"Why Suffer When KruGon Will Free You From Pain"

Said Mr. Steedley: Thought He Was doomed to Finish Life in Suffering; KruGon Gave Him New Lease on Life

MR. CHARLES F. STEEDLEY

"How glad I am that I gave KruGon a test on my stubborn case for I am now enjoying good health," said Mr. Charles F. Steedley, 414 High St., Fort Wayne, Indiana. "I have suffered from severe pain in my back from a kidney ailment. I could not work without great distress. Then rheumatism developed in my shoulders and legs and I endured such intense suffering that I thought I could not stand it. My condition gradually grew worse with each day and I thought I was doomed to finish life with this terrible harassing affliction. Then I read in the newspaper about KruGon and decided to give it a trial on my stubborn case and I must say that KruGon does all that is claimed for it."

Behind Smoking Barrage, Jap Tanks Drive on Into China

Slowly but steadily encroaching upon more and more of China's territory, Japan's relentless advance is characterized by the ruthless, clanking drive of this tank corps into fallen Nanking. The tanks carried "mop-up" squads to clear out snipers, and followed the destructive artillery barrage turned upon the capital. Smoke from shelled and burning buildings hangs darkly over the road. Meanwhile Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek resigned as head of China's national government and political prisoners, mostly Communists, were released on bail.

Turning again to their northern objectives after the fall of Nanking, Japan's war machine rumbled on through rich Shantung province, capturing Tsinan, imperiling foreigners at Tsingtao, and increasing the vast area under Japanese control, shown on the above map. Military operations in the Hongkong-Canton area were forecast as Japan struck at China's most easily available source of munitions.

NEXT CONCERT TO BE JAN. 19

Kayla Mitzel Combines Beauty and Ability as Musician

Seldom do concert audiences have the twofold joy to eye and ear which is brought to the platform by Kayla Mitzel, sensational young Canadian-American violinist who will be heard in Escanaba on January 19 at W. W. Oliver auditorium.

It has become virtually an axiom that great physical loveliness is not to be hoped for in artists whose accomplishments entitle them to a place among the foremost recitalists. Particularly in this true of the violin where the physical requirements of the instrument seem to have decreed that practically all of the great feminine artists should be of almost Amazonian proportions.

Kayla Mitzel is that rare exception—a stunning girl of average size, whose tone has been the marvel of every critic who has reviewed her playing. While her technique has been consistently described as "flawless, brilliant, amazing"—naturally such technique is to be expected of an artist whom such a critic as Carl Fleisch has proclaimed "the greatest living woman violinist". A lovely warm tone, too, is to be expected of a violinist so feted—but when critics proclaim that her tone rises to proportions—"surpasses in volume and warmth many of our well-known male artists"—then we realize just why this girl's playing has created such a profound sensation.

It is this quality of depth which is a part of Kayla Mitzel, both as a musician and person, combined with her physical attractiveness which have made her one of the most popular young artists in Europe and America. It is that "certain something" which has brought her out from the rank of good violinists into that select group destined for real greatness.

State Political Gossip

Bombardments of Campaign Oratory Can Be Expected in Michigan for Eleven Months of 1938.

BY GUY H. JENKINS (Grand Rapids Press)

Lansing—For the next eleven months the people of Michigan can expect constant campaigning on behalf of the two major parties.

The Democrats have taken few breathing spells since their sweep of state officers in November, 1936. The Republicans have been doing organization work, but not with the same fanfare of the administration party, which is sponsoring a series of congressional district meetings to keep up the workers' pep.

While the 1938 election is not expected to arouse the enthusiasm a national election does, it should come pretty close to it.

James F. Thomson, chairman of the Republican state central committee, has urged his local workers to be ready for a hard campaign. While a congressional district now is represented by a Democrat, Thomson wants the campaign started to make sure of victory next November.

"I feel certain we not only will hold our present membership in congress but will win in some districts now represented by Democrats," he declares.

The Democratic leaders, particularly Edward J. Fry, state chairman, are happy over the results obtained through their district meetings and they believe the party will increase its membership in the national congress.

TICKETS NOT FOR SALE; JUST CONTRIBUTE $25.

Fry is busy with the final details of the Jackson day dinner the state organization will hold in Detroit Jan. 8. This affair is sponsored to build up the campaign chest for the national and state committees. Plans are under way to accommodate 1,000 loyal Democrats who will contribute a minimum of $25 each to the party treasury, for which they will receive a dinner ticket.

Tickets are not for sale. They are given in return for a contribution of at least $25. Of the $25-$500 expected to be raised the state committee retains 25 per cent of the net proceeds. The remainder goes to the national committee.

Stanley F. Reed, solicitor general of the United States, will be the principal speaker.

It is very probable that Gov. Murphy will give an accounting of the first year of his administration which will form the background for his campaign for nomination and re-election.

There seems to be a feeling among Republicans that they will have better success this fall than in 1936. Former Gov. Alex J. Groesbeck is one of those who think the party will stage a substantial comeback.

Groesbeck, never known to waste words in idle talk, expressed his political views to Lansing newspaper men. He picked Harry S. Toy of Detroit to win the Republican gubernatorial nomination.

NEW ELECTION RULES HEADACHE TO CASE

While the 1938 election is not expected to arouse the enthusiasm a national election does, it should come pretty close to it.

Under the old law a voter declared his party affiliation before receiving a ballot. Under the new law he will be handed ballots for all parties. Once in the booth he is supposed to vote but one party ballot.

AFRAID VOTERS WILL USE MANY BALLOTS

"It seems our problem is to keep John W. Public from indicating his primary choices on more than one of those ballots, which should be returned to the election inspector unused," Case said.

"There are many voters who have friends seeking nominations in both primaries. They will be inclined to vote their own party ticket and also vote for one or two friends whose names appear on the other ballots. How to prevent this is going to be no easy matter."

Under the old statute an elector was recorded as voting one party ticket. This information was available after election to anyone who was interested in knowing with what party John Jones was affiliated.

Backers of the secret primary ballot insisted hundreds of electors voted the Republican ballot because they were afraid of what their bosses might think or do. They also said hundreds of voters stayed away from the polls because they would not reveal their party to anyone.

If the sponsors of the reform really had something, primary elections should attract about as many voters as a general election. Next September will tell the tale.

THIS IS THE SEASON OF RESOLUTIONS. The politicians in office and those wanting to get into office are in the same classification—they make resolutions some to be kept others to be broken.

HERE'S RESOLUTIONS THEY MIGHT MAKE

Unable to contact the greats and near greats in Michigan's political whirl, this department offers the following imaginary resolutions:

Gov. Murphy—Resolved, That all through 1938 I will be able to draw my full salary—$10,000 a year is little enough for a chief executive who has as many invitations to speak in all parts of this glorious country of ours as I do.

THEODORE I. FRY, state treasurer—Resolved, That I will continue to administer the affairs of my office so well that in 1940 I will be my party's candidate for the United States senate.

Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg—Oh yes! Well, Resolved, That if the Republican party does not nominate me for president in 1940 I will return to the senate to properly represent Michigan.

Iron Inn Bought By Alfred Angeli Of Crystal Falls

Iron River—Alfred Angeli, food merchant, is the new owner of the Iron Inn.

Announcement of the transfer of the property was made New Year's day, although Angeli made the purchase some time ago from his brother-in-law, James and Rudy Mancel.

The consideration was not revealed, but the Mancel brothers on March 8 last bought the property from the trustees of the former First National Bank for $42,500.

Since then several major improvements have been made at the hotel. A taproom costing approximately $7,000 was installed and remodeling and redecorating and new furnishings and fixtures also increased the value of the property.

Keast Is Manager
Angeli has engaged Alfred Keast, of Crystal Falls, as manager and he is now in charge. Keast was for many years desk clerk at the Crystal Inn in Crystal Falls and for a period was manager of the Dickinson hotel in Iron Mountain.

The rooms at the Iron Inn are to be improved and it is planned to buy new furnishings to replace those in use when Charles A. Robinson, former owner, had charge.

Rudy Mancel has been in charge of the hotel and taproom while his brother, James, has been supervising construction of their new Riverside club now being completed at Twin Falls, on the Wisconsin side. Rudy plans to join his brother within two weeks, when the club will be opened.

During 1937, 65 permits were issued for construction projects, valued at $172,937. This figure does not include the Escanaba postoffice addition, which will approach $130,000.

SEWAGE PLANT CHIEF ENGAGED

John Norgaard of Flint Holds Operators License

John T. Norgaard of Flint has been engaged as chief operator of the Escanaba municipal sewage treatment plant, succeeding William Roddy, who resigned to return to work with the Chicago and North Western railways. Norgaard assumed his duties here Monday.

The new operator is a graduate of Michigan State college, and holds a bachelor of science degree in chemical engineering. He worked for the U. S. Coast and Geodetic Survey for six months following graduation from college, and then entered the employ of the Campbell, Wyant & Cannon Foundry company at Muskegon. During 1936, he was employed with Conroy, Townsend & Quinlan, consulting engineers, and during the past year has been employed as sewage treatment plant chemist for the city of Flint.

Norgaard holds a state sewage plant operators' license, the holding of which is required under the state law for the management of the Escanaba plant. He is married, and has taken up residence at 600 South Tenth street.

The Administration Fights Business

Once again President Roosevelt has launched what Secretary Ickes calls "a fight to the finish." The last time we had such a fight it was directed against the Supreme Court. This time it is pointed at "sixty families" who head our monopolies and are held responsible for the high prices which prevent a building boom.

The intention of the Administration, as proclaimed by Assistant Attorney-General Robt. A. Jackson and Secretary of the Interior Ickes, is to call the bluff of big business and give battle for the salvation of the country.

It looks as though the President's flair for the dramatic gesture had again superseded his sober judgment. His objectives may be sound, but the means he has taken to achieve them are almost sure to defeat his ends. Ours is still a relatively free economic system. Government can lead, regulate and control, but it cannot compel, at least not yet. Administration leaders know this. Obviously what they propose is to frighten business into doing what the Government wants it to do.

We are told that as a result of inquiries on building material costs the President became convinced that the producers would not reduce prices voluntarily. The trust-busting campaign now under way is the result.

The President is right in asserting that prices have advanced unduly. Steel, cement and lumber companies raised prices more than was necessary to make up for the increased cost of labor and raw materials. Other corporations made the same mistake. Assistant Attorney-General Jackson has cited the difference between the profits of large corporations in 1937 and in 1936 to prove this point.

Of course, he picked his years carefully. Had he chosen 1934 and 1937, the result would not have been the same. He also cited the huge salaries which the executives of great corporations have allotted to themselves. Here he stands on firmer ground. To the average American, it does not seem fair that an executive receiving a quarter of a million dollars a year should add one hundred thousand dollars to his salary at a time when business is just emerging from a severe depression. But these salary increases do not in themselves prove that profits are excessive or that monopoly prices are being charged.

But let us grant for the moment that the Administration is right in its contention. Prices have advanced too rapidly. Some of America's two hundred largest corporations are practical monopolies. They have charged what the traffic will bear, instead of reducing prices to increase traffic. They have not sought to stimulate consumption by charging the lowest possible prices. They have taken advantage of their monopoly position to squeeze the public. An anti-monopoly drive is therefore justified.

Is the Administration going about it in the right way? It is necessary, in the face of a serious business recession, to drive a wedge between Government and business? Will a drive that completely ignores the part played by high labor costs in preventing building be able to force reduced prices for materials without frankly facing this equally important problem of excessive labor costs?

For years daily wages in the building trades have been completely out of line with those in other fields. Largely as a result of these high labor costs there has been no marked resumption of building. President Roosevelt's half-hearted appeal for reduced labor costs in his last message to Congress received a negative response from labor leaders. Has he done anything to follow it up? Has there been any attempt to secure the promise of a lower daily wage in return for the promise of a higher annual income? It is a fair statement that carpenters, painters, masons and bricklayers could increase their annual income if they would consent to a decrease of one-third in their daily rate of pay. They, too, have a monopoly which must be broken.

President Roosevelt is first of all a politician. One must always analyze the political motives that underlie his action. At the present time he is greatly concerned about the political effects of the business recession. The Administration is always blamed for a recession which occurs while it is in power. It receives credit when business gets better and is blamed when it gets worse. The truth is that Mr. Hoover did not cause the 1929 collapse and Mr. Roosevelt did not bring about the 1936 recovery. Nor is Mr. Roosevelt primarily to blame for the 1937 slump. But the Democrats will have a hard time escaping the blame if the depression should continue through 1938.

Mr. Roosevelt's present drive has two immediate objectives. He honestly believes that monopoly prices are holding up a housing boom which could end the recession. Therefore he seeks to drive those prices down by every means in his power, and he has launched his trust-busting campaign with

Belated Holiday

By ELINORE COWAN STONE Copyright, 1937, NEA Service, Inc.

Yesterday, Mrs. Trent and Linda are reconciled and Linda returns to Barry's home with the grand old lady.

CHAPTER XVII
"Your little friend Mr. Abruzzi," the Duchess observed when he had shut the car door upon them, "is a rather discerning person; and I must say that in many respects he is more closely acquainted with a gentleman than many who think they set the standards for the species. Although I can't understand," she went on frowning, "his opening your mail. He admitted to me without the faintest embarrassment that the letter I mailed you had never reached you because he tore it up and threw it into the wastebasket."

"But Tony always opened my mail. I didn't—you mean you wrote to me?"
"Naturally I wrote to you after Rita Blanchard came home with her amazing story, and the whole town began buzzing with it. The place for my grandson's wife is in his home."

"Then Linda remembered something that at the moment had failed to catch her entire attention."
"But how did you know—about Barry and me?" she stammered. "Tony couldn't have told you. He didn't guess, himself."

"I should not be too sure about what Tony did or did not guess," countered the old lady. "But Tony did not tell me. . . . Do you happen to remember that a letter came for me—rather late the night Judge Baldwin died? . . . Perhaps you would like to hear it?"

"She took it from her purse and began to read aloud:
"My dear old friend,
"I am violating a confidence in writing this note, but I think I am justified by circumstances. Just before your grandson's departure, I performed a ceremony uniting him in marriage with Miss Linda Benton. Because of the strain you had been under for the past few days, the young people felt that it would be kinder to keep you in the dark about their step until Captain Trent's return."

"I did not agree with their reasoning, but I complied with their wishes in having the marriage record secretly filed. Now, with only a few hours to live, I find misgiving heavy upon me. I have a suspicion that if Captain Trent should not return, his wife will be very resistant about claiming the relationship. You must admit—"

"Then you knew," Linda broke in. "You knew when—"
"When Rita Blanchard staged her little tragedy, you mean? I did. And prayed in my heart that you would rise and blast her with a few well-chosen words. But you did not. . . . And wondering why," said old Miranda irritably, "and why you chose to treat me like a child, cost me a perfectly good night's sleep. After that I—well, I preferred to have you tell me, yourself."

"But I hadn't any proof—nothing but my own word. I—"
"And I suppose it never occurred to you," snapped old Miranda, "that if I hadn't been willing to take your word against a stack of Bibles, you wouldn't have been in my house at all. . . . And you never did mean to come to me."

"No," Linda said steadily. "Never. Especially after—Tony's. I knew you thought—"
"And why," demanded Miranda Trent, "should you presume to know what I might or might not think? Did you imagine that I should hold it against you that, in spite of having been brought up like a china mantel-piece, you had backbone enough to go out and carve yourself a slice of the world?"

When Linda would have spoken, the old lady cut her off with an imperious gesture.
"For if," she pursued, "you had known anything about me, you would have understood that the one thing I cannot stomach is a helpless nobby-pamby. . . . And even if I hadn't had to take my hat off to you for the way you faced down that pack of curiosity seekers the other day, I should never have thought of questioning my grandson's choice."

Linda smiled a little dubious smile.
"But old Miranda had returned to Judge Baldwin's letter."
"You must admit, Miranda," she read, "that you are sometimes a difficult, cantankerous, over-possessive old woman, and that you— and no doubt, she broke off to bristle, "that's precisely what you think of me—that I am a cantankerous, unreasonable, jealous old woman?"

"Yes," said Linda softly. "But I'm beginning to like you that way," and knew that she would never be afraid of Miranda Trent again."

Once back in the old house, it seemed to Linda as if she had never been away—except that that bare, dried-up Christmas tree no longer shed needles in the front parlor.
The days settled naturally into the old routine—only with a difference. Old Miranda began to consult Linda more and more about the details of their daily life.

"For after all, my dear Linda," the old lady said, "in due time this house will be yours. You must learn to administer it as a Trent should."

With the sturdy common sense that was so inescapably a part of her, Miranda Trent knew that come famine, flood, or earthquake, life must go on after a fashion. It was perhaps the greatest kindness she could have done Linda to keep her busy.

Not that life with old Miranda was a bed of roses—or ever could be. But Linda was learning to be amused rather than hurt when the old lady's weakness for the telling phrase got the better of her kindness, and her caustic tongue ran away with her.

One evening, almost a week after Linda's return, old Miranda looked up to say, "Why not tune into your friend Tony's program? Perhaps the elephants will sing. . . . Do you know, I'm not at all sure he hadn't already picked his elephants that last night."

"So Linda did tune in to the Villa Abruzzi. The two women waited with curiosity for the moment when the house used to be darkened, and the strains of "Who is Silvia" to float across the room. . . . But Linda's successor was not a trained elephant: it was a troop of singing canaries."

Linda was just about to snap the radio off again when an excited voice broke in, "Ladies and gentlemen, we interrupt our regular program to bring you a special broadcast from Panama. I am not sure, but I think there is news from the lost Aurelius expedition. . . . Just a moment please."

It seemed an hour that Linda sat trembling, with her finger nails biting into her palms. Then another voice called:
"Hello! hello, the United States of America! This is Station WJB with some news which we hope may mean the end of agonizing suspense to many there at home. The members of the lost Aurelius Scientific Expedition have been located in the Central American jungle where their plane was forced down almost two weeks ago."

"In spite of the hardships the party have endured, all are in excellent condition with the exception of the pilot, Lieutenant Rust, who was slightly injured in the landing, and who has been brought by plane into Bilbas. All other members remained in the temporary camp cracker. Supplies and equipment are being carried to them by boat and pack trains to supplement the emergency rations carried by the plane that made the rescue."

"And now, ladies and gentlemen, we want to introduce the daring young United States Navy pilot who made this spectacular rescue. Captain Trent is naturally very tired, and is not anxious to talk about his amazing feat; but I think he has a message he would like to send to those at home."
"There was a delay during which Linda was sure she could hear old Miranda's heart beat. . . . Then Barry's voice:
"I only want to send New Year's greetings to—two who may be listening up there—to my grandmother, Mrs. Miranda Trent, and to my—my wife, Linda Benton Trent." He hesitated, then added abruptly, "Well, that's all. I think."

"Oh, but, Captain Trent," the announcer put in, "there are still so many things we aren't up to date on, even down here. For instance, we know that your plane was completely demolished by that storm you ran into; yet you landed a plane in that jungle and flew Lieutenant Rust out in it. I hope you won't mind telling us at least where you came up with that second plane?"

OLYMPIC STAR TO SPEAK HERE

Betty Robinson Appears at Senior High on Thursday

Betty Robinson, sprint star of the Olympics, will address the Senior High school students Thursday morning at ten o'clock during the activity period as a feature of the lyceum program of the year.

Miss Robinson, a star in the sprint field for ten years, has been a member of two Olympic teams but missed the in-between-year because she was in bed with a broken leg suffered in an airplane accident. There are comparatively few athletes, either men or women, who have been members of two teams.

Miss Robinson was a mere schoolgirl when she was "discovered" by the school track coach who saw her run to catch a train. She was the baby of the team when the 1923 Olympic squad started for Amsterdam, where she flashed home ahead of the field. This American high school girl became not only the winner of the 100 meters race but the champion of the world.

In 1922 after making the American team again she crashed in an airplane to be laid up for many months. No one at the time gave her further participation in athletics any consideration. However, Betty Robinson "came back" after months of training and setbacks to climax her career by being a member of the winning relay team at the 1926 Olympic games in Berlin.

Miss Robinson's story of her experience at Amsterdam and Berlin is interesting. She knows well all the members of the teams and has many interesting comments to give on such stars as Jesse Owens, Eleanor Holm, Glenn Cunningham and the foreign stars she met.

James G. Martin, Cherry Orchard Owner, Is Dead

Milwaukee — (AP) — James G. Martin, 74, former mayor of Sturgeon Bay and at one time owner of extensive cherry orchards in Door county, died at St. Joseph's hospital here.

He was confined to the hospital for the past 10 days, and underwent an operation a few days ago. He will be buried in Manitowoc. Martin, who had been a member of the Chicago Board of Trade, moved to Manitowoc in 1907 and entered the grain business. Two years later he entered the cherry growing industry in Door county, organizing the orchard company bearing his name, which, it was claimed, became the largest in the world. He continued in the business until five years ago. He served as mayor of Sturgeon Bay for five terms.

Peterson was born August 30, 1858, in Sweden, and came to this country in 1886, reaching Escanaba April 2 of that year. He started as an ore dock laborer in the summer of 1886, working the following winter as bridge repair man. He maintained that summer and winter schedule for 12 years. Thereafter he was a boilermaker for the company for four years. In 1902 he was transferred to Antoine as a boilermaker and in 1914 was promoted to the post of foreman, serving eight years in that capacity. He later was employed as night foreman up to the time of his retirement.

During his long service, Peterson lost only nine and a half days' work, and then from illness. With his wife, he is visiting at present in the south, and will arrive home after May 1. He has no plans for the future, members of his family said, other than to "take it easy and enjoy life."

The school being held at Marquette opened with an enrollment of 65 and the enrollment has now grown to 87. The classes will be conducted by the District Electrical Inspector J. A. Flath, and by the Electrical Board.
