LABOR COUNCIL BACKS LEADER

Resolution Commending William Green Passed At Meeting

A resolution commending William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, for his cooperation in efforts to patch up differences between the Federation and the C.I.O., was passed at the last meeting of the Escanaba Trades and Labor Council, held the first of the week.

The resolution as it was adopted by the Escanaba Council, is as follows:

"Whereas, there exists today in the labor movement dual organization which is having a very serious effect upon the future of labor, and

"Whereas, the President of the United States has seen fit to intervene and bring the warring factions together into one body, and

"Whereas, President William Green of the American Federation of Labor, has seen fit to accept the President's suggestion that this split in the ranks of labor be amicably adjusted for the benefit of labor as a whole,

"Now therefore, be it resolved, that the Escanaba Trades and Labor Council commend William Green for his stand in being ready to do his part to achieve that result, and

"Be it further resolved, that this organization is fully aware of the seriousness which confronts the labor movement unless an agreement is reached between the A. F. of L. and the C.I.O., and therefore stands ready to assist in any way possible to end the strife which exists in the labor movement, and

"Be it further resolved, that the Escanaba Trades and Labor Council ask the affiliated labor unions of this vicinity to take part in this most worthy undertaking by adopting similar resolutions and forwarding them to President William Green of the A. F. of L., and

"Be it further resolved that a copy of this resolution be published in the Escanaba Daily Press.

"Signed: Charles Priester, secretary-treasurer, Escanaba Trades & Labor Council, Escanaba, Michigan."

Salary Schedule Of City Workers Upheld By Mayor

Sault Ste. Marie—Mayor Paul L. Adams and his colleagues on the city commission Monday night expressed skepticism about an assertion by Commissioner James W. Trayer that the city clerk worked for $900, and the city assessor for $864 a year at Escanaba.

Commissioner Troyer pointed to the items in the Escanaba budget in his protest Monday night that salaries paid to city officials here were too high.

The discussion of salaries came after Commissioner Troyer pointed to a claim increase of $2,100 for the assessor's office. Other commissioners insisted that the increase was threshed out before and that Commissioner Troyer knew about it. Of the $3,100, he was told, $1,500 went to Sam G. Carlton, Jr., as salary as Richard R. Reinhart assistant; $700 went to Miss Cecilia Donnelly, employed for six months in the auditor-assessor office during rush periods.

The balance was charged to the assessor's office as the salary of Miss Mary Bailey. Previously her salary had been charged to the street department. Now it is the desire of the city to concentrate all accounting work in the auditor-assessor office.

The only actual new salary in the assessor-auditor division is the $1,500 paid to young Carlton, it was pointed out to city commissioners.

The addition of young Carlton to the staff and the employment of a clerk in the city clerk's office primarily to take care of work involved in maintaining a permanent registration record, are the only two since 1920, according to City Manager Henry A. Sherman, despite the tremendous increase in work of all kinds demanded of the city hall staff.

It was stressed that the addition of Carlton to the staff will permit a re-survey of city assessments by Mr. Reinhart, a project that is expected to return to the city tenfold the sum of the additional expenditure for salaries.

Mayor Adams did not agree with Commissioner Troyer that salaries of city officials were too high. "The salaries of our city officials would be the last place I would look to cut expenses," Mayor Adams said. He intimated that it did not make sense that Escanaba's clerk and assessor's should work for $800 and $900 a year and suggested that they were paid other moneys from income of utilities which that city controls.

Douglas Is Mentioned For Supreme Court

BY BRUCE CATTON
Escanaba Daily Press Washington Correspondent

Washington.—If the Supreme Court is half as stuffy a place as it is popularly supposed to be, William Orville Douglas would make a swell replacement for the recently-retired Justice Brandeis.

There is nothing in the least about the 40-year-old chairman of the Securities and Exchange Commission, whose appointment to the bench is currently rumored here. Quite the contrary.

Mr. Douglas is a lean, rather racy chap whose favorite working pose is to lean far back in his chair and put his feet on his desk. He is a confirmed ear-puller (his own) and he speaks informally with plenty of slang. He lets his suits get a trifle baggy, plays a bad game of golf and an excellent game of poker, and practically never starts home from his office before 7:30 or 8 p. m.

He is a westerner by birth and upbringing and an easterner by adoption. They'll have to stress the western angle if he goes on the bench; Congress is likely to insist that a westerner get the place. He'd be a liberal justice, but by no means a radical one.

In his work as head of SEC he makes preservation of the capitalist system his guiding star.

GREW UP IN WEST

Born in Minnesota, the son of a Presbyterian home missionary, he was taken to the west coast by his parents when still a baby, and grew up there. Money was scarce, and when he went to Whitman college, at Walla Walla, Wash., he got there on a second-hand bike, paid his expenses by doing odd jobs, and for a time lived in a tent to save rooming house bills.

Upon graduation in 1920, he taught school in Yakima, Wash., for two years, and then headed east for a legal education. He paid his way as far as Chicago by riding herd on some stockyards-bound sheep, and rode the rods from Chicago to Albany. The rest of the trip to New York he made by day coach.

Reaching New York, he went to the clubhouse of his national fraternity; but the staff there looked at his travel-stained person, took him for a bum, and refused to let him register.

He never would have got in if a fraternity brother who knew him hadn't showed up opportunely. This brother, by the way, sold him on New York as a city of opportunity and persuaded him to enroll at Columbia instead of at Harvard as he had planned.

STUDENTS BUY SOUND SYSTEM

Recording Device Also Will Be Installed at Senior High

An important addition to the educational facilities of the Escanaba senior high school will be made through the installation of recording and playback equipment and a sound system sometime this month, Principal Edward E. Edick announced yesterday. The purchase will be financed by the various fund raising activities of the senior high school student body.

The recording equipment can be used advantageously as an aid for public speaking, radio programs, dramatic presentations, voice culture, band and orchestra, glee club and choral work in the school. It is especially effective for determining speech defects and measuring progress in speech and music instruction. Many educators have found a recorder invaluable in recording radio speeches by prominent speakers for further study by the student, in the study of foreign languages, and presenting school plays, dramas and debates.

In addition, the equipment will be utilized for equipping the senior high school building with a sound system, reaching 24 rooms, including the auditorium. This will be particularly useful in facilitating school administration, for through a central control cabinet, usually located near his office, the principal may distribute music broadcasts, speech announcements, radio or record programs to any or all rooms simultaneously. The taking of the attendance roll, fire drill orders and other emergency calls can be handled effectively through the sound system.

Mr. Edick said that in addition to raising the funds to purchase the new equipment the students will help in its installation. Members of the manual training class will construct the speaker housings in each room and the physics class will make the installation of the system.

It has been estimated that it takes $37 a year to teach a pupil in the elementary grades, and $145 a year in public high school.

FOR YEARS LIFE WAS NOT WORTH LIVING

She Declared; Suffered With Digestive Disturbances Continually; KruGon Gave Results That Surprised Her

"In all my experience with different medicines I found KruGon the most satisfactory for my stubborn case," said Mrs. Gus Spitzack, 1002 10th St., Faribault, Minnesota. "It means so much to me."

me to feel the way I do now after I suffered for twenty-two long years with constipation of the most stubborn kind. It had allowed my system to accumulate so much poison which soon affected my health in general. My foods would not digest properly and I was certain to have attacks of indigestion just as regularly as I ate. I could not enjoy a good night's sleep for I was disturbed frequently. Then those sharp, stabbing pains settled in my shoulders and neck, even my knees were affected too. Life had not been worth living feeling like I had all these years. I don't know what I would have done without KruGon. It meant so much to me."

"I am now feeling the best I have in many, many years," continued Mrs. Spitzack. "My bowels are regulated, I can eat anything I wish now without discomfort or distress afterwards, those awful pains have been relieved, sleep good at night and feel like a different person. Those stabbing pains are also gone from my body. I give all credit to KruGon for my present good health."

KruGon is sold by West End Drug Store, 1221 Ludington St., this city.

On The RECORD

By Dorothy Thompson

MR. HOPKINS'S SPEECH Mr. Hopkins's speech stating that the emphasis of the Administration is to change from reform to recovery is important because Mr. Hopkins more than any one else is a mouthpiece of the President.

The weather vane has been turning in this direction for some time now, but Mr. Hopkins is the most comprehensive statement on immediate policy which has yet been made. One of the most important things about the statement is that it comes from a man who six years ago was playing with production for use ideas, and entertaining serious doubts about the possibility of salvation with any form of private enterprise.

Mr. Hopkins, however, is a sincere democrat, and the belief of many democrats in democratic socialism or democratic state capitalism has been seriously shaken by the examples that we have seen abroad in the last six years. It is gradually being recognized that there is some very basic connection between private property, private enterprise and basic human rights. Also, the system of the last six years, if you can call benevolent anarchy a system, hasn't worked.

In 1929 the national income was $3 billion, and in 1938 it was $6 billion, despite an increase in population of nine million people. One American in three is poorly housed. Our human resources have been inadequately protected despite a nine billion dollar budget. The taxation policy has drained off gifts to private institutions concerned with the amelioration of social conditions. Money is unproductive.

The ups and downs of the business graphs are only partially reflected in the employment figures. And, worst of all, class cleavages have grown seriously. Mr. Hopkins's speech is to be welcomed as an admission, for to recognize the facts is the beginning of wisdom. It is not, however, the end of it.

Mr. Hopkins's speech remains in the sphere of stating desirable objectives, but the fault of the New Deal has never, from the beginning, been with its objectives.

Every one wants the national income increased. That was the object of the government spending program. But that program hasn't increased it, or at least, not sufficiently and not with any indications of soundness. One must therefore reconsider the theory and reform the practice. This will certainly mean a change in the form of spending.

A recent Round Table in "Fortune Magazine" produced a majority opinion that government spending is necessary to provide certain types of durable goods that can be collectively enjoyed, to conserve natural and human resources, and to assure a minimum of security against old age and unemployment. But this Administration has spent for the sake of spending on a carelessly accepted pump-priming theory. The whole attitude and practice need revision.

CAST OF CHARACTERS SUSIE LAMBERT—She served waffles and dreamed of being beautiful. DICK TREMAINE—He liked Susie's waffles but he couldn't see Susie. JEFF BOWMAN—His chief concern was to make Susie as beautiful as she wanted to be.

Yesterday, Dick is swept off his feet by Susie, but he doesn't recognize her. He vows to see her the next morning. Jeff, meanwhile, is a bit jealous. CHAPTER XXII "Have a good time?" Jeff asked as they headed out Sheridan. The city was comparatively quiet, muffled to the chin in clean, new snow.

"Gorgeous—simply gorgeous." Naive delight sang in her voice. "Too, too divine," is the proper line," he observed dryly. She laughed. "I wish I were 18. Jeff, I'm 23, that's getting pretty old. How long can I keep this up? Being attractive, I mean," she added, with another little laugh. "Take a look at Edna," he advised. "She's 20 years ahead of you and still going strong."

"Wasn't she lovely tonight?" Susie adored Edna, admired her poise and quiet charm. "She's always lovely." Susie slid a hand through his arm. "I love everybody," she said rapidly. "It's wonderful just to be alive. All my dreams have come true, every single one." Jeff pressed her arm close to his side. "Do I ever enter your dreams, Susie?" Idiotic question. "Oh, yes. All my life I've wanted a brother."

"Humph," was all he said. "I can talk to you about anything. We've been through so much together that I feel at home with you. Just so homey and nice," she cuddled closer. From the high crest of her wave she added, as he stopped at the hotel, "I think I'll kiss you good night." "I can take it," Jeff said, pulling on the brake. "How like a brother," she giggled. He made something of the good night kiss. His lips clung to hers, the pressure was a bit fierce before he let her go. It left her breathless and shaken.

Going to her room she went to bed, not forgetting the night creams, lotions and what not. Dawn lay just beyond the darkness and she reached toward it with eager hands. Another day. What might not happen? And, en-counting, and bookkeeping of the T. V. A., should be examined at least as ruthlessly as the accounting and bookkeeping of a private corporation. The government ought not use the elder Rockefeller's ultimatum methods in dealing with competitors nor Kreuger & Toll bookkeeping.

These question cannot be left up in the air. To steal a phrase from Alexander Sachs, "Planning is organized foresight plus corrective hindsight." The organized foresight has been notably lacking, but corrective hindsight can do a great deal. The question of confidence implies two things: if the opinion is to continue to be broadcast that there is something ignoble about economic rights, we shall continue to flounder.

That oft-repeated phrase—popular in the minds of all demagogues, including Hitler and Mussolini—that human rights come above property rights ignores the fact that the same Bill of Rights that guarantees free speech, free religion, free press and free assembly also guarantees against the right of search and seizure and guarantees that private property may not be expropriated nor taken for public use without just compensation. Property rights are human rights, not something incompatible or hostile to them. And anarchy and arbitrariness must be replaced by order, the rule of law and rational, business-like administration. If Mr. Hopkins's intentions are to become performance, we must reform the practice of the administration in regard to personnel. If Mr. Douglas is a successful administrator of the S. E. C., one should think twice about putting him on the court. In the last six years theories, regulations, rules and personalities have changed with such bewildering rapidity that nobody has known where he is at. Nevertheless, in the body of society itself, in the learned societies, in the better-class publications, in the universities, among intelligent industrialists and the more responsible and informed labor leaders, and in such organizations as the National Policy Association, an enormous amount of good constructive thinking has been done, extraordinarily free of prejudice. If Congress wants to call on the brains of this country, there are brains to be had. But people must be able to speak again without being denounced for their opinions, or having their opinions compared with their income tax, or having aspersions cast upon their motives. It is too bad that the Administration had to suffer serious political reverses and observe the effects of its own acrimony on the peripheries of our society in order of the T. V. A. itself. the ac-

Water Plant Is Giant Mixing Machine; Pure Water Is Its Product

If Paul Bunyan had left behind a cocktail shaker, it might be used to mix the two million gallons of Bay de Noc water which is treated every day at the Escanaba water works. This gigantic drink, which is mixed in the filtration plant, includes a dash of alum, a pinch of charcoal, a bit of ammonia sulphate and a trace of chlorine. Poured out from any faucet in the city, it is served as palatable, bacteria-free drinking water.

Shank estimates that the city's annual drink of water would cover the entire area of the city of Escanaba to a depth of over one foot. Nearly 300,000 million gallons of water are prepared annually at the local plant.

The turbid waters of the bay, sometimes calm and clear and sometimes rough and clouded, bear little resemblance to the finished product of the local plant which is always the same. The water is not "all doped up with chemicals," Shank states, in spite of the fact that it receives much treatment before it is ready for safe consumption. The process is one in which some constituents of the water are removed and others are added, so that in the end it contains no more chemicals than it did in the raw state. Those it does contain are put there for the health protection of the consumer.

Using the city's old filtration plant as his shaker, Shank first injects alum to remove the color of the water. A little farther along in the process, the newcomer may exclaim in dismay—a dirty black stream is allowed to flow into the drinking water. It is not dirt, however, but is activated carbon which is put in to remove the taste and odor found in the raw water. Powdered charcoal is its common name.

Much of the water plant superintendent's work consists of knowing when to increase or decrease the amount of carbon fed into the raw water. It must always be enough to clear up anything that is wrong with the raw water, and is increased regularly throughout the winter when the bay is covered with ice.

The last step in water treatment is the injection of chlorine gas, in the proportion of only nine-tenths of one part per million. The gas, which was used with deadly effectiveness during the world war, is now employed as a safety factor in treating drinking water. It destroys pathogenic bacteria, which may cause disease, in the city drinking water. Even this small injection is enough to satisfy the immediate "chlorine demand" of the water, and to leave a residual amount which is carried with the water through the distribution system. To make certain that the chlorine will be carried all the way through the pipes, a minute feed of ammonia sulphate is maintained. Only one-tenth of a part in a million parts of water, it provides a vehicle on which the chlorine rides until it encounters bacteria germs which it destroys.

Norway Man Hurt When Steam Shovel Tips Near Nahma

Iron Mountain, Mich., March 1 (Jammed in the controls of an overturned steam shovel for an hour before he was released, Raymond Benzle, of Norway, brother of State Senator D. Stephen Benzle, was brought to the Penn hospital in Norway last evening seriously injured, but his condition today was reported as very favorable.

The accident occurred yesterday afternoon near Nahma, where the Hacco Construction company, of Iron Mountain, was loading the shovel on to a flat car for shipment. The machine had been in use on a federal forest highway. Benzle was in the cab of the shovel and as the machine was being trundled on to the flat car it slid off a platform on to its side. Benzle was thrown into the controls so tightly that it required an hour to extricate him.

He was attended at Penn hospital by Dr. L. E. Hamlin. Examination revealed that he had received a fractured pelvis and bruises and contusions.

Menominee Mayor Reports Industry Prospects Bright

Menominee, March 1—After contacting officials of more than 100 firms who have evidenced an intention to move to new locations, Mayor Michael C. Olson today said "prospects are very good" that Menominee may be able to induce one of the industries to locate here.

The effort being made by Mayor Olson is in line with his promise that he would try to provide increased private employment for Menominee labor by encouraging industries to come to Menominee. He has been assisted by members of the recently named Menominee Industrial commission.

Seek Lower Taxes Four inquiries were received by Mayor Olson from business men who sought to learn more about Menominee's advantages as a site for new industries. The inquiries were the result of newspaper stories of Mayor Olson's drive for a bigger Menominee.

Two of the inquiries asked only "reasonable" cooperation from the city, while the other two made requests that were "unreasonable," Mayor Olson said.

Of the more than 100 firms contacted so far by the mayor, more than 50 are now located in Wisconsin. The Wisconsin firms sought lower taxes and more advantageous labor situations.

Social Security Number Holders Are Given Tips

Ten don'ts for those who have social security account numbers were issued today by Mr. Wheeler P. Chamberlain, manager of the Social Security Board field office in Marquette. His suggestions are:

- 1. Don't give any wrong information when you get a social security number.

- 2. Don't lose your social security account number. It is your property throughout your lifetime and should be guarded carefully.
- 3. Don't fail to make a record of your social security number and keep the record in a safe place even if you lose your card. In this way a duplicate number can be obtained more easily.
- 4. Don't have more than one social security account card. To have more than one may delay or reduce benefits you will receive later under the old-age insurance plan.
- 5. Don't give your social security number to any one else. Show it to your employer if he asks for it but keep the card. It is your personal property.
- 6. Don't hesitate to ask the Social Security Board to cancel extra numbers if you have more than one. This will help the Board keep your wage record up to date and will assure your receiving full credit for all covered wages paid you during your lifetime.
- 7. Don't hesitate to ask the Social Security Board to correct its records if you have given wrong information when you applied for a social security number. This service is free for the asking.
- 8. Don't be afraid the information contained in your social security application will be disclosed by the government. This information is held in strict confidence and is not available to any one.
- 9. Don't fail to apply for a money payment if you reach age 65 and have worked in commerce or industry since January 1, 1937. You may be entitled to a substantial sum under such circumstances. The same is true if you are the legal heir of a worker who has died since the date mentioned, after having been employed in a covered occupation.
- 10. Don't hesitate to call at the Marquette field office of the Social Security Board for any information you may desire about any phase of social security. It is your office, all of its services are free and yours for the asking.
