

WIFE OF STEEL MAGNATE DEAD

Mrs. Charles M. Schwab Was Loyal Partner for 54 Years

New York, Jan. 12 (AP)—Mrs. Charles M. Schwab, the steel magnate's partner in 54 years of struggle and success, died of heart trouble today at the age of 79.

The former Emma Eurana Dinkey of Braddock, Pa., married Schwab when he was working in one of Andrew Carnegie's mills.

Schwab was with her when she died, along with her sister, who had lived with them for several years, two nieces, and Schwab's brother Edward. The Schwabs had no children.

Until four years ago, when ill health overtook her, Mrs. Schwab had been an active lover of music and the stage, and many great artists had appeared in the salon of the Schwab $3,000,000 Riverside Drive mansion.

Mrs. Schwab was born in West Penn, Pa. Her father was Reuben Dinkey, one of the first steel chemists in the country. Her brother Alva became president of the Carnegie Steel corporation and the Midvale Steel corporation. Her brother Charles became general manager of the Carnegie works.

nor came to light today in connection with an investigation of financial affairs of the department's principal Detroit branch.

M. J. Murphy, business manager for the state department, told Secretary of State Harry F. Kelly that Hoyt Morris, deputy branch manager, and others had underwritten expenses for a portion of Schroeder's campaign printing. As keeper of the campaign chest of former Secretary of State Leon D. Case, Murphy said, he is "still getting bills for it."

"That was one of the sore spots up here," Murphy explained, "that clique down there in Detroit getting into the lieutenant governor campaign when Case and Youngblood (Bernard J. Youngblood, Case's deputy) were keeping out of it."

Leo Nowicki (former lieutenant governor who was seeking re-nomination) was raising all kinds of hell about the tie-up."

There were rumors at the time of an alliance between the state department and Nowicki's rival but both Case and Youngblood denied them.

Murphy said officials of the state department in Detroit were obligated, in the name of the "loyalty club," for "hundreds of dollars" in campaign bills yet unpaid. Morris, seeking to explain an apparent shortage of $8,100 in a telephone account, said the money had been used for campaign expenses with the understanding that the fund would be reimbursed from Case's war chest.

Murphy said he sent Morris $1,000 from that fund in advance of the primary election. The money, he said, "came into my hands from contributions made by employees." He did not elaborate upon the method of assessment.

Takes Time Out

Greeted in New York by 600 women and a pack of reporters, glamorous film star Robert Taylor pondered queries on his rumored romance with Barbara Stanwyck. "All statements must come from Hollywood," he finally said.

CHILDREN SELL HARLEM'S DOPE

Federal Agents Believe They Have Heads of Narcotic Ring

New York, Jan. 12 (AP)—A startling story of children selling narcotics in the streets of Harlem "as openly as though they were selling apples and with a good deal more success" was told tonight by treasury department officials as the indictment of 17 persons was disclosed.

Among those charged with conspiracy and sale of narcotics was Carlos Cubela, steward aboard the steamer which returned Secretary of State Cordell Hull and his party from Lima, Peru.

Maj. Garland Williams, chief of the narcotics division here, said conditions in the negro and Latin-American sections of Manhattan were "atrocious."

"We have learned that to arrest the petty passers of the narcotic is futile," he said. "It merely creates a job for another criminal. So we extended our investigation over a period of many months to get the higher-ups—and I believe we finally caught up with them."

Assistant U. S. Attorney Abel I. Smith said ten defendants were under arrest and others probably were in Cuba and South America. He estimated the ring had smuggled in about $60,000 worth of one variety of narcotic on Grace liners from South America and large quantities of others.

Middle-Aged Men Mobilize In Spain To Check Rebels

Hendaya, France (At the Spanish Front), Jan. 12 (AP)—The Spanish government mobilized thousands of middle-aged men in Catalonia today to check insurgent encroachment along a 125-mile front.

The call went out to men between the ages of 39 and 45 for the front lines and to others up to the age of 50, including those unfit for front-line duty, for fortification brigades. It was unofficially estimated that 200,000 men were affected by the order.

Medical re-examination of all previously considered incapacitated for service was ordered.

War industries and supplies were militarized and the ranks of factory specialists were reduced by half to free still more men to buttress the sagging line from the Pyrenees to the Mediterranean, from north to south across Catalonia.

BANKERS ADOPT PENSION SETUP

Employees to Contribute From Wages, Retire At 55 to 65

Flint, Mich., Jan. 12 (AP)—The Michigan Bankers' association today adopted unanimously an employees' pension plan and authorized its insurance committee and executive council to work out the mechanics of the set-up, to be handled through the association and to be voluntary with banks.

Ernest L. Pearce of Marquette presided at the convention session at which Fred B. Post of Ionia, insurance committee chairman, outlined the plan. Post said 98 per cent of the state's banks are too small to have separate pension plans.

The plan provides for retirement at 65, with optional retirement from 55 to 65. Contributions by employees range upwards from 3 per cent of their wages. The employer will match the contributions. Death benefits will be paid with 2½ per cent compound interest on the employee's contributions.

William A. Irwin of New York, assistant education director of the American Institute of Banking, told the Michigan bankers tonight that "economic turmoil has changed the nature of banking," and that increased technical training will be required in the future.

Pastor's Son Who Killed His Father Gets Twenty Years

Chillicothe, O., Jan. 12 (AP)—Robert Bready, who declared he was too drunk to remember killing his father, was sentenced today to 20 years in prison today for the fatal shooting of Dr. Russell H. Bready, prominent Methodist minister, and former acting mayor of Pontiac, Mich.

Dr. Bready, 62, was found shot dead in a vacant lot in Brainbridge, Dec. 2. His 29-year-old son, who had lived with him since returning from the Spanish civil war, was indicted Tuesday on a manslaughter charge. Judge Wilbur M. McKeanie told Bready: "I hope this will teach you one thing. It doesn't pay to drink."

Prosecutor Lester S. Reid said he had a confession from Bready, saying he must have shot his father when the older man was trying to sober him up by means of a midnight stroll.

STRAITS BRIDGE PLAN DISCUSSED

Brown Says President Wants to Build Huge Span

Washington, Jan. 12 (AP)—Senator Brown (D-Mich.) said after a White House interview today the president offered Michigan highway executive encouragement for the proposed bridge across the Straits of Mackinac.

"The president wants to build the bridge," Brown said, "and we discussed with him a plan to build causeways with works progress administration money and labor."

Accompanying Brown were Murray D. Van Wagoner, state highway commissioner, and G. Donald Kennedy, highway department business manager. Brown said he and the Michigan officials assured the president reports of a rift in the party in their state were unfounded.

Brown and Rep. Bradley (R-Mich.), after a discussion with Van Wagoner, promised to ask congress for consent to construct the bridge over the navigable straits waters.

Van Wagoner announced Michigan's 1940-41 federal aid highway program, comprising expenditures of over $3,000,000 in federal funds yearly, had received tentative approval of the bureau of public roads during conversations with Director Thomas H. McDonald.

Asikainen Wants His Old Job Back

Lansing, Jan. 12 (AP)—The state civil service commission today voted to ask the Michigan unemployment compensation commission to explain its delay in seeking to restore to civil service status six employees dismissed for becoming candidates in the last primary and election.

Andrew Asikainen, former Uppe Peninsula field auditor for the unemployment compensation commission, asked the civil service commission today to give him back his job. At the same time, the unemployment compensation commission filed a letter stating it desired to have six employees returned to the eligible register for future employment.

Asikainen was a primary candidate on the Republican ticket for the post held by Rep. Frank Hook, of the 12th congressional district. The others dismissed for various candidacies were William Welsh, J. Bernard Dallas, Stanley Frankowski, Martin W. Baginski, and Henry S. Wich.

Asikainen asserted that he believed an unemployment compensation commission ruling against candidacy for public office was aimed solely at him because he ran on the Republican ticket. He quoted Abner E. Larned, former director of the commission, and Carl Mounter, chief of its benefits division, as telling him "inasmuch as I might beat Hook why don't I run?"

George J. Burke, chairman of the civil service commission, said the petition to reinstate the six employees to the eligible register was passed to the statutory limit, but that it was not the employees' fault, apparently, and that they might be given back their status if such proved to be the case.

BETTING CONDEMNED

Lansing, Jan. 12 (AP)—Rep. Joseph E. Warner, Republican, Ypsilanti, instituted in the legislature today a move to outlaw pari-mutuel betting on horse races.

Warner, pointing to other gambling laws, said he felt the state should be consistent and forbid gambling of all kinds.

He said he resented the fact that the State Fair in Detroit invites 4-H club boys and girls to compete and exhibit their work at a place that also permits betting.

"It probably is no worse for the state to take revenues from the horse races than it is to take revenues from the sale of liquor," he said, "but we must stop somewhere."

His bill was introduced in the house of representatives and referred to committee.

The senate confirmed the first batch of Governor's Fitzgerald's appointments, approving his choice of William A. Irving of Sandusky, to succeed Stuart H. Perry of Adrian, resigned, on the civil service commission, Joseph H. Thompson, Ypsilanti, to succeed Roger M. Andrews of Menominee, as chairman of the Mackinac Island state park commission; and Orville E. Atwood, former secretary of state, to succeed Draper M. Allen, Detroit, as managing director of the state board of tax administration.

NEW JUSTICE APPROVED BY U. S. SENATORS organizations. Senator McCarran remarked that such reports "bear on the Civil Liberties Union as regards Communism and some quite broad statements are made."

After several senators had skirted the question without asking it directly, Chairman Neely (D-W. Va.), with apologies for his bluntness, inquired:

"Are you now, or have you ever been, a Communist?"

"I have never been and I am not now a Communist," was the reply.

"Do you mean," McCarran put in, "that you have never been enrolled as a member of the Communist party?"

"I mean more than that," Frankfurter said. "I mean that I have never been enrolled and I have never been enrolled because that does not represent my view of life or my view of government."

In the same spirit of blunt, direct questioning, Senator Borah (R-Idaho) asked:

"Do you believe in the American Constitution?"

"I most assuredly do," Frankfurter replied.

Confirmation Predicted

Explaining the origin of the Civil Liberties Union, Frankfurter said it was conceived during the period after the World War and grew out of lawless activities on the part of law enforcement officers, referring to the drive against alleged radicals at that time. He quoted several persons, including the now Chief Justice Hughes, as having denounced the events of that period.

"I would not be surprised," he said, "if Mr. Roger Baldwin himself (head of the Civil Liberties Union) asked me if I would be one of the people who would lend their moral support to the vituperation . . . of the principles and practices of the bill of rights."

"My experience as a prosecutor with knowledge of the terrible instruments which are placed in the hands of a prosecutor . . . made me alive to the importance of being one of a group of people whose special job it would be to watchful that the bill of rights was not violated."

In response to a question by McCarran, he said he knew that at one time William Z. Foster, noted Communist, was a member of the national committee of the Civil Liberties Union.

The sub-committee will report the nomination to the full committee on Monday and, with its approval, it will go to the senate for confirmation. McCarran declined to say after the hearing whether he would support Frankfurter. He was absent when the unanimous sub-committee vote was taken, but later asked the committee clerk to record him as voting in favor of confirmation.

SPEED URGED IN ARMAMENT BY PRESIDENT

congressional support.

Further, officials have indicated strongly that expanded air forces will require more troops, for which the recommendations likewise failed to provide fully.

Planes Obsolete

The message was confined to general outlines and sums, virtually the only major detail being the estimate that the 330,000-000 for army aircraft would provide a minimum increase of 3,000 planes. The president left to war and navy spokesmen the explanation and justification of other details at committee hearings.

Of the plane estimate, Mr. Roosevelt said that "it is hoped that orders placed on such a large scale will materially reduce the unit cost and actually provide more planes."

Inasmuch as the estimate was based on $100,000 a plane, a considerable larger figure than the average cost of existing American army and navy planes, officials estimated privately that mass production contracts should net actually more than 4,000 additional aircraft.

The army now has in service, on order or has already requested funds for its present quota of 2,320 planes. The navy lists 2,152 of all types, many obsolete. Some authoritative administration sources reported the army's new goal was 10,000 planes, including training and other semi-military craft, and the navy's 3,000, to be attained in less than three years.

The chief executive said in his message, however, that "no responsible officer advocates building our air forces up to the total either of planes or of productive capacity equal to the forces of certain other nations."

From Ambassadors Joseph P. Kennedy and William C. Bullitt, Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh, and various others abroad, the administration has heard the demand Germany has 10,000 or more warplanes now, and a productive capacity of more than 1,000 monthly.

Though his air force expansion recommendations overshadowed others, the president stressed equally what he described as the need to supply the army with $110,000,000 worth of "critical" items of equipment, and to reinforce the defenses of the Panama Canal.

He disposed of the recommendations for the navy, however, in a single sentence, merely proposing $44,000,000 for air bases in accordance with the Hepburn board's report and $21,000,000 for additional airplanes and air material tests.

Chairman Opposed To Slot Machines In Licensed Clubs

Detroit, Jan. 12 (AP)—Orrin De Mass, new chairman of the Michigan liquor control commission, said tonight he is opposed to permitting licensed clubs to own and operate slot machines.

"The thing is ridiculous on the face of it," De Mass said. "How could we be certain that the clubs were keeping all of the take? They could tell us that and still be kicking in to organized racketeering."

"The commission is in the liquor business, and will have no part in gambling in any form."

He said that if any liquor establishments, including private clubs, were permitting gambling and slot machines, they would be cleaned out.

Missouri's Tenant Families Huddled Up In Snowstorm

New Madrid, Mo., Jan. 12 (AP)—A blizzarding snowstorm, on the heels of an all-day rain, added to the discomfort tonight of southeast Missouri's 1,000 tenant farmers who are encamped in the open in what they have termed a demonstration against sharecropper poverty.

The demonstration, which began Tuesday when the ragged army of farm workers and their families gathered along U. S. highways 60 and 61, brought demands early today from planters for federal intervention. Land owners claimed the demonstration as "unwarmed."

The driving snow, however, failed to force many of the farm families from their encampments in this vicinity, although the crowds were reported diminishing in adjoining counties.

Behind the scant protection of quilts hung on sticks and other makeshift shelters, only about 100 remained along one stretch of road where 250 persons had been gathered.

O. E. Wright, county Social Security director, described the situation near here as acute. Food was running low, he said, with those still with provisions dividing them with those whose supplies have been exhausted. Additional food from the Federal Surplus Commodities corporation at Dexter, Mo., is expected here by tomorrow afternoon.

State Swim Title At Stake Tonight

Ann Arbor, Mich., Jan. 12 (AP)—Michigan and the Detroit A. C. will fight it out in the intramural pool here tomorrow night for the state A. A. U. swimming championship.

The Wolverines, vying for the title for the first time, are favored to wrest the championship from the D. A. C. Michigan is national collegiate champion.

Wayne university, Battle Creek high school and the Kronk Athletic club of Detroit are expected to enter the meet.

Michigan will seek to better the National A. A. U. free style relay mark of 200, 250 and 300 yards.

AMOS AWARDED EASTERN POST

Forester to Head Up Rehabilitation Program in New England

Edward G. Amos, assistant regional forester in Milwaukee for five years, has been appointed to head a huge federal program for the rehabilitation of New England timberland ravaged by the eastern hurricane of Sept. 21, 1938, it was announced Wednesday. He will leave Monday for his new headquarters at Boston, Mass.

The September hurricane, which caused scores of deaths, blew down 4,000,000,000 feet of New England timber, equivalent to the amount normally cut in those states in nine years, Amos said.

Program Is Outlined

To rehabilitate the forest lands, the federal government is planning to buy up what timber can be salvaged, store it until it can be marketed without demoralizing lumber prices, remove debris in "blowdown" areas which might create extreme fire hazards and provide other fire protection.

Amos' part in the rehabilitation program will be to supervise the storage of salvaged logs and the removal of debris and to lay out a fire protection system. He will have under him 40,000 WPA workers and 10,000 CCC members, who will work in co-operation with private lumber companies and the conservation departments of the affected states.

Five Years for System

Amos said that he expected to have plans made for fire protection by next spring, but that five or six years would be needed to complete the system. Salvaged timber will be stored in ponds until it can be milled and marketed, he said.

During his five years here Amos has been in charge of CCC work in nine middle western states. His successor has not yet been chosen, according to Lyle F. Watts, regional forester.

Mr. Amos is well known in the Upper Peninsula. He was county agent leader of the Michigan State College extension division for several years and later was manager of the Blaney Park resort before joining the U. S. Forest Service.

KruGon Gave Her Unexpected Results

Wonderfully Relieved of Pain In Hands; Stomach, Bowels Regulated, Like A Different Person Now

"After all else that I tried had failed completely in my case, KruGon actually worked wonders," said Mrs. John Lucas, 940 Kingdon Ave., Danville, Illinois. "For over two years I had endured no end of suffering with my hands which were so stiff and sore at times the pain was terrible. Then, too, gas, bloating and indigestion added to my discomfort. Chronic constipation had allowed my system to become clogged with poisons and terrible back aches made my work that much more difficult. I spent much time and money seeking relief but met only with repeated failure. It was not until I learned of KruGon and gave it a trial that I was given any help.

"In just a short time I noticed a remarkable improvement in my condition," continued Mrs. Lucas. "Now those awful pains, stiffness and soreness is gone from my hands; my stomach and bowels have been regulated, that awful backache has disappeared and my work has become a pleasure since my health has been restored. I cannot say half enough for the remarkable medicine, KruGon, which brought about such a wonderful change in my condition even after all else failed."

KruGon is sold by West End Drug Store, 1221 Ludington St., this city.

War Talk Doesn't Stop Ludlow in Peace Moves

BY BRUCE CATTON
NEA Service Staff Correspondent
Washington — Congressman Louis Ludlow's idea that the people of a democracy ought to have the privilege of saying, for themselves, whether they want to go to war or not, continues to glimmer like a good deed in a naughty world.

Ludlow would be so great as to imperil national defense.

Undiscouraged by war clouds, Congressman Ludlow is re-introducing his bill for a nation-wide referendum in case of war, and has no patience with the people who say that the time lag involved in such a referendum would be so great as to imperil national defense.

"With modern communications and radio, it ought to be easy enough to find out without too much delay how the people feel," he says.

Congressman Ludlow plans to introduce another bill prohibiting the exportation of munitions in peacetime as well as when a war is on. He thinks it is wrong for America to ship such things as bombing planes either to aggressor nations or to nations attacked, and he suspects that there is a lot of unlicensed bootlegging now going on in war supplies.

He has already brought in a bill recommending a naval holiday and a conference on the limitation of armaments.

FOUR IN TWELVE
The Senate seat just occupied by the new Republican Senator from Oregon, Rufus C. Holman, has been held by four people during the last 12 months.

The first was Senator Frederick Steiwer. He resigned on the 31st of last January, and the governor of Oregon appointed Alfred Reames to serve until the election. Steiwer was a Republican, Reames a Democrat.

At the fall elections, Oregon elected Republican Alex G. Barry to fill the unexpired term. Senator Barry came here Nov. 9 and served until Jan. 2. Senator Holman, elected for the full six-year term, has just replaced him.

Senator Barry stayed around the capitol to watch Congress convene, and spent much time in conference with Senator Holman, apparently teaching him the ropes.

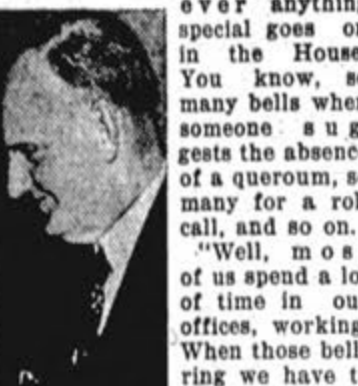

All four senators are lawyers, and Senator Holman's three predecessors will be practicing law in Oregon this winter.

25 YEARS OF WALKING
Congressman Carl Vinson of Georgia, head of the important naval affairs committee of the House, is quietly observing the silver anniversary of his service in Congress—he came to Washington in 1914, and has been serving here ever since—and it is his matured conclusion that a congressman needs an excellent pair of legs.

The corridors in the capitol are long. It is a long walk from the House chamber to the House office building, and the corridors in the office building are long also.

"They got bells out in the hallway here," remarks Congressman Vinson. "They signal us whenever anything special goes on in the House. You know, so many bells when someone suggests the absence of a quorum, so many for a roll call, and so on."

"Well, most of us spend a lot of time in our offices, working. When those bells ring we have to go straight over to the House chamber. It's a long walk, going and coming. And do you know, I've known those bells to ring five and six times in one afternoon. Young man, by the time a man has gone from his office to the House, and back again, five or six times between lunch and suppertime, he's done some walking. The fellows whose offices are 'way in the back like to drop before they get through."

When Mr. Vinson first came here, a congressman rated but one office. It housed himself, his secretaries, his files and all of his calleries. Now he rates two, and get along with less congestion. Mr. Vinson does better yet. His suite adjoins the suite of the naval affairs committee, which is Mr. Vinson's by virtue of his chairmanship. So now, in his 25th year on the job, the pleasant spoken Georgian has as nice a layout as a congressman could wish.

The room where the naval affairs committee meets, incidentally, is an elaborate chamber with a raised horseshoe for the committee and much fine paneling. All I can say of it, fittingly, is that it is swell enough for a funeral.

When the World War ended, the United States had on hand 419,000 mustard gas shells, each calculated to put out of action everyone within 50 yards of its explosion. Since there was no place on earth where the shells could be exploded safely, they were taken to sea and sunk.

POTATO DRIVE IS ADVOCATED

Growers Exchange Manager Would Meet Maine Competition

Cadillac, Mich.—Fred P. Hibst, general manager of the Michigan Potato Growers Exchange, appealed to the potato industry on Wednesday to set its house in order so it can embark upon a quality potato merchandising program at the earliest possible date.

The manager of Michigan's oldest co-operative organization said the state's two biggest tuber competitors, Maine and Idaho, literally are forcing Michigan growers and shippers to make plans to do something about advertising their high quality spuds.

Michigan farmers can produce as fine potatoes as can be grown any place, any time," said Hibst. "The biggest difficulty with Michigan potatoes is that they continue to reach the market in a poorly graded condition, sometimes in unattractive packages and often are dumped on the market by fly-by-night truckers who have no thought of making as much money out of it as possible in the shortest space of time.

Raps Inspection Dodgers
"We have no quarrel with the trucker who has his loads federal-state inspected and sells them through legitimate channels at market prices. The trucker, who ducks inspection and then takes his load to market where he cuts the price to make quick disposal, is the object of our criticism.

"The first thing we as a potato producing state must do is to see that our potatoes are produced and shipped on a quality basis. In other words, the consumer must receive the best we can produce. Then we are ready for an advertising plan that will do justice to the product.

"It would be futile to try to advertise, and sell as a result of this advertising, a poor quality product, poorly graded and packaged. Therefore, a good potato must come first and a wide thorough advertising program afterward. Let us start at once a program to bring up the quality of the potatoes we produce and lay our plans for advertising merchandising this fine product.

"Michigan is strategically located at the doorway to one of the largest consuming areas in the country. Let us take advantage of our natural location and 'get in the swim.' If Maine can in the space of a few months gain national recognition through a good product, well advertised and merchandised, then why not Michigan?"

Beavers were extinct in Illinois and wild turkeys in Wisconsin, so the U. S. Forestry Service engineered a trade; a truckload of turkeys for a truckload of beavers.

Sanity Hearing Ordered For Riguel; Witnesses To be Called on Monday

The fate of Alfred Riguel, confessed firebug, may be decided next Monday morning. Judge Frank A. Bell in Delta county circuit court yesterday ordered that a hearing be held at 10 o'clock next Monday to determine whether Riguel is sane at the present time. The 51 year old Soo Hill man, a former WPA worker, was found "not guilty because of insanity" in trial by jury in circuit court Wednesday on a charge of arson.

Riguel was accused of setting a fire which destroyed a building on the Columbus Dieter farm, Flat Rock, on October 1. Most important evidence against him was his own confession of the act, made to Sheriff William E. Miron on December 11.

The court order, signed by Judge Bell, requires that notice of the hearing be served on Riguel and that he be produced in person in circuit court at 10 o'clock Monday morning.

Several witnesses are also ordered to appear. They are Mrs. Josephine Mattson, Riguel's half-sister with whom he has made his home for the past three years; Drs. John J. Walsh, A. J. Carlton and William LeMire of Escanaba; Wallace Kemp, probation officer; William J. Miller, prosecuting attorney, and Alger W. Strom, Gladstone attorney who defended Riguel in the arson trial. The court order states that Atty. Strom may produce other witnesses as he may elect.

The three local doctors examined Riguel and testified in court that he was a maniac who suffered periodic urges to set fires, and that he was unable to control those urges. All were emphatic in stating their testimony was based upon Riguel's statements about his own experiences, and not on other information.

Jury Dismissed

Members of the jury ordered to serve during the January session of circuit court here were dismissed at 11 o'clock yesterday morning after serving only two and one-half days. The last jury case, an ejection, was completed yesterday morning.

A directed verdict was given for the plaintiffs in the case, Alice P. Alton, Florence P. Green, Margaret P. Taylor, Alice P. Herr, Crocker Perry and Ray Perry, against Edward J. Brunelle, the defendant. Brunelle was ordered by the court to pay costs in the case and a judgment of six cents. The case was the last of four jury cases to be heard, three of them criminal.

NEW METHODS HELP PUBLIC

Accounting Procedure Designed to Aid Taxpayers

Taxpayers of the city of Escanaba have been spared a great deal of inconvenience as the result of reorganization of the city's billing an accounting procedure during the past year.

Extensive changes have been made during the past year with the idea in mind of eliminating many inconveniences the taxpayers have had to contend with for many years and the reaction, according to city officials, has been very favorable.

In June, a new utility billing machine was added to the city equipment. This has enabled the treasurer's office to place all utility accounts on one bill, which is itemized and totaled for the convenience of the utility customer. It has enabled the city to maintain better utility records and to reduce the overhead cost of handling accounts.

A bookkeeping machine was installed in the comptroller's office in July, making possible more rapid reporting of budget expenditures and giving better control of all city accounts. It has also enabled the city to submit tax bills directly to the taxpayer at the time when they fall due and thus has eliminated the necessity for calling up the treasurer's office by phone to find out what taxes are due and the final day of payment.

Changes in the treasurer's and comptroller's offices have enabled the city to inaugurate a modern system of stock and equipment control without additional overhead cost to the city.

Robert Frost and Poems Given Wide Recognition

BY EDRIE VAN DORE

Canaan, Conn.—There is a little known story about Robert Frost that the Vermonters around his home village of South Shaftsbury like to tell.

It seemed that Bennington College would like the poet to read and lecture there, for an honorarium suitable to his reputation of course, but Mr. Frost had previously made an engagement with the Parent-Teachers' Association at South Shaftsbury, and he didn't feel he could give the time for two lectures within six miles of each other. So he said no, he couldn't go to Bennington. But he would come to the Parent-Teachers.

And on the appointed evening the town hall of South Shaftsbury was opened, and the villagers flocked in with their fifty-cent tickets, and the city people who owned old, remodeled farmhouses for miles around, came driving into the village, and everyone at Bennington who knew the name of Frost and all the college students came flocking.

The town hall was packed and people stood outside as far as the poet's rich voice could reach. He read and spoke to the people he knew—the village carpenter, the storekeeper, the post-mistress, the farmer, the wood-cutter, the blacksmith. He read about hay and birches and blueberries, the things these people knew, but he talked about poetry too, making it a warm and living matter, not a matter of dusty books. And he received an ovation given by cautious Vermonters only to great men. And the Parent-Teachers were overwhelmed by a sell-out of their tickets and made more money (Mr. Frost declining any fee at all) than they knew what to do with!

Advised Against Poetry This is the Frost which shines from the pages of "Recognition of Robert Frost," edited by Richard Thornton and published by Henry Holt, although this particular anecdote is not related there, nor anywhere in print that this reviewer knows of.

To those who already know and love Robert Frost, either in person or in his poetry, or in both, this volume comes as a justification of their respect. The justification is more sincere in being the work of critics as well as of friends. To the student or collector of Frostiana there is little, almost nothing that is new, since the book consists of essays and publishers of his work already published. Few of us, however, have seen the early letter from the man who was probably Frost's first critic, and who advised that he keep his heart from breaking by taking up any trade but poetry, in spite of the gift that even then was obviously great. Fortunately for us, and now indeed for Frost himself, that he did not heed that well-meant advice.

ROBERT FROST

Nor have many of the younger generation seen, unless they have purposely sought it out, that famous review by Amy Lowell of "North of Boston" which greeted Frost when he returned from England. Miss Lowell, we note, made the fatal mistake of dubbing Frost's poetry "without humor" and of saying that his publication in England cast no reflection upon this country as he was residing abroad. She was wrong in both particulars. His English critics at that time were quick to note Frost's humor, and American editors had for twenty years refused the very poems published in England!

A Popular Lecturer The essays are all more devoted to the work of Frost than to the man. The minimum amount of attention and space is given to his appearance and his family, his personal life—as he himself would have it. There is only the brief repetition of the well-known facts that the poet works late into the night and sleeps until, if he wants to see the sunrise he must, as he once put it in a lecture, watch it rise over a high barn on an eastern hilltop; that Mrs. Frost's beauty is no less for being unadorned; that Frost himself has a classic head that delights a sculptor, and a richly expressive speaking voice.

To save space many of the essays have been sharply cut. Thus Sidney Cox's "Original Ordinary Man" is pared to only a few excerpts from that well-packed little book. Likewise the chapters from books by Alfred Kreymborg, Louis Untermeyer, G. R. Elliott, Gorham B. Munson, Ludwig Lewisohn, all are condensed. It is inevitable that some of their material would overlap more or less, and the surprising fact is that one man can have written about him so much that it is not repetitious.

Besides the early reviews, written by Edward Thomas, Edward Garnett, Lascelles Abercrombie, and William Dean Howells, (in which it is a little amusing to find the younger Frost graciously compared with writers we now concede to be inferior to him!), there are later reviews by Christopher Morley (in the Book-of-the-Month Club which chose "A Further Range for its membership), by Padraic Colum, by John Farrar. As might be expected from their early championship of him, the English have a supremely high estimate of Frost, but so too have Continental Europeans. A Frenchman observes that "his poetry attains human universality more easily and more completely than some intellectualized compositions on broader themes. In 'Blueberries', for example, we can recognize the mushroom hunters of our own French forests, with their moral code, their tricks, their secret fraternity, so little does simple human nature vary with climate." A German calls him "one of the natural sages of mankind."

It is important and significant that Frost is accepted by the younger, newer schools of poets as one of themselves. The high regard they give him is reflected in prefaces written for an English edition of his Selected Poems. W. H. Auden, C. Day Lewis, and Paul Engle, are the poets, the first two English, the latter American, and proving it by mentioning Frost in the same breath with Will Rogers.

Undoubtedly the most informal piece in the book is that written by Frost's Vermont neighbor, Dorothy Canfield Fisher, in description of the Peleg Cole house where the poet lived first in South Shaftsbury. It was later taken over by his son Carroll when road was paved and trafficked, and a quieter home was found away from the village. There are photographs of these and Frost's homes at Derry and Franconia, N. H., and his present Victorian House at Amherst. There are also interesting photographs of Frost at 17; an informal pose at Bread-Loaf during the Middlebury Summer School of English which he helped to establish; and new, late portraits. There is a chronological table which will surprise even his friends by its long list of honors. There are tributes in verse—the lovely "Golden Room" by Wilfrid Gibson; the touching "The Sun Used to Shine" by Edward Thomas who was himself brought to writing poetry by Frost and who wrote so little of it because he was killed in the World War; and a rhymed review of James Stephens. We should have liked to see included also Robert Hillier's fine poem "A Letter to Robert Frost" which was published a year or so ago in the Atlantic Monthly.

It is heartening to read the vivid description by John Holmes of a Frost lecture at Harvard as the Norton professor of poetry. After detailing the size of an audience which came out on a rainy night to sit or stand anywhere it could to hear the poet, he says: "he had such an ovation as one dreams of in the ideal state, where poets and prophets are properly honored by the people. It touched Mr. Frost himself very deeply; there was no doubt that the audience was not only friendly, but warm with anticipation and understanding, and I think I may say with love for a great,

News of FOOD Specials

Kindly, simple figure of a man... The people, as they poured in, were an aggregation of the most interesting-looking human beings that any event could call forth in this part of the country. Every element of the best of Boston society was there, and I do not mean at all that non-New Englanders think I mean... There were probably more people in this audience who at other times in the week carry on important activities and maintain reputations of one good sort and another than in any other audience anywhere. But there, and with Robert Frost talking, they were content to listen and learn.

"The quality of this audience was and is a heartening thing for poetry itself, at the same time that it was a personal tribute to Robert Frost. If these are the people, in this great quantity and of this quality, who really care for poetry by an American, then we have nothing to fear for poetry in our times."

To this reviewer, who knows Robert Frost in person and in deed, who knows his poetry too, the essay by John Holmes is one of the finest in a fine book.

Say, she's a grand little cook, Mother. Why she can make even better coffee than you can—and that's saying a lot.

See! I just use M·J·B and follow the directions on the tin. My coffee tastes so good because M·J·B has that Richer Roast.

You'll find a finer, richer flavor in every cup of M·J·B. A flavor that is fully developed—completely satisfying whether you like your coffee mild, medium or strong.

WHY? Because of M·J·B's Richer Roast.

The world's finest coffees are selected for M·J·B by taste, for depth of flavor alone. Then they are double-blended—first blended green, then blended again after months of ageing—so that the full, rich character of M·J·B is developed in every single bean. Thus, in the roasting, a perfect fusion of all flavor factors is achieved.

Such selection, such blending, ageing and roasting naturally result in a richer roast of coffee—a coffee so much more delicious that everyone will prefer M·J·B.

That's why you can make the world's finest flavored coffee when you use this brand. Try M·J·B—Drip or Regular grind—and see.

THE COFFEE WITH THE "Flavor Essential"

Sudden Molasses Taffy

One and one-third cups (1 can) sweetened condensed milk, 1/4 cup molasses, a few grains of salt. Cook in a heavy pan slowly over low heat, stirring constantly until mixture will form firm ball when tested in cold water (approximately 35 minutes). Cool on buttered pan. Pull until firm. Stretch into long rope and cut in pieces.

Pineapple Pie Supreme

(In a graham cracker shell) Line a nine-inch pie plate with graham cracker crust (see crumb crust variations) using the lemon rind. Bake in (350 degrees F.) moderate oven for 15 minutes.

Prepare the filling—Soak 1 tablespoon plain gelatin in 1/4 cup cold water. Combine 2 egg yolks, 1/4 cup sugar, 2 tablespoons lemon juice, grated rind of 1/2 lemon (2 tablespoons) and 1/4 teaspoon salt, adding 3/4 cup hot crushed pineapple, drained from can of crushed pineapple. Cook over hot water until slightly thickened. Add softened gelatin. Stir until gelatin is dissolved. Then add 1 tablespoon butter, 2 cups crushed pineapple (drained), 2 teaspoons vanilla. Cool. When mixture begins to stiffen, fold in 2 stiffly beaten egg whites to which has been added 1/4 cup sugar. Pour into crumb crust. Sprinkle top with a few tablespoons of graham cracker crumbs, if desired. Chill in refrigerator at least three hours.

Hula Moon Pie

(Glamorous as the Islands) Combine and cook in double boiler until thick and transparent 1/2 cup sugar, 2 tablespoons cornstarch or 4 tablespoons flour, 1/4 teaspoon salt, 3/4 cup pineapple syrup from can of crushed pineapple, 1 tablespoon lemon juice. Stir in 1 large banana thoroughly mashed, combined with yolks of 2 eggs, well beaten, 1-3 cups drained crushed pineapple, add 1 tablespoon butter. Cook for five or six minutes. Turn into uncooked graham cracker shell. Cover with meringue made by whipping the whites of the two eggs until stiff and folding in 2 slightly rounded tablespoons sugar. Sprinkle with a few graham cracker crumbs, if desired. Bake in a slightly under moderate oven (325 degrees F.) for about 20 minutes. Serve cold.

Nut Lace Cookies

One cup shortening, 1-3 cup sugar, 2-3 cup finely chopped Brazil nuts, 1-2 teaspoon salt, 1 2-3 cups sifted flour, 1 teaspoon cinnamon, 1 cup granulated sugar.

Sift and measure flour. Cream shortening and gradually add sugar. Cream well. Add chopped nuts and salt to the creamy mixture. Work in flour. Chill thoroughly. Pinch off pieces of dough and roll on a slightly floured board into rolls about the size and thickness of a pencil.

Form into crescents and bake on an ungreased cookie sheet about 12 minutes in a moderate oven (350 degrees F.). When done, remove from oven and while still warm roll in a mixture of cinnamon and sugar.

Nut Oatmeal Nougats

One cup sifted flour, 1 teaspoon phosphate baking powder, 1-2 teaspoon salt, 2 cups rolled oats, 1 cup chopped Brazil nuts, 1-4 cup firmly packed brown sugar, 1 egg beaten, 1-4 cup molasses, 1-2 cup shortening melted.

Sift and measure flour, baking powder and salt. Stir in oatmeal and nuts. Add brown sugar to egg, then molasses and melted shortening. Gradually stir in flour, oatmeal and nut mixture. Chill slightly. Roll into small balls and bake on a greased cookie sheet in a moderate oven (375 degrees F.) for 15 minutes. This recipe is especially nice because the cookies keep their ball shape and do not flatten out.

Devilled Stuffed Potatoes

(4 servings)
Four large potatoes, salt and pepper, 2 tablespoons butter, 1 small can devilled ham, 1-4 cup hot milk.

Scrub potatoes. Bake on rack in hot oven (450 degrees F.) for 40 to 50 minutes or until tender. Slice off tops. Scoop out potatoes, mash, season, add butter, devilled ham and hot milk. Beat until fluffy. Pile into potato shells. Brown lightly in hot oven (450 degrees F.).

On The RECORD

By Dorothy Thompson

SOME THOUGHTS ON ARMA-MENT
The thought that we must begin to spend hundreds of millions for armaments is not in the least attractive to the American mind.

It is not only that we object to spending either our own money or that of our children for so unproductive a purpose. It is that our people are past the point where they believe war to be glorious, heroic or anything else except barbaric and stupid.

Our generation has a generation through on a war, and since the side that they were on won it we have no illusions about it. It left us with infinitely more problems than we had when we started. Our conception of patriotism is not related to national glory.

We would like to make a decent civilization in this country. We are seeking new social inventions by which we can preserve freedom and make a more reasonably organized social order and integrate more intimately and efficiently the various components of our society—business, labor, government and voluntary group activity.

All this is a hard enough task for our generation and the one that will follow it. By itself it will demand much sacrifice.

What we are trying to do all the democratic countries are trying to do, and because of this all democratic countries have been reluctant to increase their armaments.

This was particularly true of Great Britain and of France and of the Scandinavian countries and Switzerland.

The democratic countries as a whole have no ambitions beyond their own territories. There is no reason why they should have. They already own and control the larger part of the globe. They own nearly half of the surface of the earth, command all of its oceans, govern more than half of the world's population, control more than half of all essential raw materials, own practically all of the gold and conduct more than two-thirds of the world's total trade.

The territories which they hold are by no means fully exploited. The British Empire has huge areas in Africa capable of supporting white men where neither the land nor the things in it have been put to use.

Elsewhere in the world, notably in South America, are whole areas capable of supporting enormously augmented populations.

And in Europe are Germany and Italy, with a population between them of 130 millions, highly industrialized, virile, dynamic peoples with limited areas in which to expand their energies. And in Asia is Japan.

These countries have made up their minds that the distribution of wealth and power in the world is disproportionate and unjust. I believe that no matter what governments should happen to be ruling these countries they would, if they were strong governments, have the same feeling.

No one who knows Germany could possibly believe that, whether democratic or Nazi, or for that matter Communist, she would ever settle down to the kind of restricted life designed for her by the Treaty of Versailles.

The German capacity for organization—above all the capacity of the ordinary German for work—could not be artificially confined, nor should the world wish to see Germany artificially hemmed in. The German qualities are qualities which the world can use. Love of work and pride in work, imagination, the infinite capacity for taking pains over small things, technical efficiency, robustness and tenacity—these are worthy of everybody's admiration. They have commanded mine always. I speak of Germany because I know it well and because I believed for twenty years that it was a country due to come into its own.

We must admit that the democratic nations had for twenty years complete world power. And they failed to use it to even approach a solution of the world's greatest question—and that is how to use the resources, raw materials, money and labor of the world reasonably and justly with a view to the prosperity of everybody.

Now we are paying for our smugness, our lack of imagination and even for our lack of ideas.

We are paying because these countries have started out totally to change the distribution of economic and political power. In effecting that change they are prepared to overthrow every existing political or cultural institution, and they have mobilized every possible instrument of aggrandizement, including propaganda on a war-time basis, trade and monetary warfare, and, finally, overwhelming force of arms. This is made possible by a new form of state—the perpetually mobilized nation, mobilized financially, economically, socially, morally, and militarily.

The question is not whether these countries are going to have a larger share of world power than they had a decade ago. The question is not even whether

JANET DWIGHT, heroine. She was engaged to handsome young architect LANCE BARSTOW, hero. Lance had great dreams for the future. So did CYNTHIA CANTRELL, orphaned granddaughter of great-aunt Mary Cantrell. Still another dreamer was

CHAPTER V
Yesterday, as Barney drops Janet off at her home, he asks her about her stock and at something in his tone she senses a new fear.

When Janet entered the apartment, she found Aunt Mary and Cynthia together in the living room.

At something conspiratorial in the faces they turned toward her as she went in, her sopping shoes making little splashy noises on the polished floor, she laughed.

"What skulduggery are you two up to now?" she demanded. "Something else I'm not supposed to know? After all, whose wedding is this?"

"Not at all," said the old lady briskly. "I didn't really intend to tell you until after the marriage; but I suppose there'll be no peace now until you find out. Since we shan't be needing so much room after you're gone, I'm taking a smaller apartment next month."

Something speciously cheerful in the old lady's voice, and the hint of warning in the swift glance she cast toward her granddaughter arrested Janet's attention.

"Where are you going?" she asked.

"I've been considering the Avalon."

Janet paused in the act of removing her coat to turn incredulously.

"One of those chicken coops?" she cried. "But, Aunt Mary, you couldn't stand being penned up there! And what would you do with all your beautiful things? They'd never fit in with that ginger-bready joint."

She looked about the charming room, with its high ceiling, its dignified vistas, its deep, rich rugs, its books and gleaming mahogany.

"It had occurred to me that you and Lance might find room for some of the larger pieces until you have time to look around for just what you want. . . . And in any event," Aunt Mary finished tartly, "there are such institutions as storage vaults."

"You'd better not tempt me too far, Aunt Mary. It will be years before Lance and I could find anything as beautiful as some of your heirlooms. But you might as well put yourself in storage, too, as try to live in one of those two-by-four cells at the Avalon. You've always said you couldn't breathe in small rooms."

Cynthia spoke up sharply.

"You might as well know the truth now as ever, Jan."

er they ought to have a larger share of world power.

The question is whether they are to have it on terms under which the rest of the world can live and retain the institutions dear to it.

It is a paradox, but I think it is true: The democratic world must arm in order to make a peace which is not a peace of Carthage. The democratic world must arm in order to prevent a worse world peace than Brest-Litovsk or Versailles—a peace, that is to say, which can only lead to another prolonged era of world war.

I order to make world peace with economic justice there must be some equality of bargaining power.

There was no equality of bargaining power at Munich. The fact stood out at Munich that the British Empire, with all her far-flung possessions and all her resources and money, not only could not stand up to Hitler but, more important, could not even sit down with Hitler.

The fact is that the German penetration of South and Central America is proceeding with amazing swiftness and there is absolutely no guarantee that within some foreseeable time we will not have a few Czech-Slovakias on this hemisphere—and be as unprepared as democratic Europe was last September.

And certainly none of us can believe that terms dictated to a world by Germany, Italy and Japan under their present regimes would assure greater justice than those dictated at Versailles twenty years ago.

The terms will be infinitely worse, and the world which emerges will be infinitely worse, and the settlement of the real issue, which is how we can all live together, will again be postponed into an even more distant future.

The German people do not want war any more than any other people. Certainly the generation which went through the last war does not.

It is, therefore, extremely important that we should make peace before that generation is dead, for what youth with no recollection of the last war and brought up in a glorification of war as a normal way of life may do baffles the imagination.

We can only make peace by coming to terms on resources, trade and money policies with all industrially developed nations.

Such a peace cannot be made without the United States. And unless there is equality of bargaining power—unless every nation knows what not making peace is going to cost.

"I told Grams you wouldn't like her keeping it from you."

"Cynthia," old Mary Cantrell snapped, "I forbade you!"

"Nonsense! . . . The bottom has fallen out of Gram's trust company, Jan. They've cut dividends. She can't afford this place any longer."

"It was a moment before Janet entirely understood. Then she cried, "I don't care if she can't. You're not going to move one inch, Aunt Mary. Not while I have more than enough—"

She had started to say, "Not while I have more than enough for both of us."

Then she remembered. If she were to assume the payments on the house, she was not at all sure that she would have enough left even to make up the difference in Aunt Mary's rent. It had developed into such a very costly house—much too costly for two young people just starting out in life.

But Lance had felt that they must have something in keeping with the dignity of a rising young architect.

As Janet broke off, she was miserably aware of Cynthia's speculative glance. There was something uncannily intuitive about Cynthia.

"Well, at any rate," Janet finished desperately, "you're not going to do a thing until—but why, of course? All we have to do is to make a few very simple changes in the plans for our house, and you can have a separate apartment there for yourself, Aunt Mary."

"Not while I'm able to keep a tent over my head," said Aunt Mary grimly, "do I go to live in any other woman's house—not even yours, Janet. . . . And how, may I ask, do you suggest that I dispose of your cousin?"

"Why—?" Janet faltered; then she rushed on with reckless abandon, "why, Cyn would come, too, of course."

"After making a few more 'very simple changes' in Lance's precious blueprint, I suppose?" Cynthia's eyes were wicked. "And wouldn't Lance just love setting up his married life as proprietor of a three-way harem? No, my dear little cousin. The time seems to have come for Cynthia to give some thought to carving out her own destiny."

She knelt to poke the wood fire with exaggerated care. When she had finished, she continued to stoop there, her slim hands tightly clasped over one bent knee, her graceful dark head bent.

"Rather stupid though," she finished almost as if to herself, "to waste time thinking. . . . Maybe I'll actually do something about it this time."

Perhaps it was the flaring up of the fire that made her seem suddenly paler, so that the rouge beneath her high cheekbones stood out in vivid triangles, and her eyes in their deep shadows were strangely bright. . . . She got up and strolled quite casually out of the room; and a moment later Janet heard her lazy voice laughing from the telephone in the hall beyond.

"Still against eating dinner alone tonight? . . . Well, you win after all. Yes, I've changed my mind. . . . Wasn't it clever of you to know that I would? And how nice of me to allow you to be right for once! . . . Oh, no! I'm not admitting yet that you were right about—and rest of it, too. . . . Well, later, then."

"Aunt Mary," Janet said in a low tone, "what do you suppose she meant? You know—about—"

"Probably," said Aunt Mary, "just about as much as Cynthia ever means when she is in one of her exalted moods and feeling a bit dramatic. With her flair for exits and entrances I'm surprised she's never had leanings toward the stage."

Which was as near as Aunt Mary often came to criticizing her granddaughter.

"By the way," Mrs. Cantrell went on, "the mail just came. There's a young mountain for you."

Janet went to the table and shuffled through the heap. . . . Parcels—more gifts, of course. . . . Notes. . . . And an appalling number of bills. She had never dreamed there would be so many.

The telephone rang, and Cynthia, answering, called from the hall, "Mr. Bryant wants to speak to you, Jan."

Mr. Bryant, an old friend of Janet's father, was the attorney who had managed her modest fortune for her these last years.

"Oh, Mr. Bryant," Janet said, "I was practically on my way to call you. I'm afraid I'll have to have a little extra money this month if I'm to go to the altar as a honest woman. I haven't opened my bill yet, but I know they're terrifying."

On one or two other occasions Mr. Bryant had cheerfully arranged advances for her.

"Why, I think it can be managed," he said after a barely perceptible pause, "I suppose getting married is an expensive business. And hereafter you can let your husband worry about the bills. That's what husbands are for—ha! ha. . . . What I wanted to ask you is if you can find time to run down to see me tomorrow morning. There are some matters I think we ought to go into at this time."

Janet promised and hung up a little impatiently.

In order to keep the appointment she would have to hurry the dressmaker, skip the hairdresser and perhaps be unparadoxically late for a luncheon given in her honor.

Wright Committed To County Jail On Charge Of Officer

Clayton Wright of Rapid River began serving a 90 day term in Delta county jail yesterday on a charge of resisting arrest by Charles O'Neil, conservation officer. He was placed under arrest by Officer O'Neil for carrying a shotgun in a game area during closed season without a permit from the conservation department, and was charged with attacking and beating the officer as he resisted arrest.

He was sentenced in Justice Alger W. Strom's court at Gladstone several months ago, but appealed to circuit court at the October term. Judge Frank A. Bell ordered Strom to enforce the sentence made in justice court, and Wright began serving it yesterday.

William Ramspeck Has Eye Injury

William Ramspeck, Escanaba Route One, suffered an injury to his left eye while employed in repairing the No. 5 ore dock of the Chicago and North Western railway Wednesday.

Ramspeck was helping to remove a piling from the dock. In hitting the timber with a sledge, a chip was dislodged and struck Ramspeck in the eye. He left for Chicago last night to consult a specialist.

Elected Yacht Club Commodore

Charles W. Stoll, shown above at the wheel of his schooner Minedmoya, was elected commodore of the Escanaba Yacht club at the organization's annual meeting Wednesday night. He succeeds O. V. Thatcher, who headed the local yachting organization during 1938.

Marquette, Mich. — Tentative arrangements have been made to charter a boat out of Milwaukee for transportation of Wisconsin delegates to the 1939 Kiwanis district convention in Marquette, July 30, 31 and August 1. William C. Sense, of Marquette, chairman of the convention committee, announced yesterday.

With Charles B. Madden, new district lieutenant governor, C. Nelson Brodrick and Mrs. Sense, the Marquette chairman returned from the annual mid-winter conference of Kiwanis club and Kiwanis officers in the Wisconsin upper Michigan district held in Milwaukee.

"Arrangements for chartering the boat are being made by A. C. Hall, of Milwaukee, district chairman of the 'On to Marquette' committee," Sense said. "This boat would leave Milwaukee Saturday morning, July 29, and arrive at Marquette and Green Bay, it will arrive in Marquette Sunday morning.

"The boat would leave here Tuesday noon, August 1, arriving in Milwaukee by Wednesday morning."

Smoke Victim Is Greatly Improved

The condition of Fred St. Ours, 925 Washington avenue, who was removed from his burning home by firemen after he had become overcome by smoke, is greatly improved. He is confined to St. Francis hospital.

Firemen found St. Ours lying on a davenport in his home, the interior of which was enveloped in flames and thick, heavy smoke. He was removed and rushed to the hospital where oxygen was administered.

The interior of the house was badly damaged by the flames, origin of which is unknown.

Mundinger Infant Claimed By Death

Carolyn Lee, month old daughter and only child of Mr. and Mrs. Earl L. Mundinger, 425 South Ninth street, died at 2:15 o'clock Thursday afternoon at St. Francis hospital. The baby, born December 9, had been ill for the past two weeks.

The body was taken to the Anderson funeral home where services will be held this morning at 10 o'clock. Rev. William Lutz of the Salem Evangelical Lutheran church officiating.

Michigan In Washington

Esther Van Wagoner Tufty Thrilling are these first days of a new year and a new job for Attorney-General Frank Murphy, but they are also difficult and filled with possible pitfalls to be avoided.

Within the Department of Justice it is easy to mark time until he becomes fully acquainted with the routine and personnel, but his outside activities — the ones which get in the papers — are hazardous.

Probably his first press conference was the worst ordeal, although that will fade before his probable appearance before a Senate Committee for hearings incident to his confirmation.

On the day when everyone's attention was engrossed by one subject — the President's message — he slipped over to the Supreme Court to be admitted to practice before that high tribunal. It was remarkable that he, as a lawyer of sufficient magnitude to be made Attorney-General, had never tried an important case before the Supreme Court. It was so timed that it made but a paragraph in the papers.

The newspaper men and women at his press conference, in general responded favorably to him, which was a triumph after he kept that cynical group waiting for him a full 15 minutes. The President seldom allows that to happen.

Apparently the always-late habit of Murphy's is not to be broken. He was 10 minutes late for his appointment with the President when he was sworn in to office. He rushed in late at the White House for the Judiciary Reception, and just made the line of cabinet officials. His office — or rather his offices — for he has a very fine one in the Department of Justice and another, even finer, in the Supreme Court building, are something. The one where he greeted the press is large, modern and magnificent. The wood-paneled walls, the softly-lighted,

SUPER-ROADS ARE PLANNED

Congressmen In Dispute Over Committee Assignment

Esther Van Wagoner Tufty Disputes among congressmen on the super-highway subject are not all about which states should be on the route. Almost as many are arising on the question of which House committee shall have charge of it.

Naturally, every congressman is eager to have his state served by the first American "autobahn." There are votes in roads.

Just as naturally, the House Roads Committee is firm in its opinion that highway matters belong under its jurisdiction. But the Banking and Currency Committee maintains that the necessary legislation is a financial matter rather than a highway matter. The Steagall bill proposes to set up an authority and a method of financing the vast undertaking.

In such cases the Speaker of the House must decide which committee shall consider the legislation, and so far Speaker Bankhead has given it to the Banking and Currency Committee. Congressman Steagall, Chairman of this Committee, is the author of the highway bill. He is also from Bankhead's home state of Alabama.

If the proposed legislation is switched to the Roads Committee it will make no difference to Michigan Congressman Jesse P. Wolcott, who is ranking minority member of both rival committees. The Port Huron Republican, who thinks the time has come at

CANNOT DECIDE CASE
Marquette—A municipal court jury yesterday afternoon was unable to reach a verdict in the case against E. S. Murphy, of Marquette, charged with killing an illegal buck on November 16. It disagreed after deliberating 45 minutes.

Five witnesses testified for the conservation department before Judge William St. John, of Ishpeming, and the five-man jury. There were no witnesses for the defense.

All witnesses introduced by Prosecutor John Voelker, of Ishpeming, testified that they had seen the defendant on the L. S. & I. tracks near Birch on the afternoon of November 16 and that he admitted killing the buck fawn.

ROAD PROJECTS EMPLOYING 345

$15,000 Monthly Payroll Stimulates Trade In Manistique

Since the start of WPA in the Fall of 1935, the Schoolcraft County Road Commission has sponsored three proposals in the grading, ditching, placing drainage structures and surfacing of county roads—county wide.

There are at present seven roads being improved and several of which are due to be an asset to the county. At the present time there is no road to Lake Michigan shore line between Manistique and Seul Choix Point, but two of the projects will furnish outlets to the Lake Shore at Snyder Creek and South of Gulliver Lake.

Also a road is being started South from Copenhagen resort which will skirt the East shore of Indian Lake and in time circle the Lake. The road South from Thompson across the Bur-saw Creek is under a widening and relocating project, and in time will open up the shore line South of Thompson toward Garden and Fayette.

This improvement of the Farm-to-Market roads is also making the plowing program of the County Road Commission more efficient and an asset to both School Districts and Rural Mail Routes, which in the end, is an asset to the City of Manistique, Michigan.

Goudreau Chairman Of Road Commission

John Goudreau was elected chairman of the Schoolcraft county road commission, at the organization meeting held Monday evening. He succeeds W. L. Middlebrook as chairman of the commission.

STOCK MARKET AVERAGES

BY FREDERICK GARDNER

New York, Jan. 12 (AP)—Armsament shares, highlighted by President Roosevelt's defense message, set a dizzy course for the stock market today and emerged from erratic travels at somewhat lower levels.

The market swung up in the forenoon before the publication of the president's arms proposals, then sold off sharply with the "war babies" and recovered partially again before the finish. The net result was only a small loss for most stocks and a few managed to come out with gains.

The recommended $300,000,000 increase in outlay for aviation equipment suggested to Wall Street a lot of more orders for the busy aircraft manufacturing industry. But the defense figures were well below forecasts.

Illustrating the gyrations in the "war" favorites, Bethlehem Steel dropped from a top above 75 on the forenoon rally to 71 1/2. It finished at 73 3/8, down 7 1/2, after the late snapback cut the losses. Douglas Aircraft dropped from 72 to 67 5/8 and ended down 7 1/2 at 69 1/8.

Chrysler recovered from around 73 to close fractionally higher at 75 1/2.

Closing above a point to more than 2 lower were U. S. Steel, American Can, Westinghouse, Anaconda, Owens-Illinois Glass, Glenn Martin and U. S. Rubber. Santa Fe and New York Central were among the gainers.

The Associated Press composite price of 60 stocks was off .5 of a point at 50.6. Transactions increased to 1,362,830 shares from 1,156,690 in the preceding session.

Corporate bonds mostly slipped with stocks. Major commodities held to a limited price zone. Cotton futures ended 25 to 40 cents a bale higher. Chicago wheat was 3-8 cent a bushel improved to 1/4 lower. Corn was unchanged to 1/4 down.

Leading European currencies also held to a fairly even route as markets waited the outcome of the Chamberlain-Mussolini talks. In the curb Lockheed dropped a point and smaller losses were shown by Aviation & Transport, United Gas and Lake Shore. Bellanca and Niagara Hudson Power had small gains. Turnover of 224,000 shares compared with 166,000 Wednesday.

CARRIERS LEAD BOND DESCENT

BOND MARKET AVERAGES
Compiled by The Associated Press
Net change, D.T. 0.0, U.S. Foreign 0.0

New York, Jan. 12 (AP)—Most bonds, excepting the low yield issue, coasted downhill with the stock market today.

Rails led the descent just as they spearheaded the December-January broad advance. There was a difference of opinion in trading circles as to how deeply the market was affected by the president's message recommending large spending for armament.

With the selloff in stocks, however, after the message was released, there was a considerable increase in offerings in loans of speculative character, resulting in a wide list of losses ranging up to 2 or more points.

Some of the sharpest dips were registered by Delaware & Hudson refunding which closed at 60 1/2. Northern "G" 4s of '48 at 98 1/8, International Telephone 5s at 65 3/8, American & Foreign Power 5s at 51 1/2, Southern Railway 4s at 56 1/4, and Kansas City Fort Scott & Memphis 4s at 34.

Scarcity of bids in the face of small offerings caused wide breaks in Lehigh Valley Coal 5s and Virginia Iron, Coal & Coke 5s.

The general run top grade corporate bonds held to an even line and U. S. governments finished 1-32 to 3-32 higher.

Action of Italian loans in the foreign list was watched for clues of probable results of the Chamberlain-Mussolini parley in Rome. Generally their swings were narrow. Milan 6 1/2s improved a little while Italian Public Utility yielded a point. Japanese issues were heavy.

Transactions totaled $7,405,300, face value, against $6,494,000 Wednesday.

A 3-8 range, however, was attributed to exports, but no further action was noted. Increase of 7 percent in the number of cattle on feed in the corn belt compared with a year ago was a steady factor.

The oats and rye markets were very quiet, the latter being strengthened by the early crop.

Lard declines reflected weakness of hogs which sold near the lowest level of four years.

BOATING GROWS IN POPULARITY

Detroit Yachtsmen Tell of Need for More Facilities

With an increase of almost twenty-five per cent in the registry of boats on the Great Lakes last year, we have a very substantial evidence of tremendous increase in the interest of our people in going back to the water for commercial purposes, recreation and sport.

This was the statement made Wednesday by J. Leo Barrett, secretary of the Yachtsmen's Association of America, in an address before the Great Lakes River and Harbor Development Conference at the Palmer House.

In the meeting, held under the auspices of the Chicago Association of Commerce and the River and Harbor Development Association of Cleveland, Barrett analyzed channel and harbor maintenance from the yachtsmen's point of view.

Boats Increase

Registry of boats in the United States showed a marked increase last year over previous years, Barrett declared, in explaining that there is now under way a "back to the water" movement in the country.

"With an increase of seventeen per cent in the registry of boats in the United States last year—an increase of twenty-eight per cent on the eastern seaboard, an increase of twenty-three per cent in the Great Lakes area—it is obvious that the growing interest in the back to the water movement, for transportation and pleasure, is being taken seriously on the part of our people," he said.

Leisure time, he pointed out, has made a valuable contribution to the popularity of boating. The shorter working day, as well as the reduction of the necessity of labor, has also made its appeal in the back to the water movement.

"Here on the Great Lakes, through the Power Squadron and other agencies, we have attempted to advocate a system of harbors for small boats where they might seek safety when in stress, and have made a recommendation that there be established a safe port at a maximum of every fifty miles," Barrett said. "Many cities on the Great Lakes have made application for harbors, but the tendency of our group has been to disregard local conditions and think only in a broader scope, that of having a safe harbor every fifty miles, or less."

Facilities Needed

Barrett pointed out that northern Wisconsin and Michigan do not obtain the great boat traffic from the larger cities on Lake Erie and other sections of the Great Lakes because they do not have the necessary harbor facilities. A tremendous portion of this travel goes to the Thousand Islands district of Canada. For instance, most of the boats sailing north from Lake Erie through the Detroit and St. Clair Rivers, will sail along the Canadian shore of Lake Huron for the reason that adequate facilities are lacking on the American shore, he said.

"With seven cities on the Great Lakes comprising almost 10,000,000 in population, and with eight states touching on the Great Lakes, with a combined population of fifty million persons," Barrett declared, "the possibilities of the wider use of our waterways systems and the necessity of more harbor facilities from the standpoint of safety and convenience are very evident."

He also pointed out that proper and sufficient harbor facilities are needed in view of the fact that they become very important in planning an adequate defense.

"The fact remains," Barrett said, "that an adequate navy will constitute one of the best defensive measures of our nation."
