Take Notice!

We do not blow hard about prices on cheap goods. For inferior goods are dear at any price. Neither have we any money to give away as we have to live the same as other people. But we can buy good honest goods as cheap as the next man and our light expenses will enable us to sell them at a clear margin of profit as the largest dealers. We will do as well and be convinced.

The item relative to insurance companies, which appeared in last week's Tribune, was not intended as an insult to the local agency here. As far as we can ascertain, the agency Mr. Marsh represents, settled promptly and fairly with all policy holders carrying insurances at the various companies represented in Mr. Marsh's agency. The item is to the extent of many hundreds of dollars. One deposition of the defendant, John Koetting, through the columns of this paper several weeks ago, led to the extent of many hundreds of dollars. His failure to appear in court set him down to be a consummate rascal and thief.

A night school would be liberally patronized in Manistique. There are a great many young men at work in the mills that would patronize such an institution.
John B. Koetting, cashier of the failed South Side Savings Bank, of Milwaukee, under indictment for illegal banking, failed to appear in court Monday and his bond of $10,000 was forfeited. Koetting was recently brought from Denver after much trouble and put under bonds to appear. Several Schoolcraft citizens are interested in Koetting to the extent of many hundreds of dollars. Some time in August, Dixon while driving along a public highway on a load of hay, met with the misfortune of an upset. When he gathered himself he had received a dislocation of the right leg. He thinks that the condition of the highway was responsible for his mishap and therefore, politely requests said township to issue its purse and present him with a $20,000 bill. Attorney Foster represents Mr. Dixon and undoubtedly expects to reveal in the wealth he will compel Thompson township to disgorge.

The Populistic state officers of Kansas are to be commended for one thing. Johnson and Welton, spent several days in quest of the time in the company of the Lettice river. Our informant says that the whole party did not succeed in killing enough game to supply them with food, and that silver bullets made it possible for the boys to bring several live specimens home with them. The man that "upheld" may have exaggerated a little, but we give it as it was given to us.

New Mexico with her "grassiers" and Utah with her polygamists, are knocking for admission into the sisterhood of states. Their wishes will undoubtedly be gratified as the territories in question are democratic.
During the fire, H. P. Howell lost a gold watch with a small diamond set. The pin was highly prized by him, not so much for its intrinsic value but as a keepsake. Parties retracing same to him will be suitably rewarded.
The committee having in charge the location of the new upper peninsula insane asylum, failed in selecting a site at the meeting held Sept. 26th, as Governor Rich was absent. Escanaba or the Soo will be selected without doubt.
The sugar famine is being felt here. Sugar is now selling in our stores at 7 cents per pound. The sugar committee is responsible for this state of affairs. The output was curtailed during the summer in order to decrease the supply and all increase the price.

THE CHURCH BELLS.

On the mountainous valley, where my cradle stood of yore. I sat in trembling wonder when the bell was rung. Heard the church bells' tone voice was and true as sick and sore.

receive a rich reward and fame, and I was already married to my dear Marie. I opened the door, in the hall of the late November day stood a poorly-dressed woman before me. Out of her haggard and ghastly-blanched face looked a pair of great dark eyes be- seecingly at me.

MY FIRST PATIENT.

Its Death Taught a Lesson Never to Be Forgotten.

I had been in my new lodgings for a week that had dragged itself along in an endless series of days everyone bringing to me the dreams and hopes of an entire lifetime. Over the glass door of my new little apart- ment the white door plate with which it is customary to announce the office of a practicing physician had shone for a week. For the same length of time my little receptional consulting room had waited with its dark curtains and straight-backed chairs for the patients who were to come to seek the advice and help of Dr. Marc Erhardt. After a week I had no cause to wonder that my room remained so empty in the first days. For the neighborhood had first to get accustomed to my name, and to the fact that they could find good medical advice in their near vicinity. All this I did to myself comfortably at that time. When by good fortune I should be able to lead only one patient, then the situation would quickly change. The room would proclaim my success. I should soon go about in a pretty little carriage, with a dark brown horse driven by a respectable coachman, then indeed, then.

PORTABLE CREMATORY.

How Chicago Will in the Future Dispose of its Carcasses. Superintendent Weller, of the Chicago bureau of street cleaning, tested a new portable garage crematory this afternoon and pronounced the test successful. The crematory, drawn by two horses and tended by six men, was driven to a point on the alley of the Eleventh ward, burning the garbage as it went.

THE PORTABLE CREMATORY. and a door in the end allows water, paper and other combustible material to be thrown on the fire and consumed. A funnel receives the garbage and food refuse which is constantly being dropped in a ward during a single day.

THE PANTHON.

A View of the Building that Must Be Erected in the Future. Imagine the pantheon in its glory, before it was stripped of its gables, and its masonry was shrouded by empress and popes. Conceive that vast, solid dome, the largest span in the world—nearly one and a half more than the diameter of St. Paul's—the first great dome ever raised by man, the grand invention of Bramante, and so of that of Holy Wisdom, which the Greeks in all their art never dreamed. The dome, with the round arch of which it is the nucleus, the most fertile conception in the whole history of building. The pantheon became the parent of all subsequent domes, and so of that of Holy Wisdom at Constantinople, which was the parent of the Byzantine domes of Europe.

GEMS OF TRUTH. Some people talk most about what they know least. Some of the sweetest grapes grow near the ground. If you haven't got much, be thankful and you will double it. Most people work themselves almost to death in trying to find rest. WALTER A. HARRIS says more in a look than a man can do in a look. FORTY says you can talk about themselves to the satisfaction of others very scarce.

INTERESTING EXHIBITS.

The Pueblo of the Aztecs in Miniature at the World's Fair.

Construction and Details in the Architecture of the Pueblo of the Aztecs.

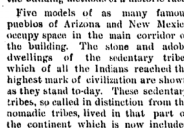

Through some removal from the central portion of the grounds this building is at all times thronged with visitors who seem loathe to leave the delectable remnants of a wonderful feast.

There seems to be a sort of fascination in these repulsive relics. The average person will stand and gaze into the slightest sockets of a grinning skull with as much interest as he will view a beautiful picture on a marvelous mechanism.

One day recently a party of men were strolling about among the mummies when one of them, a big, rough-looking fellow, turned away from the sight with an expression of mingled awe and disgust.

With a laugh the others followed the squeamish fellow from the building without going any farther and thus missing many very interesting sights.

Ranged along in the central portion of the building are these primitive structures of the most ancient race of redmen in North America.

In miniature, of course, but they are so carefully modeled after the originals that they afford an accurate study of the building methods of a historic race.

Five models of as many famous pueblos of Arizona were placed in the occupy space in the main corridor of the building.

One of the most remarkable of the pueblos is that of Bonito in the canyon of Chaco in New Mexico.

A novel feature of the daily programme at the fair is the starting of the Pueblo of Manguey and still remains as it stood untold centuries ago.

At stated intervals during the day Prof. Fredberg opens his music book to a familiar tune and places it before him on his chinning stand.

GOHOLA AGAINST CANOE.

The Indians Were No Match for the Day Gondoliers.

The peaceful routine of world's fair life was interrupted one morning late by an incident which sent a ripple of excitement over the grounds.

On the morning above mentioned, Havimstati, chief of the Quakabi, had gone out to his canoe, for a seasonal along the Jagoon.

Presently, at the west end of the basin, a gondola, manipulated by two athletic gondoliers, named Giuseppe Martin and Enrico Salino, shot out from beneath the bridge and glided swiftly past the gondola.

For a time the two were nose and nose on an exciting course. It was curious to note the different action of the rowers.

The Venetians in their gorgeous costumes showed up excitedly. They were curious to note the different action of the rowers.

Down the basin and past the golden statue went Indians and Venetians. The gondola crew started first and went through ahead.

When Havimstati landed he walked along to the gondola and looked at it attentively for some time.

When Havimstati landed he walked along to the gondola and looked at it attentively for some time.

At certain hours of the day the groups around the judges' stand in the three-story pavilion remind one of scenes at a Kentucky sale of blooded stock.

Then during a lull their conversation will run from horses and cattle to the price of a square yard of fabric.

"I never suffered from sore feet as I do now - not even in the middle of harvest."

"The tremendous crowds," he said, "and the walking and sightseeing have done more than make my feet sore."

"It's all right to come and see the fair, but as for me I have no desire to see the fair any more."

When a visitor to the fair announces that he will not see the fair any more, you may take it for granted that his wife was with him.

THE TRIBUNE

(Successor to the Star.)

THE TRIBUNE PUBLISHING CO.

625 E. HOLSING, Editor and Manager.

THURSDAY, OCT. 5, 1899.

Notes from the White City.

CHICAGO, Oct. 5th, 1899.

The older states show little in their respective buildings of interest to anybody but an American, and generally speaking the West makes by far the best display. Florida and Louisiana however, have both good buildings, the former in the shape of a half-moon wherein shells, sea-weed, moss, sponge, fruit, wine and ligatures, are to be seen and to be purchased at World's Fair rates, the latter is chiefly conspicuous for a collection of Confederate battle-flags and other mementoes.

Information for Homeowners? by the annual. Near Arkansas is the Kentucky building, chiefly remarkable for its dining room on the American plan. Here the hungry visitor may stand at the door a long time before he has a suitable morsel to eat. The most interesting watching elsewhere being, or if he prefers, he can amuse and perhaps instruct himself concerning the status of Henry Clay and Daniel Boone. There are many objects in this building connected with the early history of Kentucky, and the visitor whose thoughts are not busy in wondering when he can get into the dining room will find these objects most interesting, setting so much as they do of pearls and pretensions, undertaken by the pioneer settlers of the "dark and bloody ground." Looking at them one thinks of the hardy frontiersmen even then pushing his way westward, sometimes cloaked in his onward march but always in the end recovering the lost ground and of the red man of forest and prairie, slowly and patiently retreating before the pale face. Of Indian wars and massacres, burning towns, and ravaged crops of Indiana, Kentucky and Kentucky on the one side, and also that it should be so equal tracery and double-denting out of the pale face who always obtained possession of the land at last, as he will finally obtain possession of the whole world.

Arizona, Oklahoma, and New Mexico share one long building among them, and show Indian work, skins of animals, minerals, fruits, and photographs. In the New Mexico end is a collection—the only one in existence—of stone idols, the household gods of the cliff-dwellers and also of the Pueblo Indians, all being very much worn and broken, and as interesting as anything in the State exhibits. Piles of different newspapers on a table at the Arizona end but the visitor may search in vain for even a single copy of the "Star" or "Tribune," which would seem to indicate great negligence on the part of somebody. The new State of Washington has one of the largest buildings of the group, the central part of it being occupied by a miniature farm, where the dwellings, houses, out-buildings, stables, and fences are all reproduced, as well as a creek which runs through the farm. Beyond the house the farmer and his horses and cows are cutting and binding the grain, and about half the field below some wheat, this field is another of grain not yet touched, and beyond this again is land still unplowed. The whole affair is so pretty and so well done that everybody who comes into the building stops at the farm, and the crowd moves about the place becomes crowded, then the guard gives the word to stand aside, and others take possession of the empty places. Besides this farm the building contains stuffed animals, minerals, the grain, fruit, and specimens of native birds, the pupils of Indian schools, and last of all, outside the front door towers a mast of Washington 95 feet in height. The Montana building, which bears the suggestive inscription "Montana's Old Time," contains stuffed animals, fruits, grains, and crosses, and is much like Washington in the character of its exhibits. Idaho has a vegetable variety of its exhibits, dark lettuce and rough green

ALWAYS INVENTING.

AN INGENUOUS MAN WHO IS USUALLY DOING SOMETHING.

A Story That Shows What a Terrible Attention the House of Representatives pays to the House of Inventors.

Had it not been that my family went out of town a short time ago and left me home and despondent, I would never have been able to write this story. As it was I was over by the entrance of a friend and went to live with him and his little family—for awhile.

It is no use denying it. I like to touch shoulders with men of ideas, and that is just what this friend of mine might be called—a man of ideas. I did not know it before I went to his house, but when I discovered he is an inventor.

What he invents is immaterial; sufficient to say he invents in the full sense of the word. If he works out an idea, and when the model is perfected he doesn't do what he thought it would, he makes it do something else.

It is a double track action story of inventing that is destined to fill long columns of the newspapers. The inventor is not to blame for either of these happenings, his business being exclusively to invent.

When George came back to earth and to his family in his past life, he was the tangible outcome of his thinking.

"Isn't that splendid?" he said, with a look of joy before me. His black eyes glinted.

"Yes, it is very pretty," I replied. "Will it work?"

"Yes, but I'll work. The new will get a large and steady flame, with no waste of gas and without the usual pressure. It will work for me."

George got up and adjusted it to the chandelier. He got out matches and then turned out the remaining gas jet. Fully it matches what we were to see in the dark. I held my breath because my mind on solemnly lighting the occasion was fast looking.

He said many things, which I could not be led to report. The novelty of a private house should not be invaded. It was his right to say anything as he pleased.

The thing did not work. I could see that, even though it was dark. He repeated the gas and it did not work. You can never tell what an inventor is going to do, so I said nothing. Oh, I believe I did ask him if there was an opening in the end for the gas to go through. He said, sure, though, but I know George didn't answer.

He finally ordered a couple of feet of small rubber hose, which he had used in another experiment and fastened the gas pipe to one end. He thought perhaps the small diameter was an obstruction that would clear away. The object of the hose was to attach to a fan.

REASONABLE PRICES ABOUT TIPS.

The greatest abuse of the tipping system is the New York in its application to apartment houses. It has become a custom almost to tip to the janitor, bell boy, elevator boy, etc., certain amounts every month or fortnight—this without any regard to whether the apartment has received any particular service or not.

The result of this indiscriminate tipping is quite natural—you get no particular service.

Not a few tenants of apartment houses have had an experience with janitors and bell boys who have taken the risk of the reputation of these experience. As in the case of waiters, there are a good many annoyances to which tenants may be subjected which cannot be cured with a club and which do not even form a substantial basis of complaint. And they are not less annoying because you can't get away from them or reword them. But to simply pay a man indiscriminately just because he is in the position of an obligator whatever.

Make it a rule and can recommend it after some experience to pay with reasonable liberality for any special services—that is, my service above and over and above that which the man is engaged to do for the very reason of his position. And I have to emphasize upon a general principle—that is, unconditionally, if you are paying for any service, you should be paid for it, and have at all times, but not only ready and willing, but eager to receive you. Do not insist upon a composition liberally every person about the place who renders you services, and he will be very glad to do so. Follow this rule, and you will invariably get excellent service, plenty of attention. This rule will equally well apply to the waiter if you are a regular customer.—New York Herald.

OLD CAMP MEETINGS.

PICTURESQUE FORMS OF WORSHIP IN "GOD'S FIRST TEMPLES."

The Gathering of Early Days Compared With Those of the Present—From Fire Kitchens to Electric Lights—Some Notable Camp Meetings Described.

WHEN I was a boy, I used to spend a part of every summer with my grandfather's family. He lived in a village in central New York that shall be named only what the villagers and the nearby folk who dwell on the hills around called it colloquially, "The Hook."

It was a quiet village during 51 weeks of the year, but for one week it was full of life. In three or four streets were crowded with people. They every day kept open house. Then the whole countryside trembled. Then the half dozen stores of the Hook did a rushing business. Then the 10-acre grove that nestled between the village and West Hill was filled with tents, and the shadows under the trees were drawn away by blazing fires at night, and ringing words of exhortation and shouts of glory and nobility of heaven every hour of the 24.

That week was camp meeting week, and I remember it as a boy of my grandfather's family during that week the whole year seemed wasted. The meetings were held by the Methodists, and the Presbyterians, and Baptists, and in helped them enjoy the week. Camp meeting there and then was the event of the year, and the whole community, spiritually and in business. Camp meeting week always came between August and early in September, when there was a lull in the hard work of the summer.

The meetings used to be on Tuesday. Monday morning the number of tents, and the repairing of the plank seats, and the setting up of the pine knots for the fires that should illuminate the evening, and the setting up of the benches of the preachers' stand. The tents would not all get up in time before Tuesday night, and the first day of the meeting was usually very quiet. From that time on the crowd would grow till Sunday, when the attendance would number several hundred. Families would drive in on Sunday, and would have to start from their homes by 3 and 4 o'clock on Monday.

The sermons were made of fervor. Their fervor was beyond description, and they swept the audience as a field of grain is swept in a threshing machine. The singing was "congregational," but it assisted the preacher in controlling the audience. By Thursday night "who power" would be present. By Saturday night there would be dozens of cases. All day Sunday men and women would jump into the air shouting "Glory" and then fall unconscious to the ground. Many who came to seek would yield to the influence of the spirit and go about the grounds singing and a strange, happy, weeping tears of pleading with friends who were yet unconverted. On Sunday night the number of those who were unconverted would be greatly diminished. Every year there were conversions of those who had not believed that their friends and relatives had all hope of their souls.

The reclaiming of "backsliders" was an important part of the week. During the camp meetings at the Hook the conviction and conversion of sinners, and every year's meeting, was an especially important feature. In one kind or the other, so that it became a sort of landmark in the history of the entire community. Of course some of the young folks who attended the camp meetings used to "cut up." There was more or less "yarnin'" going on in the back seats of the church. But at the whole good order was maintained, and oftentimes some of the "wicked" young men and women were convicted and converted. It became a powerful ally of the preachers among those who were still in their sins.

In those days the owners of the grounds charged no rent for their use for camp meeting purposes. A few years later...

TOOK HORACE GREELLY'S ADVICE.

Now Governor Bruce Belms Made a Fortune in Iowa.

When he went to Iowa in 1872, Horace Belms was 30 years of age and could hardly have expected to be elected twice to a liberal and progressive governorship of a third term. He had been a professional lawyer in Erie county, N. Y., for 15 years, and had managed a law office and had managed to save a little money, but was a poor fellow in the beginning of life over again in setting down in such a town as Waterloo then was, a pioneer of two hundred inhabitants in the midst of an almost unbroken prairie whose soil had hardly been scratched by a plow.

The prospect was sufficiently inviting to tempt to him almost certain that Mr. Belms would never have gone there if it had not been for the sake of his wife, whose parents lived there and whose health he thought the change would benefit. But his wife did not live long after they settled in Waterloo, and he was left a widower with one daughter. After a while she married again, and his second wife also died, leaving him three children, two sons and a daughter. Since then he has remained a widower.

While waiting for children Mr. Belms had his vacation in Iowa. He had bought 100 acres of land in Waterloo, and he thought he would go to make a little money. He had bought 100 acres of land in Waterloo, and he thought he would go to make a little money. He had bought 100 acres of land in Waterloo, and he thought he would go to make a little money.

Governor Belms was born at Aurora, Erie county, N. Y., in 1842, and after a course of study at the law, he was admitted to the bar when 25 years of age. In 1865 he was a member of the state legislature, and in 1868 he was elected to the office of clerk of the Erie county bar. He died at Waterloo, N. Y., on the 21st of October, 1900, at the age of 58 years.

low me to render you" pursued our unwelcome companion in tragic tones.

"Do not say that," said I, "I am not your companion. Your having spoken to us at all is a piece of the most unwarrantable impertinence."

"Do not drive me from you," was the reply. "I love you. I have loved you from the first moment I saw you."

"Yes," continued the fat man. "We have more trouble than any one in the summer time. I have had a comfortable moment today."

"Do you think I look comfortable now?" "No, I don't; but possibly you think I am comfortable. A fat man always thinks he has the secret of it, but he isn't in it with a thin man."

"Let me pass, this instant, sir," said the man with wrath. "Never never till you promise to be mine."

"At this point, I regret to say, my aunt and I raised her umbrella, she brought it down upon her sister's head with such force that she fell into a swoon."

"Take me down, let me go!" she shrieked. "I have no more to say to you."

"No! not till you have promised to marry me," replied the lunatic. "I am quite prepared to remain here until to-morrow morning if I have to be added with great content."

"What would you say, 'I implore!' said this our persecutor turned upon me. "Will you have the goodness not to interfere?" he said, so fiercely that I was terrified and almost fled.

THE TRIBUNE

(Successor to the Star.)

THURSDAY, OCT. 5, 1893.

City News.

A man that returns his paper marked "refused" and then refuses to pay what is due thereon would steal chickens from a poor washer woman. There are several such specimens of humanity in this county.

Will Hampton, editor of the Charlevoix Democrat was appointed postmaster of his town by President Cleveland. Deserving editors should be remembered by all administrations. This particular appointment is a deserved one.

The Tribune is twenty columns larger than any other newspaper published in Manistique. It has from two to five columns more local happenings each week than any contemporary, and costs the subscriber only $1.50 a year.

A number of workmen that revolted at the idea of a reduction of wages, and left the employ of the White Marlin Line Company, for the coal fields of Illinois, are now quite anxious to come back and take their old positions at any price.

Mrs. Knudsen, superintendent of the public schools, is meeting with great success in her work. The schools were never in better hands. More room for school purposes is needed and must be provided before the beginning of another school year.

The Jangle method of disposing of tangled wires is becoming decidedly unpopular in this enlightened country. If you are caught in the net, you only waste the web more thickly by frantic efforts to "square" yourself with those you have injured.

Some sentimental drams editors are denouncing the killing of the train robbers near St. Joseph, Mo., and claim the killers are murderers. No criminal lives should be wasted on the sudden termination of the life of any person during enough to load up a train. A robber is a murderer. He is prepared at all times to commit murder if necessary to further his plans. Such a man should be shot down as promptly as one would kill a mad dog.

A certain bicycle firm worth millions of dollars, has a habit of sending out long printed circulars to country editors requesting their publication. The circulars are not read or improved. That public bigwigs should be impressed on one will deny, but it does take monumental effort to ask poor struggling newspaper men to invade their "valuable" space in incidentally advertising a certain bicycle free of charge.

One day last summer "Old Constalk," an Indian chief, was induced by McKesson, the photographer, to have his "picture" taken. He passed through the ordeal and a splendid photograph of the chief, his rags and all, was the result. McKesson sent the photograph to Artist Klugestad in Chicago, and a handsome study in crayon of the old and familiar one-legged Chippewa chieftain was promptly returned. The work of art is on exhibition at E. N. Orr & Co.'s drug store.

The reading public has been interested in the recent Parliament of Religions recently held at Chicago. Rev. Rogers of the Presbyterian church was in Chicago a few days during the sessions of this congress. He has decided to give a series of Sabbath evening sermons on "The Religions of the World," beginning with next Sabbath evening. A question box has been provided for those desiring to ask questions on the subject to be discussed. The sermons will be interesting and instructive.

There is a crying need of an ordinance in this city, prohibiting bicycle riding on the sidewalk within certain limits. A little girl was severely injured Tuesday afternoon, by a bicyclist who coming to a broken handle, was unable to steer his wheel properly. Then, too, she walks and streets should not be utilized by children for play grounds. The streets are usually filled with trucks and a runaway team may, some day, be the means of keeping our undertakers busy for a week.

The iron is laid. The men finished laying iron on the Alger railroad into Grand Marais last Thursday. The road is now complete. It is well ballasted and made as durable as possible, although no attempt had been made at grading. An excursion was given out of Grand Marais one day last week. The dock is being rushed as fast as possible. At an early date an excursion will be given from Soudy to Lake Superior. Grand Marais is a busy place at present, and is destined to be quite a town, with its saw mills, fishery and other industries.—Soo Democrat.
