COMMONS WELL WORTH VISITING

British Parliament Meets Holds More Interest Than U. S. House

BY STANLEY ST. LOUIS Newcastle-on-Tyne, England—A visit to the English Parliament is well worth the time and effort expended. Unlike gaining admittance to the Congress of the United States, a gallery seat in the House of Commons is difficult to obtain.

Visitors enter the House of Parliament through ancient Westminster Hall and while waiting for the day's session to commence, are seated in Saint Stephen's Hall. Here one can see England's political history for centuries back passing in review.

When Malcolm MacDonald, Dominions Secretary, read the government's decision to relinquish its mandate over Palestine, held for the past twenty years, the matter of policy was of such grave importance that every member was in his seat.

Prime Minister Chamberlain, surrounded by his entire cabinet, was also present to hear the reading and participate in the debate which ensued.

After the government's position on the question of Palestine had been stated, and it was tantamount to a complete repudiation of the Balfour Declaration which assured a National home for the Jewish people in Palestine, a bitter, stormy debate followed.

Arguments advanced against the proposal by Mr. de Rothschild, (liberal, Isie of Ely) and his statements addressed to Mr. Chamberlain, were particularly bitter.

In the heat of debate, old scandals occasionally are dragged out for a public airing. One of the members made a plea for law, order and peace between Arabs and Jews in Palestine.

Local Scouts Active At Mackinac Island

Boy Scouts of Escanaba have completed half of their stay at Mackinac Island in connection with the American Legion award trip.

The Escanaba Scouts have taken over many of the duties that Eagle Scouts have performed in other years. Under the direction of their patrol leaders details are guarding all exhibits and escorting visitors through historic Fort Mackinac.

The program begins with reveille at 7 a. m. and closes with taps at 9:30 p. m. Many of the boys spend a great deal of time playing golf on the course which has been open to the Scouts without charge.

Members of the American Legion will visit the Scouts at Mackinac Island on Sunday, June 25.

FINE EVENING SHOW AT FAIR

'America Swings' Will Be Night Attraction August 6-11

A glittering parade of femininity, gaiety, mirth and music is "America Swings," centerpiece of the night program before the grandstand at the Upper Peninsula State Fair, August 6 to 11.

Speed being the keynote, "America Swings" gets away to a fast start in a number called "Meet the Company."

In the second scene, the chorus glides out on skis to give a good account of their skill in many novel formations. The skis are equipped with small rollers, enabling the girls to perform their routines with speed and agility.

The next scene is a contrast from those preceding it, the producers supplying the big cast with especially arranged dances, songs, music and costumes for a novel hillbilly number.

"America Swings" supplies the theme for the show's final scene. For a real "jamboree" session of swing, jitterbugging and whirlwind action from start to finish, this number tops any seen in a show of this type in many moons.

Going to Centennial Of Ancestor's Parish

On Sunday, July 2, 1939, exactly 100 years after the day in 1839 when his grandfather, Reverend Robert Grant Ward, early Canadian missionary, founded the Christ Church parish at Lower Ireland, Quebec province, Canada, Reverend James G. Ward of Escanaba will preach in that parish a sermon commemorative of the event.

Reverend Ward, rector of St. Stephen's Episcopal church in Escanaba, spent his boyhood in the Christ Church parish and spent his vacations there until he was through college. His father was a member of the parish for 75 years.

Among the people to be present at the anniversary reunion, Rev. Ward expects to meet old friends whom he has not seen for forty years. There will be about twenty-five members of the clergy present, including three other grandsons of the missionary, two of them brothers of Rev. Ward who are also members of the ministry. It is in his capacity as senior grandson that Rev. Ward was selected to preach at the two-day celebration. He also has a brother and sister living in the county very near to the old parish.

Reverend Ward reveals that his grandfather also founded the Maple Grove Holy Trinity Church parish in this same county. He was one of the earliest missionaries in that section, making his way into the wilderness on horseback before the railway, or even highways connected distant forest points with civilization.

Reverend and Mrs. Ward will leave this coming Sunday afternoon for Lower Ireland, and will remain there two weeks. During the pastor's absence on July 2 and 9, Reverend Archdeacon Poyser of Wilson will preach in his place at St. Stephen's Episcopal church.

School Forest Laboratory

Grand Marais, Mich. — The Grand Marais School Forest is now one of the largest school forest plots in the state of Michigan having increased its acreage from 80 to 600 acres in the past five years. A most active and varied program is being carried on in connection with it. Since 1934, a total of 73,000 seedlings and transplants of red, white and jack pine have been set out in the forest by boys of the local Future Farmers of America chapter and other high school students. The trees are furnished free by the Michigan state conservation department if the local district pays the expense of transportation.

Purpose of School Forest

The purpose of maintaining a school forest is first, to provide practical experience in problems of forestry and conservation for students; second, to provide profitable work projects for N.Y.A. youth; third, to establish an economic resource for the school; and fourth, to make a center for recreational activities.

The projects in connection with the forest consist of the forest laboratory construction, trimming, stumping, thinning, scalping, surveying boundaries, constructing boundary markers, and the making of fire lines. These projects have provided employment under CWA and PERA for 2400 man hours, and for a group of N.Y.A. boys ranging in number from 8 to 18 during the years from 1935 to 1939.

Forest Laboratory Use

The forest laboratory is a building 28 by 40, formerly used for school purposes in the village of Grand Marais and was torn down 16th street.

Helen Jerou, 517 South 12th street.

and then reconstructed in 1934 by CWA labor on the banks of the Sucker river in the school forest. It is used for housing workers, for storage of tools and equipment, as an overnight camp by various clubs, classes and similar organizations connected with school.

The building is partially furnished by rustic chairs, benches and tables constructed by N.Y.A. workers. It has a good driven well, with pump, in the cabin, and heating stove. Rustic guard rails have also been constructed on the river bank.

Surface Features

The topography of the school forest land varies from lowland swamp areas to high forested elevations, all forties of which border on the Sucker river or Grand Marais creek, with the exception of four forties. The soil is sandy underlain with a gravelly subsoil, the surface of which is covered with moss, leather leaf and grasses. Blueberries thrive in small openings and arbutus are abundant in the forested areas. Trees of commercial importance are the red pine, white cedar, spruce and balsam fir, with a scattering of white pine, and a minor growth of jack pine, oak, poplars, tag alders, scrub maples and scrub oak, willows and junipers.

Returns Worthwhile

The school forest land has been obtained through grants by the Michigan state department of conservation, free except for the cost of title transfer, and in the same way through the cooperation of the Cleveland Cliff Iron company and a subsidiary, Superior Realty company, and through the personal interest of John Bush, vice president of the Superior Realty company.

Over three hundred dollars worth of timber from the property has been sold or used by the school for general and farm shop class construction. All of the rough timber used by the county road commission in the construction of bridges over Grand Marais creek and Sucker river was supplied from the forest. A total of 4000 board feet has been supplied the school from red, white and jack pine culled from the forest property. The only timber cut has been that which was injured by fire many years ago. Also one truck load of fence posts has been marketed from the school forties.

The forest affords good cover for wild life including beaver, coyotes, bear, deer, fox and the Grand Marais creek and Sucker rivers which cut through the forest are among the noted trout streams of the Upper Peninsula.

The property is located on a county road with the nearest forties about two and one half miles east of town.

Successful Reforestation

The livability of the transplanted trees for the past two years has averaged 65 per cent while some areas showed 90 per cent. Extension forester from Michigan State college, Ira W. Bull, has visited the school forestry plot assisting in forestry problems for the past two years.

DEATH CALLS

MRS. JENSEN Former Escanaba Woman Passes Away In Milwaukee

Mrs. Clarence Jensen, 28, of Milwaukee, the former Marlon Hokenson of this city, died at 5:30 o'clock Tuesday afternoon at Grant hospital, in Milwaukee.

She had been in good health, apparently, as late as Memorial Day, when she visited in Escanaba, and it is thought that a heart ailment from which she suffered at times, caused her death.

She was born in Escanaba and moved to Manitowoc, Wis., with other members of the family, seven years ago, following the death of her father, Andrew Hokenson. She had lived in Milwaukee since her marriage six years ago.

Surviving are her husband, and one son, Wayne, 4; her mother, Mrs. Emma Hokenson, and two sisters and four brothers.

The body will be brought to Escanaba, arriving here Friday morning, and will be taken to the Anderson Funeral Home. Services will be held Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock at the funeral home chapel, and burial will be in Lakeview cemetery.

So sacred is considered the person of the Tohunga (priest or doctor) among the Maoris of New Zealand that he isn't permitted to touch his food. His feeding is accomplished with a long spoon held in the hands of a village maiden selected for that purpose.

A snail can crawl over the keenest razor blade without cutting itself.

Benefits Are Paid To 125 Workers

Whitney R. Dixon announced that the Escanaba office of the Michigan Unemployment Compensation Commission, of which the State Employment Service is a division, paid to 125 workers a total of $1,471 in benefits for partial and total unemployment in the week ending June 10.

The Service made a total of 22 field visits to employers in an effort to locate jobs; received 40 new applications for work; 23 renewed applications; and handled 342 personal visits to the office.

The active file of unemployed persons seeking work through the Escanaba office stood at 3235 at the end of the week covered, and increase of 47 per cent over the same period in 1938.

The local manager also reported that the Claims and Benefits Sections of the Commission have issued 13,290 benefit checks through the week ending June 10.

Totally unemployed persons in Delta County received $145,771 in 13,197 benefit checks. The average check for total unemployment in Delta County amounted to $11.05.

Individuals only partially unemployed have received $2,321 in 93 benefit checks, with an average value of $24.96. Up to date the Commission has issued 13,290 checks to 1,228 individuals with a total value of $148,092. This includes benefits for total and partial unemployment.

STORE-WIDE SAVINGS ON SUMMER NEEDS!

BEHIND THE SCENES

By Bruce Cotton

Washington—Chairmanship of the new Federal Security Agency probably will be offered to Clarence Addison Dykstra, president of the University of Wisconsin. Mr. Dykstra's name has been presented to President Roosevelt, and is expected to get the President's approval. The chairmanship is one of the most important jobs created by Roosevelt's two government reorganization plans, which become effective July 1. In the Federal Security Agency will be the National Security Board, the National Youth Administration, the Civilian Conservation Corps, the Public Health Service, the Office of Education and the U. S. Employment Service. President Roosevelt first offered the post to Arthur J. Altmeyer, head of the Social Security Board, it is learned. Mr. Altmeyer turned it down, preferring to take reappointment to his present job. He comes up for reappointment this summer, and the term of office is six years; in that job Mr. Altmeyer (whose reappointment can be taken for granted) will serve out his term no matter who is elected President next year. The head of the Federal Security Agency, however, will be like a cabinet officer, in that he will keep his job only as long as the administration which named him stays in.

ALTMAYER TO ROCHE TO DYKSTRA When Mr. Altmeyer declined the job, the President is understood to have offered it to Josephine Roche, who was assistant secretary of the treasury in charge of the Public Health Service from Dec. 1, 1934, to Nov. 1, 1937. Miss Roche declined on the ground that she had to devote all her time to her private business (she owns and manages extensive coal mining properties in Colorado, and quit her treasury job on that account). Mr. Altmeyer and Miss Roche, then, are understood to have brought up the name of Mr. Dykstra. They enthusiastically approved his appointment, won the approval of others in the "well-fare group" here, and presented the name to the President. Whether Mr. Dykstra actually gets the job apparently depends on whether he wants it. He ranks high with President Roosevelt; indeed it is believed here that Roosevelt was at least partly influential in getting the former city manager of Cincinnati named head of the University of Wisconsin.

BIG SAVING FOR EMPLOYERS Speaking of the Social Security Board... a little-noticed provision of the amendments to the social security act, passed by the House and awaiting action in the Senate will save employers something more than $60,000,000 a year. This provision reduces the amount, though not the rate, of the unemployment compensation payroll tax. Under the present law, the employer pays three percent on his total payroll; the amendment would require him to pay the tax only on the first $3000 of each individual wage or salary on his payroll, as is the case with old age insurance. Incidentally, if the pending amendments pass, and if all American citizens should stand on their rights, the Social Security Board could be let in for a swell statistical headache. One amendment provides that the employer must notify each employe in writing, either quarterly or annually, of the amount of money being deducted from the employe's pay and sent on to the government; it also gives the employe the right to check with the SSB to see if the figure given him is correct. Now setting up the machinery to answer such requests, SSB people say they don't expect many of them—but there could be 22,000,000 a year.

The A. F. of L. is still under the control of a small group, firmly entrenched and reactionary in their attitude toward public questions, who are tolerant of many evil conditions existing in the federation. —John L. Lewis.

SERIAL STORY

BRIDE ON A BUDGET

BY JANET DORAN

COPYRIGHT, 1939, NEA SERVICE, INC.

Yesterday, Bart loses his agency when installment buyers fail to pay. He is morose. Then he catches a severe cold, is delirious and Iris sends for a doctor.

CHAPTER XII Iris rode down to the hospital in Dr. Pitcher's coupe, right behind the ambulance. It would do no good, as the doctor pointed out. Mr. Whittaker would not know anyone for several days to come. He was a very sick man. "Business troubles?" he had asked Iris, in the little living room, after examining Bart. After telling her bluntly her husband had pneumonia. "Yes," she said faintly. "Well you look like a sensible young lady. You go right down to your job and hold things together. If worry got him into this state, then he'll recover a lot quicker, when he begins to gain, if he knows you're keeping things running for him. You—ah—work in Dean Comers' office, I believe?"

"Yes." It was cold and blustery and there was a raw, after-rain bite to the fall wind, but Iris walked all the way from the hospital to the office. And at noon, after she talked with Ellen Trent, she took the coast bus. "This was what Bart worried about, Iris, you see. Budget payments are fine if everything runs smooth. If nobody is sick, and everyone keeps working. Or if you've a reserve fund to fall back on." That was what frightened her. No reserve fund. No money saved, no insurance, nothing to fall back on. And Bart sick. He'd have to stay in the hospital six weeks at least. There'd be the hospital and doctors to pay. She'd have to live. Maybe she'd have to be the sole support of the family for a long time. If Bart didn't recover from his illness fast.

During the days that followed, the serene order of Iris' former existence vanished forever. No longer could she dawdle at breakfast, or lunch when, how, and with whom she pleased. Or on whatever she liked. Nor were her evenings untroubled by the calamity which befell them.

To begin with, she went to the hospital morning, noon and night. And for five dreadful days, there was no change. For five days, she did not step foot in the room, or even get to the closed door with the nurse sitting on guard at the ward desk, outside. Pleasant, efficient, firm, the nurse was. For those five days she lived in an awful nightmare of unreality. With worry, growing headache, every time she stopped working long enough to remember Bart. Remember how ill he was. Remember all that had happened, and all that was happening still to them. There was the shop. The speed with which creditors pounced upon the little shop, attaching everything that wasn't already being claimed by rightful owners who had not yet been paid for merchandise, was frightening. There was the Linwood Clarion, with a bill for $480 for advertising. The advertising manager insisted they must be paid. There was the landlord, talking loud and very angry about three months rent overdue. There were bills, bills, everywhere, all of them due, long past due. There were collectors and disagreeable, hard-faced men who spoke of injunctions, liens and claims, and waved long folders papers. There was young Howard Lang, attorney at law, and boyhood friend of Bart's. And finally, there was no more shop, and peace. Except for the fact that Bart must be told. Sometime. When he was well again, when he was strong enough to bear knowing.

Meanwhile, there were her own tangled budgets. There was the Vogue Gown Shop, and the Misses' Budget Shop, and the Charlotte Shoppe. Seated at the little table Bart had enameled for her, the first week of their marriage, Iris slipped a cup of hot tea, and nibbled buttered toast and a boiled egg and a dish of baked apple. Eating mechanically, she began writing down every single bill, every account. Racking her mind lest she forget a single one. The milk bill, the druggists, the jeweler, where Bart had purchased the diamond ring. She had set staggering list when they were all set down. Enough to fairly kill her appetite. But she finished the last crumb of toast, poured out the remaining half cup of hot tea and drank it.

Rummaging in the desk, where Bart had worked with the budget book, worked at his accounts, when he brought things home from the shop to finish up, Iris found the little black book. Opening it desperately, she leafed through it in feverish haste. Food, menus, buying, planning meals, using up leftovers. Puddings, parties, savings, insurance, investments, planning your future. The book didn't miss a trick. "Do you need all you think you have to have now?" asked a chapter. It gave Iris pause for thought. Did she? Soberly, she flung open the closet door. Seriously, she began taking down the clothes she had loved so well. Loved beyond everything else. She was another Thais, now, burning all on the altar of her devotion, only unlike Thais, she did not withhold her tiny figure of the god of love. Unlike Thais, she made no reservations. Because this was voluntary, but it was also harsh as cessity. Because now she understood what Bart said when he hated credit, hated budget buying, and hated installment payments. Now she knew, it was because of the awful shame, if you couldn't pay. The shame of knowing you had something you hadn't paid for, and couldn't pay for. Something you had no right to; that didn't belong to you. That was what lay back of every budget bought article. That great black shadowy doubt. In the morning, she asked Ellen about second-hand clothes buyers. And at noon, she went to the dry cleaning and second-hand clothes establishment. "We'd have to see the garments, Madam," the man told her bluntly. "Sure we buy. But the price depends on the goods. People who buy second-hand clothes don't care about classy duds." The amount she received was so much less than she had expected, Iris was tempted not to let the clothes go. She did really need them. But—the bills drove her on. She sold them for what she could get, and took the money to pay on her budget accounts. She sold the chair and smoking stand, and the furnishings in the apartment. Then she rented a big room with a double bed and comfortable chairs, and a small bath in Mrs. Brady's Boarding House. She moved in that Sunday. A week from her return from her honeymoon-vacation. She moved in, and left word at the hospital that she could be reached at Mrs. Brady's telephone.

On Monday morning, she took the diamond back and received $20, since Bart had the ring almost paid for. The $20 cleared up an account she had been unable to pay anything on after selling the greater part of her wardrobe. Through all the trouble and confusion of those days Iris never missed her friends. Or noticed that they were curiously occupied, curiously busy, and too concerned with their own affairs to know what was happening to her, or what she was doing. And when it was all over, when the shop was closed, and a FOR RENT sign on the door, when the apartment was dismantled, and TO LET blazoning the street windows, when she was settled in her single room at Mrs. Brady's and getting ready to go to the hospital to see Bart, again, Iris remembered.

Bitterness crept over her, as she realized how often Yolander and Ho, John and Marcia, and Ellen and John, as well as Don and his wife dropped in on them, called them for bridge, dancing, the movies, or dinner through each week. Bitterness filled her throat with a hard lump and tears burned along her eyelids. Then her head came up, and her chin set at a stubborn angle. All right. Let them. Bart was right. Coming into the hospital, that morning to see Bart, Iris was startled to see Ted Bingham waiting. And beside him, a dark pretty girl, obviously his wife, Dotty. "Hello, Mrs. Whittaker," Ted said eagerly. "We heard Bart was sick and we came over to see if there was anything we could do. You had moved from the address Mr. Whittaker told us, and nobody seemed to know where you'd gone. So we came down here." Iris felt the damp streaks on her face, the tears she had been unable to shed all the long dreary hours of straightening out the mess that had been her old life. The life Bart had been unable to bear. That had worried him into neglecting his health, into this dreadful illness. "Ted," she said simply remembering Bart had called the young man that; feeling somehow that it would please Bart if she called him that now, if she was nice to him. "Ted, the very first thing I'm going to tell Bart, when he can see me, is that you two were here to see him!" She swallowed then and blinked, but the blur wouldn't vanish. "He'll be proud to know you remembered—and cared," she said softly. They went out, slowly, and a nurse came toward her smiling. "Good news for you this morning, Mrs. Whittaker. You're to see that big husband of yours for a little while. But you'll remember not to excite or worry him won't you? And not to stay too long." Inside the quiet, dim room that was much too cold for comfort, Iris stood by the high white iron bed and felt her eyes blurring so she couldn't see Bart at all. Then his hand, thin but warm, found hers and closed around it tightly. Silently, they stood thus. Silently, while a deep vast prayer of gratitude swelled in Iris' heart, sweep up to engulf her, until it pounded and beat in her ears like thunder. "Darling," she whispered shakily. "I'm so glad I can see you." "Stand by honey," Bart tried to grin and decided it was too much work, but his dark eyes clung to her face as if hungry for every dearly beloved, familiar feature he had remembered, "everything's going to be O. K. now." "Of course, darling," Iris said steadily. "There aren't any more bills now. Bart. And when you're home again, you'll be surprised at how I can run that budget book. I'm getting all practiced up now." He grinned then. "Wife," he said, Dimly, Iris understood. Dimly she realized that her days of being a bride, a foolish, spendthrift, extravagant bride were past. Dimly she realized that Bart understood. And peace came to her soul. (The End)

Infantile Paralysis Retires Lou Gehrig

BY WHITNEY MARTIN

New York, June 21 (AP)—The "Iron Horse" was consigned to the baseball roundhouse today to stay.

Infantile paralysis, slowly undermining the marvelous physique which had carried Lou Gehrig through 2,130 consecutive games as New York first baseman, has penned a dramatic ending to his playing career.

"Mr. Gehrig will be unable to continue his active participation as a baseball player inasmuch as it is advisable that he conserve his muscular energy," the statement read in part.

Table of stock prices for various companies including 'Adams Exp', 'Alcoa', 'American Oil', 'Anaconda', etc., with columns for price and volume.

By Frederick Gardner. New York, June 21 (AP)—Buying in special stocks kept the market on even keel today and lifted some for gains of a point or more.

The slow advance the last three sessions invited a little selling as traders tested the resistance of the list but minor gains and losses were rather evenly balanced at the finish.

Brokers said buyers evidently were searching the list for underpriced issues and counting on recent signs of industrial expansion in steel and other lines to bring a further upturn in the second half of the year.

The "iron age" said steel makers were showing inclination to take a firm stand on prices of finished products but leading steels drifted lower.

Market analysts again pointed to the British-Japanese fencing in the Far East as a hint to watch for another European flare-up.

An undercurrent of investment demand, contrasting with the death of speculative activity, was apparent in bonds, too.

Except grains, major commodities leaned to the upside. Another spill in wheat accompanied the movement of the winter crop to market.

Thrown for small losses in the curb were Lockheed, American Gas & Electric and Electric Bond & Share.

Wheat: Closed 7-8 to 1-1-8 off top loss orders. Corn: Closed 3-8 to 3/4 off with wheat.

Cattle: Steady to 25 lower. Hogs: Generally 10 to 15 higher.

SCHOOL CONSOLIDATION
Marquette—Additional consolidations of school districts in Marquette county are not expected, Stanley Williams, county school commissioner, said yesterday. The only merger to date was that effected in 1937 when the Ewing township district, Marquette county, joined with Maple Ridge township, Delta county. One school board was abolished and all students in both districts are being transported to a central school at Rock, Delta county. This spring consolidation of West Branch and Skandia dis-

Summer Delayed By Variation In Earth's Movement

You are right, Mr. Doubter, summer did not start yesterday, on the 21st of June as it usually does. Summer started officially at 1:40 o'clock this morning, Central Standard Time. W. T. Lathrop, local weather observer, tells us that the variation is due to a slight variation in obliquity of the ecliptic, which, in turn, is due to the slight wobbling of the earth's axis in its revolving about the sun. In other words, the angle of the plane of the earth's equator, called the ecliptic, and the plane made by the earth's orbit about the sun, is caused to vary a few degrees and in a period of time, from eight to ten years, summer, instead of coming directly on the 21st of June, comes obliquely on the 22nd or very obligingly, on the 20th. California, that land of sunshine; (and heavy fogs) will this year be well able to say to the rest of the nation, outside of its West coast neighbors, "I told you so," because summer comes to California on the 21st, at 11:40 p. m., and to the rest of us it does not appear till the 22nd, the next day. In Escanaba, the coming of the sunny season was issued in with cool breezes and cooler rain, perhaps to prove the Sunshine state's contention.

It is reported by the U. S. Bureau of Public Roads that the construction of super-highways on the six transcontinental routes previously selected, would cost nearly $3,000,000,000, and annual maintenance and fixed charges would amount to about $185,000,000. Tire experts believe that the rear tires on cars driven over hard surface roads wear out just about twice as fast as the front tires.

SECURITY CHIEF WANT OF YOUTH

Forum Discloses Many Thoughts of High School Students

New York, June 22.—Chief desire of American youth of today is for security as represented by a job, according to an analysis of detailed expressions by more than 350,000 high school students who are competing in the annual American youth forum by the American magazine. In submitting essays on one of two assigned subjects, "What I Owe America and What America Owe Me," or "New Frontiers for American Youth," the 361,000 boys and girls who participated, under the supervision of their high school instructors, expressed themselves on innumerable subjects, but with particular emphasis on employment, redistribution of wealth, national security and matters allied to these. "If there is one thing that ties the youth of today together," reports John Dungan, director of the forum, "it is the desire for security. What youth wants is jobs; youth wants to work. The young people of the country do not feel hopeless. They are slightly dubious as to exactly what they will be doing ten years from now, but they are nevertheless undaunted."

Parker & Watts Circus To Play Here On June 30

The circus is coming to Escanaba. Yesterday the Parker & Watts Circus' advertising cars were in the city and the surrounding country posting the gaudy circus posters showing the pretty girls atop prancing steeds, the funny clowns, elephants, lions, tigers, hippos, zebras, giraffes, great stars of the aerial rigging, bare back riders and all that it takes to make up the great event of the year. Claude Morris, advertising manager of the Parker & Watts circus with 27 men, is in advance of this circus, which will exhibit here for an afternoon and night performance on Friday, June 30. Morris states that the Parker & Watts circus this season presents some of the finest and greatest circus acts with any circus on earth, and also says that the Parker & Watts is the only circus that gives the old-time free street parade with its open dens of wild animals, prancing horses with circus stars atop of them, gilded tableaux groups, five bands, two callopes, one of them the old-time steam callope, clowns, elephants, camels, zebras, and hundreds of other rare wild animals. All of the dens are open to give the public a chance to see the many beasts of the jungle in this mighty, free street parade that is over a mile in length. Parker & Watts circus is the newest circus on the road, and the only circus that is under the personal direction of the man that has his name over the title. This man is Ira M. Watts, the outstanding circus man in the world today. Mr. Watts was for many years manager of the Al G. Barnes, Sells-Floto, Spargenback and Wallace, and the Sparks Circus, also the assistant manager of John Ringling on the Ringling Brothers and Barnum and Bailey circus, and is the best known circus man alive today.

Other conclusions which Mr. Dungan has drawn from the mass of material studied follow: "Agriculture, an old frontier that can be made into a brand new one with scientific application, is given surprising prominence by modern youth. The back-to-the-farm movement is mentioned time and time again as a solution to unemployment. The farm boy no longer seems to have the inclination to escape to the big city; he seems to have a new pride in an old occupation. At the same time he realizes the importance of more knowledge of new agricultural trends and wants to be well educated along these lines. "Youth's respect for science amounts almost to worship. In this field it sees the answer to almost the world's problems: Science will rid the world of disease, create new industries through research and generally form the keynote of a new civilization. Through scientific planning youth envisions the city of the future as an ideal community in which inadequate housing is a thing of the past. Living standards are higher, and everybody, or nearly everybody, will have an airplane. "Concerning big business, youth does not want private industry curtailed, but resents the idea that wealth should be under the control of a few people, while others are inadequately provided for. Redistribution of wealth is advocated and a limit on profits is favored. "The general economic thinking of youth is represented by the idea that a shorter working day at proportionately higher wages would necessitate the employment of additional people also at higher wages, and that this actually would work to the benefit of the employer because the present evil is not overproduction but underconsumption and additional people employed would be additional purchasers of goods. "Youth regards freedom of the press as a valuable possession and one for which this country should be envied. It feels that a publisher may be interested in presenting the side of the news most to his interest and recommends
