was to keep the parts perfectly clean. The doctor says that anyone bitten by a rattler should immediately suck the wound and spit out the venom, then apply a handkerchief lightly above the wound and open it with a clean pen-knife to let it bleed. The snake is being done not a moment should be lost in getting to a surgeon. The snake may also be killed while you wait.

The Cost of Patents. To have an invention protected all over the world it is necessary to take out sixty-four patents in as many different countries, the estimated cost of which is seventeen thousand dollars.

A MAMMOTH EGG.

It Was Laid by a Bird Thirty-Two Feet in Height.

"We now come," said Mr. J. C. Stephens, to his auction rooms in King Street, Covent Garden, London, "to the great bird which living or extinct. It has been extinct for some time, and only two of its bones have been found. According to the catalogue the bird was more than 200 feet high and was 20 feet wide."

"I should think so," said a proposer of the egg buyer.

"It seems to me," said Mr. Stephens, "that the bird that laid this egg must have been something like a turkey. The egg was found in a hole in a tree trunk that measured 24 inches in its longest circumference and 10 inches in its width."

The egg is several inches larger than the egg we sold last year. It is, of course, a great rarity, and not more than thirty of these eggs are known. This, I think, is the finest egg of the lot. It should be remembered that there are sixty known eggs of the great auk, and they sell for a couple of hundred guineas each. I don't mean to say that this egg should be sold as much as a great auk's egg, but we sold one not so good as this last year for seventy guineas."

The egg was passing from hand to hand in a wooden box, while the auctioneer and several like porcelain when it is drummed on with the knuckles. The bird that was accustomed to lay this sort of egg lived, it is said, in Madagascar and buried its egg in the sand. It is only possible to find the egg by digging in the sand, and more eggs may yet be found, as a good deal of the sealers of Madagascar has not been dug up yet.

The egg was finally sold for sixty-seven guineas.

DR. NANSEN'S STOVE. The Cooking Range Especially Made for the Arctic Expedition. It has been finally arranged that Dr. Nansen and his party shall leave Norway for the ice north in the Fram very soon. Apropos of the expedition, we give an illustration of a remarkably comprehensive cooking range and outfit which has been made for the use of Dr. Nansen and his crew during their forthcoming arctic expedition. When it is remembered that the latter will take at least five years, and that the range in question will be during that period practically the only means of cooking for the entire party, it is evident that the appliance should be as perfect of its kind as ingenuity and the best necessary for the cooking is produced by a compact oil lamp, so constructed as to be of immense power, and inserted in the range under such ingenious structural conditions that the oil can, under no circumstances, touch the food which is being prepared. Stoves similar to those used in the range will be employed for heating the ship, and for this purpose Dr. Nansen is being supplied with twenty tons of "safety oil," which only flashes at three hundred degrees.

Whipping Abolished. A decree abolishing corporal punishment in the case of women condemned to hard labor has been officially promulgated in St. Petersburg.

Damp Climate. The wettest region on earth is Assam, British India. From 1870 to September the monthly rainfall averages from 100 to 200 inches.

THE ART OF MOVEMENT.

Not Easily Acquired by Little People Who are Said to Quack Horses.

Every girl desires personal grace, not only of the spirit but of the body, and wishes it should fill and control all her motions. If she is long limbed and has long neck, she may, by sufficient exercise, and knows instinctively something of the attack and retreat of gesture or of movement, she may have desire without much effort. But if she is a starchy little body and always in a hurry she is not so fortunate. She must acquire special instruction. Grace is by no means necessarily an animal attribute, because horses may be taught to assume the grace of the human, and the exhibition they receive from the movements of his neck, because of the softness of his long curves and the freedom they possess from the hindrance, the long step, the slender limb and the whole beauty of his contour, and anything more awkward than a cow it would be hard to find. And again, although a hound or a great dog is a splendid dog in full of each in a separate way, a pug or a bulldog is as clumsy as it comes within the power of any living thing to be.

Although the idea of grace is that of slow and leisurely movement, yet there may be quite as much grace in the rapid one. In the sweeping flight of a bird, in the floating of the water, in the sinuous crawling of the fish, in the leaping of a cat—that thing of curves and bending ends. The real grace of motion is that which has no sharp corners and angular lines, no halts or stumbles; it may be slow, it may be swift, it must be on the line of the curved line. Now this rounded motion can never be achieved by the fixed and longest muscle any more than by the stiff one or by the lame one. The muscle must be a good one, filled with the red blood and the new cell of exercise, assuming instantly the control of the nerve and sound with health. The long and slender limb, that leads in response to its movement, the movement of a dream of grace, is useless if its muscles have no mastery of it. If the muscles themselves are rigid that the law has the control of them, and only exercise, and that of an intelligent sort, will make that obedient to the will and make the will know how to order it. This reason, among others still more consequence, makes gymnastics of great value in the education of girls. Of course, the girls of still greater value in relation to their general health, in the expansion of the chest, the spreading of the internal organs, the bearing of the body's weight and much more of the sort—Harper's Bazar.

A LIVING FISH NET. The Singular Spectacle Witnessed by a Traveller in Iceland. At Tofur, one of the islands of Oceania, M. Ayle Martin witnessed a peculiar method of fishing. The scene, as he describes it, is picturesque and interesting. The costume of the natives of Tofur is a kind of short tunic of sea weed or leaves. They powder their hair with chalk and wear wreaths of gardenias or red hibiscus on their heads and around their necks. The warriors, unlike men of peace, powder their hair. As their bodies are very long, they have quite a terrible appearance.

At a signal all the inhabitants of the village assembled on the sea shore. There were about two hundred persons. They plunged into the water, each carrying a branch of the coral palm. At a given distance from the shore they turned toward it, and formed a compact half-circle, each one holding his palm branch perpendicularly in the water, thus forming a kind of sieve. The leader of the party gave a signal, and this living net approached the shore gradually, in perfect order, diving before it a multitude of fishes. Surrounded by this living wall, and caught in the coral palm branches, many of the fishes were cast on the sand by the waves and others were killed with sticks.

The women gathered up the fishes in baskets. Some were at once taken to the cabin of the chief of the village and some were cooked for M. Marin over hot coals, and given to him without seasoning, but with bananas and coconut milk to complete the meal—Youth's Companion.

WHAT SHE KNEW ABOUT DOGS. A Trick That Got the Cats Off by Money and Peace of Mind. Nick is an office boy employed on Broadway. He turned up in the office the other day with an ungainly looking hanging on to a tattered rope which he had improvised from some remnants of the ash barrel. The chief clerk shook his head resolutely at Nick's proposition that the entire staff should be supplied with such a device. Nick said it was a good thing, though he had doubts as to whether it would be better die away without a home. The clerk said that it was a good thing, though he had doubts as to whether it would be better die away without a home. SEVENTY-FIVE CENTS. The woman took out a half dollar and converted it into ten cents, and she dug out the dog in a trich. When Nick got back to the office the chief clerk said to him: "Nick, you're in luck today. I've got a ten-cent bill offered in the Herald this morning for your dog." Nick began to feel giddy. The fact is, Congress has never been in favor of the free and unlimited coinage of silver. members have voted for it merely from a demagogical subterfuge to the cause of an unformed constituency. They have not had either the courage or ability to direct public opinion. They have not tried to combat the injurious prejudices which have been created by them. Now that the people have become better acquainted with the subject their representatives should be glad to go back on their old records.

Excerpts from the proceedings of the recent Board of Education meeting held at Escanaba. "Inspector Egan thought the board ought to employ a supplementary teacher, to be paid a regular salary, but the matter was passed over after a brief discussion. A very laughable thing occurred while Egan was making his plea for a supplementary teacher. One of the members of the board leaned back and whispered to one of his colleagues: "I don't think we ought to teach any such branch as supplementary." The children have more to attend to now than they ought to and it is that right to annoy them with that and also that blamed kindergarten." The colleague didn't know any more about the subject, however, than the other fellow, but they both frowned and looked wise.—Escanaba Mirror.

San Francisco Chronicle. A favorite amusement with the United States army officers on the Rio Grande is the Mexican cock fight. Every Mexican village has its cock pit, and officers on a few hours' leave create the fever to see the fun. There are no better cockfighters in the world than the Mexicans, and an English opinion sanctions the sport the popularity of every body is identical. The cause of the sport is reached when the apparently vanquished bird, after having been completely buried in the dust of the arena to stanch his blood, suddenly rises as if from the grave, and with one blow from the spur flies his scintillated tail in the air, and in a few moments is a rival in the act of crowing over his supposed victory.—San Francisco Chronicle.

The Trade Chameleon. A chemist was called up at 2 o'clock the other morning by the ringing of a night bell. On opening the door he found a dunnell, who told him that she was going to a picnic that morning and was out of rough. The prudent druggist turned her off with the assurance that he had the stock to cover a check like hers.—Figaro.

A Standstill. Cholly—How often does your tailor send in his bill. Freddie—Every week. Cholly—Frequent! You don't get clothes that often, do you? Freddie—No, and neither does the tailor get his money.—Detroit Free Press.
