TEACHER'S TENURE REPEAL KILLED AT LANSING

Lansing, April 13. (AP)-The senate, debating former Governor Frank D. Fitzgerald's welfare reorganization bill, defeated a proposal to change the age limit for persons receiving old age assistance from 65 to 60 years.

One of a flood of proposed amendments, the suggestion was dvanced by Stanley Nowak, Democrat, Detroit. "How else are we to provide for people of 50 or more, laid off from their jobs and refused re-employment, who are too old to work and too young to receive old age assistance?" the Detroit senator demanded.

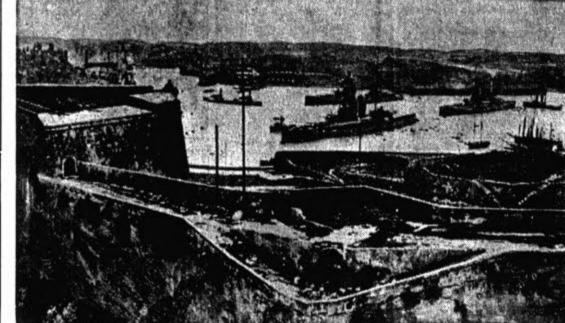

Plan Too Costly Senator C. Jay Town, Republican, North Adams, assailed the plan as costly and said the state treasury contained no money "for this kind of a departure. Town is chairman of the senate welfare committee and was a sponsor of the bill when it was introduced.

Decision on another questionwhether the state should forbid recipients of old age assistance to dispose of real estate-was deferred. The same issue had been fought out by both the 1935 and the 1937 legislatures.

Similarly, the debate slid over a proposal to restrict the establishing of city welfare depart ments-apart from county commissions-to Wayne county. As in was reported to the floor, the bill would gerait such a division in Ingham, Genesee and Kent coun-

DEFEATED SECOND TIME Lansing, April 13. (AP)-An attempt to repeal the teachers tenure law was killed in the house of representatives today.

The lawmakers once before had defeated and tabled the measure. Today's vote of 43 ayes to 44 nays, by which it was rejected a second time, made it ineligible for further consideration.

The teachers tenure law affects only those school districts that vote to come within its terms. It forbids dismissal of teachers because of political or religious prejudice, but permits their removal for cause.

Rep. Maurice E. Post, Republican, Rockford, sponsored the repeal attempt, contending tenure legislation perpetuated incompetent teachers in their jobs. The house adopted and gave

In these countries the schemes have been set up, as a rule, in piecemeal fashion on an individual-commodity basis. As a result, their fices are found closed on days that they could well be expected to be open. effectiveness varies from commodity to commodity even within a single country. Since there is usually no attempt to coordinat eor relate these schemes to each other, it sometimes happens that the successful operation of a scheme for one commodity has an adverse effect on other commodities.

More common than mandatory fixed prices, outside the totalitarian countries, are guaranteed minimum prices. Under this system, the government announces a certain minimum sum at which it stands ready to purchase a commodity. Market prices are thus kept from falling below the fixed minimum. This type of state intervention attempts to control prices, not through legal compulsion, but through economic means.

Another type of guaranteed price is that set by a collective contract agreement between producers and users of a product. It is for the most part confined to industrial crops. A good example is the British hops marketing scheme, established in 1932. This scheme provides for a hops marketing board, which has monopolistic control over the sale of hops. It also has the power to bar new hop growers and otherwise to control acreage.

A variant of the minimum guaranteed price is provided by the British scheme, according to which the government guarantees the price to producers on a fixed quantity and makes up the difference between what the growers obtains for his wheat on the market and the guaranteed price. The funds for this purpose are obtained from the tax of all flour milled in the United Kingdom from either domestic or imported wheat. It is similar to certain features of the invalidated AAA in the United States.

Flower Garden Suggestions

In planning a garden, or the decoration of a whole property with various gardens, borders, hedges, and the like, it is necessary to know both how to plant and raise flowers, and what they look like after they are grown. This calls for some understanding of soils and seasons, planting, transplanting, and cultivation. It also calls for knowledge of the colors and sizes of plants and their blooms, as well as something of their foliage, so that the plantings may be scheduled to create the loveliest possible effects by the state legislature.
