Many thanks to Mrs. D. W. Bennett, for a box of stately wedding cake last Thursday. It was a reminder of the Dunton-Bennett wedding the day previous. That the future of Mr. and Mrs. Dunton may be as happy as the cake was good in our estimation.
It is to be hoped that the sermon delivered by Rev. J. M. Rogers, Sabbath morning last, will be printed entire, or repeated at a public meeting at some future date. With eloquence that seldom inspired, Mr. Rogers depicted the evils that are threatening to shatter the foundations of this free republic. The sermon was the personification of patriotism, which will bear repetition.

The sixty mile gale which swept over the great lakes Saturday did great damage to shipping. Many vessels were stranded. Great loss of life is feared. The Hunter was in shelter at Traverse City.
The rule has been reversed here within the past week. It is the general rule that when a person is deprived of his liberty he is quite likely to avail himself of any means of escape. We have persons here that tried quite hard to break into the county jail within the past week.
There is a marked unanimity in the local papers concerning the Maple street ditch, the state of the weather, the need of a furniture factory, the need of a library and bookshop, that wood, potatoes, turnips, and eggs will be taken in on subscription, that the people here had colds, that pension agents are the source of much annoyance, that Manistique has plenty of labor, and that winter will soon be here.

Supervisor Newell brought the matter of adopting the county road system, before the board of county supervisors the meeting held last week. The matter was referred to the next meeting. There is no doubt but that this county would have a better system of roads if the people would decide at the next general election, to introduce the system. When Tom, Dick and Harry get contracts for the building of roads, the township generally pays a big price for nothing. Many thousands of dollars has been expended on the roads of this county by the various townships, and our roads are far from perfect.

A FARM IN SUSSEX.

Charming Picture of Country Life in England.

Where the Secret of Success Hides Itself - When the Orchard Gleams with the Masses of Gold and Silver in the Poetic Country Lane.

Twilight lingers on the confines of the farmyard, says a poetic writer in London Black and White. The silver gray light of the dusk and 'salpion' dims to a dull dawn against the pale sky. Light and shadow mingle and shimmer on the pond. Only the spires of red or gold, or the broad patches of the dark lead stand clear against it, while the trees, too, grow dim and formless in the gloaming. A milkmaid's pail ellips upon the confines of the farm; rusty hinges grate as she opens a wicket; the ducks know Mary for a friend and "quack" good night to her. But there is no other sound save the boom of a heavy beetle on the wing, or the stamp of a stalled heifer within the stable. Pleasant it is to wander in the old-world Sussex farmyards when the day is done. The peace of the country the present prevailing rest, the great calm of it, sing a song without words and hint at the secret, the key of which is well-kept in this busy modern world of electricity and overcrowding. We mean the secret of repose. It hingers yet in the rural districts, and presents a thrush sings it through long spring dawns, and the wood doves murmur it at night. To the lark and heart-worn and overworked, the country calls with siren voice at this season.

Autumn already powders her gold dust on the brake fern and nutlets. The brair with purple and crimson. The fruits of the woods are ripe, the orchards gleam with masses of red and yellow. There are ladders against the old lichen-covered trunks, and greeny pigs rejoice in the fallen fruit below. The pigeons make music in the beehives, for the mast is ripe; and where apple ends, where dewy fern glimmers with gossamer and mushroom circles. Like a necklace of pearls in the dark green of a fairy ring - there the "long tails" take their pleasure, and for October has not come yet, though the smoke-and-noise of their pipes, in yonder golden stubble tell of trouble to a covey of partridges. September has charms of its own upon the country side, and notably in such a year as this, when from the north to the thistle the wild world has brought forth so abundantly. Dame Nature, ignoring the ravages of her wild children - Storm and Tempest - has made hay while the summers sun shone. And not only hay; she has riddled the fat rod and ripened the corn, and hung every hedge-row with glowing descent for her feathered folk. Not only the birds love her sweet things. Little people, with purple mouths and stained fingers, will tell you where the best blackberries grow; more ambitious youth climbs the hazel hedge and picks three and four cornucopias of ruddy nuts from on high, where gold blades out of passing harvest wagon have caught amidst the green. And the honeybees are still busy below and the country lane has not once thought of the cold nakedness to come.

A SUSSEX FARM.

Stean navigation is today so well understood that the most serious danger to be dreaded at sea is the possibility of running ashore on some uncharted rock. At Singapore, France, to lessen this possibility, spots where light houses are impossible, lightships and luminous buoys are anchored. At Singapore, France, the light-ship Rayntine marks the presence of a dangerous sandbar. This is a very peculiar light, which, in lieu of light is full of light. It carries at its mast-head a powerful light, and has among other innovations a mechanical apparatus for storing and dispersing compressed air. The light can be distinguished in the light made clear and visible under otherwise impossible circumstances. Life on these ships is comfortable and peaceful as the posts are given to old sailors with honorable records. Occasionally a storm breaks the anchor chain and the ship is away on the waves. Then sails are hoisted and the ship is kept away from shore until the wind dies and the waters are again safe and smooth. But in fact there is little care, and the greatest difficulty is to obtain variety in the successful and unobtrusive manner of our illustration represents a party of officers breakfasting in mid-air, in the age of the light.

THE DECEITFUL POINT.

In both France and Germany one-fourth (1/4) reduced to a decimal is written as 0.25; in England it is written as 25 (always with the period at the top of the line), and in the United States in this way: 0.25. France and Germany always use the comma (,) between the United States and the period (.), the only difference being the manner in which it is placed upon the line. In the United States, the first method of originating the present English method of using the decimal point has reason being that by placing it at the top of the line it could be distinguished at a glance from the "full stop" punctuation mark. All English shopkeepers use the mark in the way proposed by Newton, and the period as a sign of multiplication.

THE BIRTH OF ENGLISH PAPER.

The birth of English paper is not as the paper is thicker on the left-hand corner, to enable it to be better and sharper impression of the vignette there, and is also considerably thicker in the dark shadows of the center letter, as invented in 1841. In 1852 there were 600,000 made in the United States, able to do the work of 7,200,000 wauans.

DECLINES THE HONOR.

Because of Age Sir Henry Norman Declines the Victoria Cross. Sir Henry Norman, G. C. B., G. C. M. G., C. I. E., who was recently appointed to the position of viceroy of India, one of the highest honors within the gift of the British crown, has declined the offer, doubting, as he says, his strength to fulfill the duties of the office. It is as a soldier that Sir Henry Norman is best known. Indeed, few living generals have seen more service in the field, and all that service has been in India. As early as 1864 he appears as as ensign in the Bengal army, and four years afterward he served in the Punjab campaign. From 1850 to 1854 he served on the Punjab frontier, where there was much difficult and responsible work to be done. In 1853 he commanded a detachment in the Sonthal campaign. Then came the mutiny - all the principal actions of which - Lucknow, Delhi, Cawnpore - he took an honorable part, as is shown by the very frequent mention of his name in dispatches. With the termination of the mutiny his services in the field came to an end, but he continued to serve in the military administration. In 1850 he was appointed assistant military secretary at the Horse guards. From 1862 to 1870 he was secretary of the government of India in the military department, and he was afterwards for seven years military secretary of the viceroy's council. He then returned to England, and served from 1875 to 1881 at the India office as a member in the council of the secretary of state. It was not till 1883 that he began his career in the civil administration, and he has since been governor of Jamaica and governor of Queensland, and in both of these posts he has been eminently successful. Sir Henry Norman is sixty-seven years of age.

BREAKFAST IN MIDAIR.

Officers Enjoy a Meal in the Light Cage of the Inhydring.

China, whose esteem he won by his energetic attention to their interests at the time of the riots at Wuh, and he is reported to be an enlightened and very benevolent official. The new cargo travels in great splendor, and when he disembarked from the Gauche at San Francisco, August 15, he was followed by a suite of eighty-two persons, whose baggage, as weighed at the custom house, aggregated eighty tons. All of these, however, were not accompanying Yang Yu to Washington, however; some of them being destined for diplomatic service at Madrid and at Lima, as the minister is accredited to those capitals as well as to Washington. In the suite were several young Chinamen who have been educated at American colleges, and of whom one of the cleverest is Man Jue Chung, still remembered at Yale as the cousin of one of the university eves. Next to their flowing robes of silk and brocade, their odd parti-colored hats, and the other articles of attire in which the minister and his suite were magnificently costumed, the people of San Francisco and Washington have been most interestingly interested in the woman of the party - the minister's wife, the five ladies of rank who attend her, and her two daughters, who are fast approaching the "coming-out" age, and may eventually make their debut in the society of the capital. Mrs. Yang Yu herself is rarely visible to profane eyes. In accordance with Chinese custom, she lives a life of almost hermitic seclusion, and is not permitted to enter her apartment.

PROF. GARNER'S EXPERIMENT.

Prof. Garner, who has taken up his abode in East Africa with a view of learning the language of the gorilla, is receiving very little attention from the scientific world. The reason for it is believed to be due to the unexciting way in which he has gone about his task. The professor has located his cage within easy distance of a large mission camp, and has installed himself. It is to await the arrival of some accommodating gorilla who will stop and whisper into his photographs. It is well known that the gorilla is one of the most timid creatures in the world, and under no circumstances could one be persuaded to come within speaking distance of the professor's photographs.

THE BUSY INSECT WORLD.

An English scientist is quoted as authority for the statement that there are five times as many species of insects as there are species of all other living things put together. The oak tree alone supports 400 species of insects, and 200 kinds make their home in the pine. Forty years ago Humboldt estimated that the number of species preserved in collections was between 100,000 and 170,000, but scientific men now say that there must be more than 700,000, without taking into account the parasite creatures. Of the 35,000 species in Europe, however, not more than 2,500 are in collections or descriptive. There are more than 100,000 kinds of beetles.

NEW CHINESE MINISTER.

He is a Man of Influence in His Own Country.

Yang Yu is Not a Few Steps Removed from Royalty - Expected to be an Enlightened and Progressive Official.

The arrival in Washington some weeks ago of the Chinese minister, Yang Yu, was followed eagerly by his most conspicuously prominent presentation to Secretary Graham of the emperor's protest against the enforcement of the treaty law, and the signing of the treaty law, and, says Harper's Weekly, for this reason, as well as because of his unique personality, the original envoy is at present the most conspicuously prominent of the foreign diplomats at the capital. Yang Yu reached Washington August 26, after a stay of several weeks in San Francisco, and on September 4, accompanied by four elaborately attired attendants, he presented his credentials to the president. His protest against the obnoxious deportation statute was filed with the secretary of state on September 11.

The new minister, who succeeds T'ai Kwo Yin, recalled in disgrace because of his affiliation with Mitfreville's disreputable financial ventures, is about fifty years of age, and physically short and quite stout, with a round full face. His eyes are dark and piercing, peering out from beneath a high forehead, and he wears the thin black mustache and goatee that are distinctive of the Chinese. He is a man of high character and dignified self-possession which also is characteristic of high-grade Chinamen. In rank Yang Yu is not a few degrees removed from royalty, and he comes to the United States as a more important representative of the emperor than any greater prestige than any of his predecessors. He is favorably known to the foreign residents in

YANG YU, THE NEW CHINESE MINISTER.

China, whose esteem he won by his energetic attention to their interests at the time of the riots at Wuh, and he is reported to be an enlightened and very benevolent official.

The new cargo travels in great splendor, and when he disembarked from the Gauche at San Francisco, August 15, he was followed by a suite of eighty-two persons, whose baggage, as weighed at the custom house, aggregated eighty tons. All of these, however, were not accompanying Yang Yu to Washington, however; some of them being destined for diplomatic service at Madrid and at Lima, as the minister is accredited to those capitals as well as to Washington. In the suite were several young Chinamen who have been educated at American colleges, and of whom one of the cleverest is Man Jue Chung, still remembered at Yale as the cousin of one of the university eves.

Next to their flowing robes of silk and brocade, their odd parti-colored hats, and the other articles of attire in which the minister and his suite were magnificently costumed, the people of San Francisco and Washington have been most interestingly interested in the woman of the party - the minister's wife, the five ladies of rank who attend her, and her two daughters, who are fast approaching the "coming-out" age, and may eventually make their debut in the society of the capital. Mrs. Yang Yu herself is rarely visible to profane eyes. In accordance with Chinese custom, she lives a life of almost hermitic seclusion, and is not permitted to enter her apartment.

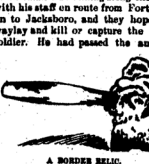

MR. KEAR'S CATTLE RAISING.

William M. Keary realized at one time an income of over $50,000 yearly from his practice. His fancy farm at Waukegan, Ill., absorbed most of it. It is related of the distinguished lawyer that while entertaining a number of friends at his home one evening he produced several bottles of champagne and a quantity of milk. Turning to his guests he said, without a semblance of humor, "I have 100,000 gallons of milk from my farm, and here is some wine. You can take your choice - that both cost the same."

A VALUABLE RELIC.

Matches Used in a Terrible Massacre on the Texas Coast.

In 1853 on the road between Fort Belknap and Jackson, where it crosses the Salt Creek prairie in Young County, Tex., on a road called the Comanche Indians were hidden close in ambush. They had heard that Gen. W. T. Sherman was coming that way, and with his staff on route from Fort Griffin to Jackson, and they hoped to waylay and kill or capture the great soldier. He had passed the ambush some two hours before, but the Indians were rewarded by the arrival of a train of eleven teams, belonging to the freighting outfit of Col. Warren, of Westchester, Tex. The Indians attacked the train from the ambush and captured all but one of the teamsters. The unfortunate men were tied to the wagons and beat a wretched path to the spot where they were still marked by the "monument."

The other day the Chicago Tribune received for inspection what is believed to be a veritable relic of that bloody massacre. As the fire burned a hatchet belonging to one of the men who were captured by the Indians, and which was used in the massacre, was found in the hands of the Indians. It is said, took this hatchet with other plunder and beat a retreat. They were pursued by the Texas rangers and being hard pressed while crossing Cross Creek in Hardeman county, threw most of the plunder, including the hatchet, into the stream. About a year ago W. J. Sullivan, the teamster who escaped from the massacre and one of the Texas rangers, was exploring the vicinity where he had seen a narrow creek for his life. Following up the trail of the Indians' retreat he arrived at the creek, and there, in the bed of the stream, discovered the hatchet. In its long sleep of nineteen years a strange change had taken place. The hatchet had become encrusted with pebbles, which had fastened themselves firmly to the rusty iron. There were the dents in the edge and the scorch in the handle, and Mr. Sullivan believes that it is the very one which he was familiar a score of years ago.

CHINESE PUNISHMENTS.

How Kidnapers Are Executed in the Flowery Kingdom.

A typical case of Chinese cruelty forms the subject of our illustration. Four men were captured some time ago at Chin-kiang, near the mouth of the Yangtze-River, who had for some time been carrying on a systematic course of kidnaping children, one of the most heinous crimes in Chinese law. They were duly tried, and finally sentenced to death by the slow process of exposure and starvation in a cage. The sentence was first carried out in the kindergarten, and on Saturday morning he was placed in a cage, standing upright on a pile of bricks a foot high, with his head protruding above and the neck fastened tightly in a hole in the roof. There he stood in a crowded lane leading to the firing line, exposed to the rays of a burning sun, with the wind registering ninety-five degrees in the shade, without food or drink, and served by the passers-by, who seemed to look upon it as a very good joke. What the sufferings of the unfortunate must have been on the Sunday and Monday masses beyond the realm of imagination; but the end was nearer than expected, for at five o'clock on Monday evening one of the attendants knocked away the pile of bricks, leaving the body suspended by the lower limbs, and the unfortunate put an end to what remains of life there were in about twenty minutes. The body, still in the cage, was removed the following day, and the remains of the Concessioner, to be exposed as a warning to evil-doers before final burial. The unfortunate was drowned, men are still detained in the city prison, but will speedily meet with the same fate.

"FARAWAY MOSES"

In the Turkish village at the World's fair a few bolding old men, dressed in a rich Ottoman costume, great violators so cordially that he is apt to see them wondering where they ever met him before. If they ever have met him before, they do not wonder, for it must have been on the shores of the Bosphorus, and if they have ever met him there, they never could forget him. It is possible that some of his cordiality may be due to a notion on his part that he may have met the visitors before and does not wish to seem to have forgotten them.

He has not a good many of them, and his memory is surprisingly good, but he would be quite impossible for him to remember all the Americans he has met and done good offices for during the last 20 years, for the list includes all the distinguished citizens who have visited the east, and a great many who were not particularly distinguished, besides all the naval officers who have been in the Mediterranean squadron, from Farragut and Porter down to the present time. He is the famous "Faraway Moses."

FARAWAY MOSES.

Immortalized by Mark Twain and "Sunset" Cox, and considers himself the particular friend of all Americans and all Americans particular friends of his. His friendly greeting, however, this, and his respect for it. For more than 20 years he has been the guide and counselor of Americans visiting Constantinople, and many an unlucky wretch ignorant of the peculiar customs of that land of misrule is led by Faraway Moses to getting out of some misadventure. This has not been a unprofitable life to Moses in a pecuniary as well as a sentimental way, for of the round million at which his fortune is reckoned he has given a great deal to his friends from the United States.

It is remarkable that no one seems to know any other name for him than Faraway Moses, the name Mark Twain said he was so proud of, though he is said to be a pauper. At 70 years of age he is still well preserved physically and has a remarkable command of his tongue as to the modern languages.

Connecting the Russian Empire.

The czar of Russia shows undoubted activity in adopting the best physical means to hold together his vast empire. He has pushed the transsiberian railway southward until it has almost reached the frontiers of British India and China, the two powers most likely to dispute with him the acquisition of further dominion in Central Asia. Having thus secured the safety of the Russian position in the southern and western frontiers, he has undertaken a more stupendous work in beginning the construction of a unbroken line of railway to connect European Russia with a port on the Pacific ocean. The whole length of the Asiatic or main Siberian line is 1,800 miles. The estimated cost is $300,000,000. The work, which is now progressing from both ends toward the center, is to be completed in ten years. There will then be a stretch of railway, all built upon Russian territory, about 4,000 miles in length, holding European Russia and Asiatic Russia firmly together with an outposts land of steel. Until the present railway running north and south to connect the two Americas had been built there was nothing so earth to rival this great stretch of eastern and western railway across the Russian empire.—Omaha Bee.

Foys of Hoarding.

It is really remarkable that so many people in this country, who have funds from which they might earn a good rate of interest, persist in locking up their money in safe deposit vaults or in bank accounts, instead of investing it in stocks. Money will earn twice as large returns, with the best of real estate security as first class collateral to protect the lender, and yet a great many individuals, waiting for they know not what, decline to take advantage of what is an immense opportunity for making money. The currency of a country is intended to circulate as evidence of credit. If it does not, it becomes absolutely useless to everybody. In a famous society would be no better off if it locked up millions of barrels of flour than if it had none at all. The same is precisely true of money.—Washington News.

Lightning and Rain.

It is popularly supposed that the sun goes down upon which usually follows a bright flash of lightning is in some way caused by the flash. Meteorologists have proven that this is not the case and that, exactly to the contrary, it is not only possible but highly probable that the sun's increased precipitation is the real cause of the flash.—St. Louis Republic.

THE WHISTLING GIRL.

Painting, General, Noble Hearted, by a Woman who has made a study of the Whistling Girl.

A woman who has made a study of the Whistling Girl, who has taken her as the assumption of a masculine prerogative, who is usually a dainty and fastidious little feminine, who does not put on her hat, who is womanly chary when she pines for her pretty mouth and whistles a merry tune. Rather the rosy-cheeked girl, with her eye challenge cast. To a superficial observer she is bright, jolly, original, clever, her better, and she is frank, honest, high spirited, noble hearted, superior to the alleged pettiness of her sex, and should circumstances require, sufficient generosity to make wonderful sacrifices for those she loves, for being ardent and impulsive, she loves warmly. She may hate, too, with corresponding enthusiasm, but not for long, for being tender and kind, she soon forgets the wrongs of heart and believing always the best of humanity, this harsher sentiment finds no permanent home with her.

Contrary to the general opinion, she is rarely if ever a "lonely," and if she occasionally evinces a yearning to be loved, it is only when she is lonely, and she knows that the friendly darkness will not reveal her face. She is a woman of great energy, and she has the coveted art of leaving her people to a long and weary wait upon the sidewalk, and she is a woman of great energy, and she has the coveted art of leaving her people to a long and weary wait upon the sidewalk, and she is a woman of great energy, and she has the coveted art of leaving her people to a long and weary wait upon the sidewalk.

Altogether, although inclined to be ideal and idealistic, the artist who admires dull perfection, she is a perfectionist after a few lines. In the lines of her work freedom, restrained by a creed of conventionalities which forbids her to follow her own line with pretty, hard-line music, while at the same time she is not only tolerant, but also respectful to the idealist, the socialist next door who seeks to entertain the entire neighborhood at an evening of some of his noblest and most realistic creations. The whistling girl already unspools her red lips, to show her pretty teeth in a laughing smile as she smiles, and she has a new vision of her smile, and she has a new vision of her smile, and she has a new vision of her smile.

Notes from the White City.

Opposite the New York and Pennsylvania buildings, on the south side of the Rippling Lagoon, stands the Fine Arts building, the stately, beautiful Palace of Arts, its many portals guarded by lions its dome crowned with Victory. No words can describe this magnificent building, its stately or its miles of walks hung with paintings, and such paintings; it is a dream of a delight, which the visitor, each moment feels may fade away from his gaze, as he looks and tries to obtain a clear impression, to remember at least a little of what he sees. One can wander again and again through Great Britain, Holland, Sweden, Belgium, Germany, Spain, France, Russia, and Denmark, to enjoy only, not to criticize, to revel in visions of glowing sunsets or gray thinned mornings, peaceful fields or stormy seas, calm rivers or rocky water-beaten shores. Of the famous form dyes in the beauty and simplicity of the fair frail mottoes of royal, stately kings and noble warriors, battle scenes, or peaceful homes and cheerful hearts. How beautiful, how bewitching it is! If you are in a large painting in the Russian section of the city, of the flag-ship of Columbus a storm, and this picture is so large it is necessary to stand some distance away from it. Look at it—the black and stormy sky, the dark, lead-colored water, and the small wave-tossed vessel; look at it, and think of those superstitious, ignorant sailors of four hundred years ago, and wonder not at their fears and their murmurs. The composition of this picture, which is of equal size and hangs next to it, represents Columbus about to land from his three ships which are close to the shore. There is no storm here,—the setting sun lights up a high peak with its glowing colors, which are reflected on the frosts of pilot and the calm water, and storms, murmurs, and mutinies are alike past and forgotten in the moment of safety and triumph. An immense picture—some allegorical subject it is—hangs on the wall opposite the two Columbus paintings. It belongs to the czar, who lent it to the World's Fair commissioners, and attracts a great deal of attention, as much apparently on account of its size as of the fresh tints and colors which make it conspicuous. There is a pretty picture in this section, called "The First Born," a young peasant mother holding her child which lies in her arms, while the same artist, and also plays in the cradle beside her. Near this hangs a painting called "At Breakfast"—home-like, yet distinctly Klossian, and to western eyes odd, it is a scene, while the same artist, and also plays in the cradle beside her. Near this hangs a painting called "At Breakfast"—home-like, yet distinctly Klossian, and to western eyes odd, it is a scene, while the same artist, and also plays in the cradle beside her.

lies on the bank of a river, surrounded by a group of men wearing the caps or tall hats of the Russian peasant, and among them are two or three who apparently in authority, and one who may be a clerkman. Three more of the Russian pictures claim attention, the first bright and joyous and gay of colors, representing a party of friends at the house of a bride on the morning eve. Ten or a dozen female figures in a room, with a background of trees and sky make up this picture, and it shows not by any means one of the most beautiful or striking. It is one to be studied and one that interests. "The Moscow Bag-fair" is scarcely less interesting, and it is certainly worthy of study, the figures, the buildings, the whole scene in fact, and even the very sky, is so truly, so thoroughly Russian, that it is one of the most beautiful of the fair. Last of all is Bronnikov's "Christians awaiting death after the free supper," one of the best in the Russian section. Those of the ancient Eastern Church the Russians have the most of Art Palace very few paintings of martyrdom; but this one is so true to history and Christianity and with so pathetic a sorrowful, that one looks at it not only but many times, and comes back to study it yet again. The prominent and central figure is a man in the prime of life, awaiting his martyrdom, before him kneels a weeping female figure—perhaps a sister, beside her kneels his wife holding up her child, and almost in view of him stands his aged mother embracing him in the bitter agony of parting. All are entreating him, but in vain; he stands erect, holding up his hands and looking upwards, faithful to death. The Russian magistrates near, looking on, having probably offered him and freedom to the Christian on condition of denying Christ, and behind him are the soldiers—waiting. So one who has read or studied the early history of Christianity can fail to appreciate and understand this picture—the last effort of life made to a Christian before martyrdom, and the agony of relatives parting from him forever.

Next to the United States Pavilion has been placed the largest amount of space in the Fine Arts building, and has made good use of it, the French section being fairly crowded with paintings and nearly all of them very beautiful and of character, of strong and varied colors; others, however, soft in nature or pale reminding one of woods in the haze of a fine September afternoon. There is "A Storm at Night," one of the best of the French paintings—a picture of black and stormy skies, and high rock-bound cliffs against which the wild waves are dashing in spray and foam. In strong contrast to this is another painting of the sea, representing a quiet bay, apparently at low tide, cattle standing in the water along the shore, and over all the bright warm sunshine. "The Cradle" is a pretty picture, of rich, strong colors—a young woman sitting under a large tree, from a spreading branch of which she has hung a cradle containing her child, the woman apparently in a grove of trees, among which can be seen at a distance part of a fence, and beyond this the sky. Very brilliant in color and Eastern in character is "The Daughter of the Rajah," and very much of a Latin look is the tall girl in flowing dark hair, turned-up shoes and gray robe over which is thrown a light wrapper of gauze. Another beautiful picture is one of golden grain bound into sheaves mellow autumn sky and quiet blue hills, a cottage, some trees, and poultry in the foreground, picking up the scattered grains of wheat. Equally beautiful is one of flowers, trees, and sky, is subdued coloring; and thoroughly pretty is "A Boyer's" which represents a young girl dressed in white standing beside a fence in a path leading down to a river. The thoughtful and perhaps somewhat sad face is especially pretty, and the entire figure of the girl stands holding her hat in one hand, is well brought out by the strong background of trees and trees.

ANOTHER FELLOW'S GIRL

There was a man once—Geoffrey Hallett by name—of few fallings, but chief among them was the irreducible one that he was cured of his Old Fallings...

It was in Jim Paddon's room in Oler's Inn that this sensation roused young Geoffrey Hallett...

"Well," he said, content now to dally with trivialities, "and what of it?" "Well, I'll tell you. Sometimes this knowledge, used to you, and sometimes—well, it's just amusing, I don't think I'm particularly conceited, but I flatter myself that I know a few things about a man's character...

"My experience," he said, when failure tripped him up remorselessly, "is that they're too much for me. No two are alike and they always get mixed up, and to try to put them right is the worst of it. I have known a man who used to smoke rings or girls was not very clear."

"Look here, old fellow," he said, "you're either had one whisky too many or too few." Paddon adopted the only course open to him.

"Who's the poor girl you've experimented on? Do I know her?" "That's rather a brutal way of putting it, but I suppose it's Kate." "Then," said Paddon, "isn't it a pity that you are not going to marry her instead of her?"

"When next the two friends met it was at the home of Kate Temple, the maiden who, after being analyzed by one man, had perforce fallen in love with another. Hallett, too, was somewhat jealous, but only found in the circumstance of her preference for his friend a further proof of the well-known fact that ideals must be half-made when science passes. In short, he liked her still, but his attitude now might be described as one of slightly contemptuous sympathy."

"The circumstances under which they met were not very depressing. James Paddon had many weaknesses, and one of them had just attained an alarming prominence. Sir McDermott Ballant, who doubled the parts of family specialist and family friend to the Temples (for Kate had one incarnation—she was a model), had found about by a maiden suit with faith, had just discovered that his dear young friend Paddon possessed only one lung instead of the normal number and that interesting relic must on no account be allowed to winter in England. It was now September. The young man might take his lung to Davos Platz or to Colorado, but he must be off without delay."

Hallett, like most people, was at his best in emergencies. The one offering to the Temples on this last depressing day was that he would accompany him to Colorado, but he must be off without delay. THE FRENCH GOSSIP.

—The frontier police of France has established a service of identity in the Alps. It is a very interesting service. Since 1906 there has been a record of five hundred sentences recorded against men named Louis Lefevre in that country. By the way, the name of innocent Louis Lefevre has been brought into trouble.

—It is said, when there is a question at law between two parties and the necessity of witnesses to establish the truth in the case, it is customary to report to the writer of the law. He is required to do so simultaneously to the deep water, and the one that stays and the one that goes the other. —It is no uncommon thing in south Africa to see a male ostrich strutting and dancing before a female. Head, neck, tail, broods, all of different size.

—The Germans have a legend that Frederick the Great is to be seen in an enchanted sleep in a cavern in the Harz mountains. His long red beard and his crown have done their work and he has been sleeping there ever since. He is believed to have been very tired when he died, but for the rich a special breed of horses is preserved, which are the cheapest and garriest of any other. These horses are of little stature, and possess but little strength. Their inherited capacity for waxing fat of the cheapest straw and garbage is a tribute to natural selection and the genius of Chinese breeders.

—Hallett took up his hat and went. "This man, who had thought himself never to be astonished again, was an obstinate man, but not too obstinate to acknowledge himself astonished. He wanted no time over such arguments or letters, but he went abroad and some time subsequently he met Jim Paddon. The interview was short, but satisfactory. It appeared that Hallett required of his former friend was a letter written to Kate, telling her how much he loved her. Paddon deigned and Mrs. Paddon thought Hallett a nuisance.

"He may be a sneak," said Jim, "but he'll write myself down. Hallett declined to enter into the distinction. 'You can put it in a paragraph if you like,' he said. A man with only one lung and a bad case is no match for a man with two lungs and a good case and a rapidly developing pneumonia. Hallett was somewhat quick in the air. As he walked he found the British consul in the city enumerates purple, red, yellow, black, dark blue, light blue, grey, white, eggshell white, jade green, wax and 'frozen' color. The white, jade color and 'frozen' are considered the finest, and bring high prices. There are two thousand inches and caravans these mines.

"The dress coat of the 'kellner' is shortly to disappear from the leading Swiss hotels, so that it will no longer be possible to confound the waiter with guests. The coal enlivening of modern times was solemnly debated whether it was not practicable to do the waiter in more national dress, the existing obligatory swallow-tail. The precedent for such a resolution has already been set in Germany. A few months ago the hentsche Gastwirtsverband offered a prize for the best example of a convenient dress for the waiter. The design accepted by the committee (Joppo) of dark blue cloth, after the fashion of the stewards' uniform on board ships. This has met with a wide approval in the profession, and it is already adopted by the 'kellner' in many of the large German towns.

THE ENGLISH NAVY.

Inter-Dependence of Modern Fleets and Their Coal Stations. Sailing ships, it is said, will remain at sea for many months at a time. Their power to remain at sea was only limited by the amount of water they carried on board. The period during which a modern ship of war can remain at sea is determined mainly by her coal endurance, and to a great extent by the necessity of effecting repairs in port to delicate machinery. The coal endurance of modern ships of war is even more limited than their official figures, so far as any are available, lead us to suppose, and when two thousand miles—the distance at which she could deliver a blow and return to her port—she certainly could not underestimate her powers. The country which possesses the most numerous coaling stations and the best situated coaling routes will have a great advantage in a future war. In this respect the British empire is without a rival.

The Tribune.

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 29, 1903.

There will be a grand masquerade ball at the Lakeside Hall on Friday evening, Oct. 30th. Two gold rings will be given away, one to the most lovely and one to the most comical girl's costume.

Kenting the abounding Milwaukee cashier has been located at Menomonee Falls, and is being brought back to Milwaukee, where he must answer to the charge of crossing the South Side Bridge Bank. Numerous depositors in that bank, living in this county, will be interested in hearing this.

The "Washington letters," published in various papers, are cheaters monthly with age. Still certain papers continue to publish them for the simple reason that the "copy" is printed and that it helps to fill up when items are scarce. Then too, an occasional dispatch ten days old, from Paris, helps to impress the reader that the paper is cosmopolitan.

Congress expressed the sentiment of the Democratic party when it passed the repeal of the Federal election law. This law was a safe guard against fraud at election. Were the Southern states allowed to exercise their prerogative of franchise, as they could were federal aid and protection granted, then the minority would never rule the majority as is the case now.

The severity of the gale that raged on the lakes last Saturday and Sunday has not been exceeded during the period of navigation for the past 20 years. List of wrecks in proportion to the number of vessels out in the lake is larger perhaps than in the history of the latter day mariners. That there has been a large loss of life seems certain, but several days must elapse before it will be discovered how many perished.

The Democratic party is committing heretofore by its course in the senate, by aiding and abetting military dictation. That the party is too senile to make any considerable showing in any future national election, no one denies. The President convened Congress in extraordinary session to legislate for the people. The result is known to all—no relief for any one except the senators who were suffering from an over-plus of wind.

Seven saloons, two boarding houses, two barber shops, one grocery store, and three dwelling houses comprises the sum total of the city of Manistique. A Manistique individual recently detailed there by circumstances over which he had no control—a belated train. He was suffering from a severe Chicago headache, and inquired of a resident, "Where can I find next physician?" "I've seen! Aunty left town yesterday," was the answer, he received.

The railroads have at this late day, given the people of the United States a chance to visit the World's Fair. Rates have been reduced to one cent a mile, and thousands are availing themselves of the marked reduction. The people of the country build and maintain the railroads, and had the railroads—their servants—made the reduction three months ago the attendance at the fair would have been 10,000,000 greater than it now promises to be.

"Citizen" wants to know if it is lawful to impound a little calf, starve it for two days and then charge the owner $3? It is lawful to impound cattle that are allowed to roam at large in violation of the ordinance recently passed. The officers were asked concerning the case alluded to above and they state that impounding cattle are regularly fed and watered and that there was no deprivation in this case.

Wesley Tucker died at Quilhan's boarding house Thursday evening of last week, and was buried Friday afternoon. Short services were held at the parlour house, Rev. Rooney officiating. Tucker had been a resident of the county for ten years and was employed in camp #1 at the time he took sick—three weeks ago. Billious fever was the cause of his decease and about 40 years of age. Mr. Quilhan deserves much credit for befriending all expatriates connected with the burial.

It is plain to be seen that our more or less estemed contemporaries is sore and very jealous because the time has come when they cannot have everything their own way, and monopolize all the attention of the county officials, and for this reason they have always started at Tax Tuesday. Never mind boys, you have stumbled against an institution this time that you cannot see by your threats, or drive from the city. Tax Tuesday is deathly pleased with Manistique, and will remain.

The World's Columbian Exposition will go out in a blaze of splendor. The board of directors decided to make the last day Columbus Day, and announced that the festivities shall be commensurate with the name chosen for the finale. President Cleveland has been asked by a resolution of the directors to give the occasion a national significance by proclamation. If possible, with the approval of the cabinet, and it is thought that the president will give his assent to the resolution which will be made permanent.

The Supervisors Meeting.
The official proceedings of the meeting of the board of supervisors will be published in Tax Tuesday in next week's issue.

This week we give a condensed synopsis of the session.

The board met Monday Oct 28th. Bills to the amount of $8,500 were allowed.

The board then adjourned to Friday morning Oct 31.

Among the business transacted was the formulation of a contract with the Detroit House of Correction for the maintenance of county prisoners for a period of five years.

Mrs. Nellie C. Morrison was elected county school examiner for a term of two years.

Marocck A. Morrison was re-elected as poor commissioner for the term of 3 years.

The following resolution was presented and adopted:

RESOLVED—That THE WEEKLY TRIBUNE be designated the official organ of the county, and that the above company be given the county printing at legal rates.

Messrs. MacLaurin, Hill and County Clerk Ashford were appointed a committee to open bids for the printing of 500 copies of the supervisors proceedings in pamphlet form.

Messrs. McCallum, MacLaurin and French were appointed as a committee to examine county treasury. It is needless to add that they found everything in a bad shape.

Report follows:

Owing to lack of funds in county treasury to cash warrants it was resolved by the board that all county orders drawn prior to January 1st 1904, draw interest at the rate of 8 per cent to March 15th 1904.

EQUALIZATION OF TAXATION.
The board of Supervisors of the county of Schoolcraft State of Michigan having ascertained from the Assessment rolls of the several townships in this county that the value of the real and personal property of the several townships according to the assessment rolls thereof as fixed by the several boards of review is as follows:

TOWNSHIP.	REAL ESTATE.	PERSONAL.	TOTAL.
Doyle	$125,740	$108,340	$234,080

And whereas this board has ascertained and determined from the examination of the several assessment rolls for the year 1903 and have found that the relative valuation of the real property is unequal in said assessment rolls for the year.

Therefore be it resolved that said assessment rolls be equalized by deducting from and adding to the assessed valuation of real estate of the several townships as follows: By deducting from Manistique township $15,000; by deducting from Thompson $20,000; so that the equalization of the real and personal property of the several townships in this county for the purpose of apportioning the several taxes authorized to be assessed therein for the year 1903 and the same hereby is equalized as follows:

A Misstatement.
David Walker has returned to this place with his family, from Manistique, where he has been employed for the past year or two. The iron furnace at that place has been shut down since last spring and "Dave" says business there is almost at a standstill—Manistique Herald.

Mr. Walker misrepresents the situation here. Our industries save the furnace, have been in operation 24 hours every day this summer. Then too, ten brick buildings are in course of erection and every man willing to work is busy. Whereas there a city of equal size in the state that has an equally good record.

They will make their home at Manistique where Mr. Dunton has a large and growing practice. The bride is a niece of Judge Steere of this city. As a young woman she studied law and afterwards practiced here but has a large circle of acquaintances who will congratulate him on the event.—Geo. Democrat.

A Big Sale.
A large tract of land lying on the east end of this county and the northern part of Schoolcraft county was disposed of by the sale of the lands to satisfy the claim they still held. After hearing the case argued Judge Steere ordered the sale of the lands. Mr. Gamble carried the case to the state supreme court, where several months ago, the order of Judge Steere was sustained, and the lands were sold as above stated.—Alger Republican.

The lands were sold in 1886 by the Wylie Bros. to Henry Gamble, for the sum of $80,000, and about $25,000 of this amount was paid by Gamble at the time of the purchase. Nothing more was paid on the lands, and some time ago the Wylie Bros. commenced proceedings to secure an order from Judge Steere for the sale of the lands to satisfy the claim they still held. After hearing the case argued Judge Steere ordered the sale of the lands. Mr. Gamble carried the case to the state supreme court, where several months ago, the order of Judge Steere was sustained, and the lands were sold as above stated.—Alger Republican.

Justice will prevail.
Judge Long, the veteran whose pension was suspended some time ago, is going to ascertain if the pension commissioner has the infinite cover he is at present exerting in robbing worthy pensioners of the pittance that a generous republic should ungrudgingly give all war veterans of the perperuity of our government. When the clouds of battle lifted and pandis of peace were echoing everywhere, the soldier, maimed and shattered laid down the accoutrements of war to engage in the pursuits of peace. Exposure, hardships and loss of limb made life a burden to many thus handicapped. The government generously but not too promptly began pensioning worthy veterans. Of very liberal to disabled defenders. No doubt, many are receiving pensions to which they are not entitled, but this particular class are not so numerous as to warrant the wholesale suspension made by the present administration on the plea of economy.

Hoke Smith, has relatives that felt the sting of loyal lead during the struggle with secession. Certainly he does not feel as friendly toward the pensioner as he might, or should.

A large quantity of local matter was crowded out on account of lack of space.

The goods offered for sale are as good as they ever were but are offered at surprisingly low figures; in fact at your own price. Never before in the history of the city have such bargains been offered. The goods are as good as new but the prices are lower than these same goods could be purchased of the manufacturers. This sale will continue until all goods are sold.
