They went to the Sprague mansion to rest. Vennick was awakened by the woman trying to take a ring from his finger. He discovered that his pocket had been taken open and a purse containing $10.75 was missing. When Sprague was arrested, the purse without the money, was found in his possession. Marshal Jachor should practice "howler's law." Cattle are supposed to be shut up at night since the ordinance curtailing the freedom of the city cattle has gone into effect. Poll-tax collectors, pack peddlers, collection of dog tax and cattle collecting makes the position of city marshal anything but a desirable one.

There are a great many people in Michigan who think Mr. Ellis does not fully appreciate the high dignity of his office, or respect its duties as he ought. He is too much given to the expense of his political services at the expense of the state, and in matters, too, in which he is naturally expected to appear in behalf of the state.—Detroit Journal.

Dr. Ellis, the dentist, has returned to the city and may now be found in the Anderson building opposite American Hotel on Oak street. He is prepared to do all work in his profession, promptly and cheaply. He has had 27 years experience in the profession, the highest recommendations establishing his ability as a professional man, and a gentleman.

It causes a smile to overexpress the countenance of a newspaper man when it is reported to him that a despatch has been taken offense as some item which appeared in the paper, and threatens to "stop" the paper. Two same fellows have written from two to three years' subscription and the editor, in most cases would be unexpectably happy were he "compelled" to write out a correction "full," and expunge the name from his list.

STEAMBOATING ON THE OHIO.

On the Height of Its Prosperity
Half a Century Ago.

It was in 1842 that the first steamboat was built in this country. It was a small affair, but it was the beginning of a great industry. The Ohio river was the main thoroughfare for the west, and the steamboat was the only means of transportation for many years. It was not until the late 1800s that the railroad came to compete with the steamboat.

The boats of the early steaming days were all side-wheelers. It was not until the late 1800s that the stern-wheel boat came into vogue. These boats were much larger and more powerful than the side-wheelers.

There was but one organized pack company running boats down the river from Pittsburg. It was the old Pittsburg and Cincinnati Packet line, and it owned about 20 steamboats, some of which left the Pittsburg wharf daily. The boats were the Buckeye State, the Hibernia, Pittsburg, Crystal Palace and Pennsylvania. These boats were all stately and especially adapted for freighting. The laws relating to racing were not so stringent then as now, and exciting contests of speed on the river occurred daily.

One of the swiftest of the packets was the Pennsylvania. She was the largest of the Cincinnati boats and made some splendid records on the Ohio. She was 210 feet long and 31 feet beam. Another fast steamer was the Albany. She was not so large as the Pennsylvania, but was almost as speedy. Some of these old Cincinnati Packet line boats were sunk in the river service.

Besides the Cincinnati company's packets there were several steamers owned by them owned by the Pittsburg and Cincinnati Packet line. The boats were all stately and especially adapted for freighting. The laws relating to racing were not so stringent then as now, and exciting contests of speed on the river occurred daily.

A Daring Legend of a Bear.
Two women, a mother and her little daughter, were one night watching their field of Indian corn—"milk"—and the mother had to go to her house to prepare the food and ordered her daughter to light a fire outside. While she was doing this a bear came and took her away. He carried her to his den and lay beside her to eat and drink. He held his claws in front of the den whenever he went away on his tours, which the girl was not strong enough to move.

When she became old enough to do this he used to lick her feet, by which they became swollen and gradually dwindled down to mere misshapen stumps. The girl eventually died, and the poor bear, after vain efforts to restore her to life, roamed desolately about the fields.—Dr. Lottner in Asiatic Quarterly.

A Book Brought Down From Heaven.
According to Mohammedan belief, the first copy of the Koran, or Alkoran, their sacred book, was brought down from the highest to the lowest heaven by Gabriel on the mysterious night of Al Kadeb in the month of Ramadhan. This wonderful book, written in heaven and bound in satin, jewels and gold, was communicated to Mohammed at different times during a journey which he made in the clouds, according to Mohammedan belief, either by Gabriel in human shape or by God himself. When Gabriel acted as translator and interpreter, he did so with a great sound of music and bells. God appeared either "waked or unawaked during Mohammed's waking hours or during dreams at night."—St. Louis Republic.

Why Not?
Apropos of Marion Crawford's remark about our mustache butlers that they annoyed him after the shower uses of the hand, why not somebody say that our butlers—our American butlers—were mustache and we, when abroad, find it amusing to see the English butlers smooth shave, and wonder why their masters do not insist that their mouths be covered. Will the time ever come when we will dare to be Americans?
There are great reasons to be learned from the older nations of the world, great models to be studied, and great lessons to be learned from the experience which is the accession of centuries, concerning which the teacher can deliver only what is good as that of any other.—New York Times.

of many visitors, for it is at all times surrounded by a large crowd, and in the presence of that thing—dead for nobody knows how many years—men's hats come off and their voices are hushed. Not all, however. A young man who was evidently a clergyman, came in one morning to look at the mummy, and approaching the glass case with a quiet step, reverently removed his hat and looked, presently asking the writer, standing opposite, a few questions in a low tone. The questions were answered and an interrupted reverie resumed, to be disturbed about five minutes after by a loud voice which was demanding of somebody in a shrill voice why the mummy was to be seen. The owner of the voice stamped up—a tall gaunt woman with hair the color of an old wife's hair, a chin plentifully besprinkled with asprezances, and a nose that might have been the back of a parrot—looked at the man with the young man opposite was studying so reverently, and drawing a long breath gave it as her opinion that "he was the dullest looking critter she ever seen." Then with a poke of an elbow which appeared to be uncommonly rich in bone, she jerked the writer aside and occupied the vacant place herself, while the latter not wishing to treat one of the gaudier sex, rudely and being tired at any rate, sat down on one of the sofas in the center of the room to think of it all. The quiet young clergyman, the still more quiet cliff-dweller, and the woman so full of energetic life.

THE ART OF ORATORY

EVIDENCE THAT IT IS NOT DECLINING IN CONGRESS.

The Silver Debate Furnished a Theme For Some Notable Men in Congress.

We are sometimes disposed to doubt the democracy of the times and to lament among other things the decline of forensic eloquence in American public life.

Whereas the silver debate may have been unaccomplished, it has opened our eyes to the fact that the country still has plenty of bright and energetic public speakers.

It has been repeatedly surprised by "mainly" speeches that have all the marks of nature and expert workmanship adorned with the arts of eloquence and the art.

One of the first of the new men to step in an hour from local to national fame was Lato Pena, the young representative from the First district of Colorado.

He opened the silver debate for Lato Pena and made a speech that attracted and held the attention of the house.

Mr. Pena is in his thirty-sixth year and is a native of Colorado. He was graduated from the Harvard law school in 1877, and the next year was admitted to the bar.

From Colorado congress expects fine eloquence, long with millimetric conformation, his body is a man's speech.

Mr. Sibbey was born in Franklin, Illinois county, N. Y., Feb. 18, 1850, and received a common school and secondary education.

One of the most popular speeches in favor of the repeal of the Sherman law was made by Joseph C. Hendrix of Brooklyn and it was his first effort in the house.

Probably the most polished of all the maiden speeches in the Fifty-third congress was that delivered by Dr. William Everett, who, although a new member, is an experienced and accomplished orator.

Dr. Everett is a bachelor, and naturally enough is reported to be rather reticent in his personal relations.

There are only a few of the bright new men who have been heard from and who promise to gain further distinction in the Fifty-third congress.

BLACKMAIL IN RESTAURANTS.

How the System of Tippling Has Degenerated in Many Eating Houses.

Complaints of the tippling system, or rather want of system, are growing more and more common. It is the custom of those who are in the habit of getting their meals here and there and patronizing the cafes about town, that luncheon waiters have violated recently.

Everybody who knows anything about New York knows that that means an exceedingly disagreeable state of affairs.

The evil is worse in proportion to the respectability of the place," says a man about town. "In other words, the more respectable the more liberal the waiter is, and the more insulting the waiter if it does not come up to their ideas of the amount of the tip they should be given."

I have been making some personal investigations in this line myself and am heartily indignant at the waiter's opinion. I have found that in every restaurant water expected a tip whether he had served well or not, and that this expectation is made so habitually by waiters that it is the custom of everybody in the vicinity to be called to tip.

My experiments, conducted at six different respectable restaurants, found that the poorest waiters, the men who gave the poorest service, were the most offensive. At one place where, at the suggestion of a friend interested in this class of human nature, we went back to the same waiter on the next day, there was such a polite and friendly manner which we were compelled to call the waiter before we could get anything to eat.

That Hill carries New York in his "vest-pocket" was again demonstrated in the state convention. It was a Hill and Cleveland's ancient adversary dictated the nominations.

The Manitowish Democrat published an excellent auto-biographical sketch, last week, of Louis Lelen, the popular Democratic politician so well and favorably known in this county.

Frank Roby, the railroad man who lost his limb in an accident here recently, was married in this city, Sunday, to Miss Josephine Goodman, daughter of Capt. Jos. Goodson, of St. Ignace.

Bryan, the young and brilliant congressman from Nebraska, has made public the fact that he is no longer a Democrat but a Populist. Another case, this, of "jumping from the frying pan into the fire."

Chippewa County is holding a fair this week. Bull calves and big pumpkins look tame when compared to the wonders to be seen at the World's Fair. County fairs will not be very successful this season.

A young man was sand-bagged, robbed and thrown into the lake at St. Ignace. His body was found several days after. Let's see! Did not St. Ignace disperse with the services of a city marshal some time ago?

Attorney General Ellis is at present endeavoring to prove the unconstitutionality of the law granting municipal suffrage to women. He purposes to argue the case before the supreme court, and succeed, if possible, in getting a verdict against the law.

There is a man at Ann Arbor who was a member at the Legislature at St. Ignace, Commissioner at St. Ignace, Auditor-General and Supreme Court justice at St. Ignace, Michigan at 41, United States Senator at 43, forty years ago. Excuse, Alphonse Felch, recently celebrated his ninth birthday.

One of the Mackinac postoffice robbers was captured at Detroit. These robbers were camping out along the northern shores of the lake east of this city for a week. The officers of Mackinac certainly had knowledge of this fact. Why the arrests were not made at that time is not known. Perhaps fear of an ambush was the cause.

The fourth annual convention of the state farmers alliance was held at Jackson last week. There has been a decided falling off in membership during the past year. The purposes of the alliance were all right in the beginning, but when a secret order dabbles in politics his death knell is quickly sounded. This has been the case with the alliance.

An unsophisticated youth of Hancock paid $5 to a fake detective agency, and received in return a tin badge. He displayed his credentials and gave out the impression that he was carrying a revolver. He was arrested on charges of impersonating an officer and carrying concealed weapons. It cost him $100, and not having the money, he went to jail.

An itinerant relative to a "tramp doctor" leaving town should have read a "tramp doctor." A tramp horse doctor stopped in the city a few days several weeks ago and succeeded in "doing up" for some job printing. This particular individual was in our mind, and not Dr. Ellis as some people imagined. Dr. Ellis has always promptly paid his obligations to us and is a gentlemanly fellow. Tramps are a class that never pay their bills.

An infuriated attorney, armed with a bare ball bat, started out with a firm determination to kill every newspaper man in Iron Mountain, because of an item which he construed as reflecting on his general character. He found his man and forgot to use the club. He undoubtedly was treated so nicely by the "bun" that he begged "pardoning" for interrupting them while on his way to the ball ground where a game between the Iron Mountain and... was in progress.

Last Thursday evening about 5:30 o'clock while endeavoring to climb from a train on the Hall & Buell logging road, as it was passing opposite the St. James Hotel, Joe Paquette the son of Joseph Paquette, living in "the forty," was instantly killed. He fell under the heavily loaded cars and his body was dragged and crushed along under the wheels. It was crushed almost out of all semblance of humanity. To Patrons of Schools. Parents and patrons: before you condemn a teacher's method of teaching any subject, examine it carefully, and see whether you are behind the times. This is an age of advancement and education is in the van. All of the methods of 20 or even 10 years ago will not do today. The method of teaching children to read by first learning them the alphabet, has been discarded and replaced by the word method. This is only one of the many instances that might be related.

Do not be alarmed, if the people learn a little more than "read, write and rhymed," that they are "wasting their time." School days constitute a great part of the period of character, forming and many of the things taught the pupil, by the thoughtful teacher, have no apparent value to the worldly eye of many parents and patrons of school.

A Teacher. The widow Carpenter drowned.

The sad intelligence was received here Monday, that Willard Carpenter, and his son Eddie Carpenter, were drowned in Lake Superior, near Deer Park, 12 miles above Whitefish Point, Friday. Mr. Carpenter formerly resided here and is a brother of Mrs. Capt. Gerwin. He was a sober man and his son was presumably engaged in their avocation. Their boat washed ashore near Deer Park. His family lives at Au Train.

Mr. Carpenter had many friends here. He was a quiet, industrious and temperate citizen.

The Mining Journal says: The crew of the Muskogee life saving station picked up a fishing boat turned bottom side up about eight miles west of the station. The boat was manned from Whitefish Point to Au Train and those supposed to be lost are W. A. Carpenter and son, and the boat's crew, names unknown. The boat to have sprung in the northwest storm during the night of Friday, October 6.

From latest dispatches we learn that Carpenter's body was washed ashore near Newbury Monday.

The unfortunate man leaves a widow and two children.

Mrs. Capt. Gerwin expects to attend the funeral at Au Train.

A Book-plate Needs.

As it is now, this city is offering special inducements to persons disposed to break the law. A law-breaker is certain of receiving good, wholesome food at regular intervals, and a warm fire before which to toast his shins. Once an inmate of a jail, the moral sensibilities are dulled, and the prisoner is loath to exchange the comforts of jail life for the hardships incident to an effort to earn an honest livelihood. They invariably do something to warrant their incarceration, whereas they are certain to receive these comforts.

The word jail, should impress the culprit's mind as being a place of punishment. It is an undisputed fact that the majority of persons that are incarcerated in jails, get there by endeavoring to live without labor. Work is distasteful to this class, and to compel them to work is punishment of the severest kind.

There should be a root-plate in connection with every jail, and the inmates thereof compelled to spend their time in breaking stone.
