FRANCE FACES GRAVE CRISIS, SAYS PREMIER

FRONTIER ARMIES PROVE CONSTANT MENACE

Paris, June 27 (AP)—Blunt-spoken Premier Edouard Daladier adjourned the French parliament for its summer vacation tonight with the warning that the gravest international crisis "in twenty years" faced France with 3,000,000 soldiers across her frontiers.

He said the troop concentrations were "more important than ever before" and did not count "semi-military units."

The premier apparently referred to the troops of Germany, Italy and Spain and by "semi-military units" meant the German S.S. and S.A. organizations and the Fascist militia of Italy.

The sudden adjournment, which took most deputies by surprise, created an uproar in the chamber which had expected the session to continue through this week and possibly next since several important questions were pending.

Deputies Get Masks

Deputies who had received their gas masks just before reading of the closing decree expressed amazement at the extreme pessimism of the premier's speech delivered in a heavy, measured tone.

At the senate, where Daladier later read the same decree, he was equally grave and was heard by the senators in dead silence.

"We are in the hands of events and it is possible that the parliamentary vacation will be more brief than those who are protesting against closing the session think," he said.

Some deputies said this referred to the constitutional requirement that parliament must act on any declaration of war.

"What we ask you," he said, "is to leave the government the liberty of the present moment."

The premier painted a gloomy picture of dangers surrounding France in reply to a series of questions posed by Louis Frossard on the use of the government planned to make of its decree powers during the summer recess.

Propaganda Coming Thicker

"On our frontiers there are three million men without counting semi-military units," he declared in a low voice. "And in the interior they are working frantically in factories while we receive announcements of concentrations of troops more important than ever before along our frontiers in the guise of maneuvers."

Intense foreign propaganda is being waged "to separate Frenchmen and disrupt the French and British solidarity so indispensable to the peace of the world."

Although he promised that France was ready for peaceful collaboration he added she was "resolved, and the world must know it, to resist with all her force at any attempt at domination."

Former Convict Fights Hitch Hike Murder Case

St. Johns, Mich., June 27 (AP)—Daniel M. (Danny) Kent, scar-faced former convict, elected today to fight in court against conviction as the hitch hiker murderer of George G. Hall.

Kent demanded a justice court examination, and carried his point when he insisted that the examination be delayed until Friday morning.

He told Clinton county sheriff's officers he expected a woman friend would employ counsel for him.

Sheriff John Barnes declared Kent indicated an intention to repudiate a confession he had signed in Grand Rapids last night. He quoted the prisoner as alleging Grand Rapids police kicked him and coerced him to sign the statement.

Kent is accused of having shot Hall to death after the Detroit oil promoter and Miss Roby Doty, Hall's companion, had given him a ride. Miss Doty testified at an inquest that Kent then dumped the body into a ditch and made love to her as he held her a prisoner.

The respondent, sallow faced but calm, sat stiffly in a swivel chair in front of the bench in the Clinton county circuit court room as he awaited briefly the arrival of Justice William J. Black, before whom he was arraigned.

He stared steadily at the judge as he read the murder warrant, only turning once to shake his head negatively at cameramen who photographed him.

"You may either waive or demand an examination," Justice Black told him.

"Demand," came the firm reply.

He was returned to the Clinton county jail, under orders that he be held without bond.

Kent's mother, Mrs. Julia Lichten, visited him later in his cell. Police authorities said it was a brief, tearful interview, in which the aged woman urged her son to "be a good boy."

She left money with his jailers, asking them to keep him supplied with oranges.

M. P. MINISTERS FIGHT MERGER

Fifteen Churches Refuse to Join Methodist Unity Group

Flint, Mich., June 27 (AP)—Acting in behalf of 15 dissenting ministers, a Flint law firm today forwarded to Bishop H. Straughn of Baltimore, a demand that the congregations of their churches be allowed to retain their church property and the Methodist Protestant name.

The 15 ministers refused to participate in the Michigan uniting conference of the Methodist Protestant and Methodist Episcopal churches at Adrian last week.

When the merger was completed, the new United Methodist church placed most of the ministers in the dissenting group on the un-stationed list. The letter to Bishop Straughn, who represented the Methodist Protestant church at Adrian, said the members of the dissenting congregations wished to continue worship as members of a separate Methodist Protestant church. It also stated the congregations were willing to pay a pro rata share of the approximately $40,000 owed by the Michigan conference of Methodist Protestant churches.

Howard Cline, of the firm of Stockton, Cline & George which prepared the letter, said the dissenting ministers will meet at Otter Lake July 10 to discuss methods of retaining possession of property which the United Methodist church now claims as a result of the merger.

Cline said ministers in the dissenting group were Rev. Howard J. Hensell, of Gull Lake; Rev. W. Carl Stanbridge, of the Detroit Harger church; Rev. E. H. Dubois, of Leonard; Rev. Henry Campbell, of Assaria; Rev. Lester L. Case, of Three Rivers; Rev. William Coombs, of Augusta; Rev. James A. Franklin, of Goodells; Rev. Arthur G. Frost, of Flint; Rev. Leo J. Griffin, of Marlette; Rev. G. M. Grinnell, of Washington; Rev. B. C. Hescott, of Hickory Corners; Rev. Donald G. Hescott, of the Detroit First M. P. church; Rev. William H. Smith, of Kinde; Rev. W. D. Stafford, of Port Huron; and Rev. O. R. Stilson, of Huntington, Ind.

JAP BLOCKADES HIT AMERICANS

Britain Hopes Tientsin Area Dispute Will Be Settled Quickly

Tientsin, June 28 (Wednesday) (AP)—British hopes for a quick settlement of the Tientsin crisis mounted today as the Japanese blockade of the British concession here entered its third week.

Optimism was stimulated by reports from Tokyo that negotiations were in progress there for an agreement and by indications that the Japanese military here was retreating in its strict search of Britons passing the barricade.

American, however, charged that Japanese interference with traffic on the Hai river, Tientsin's avenue to the sea, was hampering United States trade. Agents for the American States Steamship company's four-laden steamer Michigan said the vessel had been compelled to lie off the coast for five days at a cost of $700 a day.

Both British and Japanese, apparently anxious to avoid new tension in expectation that discussions in Tokyo will end the episode within a few days, reported they had taken steps aimed at lessening the possibility of new provocation.

(In Tokyo, Sir Robert Leslie Craigie, British ambassador to Japan, awaited word from London while preparations went forward for talks concerning a settlement. It still was not known there whether they would be held in Tokyo or Tientsin.)

Body Is Identified As Store Bandit By Victim At Detroit

Detroit, June 27 (AP)—One of the victims of a $277 hardware store holdup here June 10 today identified the body of Anthony Hessler, alias Phillips, as the gunman who robbed him. Inspector Edgar Graf, head of the Detroit police holdup squad, disclosed.

Jack Keyes of Highland Park was the man who made the identification. He walked into Leo M. Hoffman's store as the holdup was in progress and was robbed of $39.

Hessler was killed by Patrolman Warren Raby after he fatally wounded the officer in a gun battle following a finance company holdup last Friday.

MICHIGAN CITY PRISON BREAK SCHEME FAILS

WOMAN VISITOR IS SEIZED; FELONS SHOT DOWN

Michigan City, Ind., June 27 (AP)—Three desperate felons armed with butcher knives seized a woman welfare worker in Indiana state prison today and threatened to kill her unless they were given guns and freedom, but sharp-shooting guards and state police shot them down as they held a parley with the prison warden.

The three prisoners were wounded severely. A fourth prisoner, forced into their scheme; the woman visitor and the warden's secretary suffered slight wounds, and a prison guard who sought to interfere with the convicts' plans was slashed in the neck with a knife.

Trusty Stabbed
Mrs. Ruth Joiner, 29, of Crawfordsville, Ind., member of a party of eight welfare workers being escorted through the prison, was the woman seized.

As the party passed through the prison hospital, Mrs. Joiner was grabbed by Richard Sweet, 26; Alphonse Skuszwich, 30, and Earl Niverson, 30. The trio hustled her into the office of Dr. Peter Weeks, prison physician.

Leroy Hunt, 34, trusty working as a hospital attendant, and Joseph Piotrowski, 37, guard, sought to rescue Mrs. Joiner. The convicts stabbed Piotrowski in the neck and herded Hunt into the doctor's office with Mrs. Joiner.

Warden's Plea Disregarded
Over Mrs. Joiner's telephone, the convicts called Warden Alfred Dowd. "Give us guns and a getaway car within 10 minutes, or we'll kill the woman," the warden quoted them as saying.

Dowd called for state police assistance, summoned extra guards to duty and went to the hospital. Through the door of the doctor's office, against which the convicts had erected a barricade, the warden shouted to the men and told them he would take up their demands with the governor's office.

He told them Mrs. Joiner was the mother of a three-year-old daughter, pleaded with them to remember their mothers and asked them to release their hostage unharmed.

Sweet shouted back: "Nothing doing to that. I'm going out of here first some time, and I might as well go now."

Surprise Attack Planned
The warden retired, convinced Mrs. Joiner would come to no immediate harm, and told the convicts he would return soon with an answer.

He left, planned a surprise attack.

Traffic Toll

Bay City (AP)—Assistant Prosecutor F. Norman Higgs Tuesday authorized issuance of a negligent homicide warrant against Norman Mould, 41, of Saginaw. He was the driver of an automobile which was involved in an accident that resulted in the death of Mrs. Margaret Davis, 40, Midland county family agency director, early Sunday morning.

"Guerre said J. Emory Adams, Smith's wife's nephew, admitted driving the fleeing L.S.U. prey there after Smith resigned.

"The officer said Smith was not known in Memphis but a nationwide dragnet was being tightened in an effort to capture the educator.

In a letter to Dr. Paul Hebert, L.S.U. law school dean named acting president today, Ellison disclosed how the tall, scholarly-looking Smith had talked his way to three immense cash advances in about six weeks.

On May 2, the attorney general said, he obtained $200,000 from the National Bank of Commerce at New Orleans, June 9, another $100,000 was obtained from the City National Bank of Baton Rouge and six days later another $100,000 was obtained via the note route from the Hibernia National Bank of New Orleans.

Missing Prexy

Search is on near Baton Rouge, La., for Dr. James Monroe Smith, above, who resigned as president of Louisiana State university, disappeared few hours before Gov. Richard Leche announced "several hundred thousand dollar" shortage in school's funds.

COAL IS AFIRE IN STATE BINS

Spontaneous Combustion Blamed to Quality Buying Scored

Lansing, June 27 (AP)—The war over state purchasing flared anew today when Lawrence H. Niendorf, secretary of the administrative board and deposed head of the purchasing division, reported 800 tons of coal purchased by his successor was afire in the bins, ignited by spontaneous combustion he attributed to its poor quality.

Grant M. Hudson, former congressman and dry leader, followed Niendorf in the post. Governor Dickinson appointed Hudson as his personal "watchdog" in time when Niendorf's policies were under fire.

One of Hudson's first official acts, the purchase of 14,000 tons of coal for state institutions, drew the fire of State Treasurer Miller Dunckel, a member of the administrative board's purchasing committee. Dunckel declined to sign vouchers for the coal, arguing that its quality was so low the price at the mine should have been no more than 35 or 45 cents a ton and raising the objection that no competitive bids were required.

The state paid $1.45 to $1.90 for the coal at the mine, or approximately $4.55 a ton delivered. Informed the 800 tons delivered to the state reformatory at Ionia was afire and that convicts were at work in four-hour shifts shoveling aside other stores to prevent further spontaneous combustion, Dunckel said today he was certain the purchasing committee would reopen the controversy in its next meeting.

A state efficiency engineer had warned the purchasing committee the quality of the coal was such that spontaneous combustion was "bound to occur."

Drowns In Canal Near Detroit Club

Detroit (AP)—Falling to heed a life-guard's warning, fifteen-year-old David Horton was drowned Tuesday in the canal in front of the Detroit boat club at Belle Isle. The life-guard, Thomas Kirby, said that he told the boy and two companions to stay away because the canal was deep. A short time later he heard cries for assistance and saw the boy's companions running away. The body was recovered within 10 minutes by Armstead Williams of Richmond, Va., a visitor at the club, but attempts at revival failed. David was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Horton.

Market Considers Saturday Closing

New York, June 27 (AP)—Governors of the New York stock exchange will meet tomorrow to decide whether to close the exchange on Saturdays during July and August. If the decision is to close, they will also consider proposals to extend the trading hours Monday to Friday inclusive to 3:30 or 4 p. m., Eastern Daylight Time, from the present 3 o'clock.

Whatever action is taken will result from the Quinn bill permitting banks in the state of New York to close Saturdays in July and August if individual management approve.

Aged Negro Client Kills Lake County Welfare Supervisor

Baldwin, Mich., June 27 (AP)—A three-week-old dispute between Miss Mamie Kerr, 55-year-old Lake county welfare administrator, and an aged client culminated today in a volley of pistol shots which left Miss Kerr dead and the client critically wounded.

Sheriff Henry Smith said that Henry Washington, 73-year-old negro, had shot Miss Kerr twice and then sent a bullet into his own head at the county welfare offices.

Washington was in Reed City hospital under guard tonight and Prosecutor Allen Lidske said he would charge him with first degree murder if he recovers.

Miss Kerr died almost instantly. The dispute apparently centered around Washington's attempts to get an old age pension and an operation for appendicitis. Herbert Davis, coroner and county clerk, said that Washington applied to him for the pension three weeks ago but was unable to certify his exact age and blamed the welfare officials for the difficulty.

At that time, Davis said, Washington threatened Miss Kerr.

Brandishes Pistol
J. W. Woolsey, clerk in the welfare office, said Washington and his wife entered the office today and Washington asked an order for an operation. As Miss Kerr turned to make out a medical examination form, Woolsey said, a shot was fired and he ran out of an inner office in time to see Miss Kerr stagger back.

Woolsey said that Washington brandished a smoking pistol in his direction and apparently aimed at him. The second shot, however, also struck the woman. Immediately thereafter Washington turned the weapon on himself.

Miss Kerr, who had lived here for three years, formerly was engaged in welfare work in Flint and Lansing. She had a nephew, James K. McElroy of St. Johns. The body was taken to Scottsville, pending completion of funeral arrangements.

ESCAPE NIPPED AT MARQUETTE

Warden Coon Locks Up Nine Involved In Prison Plot

Marquette, Mich., June 27 (AP)—Warden Marvin L. Coon, of the Marquette branch prison, late today said that he had ordered nine long-term inmates placed in detention cells after the discovery of what he said was a plot to escape.

The plot was discovered by Charles Aho, prison cell inspector, but Warden Coon withheld announcement until he and officers completed an investigation.

The warden, withholding names of those involved, said, however, that seven of the men were serving life terms, one was serving 60 years to life and the other man involved was doing double life.

One escaped twice from the state prison of southern Michigan and another escaped once and was involved in another escape plot, four had been implicated in plans to make a break for freedom and three had records of escape.

The warden said Inspector Aho had discovered small drillings in the sandstone blocks forming a wall, and that two small drills, made out of hard steel and believed to have been the product of inmates, were found in holes. They are thought to have stuck there when extensions to them failed to hold when being extracted. No extension bars were found.

ONLY 3 DAYS LEFT TO PASS NEEDED BILLS

PRESIDENT'S REPLY CALLED PETULANT BY VANDENBERG

BY RICHARD L. TURNER
Washington, June 27 (AP)—A few barbed remarks from Hyde Park stirred up anger in the senate wing of the capitol today as worried administration leaders struggled to push major legislation through congress by midnight Friday, the close of the fiscal year.

From his mansion on the Hudson, President Roosevelt lashed out at those who participated in yesterday's coup which stripped the administration monetary bill of the president's power to devalue the dollar and set a fixed and increased price for government purchases of newly mined domestic silver.

Language Sulphurous
The hard money Republicans from the east and the "silver senators" and currency expansionists of the west who engineered the pooling of votes which brought these things about promptly made a series of wrathful retorts. Privately, their language was even more sulphurous.

Some old-timers at the capitol, summing up the situation, felt that the development had served chiefly to harden attitudes to a point at which any compromise arrangement could be reached only with extreme difficulty.

And the monetary bill still had a tortuous path to follow before it could reach the White House.

This measure, involving the life of the $2,000,000,000 stabilization fund, was but one of several which administration men said must be passed by midnight Friday, the close of the fiscal year. If confusion in several downtown departments and possibly much embarrassment to the government is to be avoided.

Sessions Stretched

There were, in addition, the $1,735,000,000 relief appropriation bill, on which the senate, feeling the prod of the administration leadership, was hard at work, and several appropriation bills, including that for the agriculture department and farm benefit payments.

With only three days left to go, the Democratic high command resorted to extraordinary measures: the senate was called into session an hour earlier than usual—which turned out to be a futile gesture—and met far into the evening.

Administration leaders took surprise action to avoid a threatened Republican filibuster in the house against the money bill. Anxious to maintain the advantages won in the senate, Republican leaders were talking openly of delaying action until after Friday, by keeping the measure from going to conference. The leadership went at once to the rules committee and obtained a rule which virtually assured that the legislation would be sent to conference first thing tomorrow.

McCarran Speechless

In his press conference statement at Hyde Park, Mr. Roosevelt said that depriving the administration of the devaluation power would give control of foreign exchange to the senate.

The senate began debate on the $1,735,000,000 relief appropriation bill, and administration leaders hoped that the measure could be sent to the White House before current funds expire at midnight Friday.

The treasury cut the price on foreign silver from 43 to 40 cents an ounce in a move intended to avoid a heavy influx of the metal before treasury buying ceases altogether. The senate voted Monday to end purchases of foreign silver. The house has not yet occurred in the senate action.

Senator Russell (D-Ga.) said he expected the senate and house to adjust differences in the $1-200,000,000 farm bill in time to send it to President Roosevelt by Friday midnight, when the fiscal year expires.

The house debated the administration neutrality bill. Before it reached the floor, some controversial points were eliminated, leaving as the major item the repealer of the present arms embargo.

Isador Lubin, commissioner of labor statistics, told the federal monopoly committee that relatively few homes constructed last year were in the $2,000 to $4,000 price class which city residents could afford to pay. He indicated there was a pressing need for construction of such lower cost homes.

Windsors Will Come Home This Autumn, Newspaper Claims

London, June 27 (AP)—An autumn homecoming for the Duke of Windsor and his American-born duchess was confidently predicted tonight in large black type by the Evening Standard.

For two and a half years now its owner, Lord Beaverbrook, has let scarcely a week go by without demanding that former King Edward VIII come back and bring his wife.

The standard devoted the entire top half of its front page to the story that the Duke of Windsor, having abandoned his demand that his duchess be made "her royal highness—the title given royal duchesses—would take up residence with her here in October.

The Standard also said it was probable the Windsors would visit the United States next year.

In Paris, where the Windsors were packing up for a trip to the Mediterranean and a summer of Riviera fun, the duke's spokesman was carefully non-committal.

The duke and duchess have not yet made their plans for the autumn," he said.

For a long time it has been open season on guessing when the Windsors would return to England. Nevertheless, there was good reason to believe Lord Beaverbrook might have the inside track.

He has long been a warm friend and even warmer champion of the former king.

Objections Removed There was reported to be less objection in influential British quarters to the duke's return to England now that King George has so firmly established his own popularity through his American tour.

For the same reason it was believed a visit by the Windsors to the United States would arouse less opposition here now than when the trip was planned last year.

If the Standard's information is correct that the duke has decided not to insist on the title of "royal highness" for the duchess, a further obstacle to his return apparently has been removed. It has long been considered improbable that the duke would return until his wife were given the same rank as that accorded wives of other royal dukes.

This was reported to have been one of the questions discussed when Prime Minister Chamberlain and Foreign Minister Lord Halifax visited the duke in Paris last winter, during British-French ministerial conferences.

It is known that Fort Belvedere, a picture-book castle in the Lush country near Windsor, has been waiting for the former King Edward VIII since he left that December night in 1936 just after his abdication. It has been empty all this time except for a caretaker, who never leaves the grounds. Obviously it has been saved for "the day."

Edward always has said he would be ready if England needed him. He has been publicly concerned of late about the threat of war and has pleaded for peace with men who now rule the world.

Those who know his ways said tonight it might well be that he feels he must in time of danger be on English soil and at England's service, united with his countrymen.

Son of President Escapes Film Fire Hollywood, June 27 (AP)—James Roosevelt, son of the president, and Sam Goldwyn, movie producer with whom he is associated, fled unharmed from a projection room today after a reel of film exploded.

The resulting fire ignited a velvet drape and wrecked the projection machine. Roosevelt and Goldwyn were viewing scenes from a forthcoming picture.

"Potlatch" was the word applied by Senator Vandenberg (R-Mich.) to the president's statement. Declaring the president "has petulantly given Republicans a monopoly of the credit" for terminating the devaluation power, Vandenberg, whom the president mentioned by name, told reporters "many distinguished Democrats" voted likewise.

"I hope," Vandenberg said, "that his annoyance at the constructive action of the legislative branch will not produce a congressional packing bill."

"What I think of the president's statement I'd not care to express," said Senator McCarran (D-Nev.).

Gets Late Start Trying to get started on the relief bill, the senate ran first of all into three delays—it obtained a quorum only after its sergeant-at-arms had rounded up absentees, and then found the appropriations committee had not yet finished work on the measure.

In mid-afternoon the committee reported it, but Senator Johnson (R-Calif.) objected to debating the measure until printed copies were available, and the senate had to wait until the government printing office could produce them. It was nearly five o'clock when debate started.

As reported, the measure lies much closer to the administration's desires than the bill passed by the house, for the committee threw out such house provisions as a $125,000,000 contribution from the WPA to the PWA, the house's ban on the continuance of the federal theatre, and a House stipulation that WPA be administered by a three-man board, instead of the present one-man administrator.

BY DOUGLAS B. CORNELL Hyde Park, N. Y., June 27 (AP)—President Roosevelt said today it would undermine national defense and return control over money to Wall Street and international bankers if it refused to continue his power to devalue the dollar.

He pictured for reporters a possible return to the times when he said international currencies were jumping up and down like a Jack-in-the-box, the internal economies of all nations were disrupted and only speculators and international bankers were the beneficiaries.

The devaluation power will expire at midnight Friday unless Congress drives a monetary bill to speedy final enactment. A senate vote yesterday to strip from the measure a section extending the devaluation authority raised doubts over the possibility of that action.

Ready for Reporters Mr. Roosevelt anticipated a request for comment on that vote at his press conference. He was ready.

The loss of his power to reduce the gold content of the dollar again would strike a definite blow at national defense, he said, since a nation was weakened if its foreign trade was weakened.

Administration officials have contended that the fact that the United States could meet devaluation other nations from entertaining any idea of tampering with their currencies to obtain a competitive advantage in foreign trade.

More than the defense angle, the president stressed the prospects that control over money might be taken from the treasury and handed over to Wall Street, speculators and international bankers.

For five and one-half years, he said, we have had the right to devalue the dollar from 69 to 60 per cent of its former gold content. We haven't used it, he said, and we have had no intention of using it unless other principal nations started taking cracks at us as they did in 1930 and 1931—when it took us three years to recover.

As long as we have the right to devalue another 18 per cent, he continued, the chances are ten to one we won't have to use it.

Chance for Speculation Taking away that right, he said, meant a possible return to conditions that existed in 1930 and 1931—giving international speculators an opportunity to sell the pound short this month, the franc next month and the belga the month following.

It would restore to the private bankers in New York and London, Mr. Roosevelt declared, the only check on these speculative operations, and therefore return to Wall Street the same control it had over foreign exchange up to 1933.

The chief executive said the senate vote was by no means final. He said, however, he had not been in touch with Washington about the monetary bill which also could continue the treasury's $2,000,000,000 stabilization fund—and that no moves were contemplated other than an attempt to work out some sort of legislation in a senate-house conference committee.

The house already has passed the monetary bill. It declined to strip the president of his devaluation power and its representatives at the conference committee will be in a position to fight the senate amendment.

Reads Off Names Mr. Roosevelt skipped briefly over another senate amendment—to boost to 77.57 cents the present treasury price of $64.64 cents an ounce for newly-mined domestic silver. With a chuckle, he remarked it was amusing that certain senators had voted for a fixed price subsidy for silver and said he took it the same gentlemen would vote for a fixed price, government-guaranteed, for cotton, wheat, pigs and cattle.

Scratching his head, he looked at the vote in a newspaper and read off the names of Senators Vandenberg (R-Mich.), Lodge (R-Mass.), White (R-Maine), Austin (R-Vt.), Barbour (R-N.J.), Danaher (R-Conn.), Davis (R-Pa.) and Hale (R-Maine).

A reporter recalled that some Democrats also had supported the amendment. Yes, the president replied, but these Republicans were supposed to be against free coinage of silver. Again he chuckled.

England To Use Planes To Weld British Empire

BY DEVON FRANCIS Associated Press Aviation Editor London, June 27.—A chubby, crisp-spoken government officer, son of a Wesleyan minister, told today of Britain's scheme to make the airplane, currently Europe's most talked-of instrument of re-arming, a means to bind closer together the English-speaking world.

To Sir Kingsley Wood, air minister, the man who created the one-shilling telephone call to any part of the British Isles, falls the job of spending more than $1,000,000,000 a year on aviation.

But curiously enough he seems more concerned with the commercial aspects of flying than with the military. In the house of commons he has referred to peacetime use of manmade wings as the "proper" use.

Planes Being Built Already constructed are flying boats of 23,000 pounds. Under construction are a land plane of 71,000 and a smaller one of 43,000, all designed for use on routes to help weld the Empire and English-speaking peoples.

The world's greatest empire plans to belt the world with airlines in the next two years. Government machinery already is in motion.

Empire planes now fly routes totaling 70,000 miles. They link the southernmost tips of Africa and Australia with London. They serve intra-Dominion traffic. Projected are North and South Atlantic lines, a trans-Pacific line from Vancouver, B. C., to Auckland, New Zealand, and a route curving southward around the west coast of Africa supplementing the inland route.

By fall an Australia to New Zealand air service will be in operation.

Training Aviators As the air minister talked, new thousands of Britain's young men were learning to fly, to service planes in a drive for what the British call "national service."

But Sir Kingsley's talk was of commercial aviation serving men "in a way undreamed of in any period of history."

"We today are building up a great system of air communications," he said, "which will bind closer together the different parts of the English-speaking world."

Unlike flying in the United States, aviation in Europe endures through a considerable amount of government financial investment.

Britain is no exception. This government is consolidating the interests of its two major airlines, Imperial Airways and British Airways, to effect a stronger front for the drive now under way.

Jesse Jones' hat still fits after the president promoted him from the RFC to head the Federal Loan Agency. Here's Jesse leaving the White House with a double grip on his headpiece.

Taking it easy on a big job, John Carmody, head of the Rural Electrification Administration, relaxes this way after being named to head the new Federal Works Agency.

Named to Lend $3,860,000,000

Chance for Speculation Taking away that right, he said, meant a possible return to conditions that existed in 1930 and 1931—giving international speculators an opportunity to sell the pound short this month, the franc next month and the belga the month following.

A reporter recalled that some Democrats also had supported the amendment. Yes, the president replied, but these Republicans were supposed to be against free coinage of silver. Again he chuckled.

England To Use Planes To Weld British Empire

BY DEVON FRANCIS Associated Press Aviation Editor London, June 27.—A chubby, crisp-spoken government officer, son of a Wesleyan minister, told today of Britain's scheme to make the airplane, currently Europe's most talked-of instrument of re-arming, a means to bind closer together the English-speaking world.

To Sir Kingsley Wood, air minister, the man who created the one-shilling telephone call to any part of the British Isles, falls the job of spending more than $1,000,000,000 a year on aviation.

But curiously enough he seems more concerned with the commercial aspects of flying than with the military. In the house of commons he has referred to peacetime use of manmade wings as the "proper" use.

Planes Being Built Already constructed are flying boats of 23,000 pounds. Under construction are a land plane of 71,000 and a smaller one of 43,000, all designed for use on routes to help weld the Empire and English-speaking peoples.

The world's greatest empire plans to belt the world with airlines in the next two years. Government machinery already is in motion.

Empire planes now fly routes totaling 70,000 miles. They link the southernmost tips of Africa and Australia with London. They serve intra-Dominion traffic. Projected are North and South Atlantic lines, a trans-Pacific line from Vancouver, B. C., to Auckland, New Zealand, and a route curving southward around the west coast of Africa supplementing the inland route.

By fall an Australia to New Zealand air service will be in operation.

Training Aviators As the air minister talked, new thousands of Britain's young men were learning to fly, to service planes in a drive for what the British call "national service."

But Sir Kingsley's talk was of commercial aviation serving men "in a way undreamed of in any period of history."

"We today are building up a great system of air communications," he said, "which will bind closer together the different parts of the English-speaking world."

Unlike flying in the United States, aviation in Europe endures through a considerable amount of government financial investment.

MICHIGAN CITY PRISON BREAK SCHEME FAILS

lock and then returned. Guards outside were instructed to hoist quietly ladders to two outside windows in Week's office. Two squads inside crept to windows along side the door leading into the office. These windows are equipped with bullet-proof glass.

Dowd went back to the door and resumed his parley. At a pre-arranged signal, the squads at the outside and inside windows smashed the glass, and a volley of shots rang out. The three ring leaders were dropped before they could harm their captives.

Mrs. Joiner was shot in the shoulder. Hunt received a flesh wound in the thigh and Edgar Wetzell, the warden's secretary, was hit by a ricocheting bullet and wounded in the leg.

Two Life Termers The four wounded prisoners were taken into the prison hospital. Mrs. Joiner and Wetzell were taken to St. Anthony's hospital in Michigan City.

The three ring leaders suffered critical wounds, prison doctors said.

Two of the prisoners involved are life termers. Sweet was sentenced from Parke county in 1935 to life for kidnaping, and Skuswich, from St. Joseph county in 1936 to two life terms for murder as an accessory before and after murder. Niverson was sentenced from Huntington county in 1936 to 10 to 25 years for robbery.

Hunt was sentenced from St. Joseph county to 10 years for armed robbery.

Victory Is Claimed Over Soviet Airmen By Japanese Forces

Tokyo, June 27 (AP)—A sweeping victory over Soviet Russian air forces in Outer Mongolia was reported tonight in Japanese dispatches which said 120 enemy airplanes were destroyed in two spectacular battles near the Manchoukuo frontier.

Advices from Hanking, capital of Japanese-dominated Manchoukuo, told for the first time of a Japanese aerial invasion either of Soviet Siberia or of Russian-dominated Mongolian territory in the long series of conflicts between Russia and Japan in the Far East.

They did not disclose the strength of the Japanese forces or their losses.

Since May 20 Japanese have reported the destruction of 251 Soviet-Mongolian warplanes in fighting along the troubled frontier.

The Hanking dispatches reported the greatest Japanese triumph today when, they said, 104 planes were shot down or destroyed on the ground in a raid by a Japanese air armada on a Mongolian base at Tamsk (Tamskum), 62 miles south of Lake Bor on the Outer Mongolia-Manchoukuo border.

He made over his department as postmaster general and achieved a brilliant record as minister of public health.

Now facing his biggest job, he hopes to speed the public between London and Australia in no much longer "than it took our forefathers a little more than a century ago to travel from London to Edinburgh."

Freighter Is Freed From Rocky Ledge

ETTORE FIGHT CALLED A FAKE

California Commission Orders Purse of $1000 Seized

Los Angeles, June 27 (AP)—Offered details of a "fixed fight" from all quarters, the California athletic commission decided Al Ettore, Philadelphia heavyweight, turned in a "sham exhibition" in losing to Maxie Rosenbloom and ordered his $1,000 purse seized and his boxing license revoked.

Ettore, who once stood up for five rounds against Joe Louis' heaviest blows, went out in the third round under Slapsie Maxie's slapping tactics.

The rotund Philadelphian denied to the commission he had been "approached by anyone" in connection with the match and blamed his condition on "the climate."

"I guess it was the climate," he said. "That and Maxie's hitting."

Rosenbloom was exonerated and insisted his slaps hurt worse than it might appear. He admitted, however, that Ettore was "I knew he was kind of well, that he'd taken a lot of punching in his day. I knew that, also, I wouldn't have taken him," he said.

Willie Ritchie, chief inspector of the commission, stirred up the investigation and declared, in his opinion, the affair was "very peculiar." None of the Rosenbloom blows carried much weight with him, he said, adding that his ringside guest, ex-fewerweight champion Johnny Kilbane, had the same reaction.

Commissioner Everett Sanders led in questioning the various witnesses, including Referee Charlie Randolph, who said he thought the last blow of the bout was "a closed glove hard to the jaw." Twice in the second round he kicked away a towel tossed from Ettore's corner into the ring, each time deciding Ettore had not been hurt.

State Labor Board Setting Stage For Peace In Industry

Lansing, June 27 (AP)—The state's new labor relations board, through its chairman, Arthur E. Raab of Flint, set the stage tonight for a "trail-blazing" drive for industrial peace.

Raab, who came here yesterday to oil the mediation machinery created by the 1939 legislature, deferred conferences with disputants in three controversies that provided the new board with its first test. He said he would go to Detroit tomorrow for conversations with spokesmen for the CIO and General Motors, threatened with a strike of its Tool & Die-Makers.

The chairman, whose appointment by Governor Dickinson has not yet received senate confirmation, remained here today to confer with Attorney General Thomas

Japanese Accused Of Trying To Bribe Agents At Detroit

Detroit, June 27 (AP)—U. S. immigration officials held Sato-hata Takahashi, 64-year-old Japanese, in custody today while they investigated charges that he attempted to bribe immigration agents who arrested him for entering the United States after having been deported to Japan.

Records show that Takahashi was deported in 1934 after department of justice agents accused him of plotting a campaign to overthrow the white race.

Immigration Inspector Dorsey Phillips said the Japanese misrepresented himself as a Canadian citizen when he re-entered this country last January.

Agents for the immigration department said Takahashi offered them $2,000 for his release shortly after he was arrested in his Detroit home.

At the time of his previous arrest, police and federal agents said Takahashi was forming an organization to overthrow the Caucasian race by a union of the yellow, black and red races. At that time they estimated he had recruited 10,000 followers in Detroit, Pontiac, Mt. Clemens and Flint.

Read. Read assigned an assistant to help with the legal details involved in organizing the new boards and in setting up procedures that will conform with the labor relations act.

Counterfeiter Says He Learned Trade In Federal Prison

Detroit, June 27 (AP)—Harold E. Foster, who told secret service agents that he learned about metals and making counterfeit coins by studying books in Leavenworth penitentiary, pleaded guilty today to a charge of possessing counterfeit quarters and half dollars when arraigned before United States Commissioner J. Stanley Hurd.

He was ordered held under $5,000 bond to await grand jury action. Foster said he served a seven-year term for auto theft at Leavenworth and was paroled last February 7.

Working Too Fast, Detroit Tells WPA

Detroit, June 27 (AP)—The city council wishes WPA workers wouldn't work so fast.

Detroit must contribute about $5,000,000 towards $79,000,000 worth of street paving projects planned for Detroit WPA workers during the 12 months beginning July 1. Unfortunately, only $1,400,000 is available at this time.

Council President Edward Jeffries, Jr., expressed the hope that WPA workers "would take it easy" until the city works out a plan for voluntary and forced assessments to raise the remainder of the money.

Michigan In Washington

By Esther Van Wagoner Tufty
Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg dismisses the President's new long-term lending program as "pump-priming thinly disguised".

Veteran Earl C. Michener, Adrian Republican, at least prefers this variety of pump-priming, which raises money by private investments in government secured bonds to be spent solely for self-liquidating projects. He still stoutly believes however that a permanent recovery must come from private investment, free from any connection with the Federal government.

The 47 millionth Ford rolled up in front of the capitol one day recently and most of the members of the Michigan delegation, including Senators Vandenberg and Brown, gathered around to see it. Clarence McLeod, Detroit Republican, was the generalissimo and had tipped off the cameramen.

Returning to the House, George A. Dondero, Royal Oak Republican, made an impromptu Henry Ford tribute that his colleagues said ought to move the Detroit automobile magnate to present him with the 27,000,001th Ford.

In fact he said, "For more than a quarter of a century Henry Ford led the world in the payment of high wages to the laboring man. Because of his mechanical genius he made it possible for the common man to have and enjoy one of the greatest conveniences of our age, the automobile."

"Ford does not need to make cars for bread—the makes Fords to give men work," said Dondero, who later said someone had told him the Federal Trade Commission reported that for a period of 10 years Ford had made but $1 per car.

One indication that the presidential candidacy of Senator Vandenberg is on the ascend is the all-of-a-kind interest in his pet Profit-Sharing Plan.

The hearing on the subject petered out. The committee report was delayed by Chairman Herring of Iowa. No one seemed to care whether it was a good idea or not to reconcile differences between employer and employee by splitting the profits.

Now the report is out of committee (without the signature of Democrat Johnson of Colorado) and the newspapers are full of the pet plan "to save the capitalist system" of the Maybe-President.

A very happy Polish husband, Edmund Ruzanski, of River Rouge, Michigan, dropped into my office the other day. For four years this Ford employee has been entangled in international red tape trying to get to America the bride he left behind him in Russia, where he worked for a short length of time.

"Isn't it grand she's coming to me?" asked the elated man, displaying an approval from the People's Commissar of a renouncement of citizenship for his wife, Tamara.

And the news came just in time, for the discouraged and disgruntled Ruzanski was ready to picket the Russian exhibit at the

ONE YEAR TO GO PRESIDENTIAL POSSIBILITIES

No. 5—Arthur H. Vandenberg

Industrious Senator Vandenberg—seldom absent from Senate.

BY BRUCE CATTION
Escanaba Daily Press Washington Correspondent
Three months ago Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg of Michigan was hardly so much as mentioned as a presidential possibility.

Today he is one of the top contenders for the Republican nomination. This is partly because he is politically astute, and partly because he has made an excellent record in his job.

Few senators are more industrious. He seldom misses a Senate session or a committee hearing. Usually sits with crossed legs, one arm over the back of his chair chewing gum—but paying close attention, always. He is good at the rough and tumble interchange of Senate debate. His colleagues like him.

Vandenberg was the first man to criticize the huge revolving fund which the social security act would have set up. It looked like bad business politically to criticize it, at the time; now Congress agrees with him and is cutting the fund down. Vandenberg led the fight that beat the Florida ship canal project. He is one of the most energetic economy advocates in the Senate.

A former Michigan newspaper publisher, he has been in the Senate since 1928. He is 55 and has been active in Republican politics since his youth.

He pulled the canniest political coup of the year by announcing that the next president ought to pledge himself to one term, since he will have to do many unpopular things which a man seeking re-election would be loath to do. That announcement, plus a dawning realization that his Senate record is first-rate, has focused new attention on him as a possible nominee.

HIS ASSETS: Political shrewdness, along with considerable native ability; geographical availability; the probability that economy will be a popular issue in 1940; a consistent record in public office.

HIS LIABILITIES: A speaking voice which doesn't "radio" well; the fact that he has committed himself on many roll-calls; his solid conservatism (which, of course, will be an asset if the "swing to the right" continues).

HIS CHANCES: As of today, excellent.

Donal Peterson, 1216 First avenue south, submitted to an operation for removal of tonsils, Tuesday morning at St. Francis hospital.

Mrs. Amelia Rowan, 421 South 8th street, was admitted for treatment.

Mrs. Tom Swift, 213 South 9th street, is receiving treatment.

Jean Rademacher of the hospital office staff, submitted to an operation for removal of tonsils.

World's Fair.
Most ingenious has he been. He interested Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg, a member of the Senate Foreign Relations committee, in his case. Michigan Democrats and Republicans alike signed a petition to the Soviet government for radio actors in Detroit to stage a play "Long Parting" to tell his story over a broadcast that could be picked up in Russia. He sent his wife endless newspaper clippings about his plight, which he knew would fall into the hands of Soviet officials. He was talked out of picketing the Soviet embassy here by some of the members of congress interested in his case. A World War veteran, he flooded the State department with letters from his buddies in various legion posts.

While here in Washington he was summoned to the State department and cautioned not to let his wife talk too much against the Soviet government when she arrives. Ruzanski made no promises to the State department. But he made onto his bride—that when she returns he will welcome her with a brand new Ford.

Educator George A. Dondero, Royal Oak congressman, is annoyed with the terminology of modern writers who loosely use such phrases as "our democratic form of government" when precisely they mean "our republican form of government".

The Royal Oak Republican is inclined to think that this growing habit started with the World War sophistry—"to save the world for democracy".

Strictly speaking, "democracy" implies the rule of the people not their representatives.

Wardens to Change

HOPES expressed in some quarters that wardens and other prison officials would be kept under the protection of the civil service have faded with the decision of the state corrections commission to remove 140 employees from the merit system.

There is no denying that the state's penal system could be improved if persons of ability and special training in penology were assured security in their positions. But always in the past the administrative posts have been classified as political spoils to be handed around to vote getters at each change of administration.

Warden Marvin L. Coon, formerly of Escanaba, has received praise for his work at the state's branch prison in Marquette, and an effort has been made by his many friends to have the Republican administration retain his services. However, Warden Coon was appointed during the previous Democratic administration and replaced a Republican appointee, James Corgan, who also had a splendid record as warden of that institution. Therefore, he is not likely to receive any more consideration than that accorded Mr. Corgan.

Until a real civil service system is installed in Michigan there is not much hope of keeping state jobs out of the hands of the spoilsmen. The 1937 legislature adopted a merit system bill, which had obvious defects, but the 1939 legislature made a worst job of it in their determined attempt to "improve" the set-up.

Two Common Fallacies

NOW that every man is his own economist, and even the dumbest of us never hesitates a minute to work out his own particular remedy for our economic ills, it might be just as well to note two very common fallacies which were badly bounded around recently.

One: that wage-earners are gradually getting a smaller and smaller share of the national income as great fortunes pile up. Two: That advertising so greatly increases the cost of goods that things would be cheaper if they were not advertised.

A great many people assume the truth of one or the other of these hypotheses without worrying much about whether they are true or not. But both questions have been carefully studied recently, and the results of the studies are interesting.

First, Secretary of Commerce Harry Hopkins had a thorough study made of where the national income went in 1938. And this was the conclusion: that the wage-earners' share was the greatest of any year since any calculation began to be made of the national income.

Dividends, that is, the reward of invested capital, fell off one-third from 1937. Wages paid to employees in 1938 fell off 7 per cent from 1937, due more to reduced employment than to reductions in pay. But the share of the wage-earners reached a new all-time high of 67.3 per cent. In short, the entire national income was down 18 billions from the 1929 peak, though it has been raised 60 per cent from the depression low. But of that reduced income, the wage-earner got a bigger share than ever before.

Second, the Twentieth Century Fund, which has been studying distribution problems, found that the cost of advertising is far less than many have supposed. The cost actually is from a small fraction of 1 per cent to a maximum of about 18 per cent. On many widely-advertised products it was infinitesimal, and the average for all goods was set at less than 3 per cent of the cost of the final purchaser. The cost, for instance, in cigarettes selling at 14 cents was just over a half cent a package. A widely advertised soft drink put less than 16-100ths of a cent's worth of advertising into each five-cent glass. A standard breakfast food paid 3-100ths of a cent for a 15-cent package.

Obviously, when the wider distribution, with consequent lower production costs is balanced against such small percentage expenditures as these, a good argument could be made that advertising had actually reduced the cost to the final consumer.

That's one handicap of an amateur economist. We so often start off from the wrong information that it's no wonder if we sometimes wind up behind some eight-ball on the pool table of economic theory.

Should Be Protected

AMONG the outstanding attractions at Yellowstone national park, judging from the numerous times their pictures appear in the newspapers and magazines, are the tame bears, whose antics amuse many tourists daily.

Of greater interest, however, are wild bears, of which there are still some to be seen in the Upper Peninsula. Tourists traveling through the Copper Country get a thrill out of watching these brutes foraging for food near the Keweenaw county golf course, and Delta county folks are showing much interest in a group that may be seen each evening in the vicinity of the Morman Creek CCC camp. Since the legislature at its recent session revised the game laws to permit killing of bears throughout the year, a campaign has been launched in the Copper Country to induce the conservation commission to place the animals in that region on the protected list.

Dead bears are not worth much to anyone, but alive they constitute a tourist attraction of inestimable value. City folks come up to the Upper Peninsula because they appreciate some of its wilderness aspects, and the presence of bears is something that fits well into this scheme.

County May Help

VIEW of the fact that the usual state aid will not be forthcoming this year, the Delta county board of supervisors is giving serious consideration to a request for an appropriation to help finance the state and upper peninsula conventions of the American Legion to be held Aug. 19 to 22.

The board of supervisors long has been committed to a policy of providing funds for tourist advertising, and here is an opportunity to help a project that definitely will bring many visitors, who will spend money in Delta county communities. Several thousand persons will be attracted here for the conventions, and hotel and cottage accommodations in Escanaba, Gladstone and neighboring communities will be taxed to the limit.

If the Legion visitors are well entertained in this country it is quite likely some will return in later years to spend their vacations in this section. The investment that will be made to finance this huge convention is certain to bring good dividends to the local communities.

Has Ample Resources

THE trade program of the United States is based, fundamentally, on the truth that if individual ability and skill can be released generally throughout the world, and if men everywhere can more freely seek opportunity to make and exchange, to their mutual advantage, their products and services, a continuing vista of prosperity is possible."

Governmental action can open opportunities and remove artificial hindrances. When this is done, the vision and energy of men can safely be relied upon to take advantage of these opportunities," continued the Secretary. "This earth has ample resources for its inhabitants if they are enabled to work freely; but these are of little use if the reasonable flow of economic life is obstructed."

These are brave words and true. When the rest of the world can see and understand them, the first line obstruction to better times will have been conquered. The barriers at the root of the world's major ills are at bottom economic and not political. It is in the nature of things that we shall all be selfish at heart,—but there are two kinds of selfishness,—blind, and enlightened. America offers a standing invitation to all the world to join its program, and we can be justly proud of our contribution to world affairs.

Until human being understand that economic troubles always precede and are the foundation of political disorder, there never will be assured peace, confidence and progress among the peoples of the earth. The job is one of education, of thinking things out, and it would be far easier if the millions of common people in every country would do their own thinking instead of letting someone else do it for them,—often at the loss of intellectual freedom and the domination of whole nations by dictatorships and cliques.

FACT-FINDING CRUISERS (Detroit News) From all points of view, the decision of the Board of Commerce to make its annual cruise a fact-finding mission with regard to the Straits of Mackinac is to be commended.

There are sound arguments both for and against the bridge. But there can be no argument whatever against treating the issue as one that vitally concerns the interest of the entire state.

So long as the two parts of Michigan are parted by water, and so long as there is the prospect that the general welfare of both peninsulas would be bettered by bringing them into a closer relationship each to the other, the situation at the Straits of Mackinac will concern us all.

We need a thoroughly informed public opinion on the bridge issue. It is encouraging to note the trend in that direction.

THE BUDGET ISSUE (Iron Mountain News) The best the governor could do in trimming the budget under the provision of the law that permits him to veto items was $500,000. Of this $500,000, $40,000 is accounted for by elision of an appropriation for use by the conservation commission for the purchase of land for state parks.

As matters stand, the budget is out of balance by approximately the difference between the $38,250,000 for school aid provided by the conference bill the senate refused to accept and the $43,000,000 school aid now provided under the continuing clause of the school aid bill of 1937.

Matters may stand there, but the governor does not propose that they shall so stand indefinitely. Unless the legislature brings the appropriations into the range of the estimated income at the final adjournment session June 28-29, he serves notice that he will call special sessions until a balanced budget has been achieved. Furthermore, he asserts, he will not provide in the calls for consideration of new taxes, which means that he will expect the legislature to put the budget into balance by school aid legislation approximately the same as that proposed in the

Washington, D. C.—In these days when citizens throughout the world are being heavily taxed, there is little wonder that the Principality of Monaco is more often thought of as a tax-free land than as the location of the world's most famous gambling place. That fame now, however, belongs to history, for Monte Carlo—Monaco's chief city—has seen its heyday.

Freedom from taxation arises from the circumstance that a company obtained the gambling concession from the reigning Prince, paying large enough sums into the coffers of the Principality to make taxation unnecessary. Periodically, the concession has been renewed and its terms adjusted. The last revision expires in 1947 so, until then at least, there will be freedom from taxes. But there is a catch in this arrangement in that Monegasques themselves are not permitted to play.

Originally Monaco was the private property of the great Genoese family of Grimaldi and collateral descendants still occupy the throne. Vicissitudes have been many. The French Revolution resulted in annexation by France but, by the Treaty of 1814, following Waterloo, the Principality was restored to the family.

Eight square miles in area, and with more than two miles of coastline touching the bluest of seas, Monaco is politically an artificial state. Chance gave it riches, but chance reversed its fortunes. Bigger gaming activities elsewhere and other amusements have robbed Monte Carlo not only of its profits but also of most of its lure. Moving picture palaces in scores of cities are now more ornate than the gilded rooms of Monte Carlo's famous casino.

Long before the depression broke the bank which no player had conquered, Monaco had come to offer such variety of amusements that prosperity will doubtless return. On the golf courses players can drive toward the snowy summits of the Maritime Alps. On tennis courts down between the mountains and the rock peninsula, famous players stimulate an emulation which makes every club a favorite place. Into the port of Hercules come the spottiest yachts of many nations.

Few visitors to Monte Carlo have known whether they were in the tiny principality or in France, for it is only a step from tax-free Monaco into France, and the latter does nothing to emphasize the transition, for it does not wish to avoid the favorable publicity which Monaco gets.

But Monaco is not a place where only frivolity and pleasure-seeking are paramount. Whatever may be said about the little country, and about Monte Carlo, the best of all good company congregates there. Here members of the aristocracy of intellect come together. From all parts of the world come great leaders in thought, its richness of history, interest in science, and its effort toward peace of the world mark the little country as one willing to do its share for mankind's advancement.

Anthropology and mythology rather than history supply the earliest beginnings of Monaco and its people. Recorded history of the place does not go so far back. Before the advent of the Gaul a still older race peopled the land stretching from the mouth of the Rhine to the further limits of the Etruria. They were a much lower race, small of stature but strong, active and brave. Not much is known of them, for they left neither monuments nor literature. There is, however, evidence that they survived many invasions, notably that of the Phoenician fleets. The overcoming of this resistance has been regarded by some as having given rise to the many legends of the locality which have served as fragments of history. Such myths are often more important than the bare facts of history.

HISTORIC BACKGROUND—Under the Caesars, Monaco became an important place, and Roman jewelry found there in recent years shows that it was inhabited by influential and wealthy Romans. A collection of this jewelry may be seen in Monaco's notable museum. It is said to be one of the most interesting of its kind in the world.

Monaco points with pride to great men and events of its history. For example the claim is made that Christianity was first preached in the Maritime Alps by Barnabas, fellow-laborer with Paul. It is true that history cannot prove this as a fact, but the story has been told so long that it is accepted as a fact, and while a critical word regards Monte Carlo as a wicked place, there is local pride in feeling that on the soil of Monaco some of the world's first Christian missionary work was started.

conference bill, and by other revisions of appropriations. Another attempt between the house and senate leaders to reach an agreement on school aid came to an end without result this week, though progress was reported. Another powwow is proposed for next week. The differences between the house and senate contingents are by no means confined to the amount of the appropriation. The members representing the large cities stand out for the continued application of the 1937 law, in part because its provisions for distribution of the school aid are more favorable to their constituencies than those in the conference bill the senate refused to accept.

The probable outcome is agreement on compromise before the session for final adjournment. The legislators have no appetite for a special session, or a series of such sessions, in which this controversial issue would be the principal business. They must realize that unless they go some way toward meeting the governor's views this is what they will have to count on.

Manchester, England, telegraph boys have given up wearing leggings. Ah, yes, this is the age of speed.

Paris—Plans were completed by the council of four to sign the peace treaty at 3 p. m. Saturday. President Wilson received the American newspaper men this afternoon and said his good byes to them.

A telegram received yesterday from Major George B. Norton, former city editor of the Morning Press, announced his arrival in New York yesterday. He is well and happy and hopes to be among his local friends in a short time. Major Norton has spent a long period in the intelligence department of the 7th army corps abroad.

The fire department was called to the Mirror print shop about 5:30 last night by a small blaze on the roof of the press room. The blaze had started as a result of children throwing firecrackers on the roof. No damage was done.

Further assurance of early repairs being made on some of the worst streets in the city, was given today when the old street roller was towed out to the Chaffield Brass and Iron Works for repairs preparatory to being put into service.

East Fortune, Scotland—Repairs on the R-34 probably will be completed Tuesday and officers of the dirigible need only await orders to commence the Atlantic flight. It has been necessary to install a new motor and overhaul four others and do considerable work on the huge envelope.

PEACE—that magic word for which the world has been waiting and praying for four weary, blood-stained years; years filled with human suffering and human sacrifice never equalled in all history—peace, composed of heartaches and women's tears, was announced in Escanaba yesterday forenoon by a shrilling of whistles and a temporary din which bid fair for a time, to usher in another spontaneous celebration of gigantic proportions such as characterized the signing of the Armistice on Nov. 11, 1918.

New York Column

New York—The World's Fair is domesticating many of Manhattan's swains.

It long has been the common practice of young ladies, living apart from their families in New York, to live together in apartments.

And now the almost prohibitively high rates of hotels during the Fair have sent the male guests looking elsewhere, and so the only natural thing to do has been done.

The boys pool their money and, in two, three and four, rent an apartment. More than one apron that was meant for a feminine waist has been wrapped about a pair of masculine trousers since the Trylon, Perisphere and hotel rates all went up together.

Another Rogers Story—Simeon Karavaeff, who entertains at the Russian Kretchma and who came to this country in 1921 as Pavlova's dancing partner, was speaking the other evening of his great love for Will Rogers. Karavaeff worked in the Ziegfeld Follies with Rogers from 1922 to 1924.

"He once told me that if I ever needed help or money, I should get in touch with him," recalled the little fellow whom Rogers always called "Roosh."

Karavaeff never had to take advantage of Will's generosity until a few years ago, when he sent an urgent request for a loan. This is the message he received in reply:

"Mr. Rogers just missed your letter which came this morning. I will call it to his attention just as soon as he returns from his flight with Wiley Post."

NO GLAMOR IN WORLD OF FREAKS—The world of animal freaks differs from the rest of the outdoor show business. It is not the glamorous life of carnival men so often portrayed on the screen. It's hard work, day and night vigil with animals that can't make themselves understood. The man who operates a freak animal show must love it pretty much, otherwise he'd be driven crazy in a couple of weeks.

T. W. Kelley, who conducts the largest animal freak business in the world and is exhibiting one of 15 years in the business. He knows every freak from Maine to Timbuctoo, knows their idiosyncrasies and their driving power. He talks of them in terms of what they did in previous shows — at the Danbury Fair, Alabama State Fair or the Exposition Internationale in Brussels.

"T. W." or "Slim," as he's variously called by other outdoor showmen, is an expert veterinarian but does not practice his profession. The Humane Society maintains a watch over all animals exhibited in public and the animals are inspected by the society's veterinarians.

If agriculture and labor gang up on business, or labor and business gang up on agriculture, or agriculture and business gang up on labor, the whole country will suffer.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

BY PEARSON AND ALLEN

Washington—The King and Queen will soon receive a personal gift from President and Mrs. Roosevelt, in memory of the Washington visit. The gift consists of an album of radio transcriptions of the music which the royal pair heard at the White House, following the State dinner.

When that concert was over, the King asked his host if he could get recordings of what he had heard. Result was that all the singers — Lawrence Tibbett, Marian Anderson, Kate Smith, Alan Lomax, the Kentucky mountain singers and the Negro spiritualists—made recordings of three numbers each. And Tibbett and Kate Smith threw in a little personal greeting to the King and the President.

The album contains eighteen 12-inch phonograph records. Only four sets have been made—one for the King and Queen, one for President and Mrs. Roosevelt, one for Secretary Hull and one for British Ambassador Sir Ronald Lindsay.

The studio which prepared the transcriptions signed an agreement with the State Department not to release any of these records to the public. These are the only four sets that ever will be made.

Note—Vice President Garner, who did not attend the Marian Anderson concert at Lincoln Memorial, was forced to sit with the King and Queen and the Roosevelts in the first row during Miss Anderson's recital at the White House. He had rather a glum look on his face and did not applaud once, even though the Queen applauded vigorously.

—JAPAN MEANS WAR—The uncensored reports regarding Japanese insults to the British in China are worse than the newspaper accounts. The British don't want too much sensational news to get back to England, for fear of arousing the British public, but the real fact is that at least one British woman has been raped by Japanese soldiers, and many other insults have been perpetrated.

Reason for this news suppression is the obvious fact that the British cannot afford a war in the Far East while a war also is ready to break in Europe. And the Japanese have made it all too clear that they are ready for war. This fact was laid before British Ambassador Cragie by the Vice Minister of Foreign Affairs in Tokyo when the British first issued their threat to blockade Japan.

Ambassador Cragie was informed that such a blockade would draw from Japan an immediate declaration of war. The incident at Tientsin, Cragie was told, was a local matter, involving the wrath of the local Japanese commander against the British Consul General; while a blockade against Japan was a national matter, which would be resisted by the entire Japanese navy.

This differentiation, of course, was sheer poppycock, since the Japanese Government is behind the Tientsin fracas. But anyway, this threat, when cabled to London by Cragie, produced great consternation in the cabinet, and is the chief reason Britain delayed carrying out its threat.

—CIO-AFL DISPUTE—A secret row took place during the recent meeting of the AFL executive committee over the CIO-AFL peace terms.

The row resulted from a question asked by the CIO at the first meeting of the two negotiating committees. "Green says the AFL is ready to take back all the original unions that formed the CIO," said the CIO negotiators. "What does that mean? As they were then or are now?"

The question was of crucial importance since most of the unions had largely expanded their ranks. For example: The United Mine Workers now includes chemical workers, while the Amalgamated Clothing Workers has swallowed up most of the AFL's textile and laundry units.

The AFL delegation was unable to answer the question and asked for time to submit it to Green. A week later, the committee returned with an eight-page memorandum which, in effect, said neither yes nor no. The Lewis group refused to accept the answer and reiterated its demand. The subject was argued for several days and finally the AFL committee agreed on this compromise:

That the original CIO unions be taken back with their expanded membership and that after they had rejoined the AFL, the question of conflicting jurisdiction between the rival AFL and CIO unions would be arbitrated.

The CIO committee accepted the proposal—as well they might.

It meant a tremendous tactical victory for them; for once the AFL admitted the principle of rival jurisdiction, then the way was open for the CIO to demand that all its 41 unions be accepted into the AFL.

SWEDISH CITY IS DESCRIBED

St. Louis Visits Kin of Mrs. Chas. Jacobson in Gothenberg

BY STANLEY ST. LOUIS
Gothenberg, Sweden—Gothenberg, a Swedish city laid out by Dutch engineers in 1619, is the home of Mrs. G. Kronvall, sister, and O. Pearson, youngest brother of Mrs. Charles Jacobson, 313 N. 19th street, Escanaba, Mich.

Mr. Kronvall, who operated a tailor shop in London for five years and speaks excellent English acted as interpreter, when the writer called on both families.

Mr. Pearson is employed in the Gothenberg ship yards as plumbing inspector. Mr. Kronvall runs a tailor shop in the city.

Swedish people, returning to Sweden from the United States, discouraged by our depression, have, to a certain extent dispensed fables of American prosperity and opportunity. While visiting with the relatives of Mrs. Jacobson your correspondent gained the impression that in some ways they still considered America the best country to find profitable employment. If the beautiful, modern homes in which both families lived is any criterion of conditions in Sweden, they need look no further than their own country for prosperity and contentment.

The relatives of Mrs. Jacobson had many questions to ask about the American side of the family, and the United States in general. Their living in this land of short distances made the fact that Mrs. Jacobson had travelled over three thousand miles to visit with her children in California, seem incredible.

Describes Gothenberg
Entering Sweden by way of Gothenberg is a most appropriate introduction to this country which combines thriving industry and practicality with cleanliness and quaint beauty.

There is nothing elsewhere in Europe quite like the strange rocky archipelago of the outer harbor of Gothenberg. The entrance to the harbor is dotted by small, stone-topped islands known as skerries. These serve a very helpful purpose in helping to break the force of heavy seas when the North Sea is in an ugly mood.

In foggy weather they are treacherous and have sent more than one ship to a watery grave. In clear weather their distinctive charm viewed from the deck of an approaching ship, seems to form stepping stones to the hills on which the city is built.

As in other Scandinavian sea coast cities, the harbor is the very heart of Gothenberg. The whole panorama of the prosperous city of 270,000 persons seems centered in the bustling activity of its extensive harbor. One of the first observations of the visitor is the orderly way in which business in the harbor is carried on. Here one finds very little of the noise, dirt, confusion or other unpleasant conditions common to most seaports.

Clearing customs, usually a source of unending grief to travelers, is handled in Sweden with a swift efficiency and courtesy which makes it almost a pleasure.

Shipbuilding Main Industry
Shipbuilding is one of Gothenberg's chief industries. At present the yards are operating at top capacity. The back log of orders for new vessels guarantees busy yards for at least the next three years. There exists an actual shortage of manual and skilled labor. Domestic help is at a premium. Extensive industrial and residential construction is under way and the high wages paid labor is reflected in a correspondingly steep charge for rents and food.

The Dutch engineers, when laying out the city, did not forget to include their beloved canals which have since been well maintained by the Swedes. Although no longer used commercially they serve as a convenient highway for small power launches and enhance the loveliness of the city. In the past Stockholm has been the recipient of most of the Swedish tourist publicity. Gothenberg is rapidly forging to the front in this respect and each year the volume of her tourist traffic increases.

There is a permanent amusement park in Gothenberg which is a genuine credit to the city. The entrance fee is small and the free acts provided more than compensate for the price of admission. The visitor is bound to notice the absence of all loud noises, ballyhoo and sharp practices so common in places of this kind in the United States. At a carnival, a place where you would least expect to find it, the quiet good manners, dignity and reserve of the Swedish people can be noted. They seem to enjoy themselves wholeheartedly but in a manner entirely devoid of rowdiness.

A stranger in Sweden need only walk the pleasant streets of Gothenberg for a few hours to become impressed with the prosperous appearance, neat dress and confident bearing of the Swedish people. Their peaceful leisurely manner is in sharp contrast to the hurrying, worried looking people one meets in England. They seem a people, at peace with themselves and the rest of the world, confident of the future and the role they will play in it.

Yachting Popular Sport
The water variation level in Gothenberg harbor is a matter of inches only, and that, in Little Bay de Noc, is due to wind conditions. There is no problem of tide to be solved and this is a boon to commercial shipping and yachting. The Gothenberg yacht club is of the most modern design, the view of the sun setting over the harbor, as seen from the yacht club veranda, has been acclaimed by visitors from all over the world. Behind the harbor breakwater, pleasure boats of every size and description are moored.

The most popular type of small yacht to be found in Gothenberg waters is the famous clinker-built, Swedish double-ender. These ships, though small, are credited with being the most sea-worthy ever designed. The perilous storms which blow down the Swedish coast without warning necessitates cruising ships which can withstand heavy seas and high winds.

Most of the ships have all-varnished hulls which are preferred by the Swedish yachtsman to the painted types so common in the United States. Sailing boats outnumber power boats ten to one.

Resembles U. P. Climate
The climate of Gothenberg is similar to that of Northern Michigan. June, July and August are the only three months in which summer sports are really enjoyable. The people here, are, in one respect, more fortunate than the residents of the Upper Peninsula. The benefits of the midnight sun extend far enough south to insure, at this time of the year, daylight until 11 p. m. and dawn at 3 a. m.

In Gothenberg, nature has settled the vexing controversy of daylight saving time.

BIG HOLIDAY EXODUS SEEN

Michigan Parks Expect Many Visitors Over Next Week-End

Lansing — Next weekend will bring a four-day holiday to many people celebrating the Fourth of July and it will see hundreds of thousands pouring out of the cities seeking the out-of-door advantages of Michigan's 56 state parks.

The exodus will begin for most persons on Saturday, July 1, but many who got a head start on Friday will have already set up quarters in a tent, trailer or cabin by the end of the week.

Although in search of rural blessedness, the vacationing multitude will expect and require many of the comforts of home. For this reason facilities have been provided by officials of the park division of the department of conservation, in charge of operating state park areas.

Park authorities have announced they anticipate completion of wiring for electrical connections in 32 parks during the present season, the latest effort to give service of a standard demanded by the public. Radios, beauty equipment and household electrical outlets and life can go on much as it did at home.

New building construction, enlargement of sanitary facilities and setting up additional parking space are among the winter and spring jobs that have been completed by park superintendents. Along this line much work has been done in the Grand Haven and Holland parks, two big beach parks on Lake Michigan drawing nearly a million visitors in a season.

Routine safety measures guard against accidents and illnesses and treat the cases that do occur. Lifeguards and persons equipped to do first aid are stationed in the play areas. Water supply, traffic regulation, policing and sanitation get special care.

CARLSON PROMOTED
Ironwood — William S. Carlson, son of Mrs. Samuel Carlson, Sutherland avenue, has been promoted by the University of Minnesota from an assistant professorship to an associate professorship. It was announced recently by President Guy Stanton Ford of the University of Minnesota. Carlson, director of university high school training school, is well known here.

The exodus will begin for most persons on Saturday, July 1, but many who got a head start on Friday will have already set up quarters in a tent, trailer or cabin by the end of the week.

Although in search of rural blessedness, the vacationing multitude will expect and require many of the comforts of home. For this reason facilities have been provided by officials of the park division of the department of conservation, in charge of operating state park areas.

Park authorities have announced they anticipate completion of wiring for electrical connections in 32 parks during the present season, the latest effort to give service of a standard demanded by the public. Radios, beauty equipment and household electrical outlets and life can go on much as it did at home.

New building construction, enlargement of sanitary facilities and setting up additional parking space are among the winter and spring jobs that have been completed by park superintendents. Along this line much work has been done in the Grand Haven and Holland parks, two big beach parks on Lake Michigan drawing nearly a million visitors in a season.

Routine safety measures guard against accidents and illnesses and treat the cases that do occur. Lifeguards and persons equipped to do first aid are stationed in the play areas. Water supply, traffic regulation, policing and sanitation get special care.

Disabled Veterans To Hold Meeting

Menominee — The fourteenth annual convention of the Disabled American Veterans, department of Michigan, and the fifth annual convention of the women's auxiliary will open in Menominee Friday and continue thru Sunday.

Among the visitors expected to attend are Owen A. Galvin, national commander; Frank R. Klett, department commander, and Michael A. Whalen, department adjutant.

The first business session will not be held until Saturday morning, the veterans meeting at 9:30 in the Eagles hall and auxiliary members at the same hour in the Odd Fellows hall. Registration will take place all day Friday at Hotel Menominee and a banquet for the national commander will be held at 6 o'clock Friday evening at Betson's Beach Grill. The opening session will be at 7:30 Friday evening for each organization.

The Italian army is said to have been the first to employ aerial bombing as part of its offensive, its pilots showering enemy troops with crude, hand-thrown bombs while attacking Tripoli in 1912.

Wardens to Change

HOPES expressed in some quarters that wardens and other prison officials would be kept under the protection of the civil service have faded with the decision of the state corrections commission to remove 140 employees from the merit system.

There is no denying that the state's penal system could be improved if persons of ability and special training in penology were assured security in their positions.

But always in the past the administrative posts have been classified as political spoils to be handed around to vote getters at each change of administration.

Warden Marvin L. Coon, formerly of Escanaba, has received praise for his work at the state's branch prison in Marquette, and an effort has been made by his many friends to have the Republican administration retain his services.

However, Warden Coon was appointed during the previous Democratic administration and replaced a Republican appointee, James Corgan, who also had a splendid record as warden of that institution.

Therefore, he is not likely to receive any more consideration than that accorded Mr. Corgan.

Until a real civil service system is installed in Michigan there is not much hope of keeping state jobs out of the hands of the spoilsmen. The 1937 legislature adopted a merit system bill, which had obvious defects, but the 1939 legislature made a worst job of it in their determined attempt to "improve" the set-up.

Two Common Fallacies

NOW that every man is his own economist, and even the dumbest of us never hesitates a minute to work out his own particular remedy for our economic ills, it might be just as well to note two very common fallacies which were badly pounded around recently.

One: that wage-earners are gradually getting a smaller and smaller share of the national income as great fortunes pile up.

Two: That advertising so greatly increases the cost of goods that things would be cheaper if they were not advertised.

A great many people assume the truth of one or the other of these hypotheses without worrying much about whether they are true or not. But both questions have been carefully studied recently, and the results of the studies are interesting.

First, Secretary of Commerce Harry Hopkins had a thorough study made of where the national income went in 1938. And this was the conclusion: that the wage-earners' share was the greatest of any year since any calculation began to be made of the national income.

Dividends, that is, the reward of invested capital, fell off one-third from 1937. Wages paid to employees in 1938 fell off 7 per cent from 1937, due more to reduced employment than to reductions in pay.

But the share of the wage-earners reached a new all-time high of 67.3 per cent. In short, the entire national income was down 18 billions from the 1929 peak, though it has been raised 60 per cent from the depression low. But of that reduced income, the wage-earner got a bigger share than ever before.

Second, the Twentieth Century Fund, which has been studying distribution problems, found that the cost of advertising is far less than many have supposed. The cost actually is from a small fraction of 1 per cent to a maximum of about 18 per cent. On many widely-advertised products it was infinitesimal, and the average for all goods was set at less than 3 per cent of the cost of the final purchaser.

The cost, for instance, in cigarettes selling at 14 cents was just over a half cent a package. A widely advertised soft drink put less than 16-100ths of a cent's worth of advertising into each five-cent glass. A standard breakfast food paid 3-100ths of a cent for a 15-cent package.

Obviously, when the wider distribution, with consequent lower production costs is balanced against such small percentage expenditures as these, a good argument could be made that advertising had actually reduced the cost to the final consumer.

That's one handicap of an amateur economist. We so often start off from the wrong information that it's no wonder if we sometimes wind up behind some eight-ball on the pool table of economic theory.

Should Be Protected

AMONG the outstanding attractions at Yellowstone national park, judging from the numerous times their pictures appear in the newspapers and magazines, are the tame bears, whose antics amuse many tourists daily.

Of greater interest, however, are wild bears, of which there are still some to be seen in the Upper Peninsula. Tourists traveling through the Copper Country get a thrill out of watching these brutes foraging for food near the Keweenaw country golf course, and Delta county folks are showing much interest in a group that may be seen each evening in the vicinity of the Morman Creek CCC camp.

Since the legislature at its recent session revised the game laws to permit killing of bears throughout the year, a campaign has been launched in the Copper Country to induce the conservation commission to place the animals in that region on the protected list.

Dead bears are not worth much to anyone, but alive they constitute a tourist attraction of inestimable value. City folks come up to the Upper Peninsula because they appreciate some of its wilderness aspects, and the presence of bears is something that fits well into this scheme

County May Help

VIEW of the fact that the usual state aid will not be forthcoming this year, the Delta county board of supervisors is giving serious consideration to a request for an appropriation to help finance the state and upper peninsula conventions of the American Legion to be held Aug. 19 to 22.

The board of supervisors long has been committed to a policy of providing funds for tourist advertising, and here is an opportunity to help a project that definitely will bring many visitors, who will spend money in Delta county communities. Several thousand persons will be attracted here for the conventions, and hotel and cottage accommodations in Escanaba, Gladstone and neighboring communities will be taxed to the limit.

If the Legion visitors are well entertained in this country it is quite likely some will return in later years to spend their vacations in this section. The investment that will be made to finance this huge convention is certain to bring good dividends to the local communities.

World Affairs Reviewed

BY FREDERIC J. HASKIN

Washington, D. C.—In these days when citizens throughout the world are being heavily taxed, there is little wonder that the Principality of Monaco is more often thought of as a tax-free land than as the location of the world's most famous gaming place. That fame now, however, belongs to history, for Monte Carlo—Monaco's chief city—has seen its heyday.

Freedom from taxation arises from the circumstance that a company obtained the gambling concession from the reigning Prince, paying large enough sums into the coffers of the Principality to make taxation unnecessary. Periodically, the concession has been renewed and its terms adjusted. The last revision expires in 1947 so, until then at least, there will be freedom from taxes. But there is a catch in this arrangement in that Monegasques themselves are not permitted to play.

Originally Monaco was the private property of the great Genoese family of Grimaldi and collateral descendants still occupy the throne. Vicissitudes have been many. The French Revolution resulted in annexation by France, but by the Treaty of 1814, following Waterloo, the Principality was restored to the family.

Eight square miles in area, and with more than two miles of coastline touching the bluest of seas, Monaco is politically an artificial state. Chance gave it riches, but chance reversed its fortunes. Bigger gaming activities elsewhere and other amusements have robbed Monte Carlo not only of its profits but also of most of its lure. Moving picture palaces in scores of cities are now more ornate than the gilded rooms of Monte Carlo's famous casino.

Long before the depression broke the bank which no player had conquered, Monaco had come to offer such variety of amusements that prosperity would doubtless return. On the golf courses players can drive toward the snowy summits of the Maritime Alps. On tennis courts down between the mountains and the rock peninsula, famous players stimulate an emulation which makes every club a favorite place. Into the port of Hercules come the spottiest yachts of many nations.

Few visitors to Monte Carlo have known whether they were in the tiny principality or in France, for it is only a step from tax-free Monaco into France, and the latter does nothing to emphasize the transition, for it does not wish to avoid the favorable publicity which Monaco gets.

But Monaco is not a place where only frivolity and pleasure-seeking are paramount. Whatever may be said about the little country, and about Monte Carlo, the best of all good company congregates there. Here members of the aristocracy of intellect come together. From all parts of the world come great leaders in thought, in science, and in their effort toward peace of the world mark the little country as one willing to do its share for mankind's advancement.

Anthropology and mythology rather than history supply the earliest beginnings of Monaco and its people. Recorded history of the place does not go so far back. Before the advent of the Gaul a still older race peopled the land stretching from the mouth of the Rhine to the further limits of the Etruria. They were a much lower race, small of stature but strong, active and brave. Not much is known of them, for they left neither monuments nor literature. There is, however, evidence that they survived many invasions, notably that of the Phoenician fleets. The overcoming of this resistance has been regarded by some as having given rise to the many legends of the locality which have served as fragments of history. Such myths are often more important than the bare facts of history.

Under the Caesars, Monaco became an important place, and Roman jewelry found there in recent years shows that it was inhabited by influential and wealthy Romans. A collection of this jewelry may be seen in Monaco's notable museum. It is said to be one of the most interesting of its kind in the world.

Monaco points with pride to great men and events of its history. For example the claim is made that Christianity was first preached in the Maritime Alps by Barnabas, fellow-laborer with Paul. It is true that history cannot prove this as a fact, but the story has been told so long that it is accepted as a fact, and while a critical world regards Monte Carlo as a wicked place, there is local pride in feeling that on the soil of Monaco some of the world's first Christian missionary work was started.

Another attempt between the house and senate leaders to reach an agreement on school aid came to an end without result this week, though progress was reported. Another powwow is proposed for next week. The differences between the house and senate contingents are by no means confined to the amount of the appropriation. The members representing the large cities stand out for the continued application of the 1937 law, in part, because its provisions for distribution of the school aid are more favorable to their constituencies than those in the conference bill the senate refused to accept.

The probable outcome is agreement on compromise before the session for final adjournment. The legislators have no appetite for a special session, or a series of such sessions, in which this controversial issue would be the principal business. They must realize that unless they go some ways toward meeting the governor's views this is what they will have to count on.

Manchester, England, telegraph boys have given up wearing leggings. Ah, yes, this is the age of speed.

Paris — Plans were completed by the council of four to sign the peace treaty at 3 p. m. Saturday.

President Wilson received the American newspaper men this afternoon and said his good byes to them.

A telegram received yesterday from Major George B. Norton, former city editor of the Morning News, announced his arrival in New York yesterday. He is well and happy and hopes to be among his local friends in a short time. Major Norton has spent a long period in the intelligence department of the 7th army corps abroad.

The fire department was called to the Mirror print shop about 5:30 last night by a small blaze on the roof of the press room. The blaze had started as a result of children throwing firecrackers on the roof. No damage was done.

Further assurance of early repairs being made on some of the worst streets in the city, was given today when the old street roller was towed out to the Chatfield Brass and Iron Works for repairs preparatory to being put into service.

East Fortune, Scotland—Repairs on the R-34 probably will be completed Tuesday and officers of the dirigible need only await orders to commence the Atlantic flight. It has been necessary to install a new motor and overhaul four others and do considerable work on the huge envelope.

PEACE—that magic word for which the world has been waiting and praying for four weary, blood-stained years; years filled with human suffering and human sacrifice never equalled in all history—peace, composed of heartaches and women's tears, was announced in Escanaba yesterday forenoon by a shrilling of whistles and a temporary din which bid fair for a time, to usher in another spontaneous celebration of gigantic proportions such as characterized the signing of the Armistice on Nov. 11, 1918.

New York Column

BY GEORGE ROSS

New York—The World's Fair is domesticating many of Manhattan's swains.

It long has been the common practice of young ladies, living apart from their families in New York, to live together in apartments.

And now the almost prohibitively high rates of hotels during the Fair have sent the male guests looking elsewhere, and so the only natural thing to do has been done:

The boys pool their money and, in two, three and four, rent an apartment. More than one apron that was meant for a feminine waist has been wrapped about a pair of masculine trousers since the Trylon, Perisphere and hotel rates all went up together.

ANOTHER ROGERS STORY

Simon Karavaeff, who entertains at the Russian Kretchma and who came to this country in 1921 as Pavlova's dancing partner, was speaking the other evening of his great love for Will Rogers. Karavaeff worked in the Ziegfeld Follies with Rogers from 1922 to 1924.

"He once told me that if I ever needed help or money, I should get in touch with him," recalled the little fellow whom Rogers always called "Roosh."

Karavaeff never had to take advantage of Will's generosity until a few years ago, when he sent an urgent request for a loan. This is the message he received in reply:

"Mr. Rogers just missed your letter which came this morning. I will call it to his attention just as soon as he returns from his flight with Wiley Post."

NO GLAMOR IN WORLD OF FREAKS

The world of animal freaks differs from the rest of the outdoor show business. It is not the glamorous life of carnival men so often portrayed on the screen. It's hard work, day and night vigil with animals that can't make themselves understood. The man who operates a freak animal show must love it pretty much, otherwise he'd be driven crazy in a couple of weeks.

T. W. Kelley, who conducts the largest animal freak business in the world and is exhibiting one around here now, is an old-timer of 15 years in the business. He knows every freak from Maine to Timbuctoo, knows their idiosyncracies and their drawing power. He talks of them in terms of what they did in previous shows — at the Danbury Fair, Alabama State Fair or the Exposition Internationale in Brussels.

"T. W." or "Slim," as he's variously called by other outdoor showmen, is an expert veterinarian but does not practice his profession. The Humane Society maintains a watch over all animals exhibited in public and the animals are inspected by the society's veterinarians.

If agriculture and labor gang up on business, or labor and business gang up on agriculture, or agriculture and business gang up on labor, the whole country will suffer.

—Agriculture Secretary Wallace.

The American people are now more conscious of the value of freedom and citizenship than they have been for a generation.

—Gov. Lloyd C. Stark of Missouri.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

BY PEARSON AND ALLEN

Washington—The King and Queen will soon receive a personal gift from President and Mrs. Roosevelt, in memory of the Washington visit. The gift consists of an album of radio transcriptions of the music which the royal pair heard at the White House, following the State dinner.

When that concert was over, the King asked his host if he could get recordings of what he had heard. Result was that all the singers — Lawrence Tibbett, Marian Anderson, Kate Smith, Alan Lomax, the Kentucky mountain singers and the Negro spiritualists—made recordings of three numbers each. And Tibbett and Kate Smith threw in a little personal greeting to the King and the President.

The album contains eighteen 12-inch phonograph records. Only four sets have been made—one for the King and Queen, one for President and Mrs. Roosevelt, one for Secretary Hull and one for British Ambassador Sir Ronald Lindsay.

The studio which prepared the transcriptions signed an agreement with the State Department not to release any of these records to the public. These are the only four sets that ever will be made.

Note—Vice President Garner, who did not attend the Marian Anderson concert at Lincoln Memorial, was forced to sit with the King and Queen and the Roosevelts in the first row during Miss Anderson's recital at the White House. He had rather a glum look on his face and did not applaud once, even though the Queen applauded vigorously.

JAPAN MEANS WAR

The uncensored reports regarding Japanese insults to the British in China are worse than the newspaper accounts. The British don't want too much sensational news to get back to England, for fear of arousing the British public, but the real fact is that at least one British woman has been raped by Japanese soldiers, and many other insults have been perpetrated.

Reason for this news suppression is the obvious fact that the British cannot afford a war in the Far East while a war also is ready to break in Europe.

And the Japanese have made it all too clear that they are ready for war. This fact was laid before British Ambassador Cragie by the Vice Minister of Foreign Affairs in Tokyo when the British first issued their threat to blockade Japan.

Ambassador Cragie was informed that such a blockade would draw from Japan an immediate declaration of war. The incident at Tientsin, Cragie was told, was a local matter, involving the wrath of the local Japanese commander against the British Consul General; while a blockade against Japan was a national matter, which would be resisted by the entire Japanese navy.

This differentiation, of course, was sheer poppycock, since the Japanese Government is behind the Tientsin fracas. But anyway, this threat, when cabled to London by Cragie, produced great consternation in the cabinet, and is the chief reason Britain delayed carrying out its threat.

—CIO-AFL DISPUTE—

A secret row took place during the recent meeting of the AFL executive committee over the CIO-AFL peace terms.

The row resulted from a question asked by the CIO at the first meeting of the two negotiating committees.

"Green says the AFL is ready to take back all the original unions that formed the CIO," said the CIO negotiators. "What does that mean? As they were then or are now?"

The question was of crucial importance since most of the unions had largely expanded their ranks. For example: The United Mine Workers now includes chemical workers, while the Amalgamated Clothing Workers has swallowed up most of the AFL's textile and laundry units.

The AFL delegation was unable to answer the question and asked for time to submit it to Green. A week later, the committee returned with an eight-page memorandum which, in effect, said neither yes nor no. The Lewis group refused to accept the answer and reiterated its demand. The subject was argued for several days and finally the AFL committee agreed on this compromise:

That the original CIO unions be taken back with their expanded membership and that after they had rejoined the AFL, the question of conflicting jurisdiction between the rival AFL and CIO unions would be arbitrated.

The CIO committee accepted the proposal—as well they might.

SWEDISH CITY IS DESCRIBED

St. Louis Visits Kin of Mrs. Chas. Jacobson in Gothenberg

BY STANLEY ST. LOUIS
Gothenberg, Sweden—Gothenberg, a Swedish city laid out by Dutch engineers in 1619, is the home of Mrs. G. Kronvall, sister, and G. Pearson, youngest brother of Mrs. Charles Jacobson, 313 N. 19th street, Escanaba, Mich.

Mr. Kronvall, who operated a tailor shop in London for five years and speaks excellent English acted as interpreter, when the writer called on both families.

Mr. Pearson is employed in the Gothenberg ship yards as plumbing inspector. Mr. Kronvall runs a tailor shop in the city.

Swedish people, returning to Sweden from the United States, discouraged by our depression, have, to a certain extent disapproved fables of American prosperity and opportunity. While visiting with the relatives of Mrs. Jacobson your correspondent gained the impression that in some ways they still considered America the best country to find profitable employment. If the beautiful, modern homes in which both families lived is any criterion of conditions in Sweden, they need look no further than their own country for prosperity and contentment.

The relatives of Mrs. Jacobson had many questions to ask about the American side of the family, and the United States in general. Their living in this land of short distances made the fact that Mrs. Jacobson had travelled over three thousand miles to visit with her children in California, seem incredible.

Describes Gothenberg
Entering Sweden by way of Gothenberg is a most appropriate introduction to this country which combines thriving industry and practicality with cleanliness and quaint beauty.

There is nothing elsewhere in Europe quite like the strange rocky archipelago of the outer harbor of Gothenberg. The entrance to the harbor is dotted by small, stone-topped islands known as skerries. These serve a very helpful purpose in helping to break the force of heavy seas when the North Sea is in an ugly mood.

In foggy weather they are treacherous and have sent more than one ship to a watery grave. In clear weather their distinctive charm viewed from the deck of an approaching ship, seems to form stepping stones to the hills on which the city is built.

As in other Scandinavian sea coast cities, the harbor is the very heart of Gothenberg. The whole panorama of the prosperous city of 270,000 persons seems centered in the bustling activity of its extensive harbor. One of the first observations of the visitor is the orderly way in which business in the harbor is carried on. Here one finds very little of the noise, dirt, confusion or other unpleasant conditions common to most seaports.

Clearing customs, usually a source of unending grief to travellers, is handled in Sweden with a swift efficiency and courtesy which makes it almost a pleasure.

Shipbuilding Main Industry
Shipbuilding is one of Gothenberg's chief industries. At present the yards are operating at top capacity. The back log of orders for new vessels guarantees busy yards for at least the next three years. There exists an actual shortage of manual and skilled labor. Domestic help is at a premium. Extensive industrial and residential construction is under way and the high wages paid labor is reflected in a correspondingly steep charge for rents and food.

The Dutch engineers, when laying out the city, did not forget to include their beloved canals which have since been well maintained by the Swedes. Although no longer used commercially they serve as a convenient highway for small power launches and enhance the loveliness of the city. In the past Stockholm has been the recipient of most of the Swedish tourist publicity. Gothenberg is rapidly forging to the front in this respect and each year the volume of her tourist traffic increases.

There is a permanent amusement park in Gothenberg which is a genuine credit to the city. The entrance fee is small and the free acts provided more than compensate for the price of admission. The visitor is bound to notice the absence of all loud noises, ballyhoo and sharp practices so common in places of this kind in the United States. At a carnival, a place where you would least expect to find it, the quiet good manners, dignity and reserve of the Swedish people can be noted. They seem to enjoy themselves wholeheartedly but in a manner entirely devoid of rowdiness.

A stranger in Sweden need only walk the pleasant streets of Gothenberg for a few hours to become impressed with the prosperous appearance, neat dress and confident bearing of the Swedish people. Their peaceful leisurely manner is in sharp contrast to the hurrying, worried looking people one meets in England. They seem a people, at peace with themselves and the rest of the world, confident of the future and the role they will play in it.

Yachting Popular Sport
The water variation level in Gothenberg harbor is a matter of inches only, and that, as in Little Bay de Noc, is due to wind conditions. There is no problem of tide to be solved and this is a boon to commercial shipping and yachting. The Gothenberg yacht club is of the most modern design, the view of the sun setting over the harbor, as seen from the yacht club veranda, has been acclaimed by visitors from all over the world. Behind the harbor breakwater, pleasure boats of every size and description are moored.

The most popular type of small yacht to be found in Gothenberg waters is the famous clinker-built, Swedish double-ender. These ships, though small, are credited with being the most sea-worthy ever designed. The perilous storms which blow down the Swedish coast without warning necessitates cruising ships which can withstand heavy seas and high winds.

Most of the ships have all-varnished hulls which are preferred by the Swedish yachtsman to the painted types so common in the United States. Sailing boats outnumber power boats ten to one.

Resembles U. P. Climate
The climate of Gothenberg is similar to that of Northern Michigan. June, July and August are the only three months in which summer sports are really enjoyable. The people here, are, in one respect, more fortunate than the residents of the Upper Peninsula. The benefits of the midnight sun extend far enough south to insure, at this time of the year, daylight until 11 p. m. and dawn at 3 a. m.

In Gothenberg, nature has settled the vexing controversy of daylight saving time.

DIVES OFF BRIDGE
Menominee—William Gidion of Escanaba, was treated for minor head lacerations Sunday evening at the M. & M. Hospital, Marinette, after diving off the interstate bridge at seven o'clock and hitting his head on rocks. Several stitches were needed to close a scalp wound.

BIG HOLIDAY EXODUS SEEN

Michigan Parks Expect Many Visitors Over Next Week-End

Lansing — Next weekend will bring a four-day holiday to many people celebrating the Fourth of July and it will see hundreds of thousands pouring out of the cities seeking the out-of-door advantages of Michigan's 56 state parks.

The exodus will begin for most persons on Saturday, July 1, but many who got a head start on Friday will have already set up quarters in a tent, trailer or cabin by the end of the week.

Although in search of rural blessedness, the vacationing multitude will expect and require many of the comforts of home. For this reason facilities have been provided by officials of the park division of the department of conservation, in charge of operating state park areas.

Park authorities have announced they anticipate completion of wiring for electrical connections in 32 parks during the present season, the latest effort to give service of a standard demanded by the public. Radios, beauty equipment and household gadgets can be attached to an electrical outlet and life can go on much as it did at home.

New building construction, enlargement of sanitary facilities and setting up additional parking space are among the winter and spring jobs that have been completed by park superintendents. Along this line much work has been done in the Grand Haven and Holland parks, two big beach parks on Lake Michigan drawing nearly a million visitors in a season.

Routine safety measures guard against accidents and illnesses and treat the cases that do occur. Lifeguards and persons equipped to do first aid are stationed in the play areas. Water supply, traffic regulation, policing and sanitation get special care.

CARLSON PROMOTED
Ironwood — William S. Carlson, son of Mrs. Samuel Carlson, Sutherland avenue, has been promoted by the University of Minnesota from an assistant professorship to an associate professorship. It was announced recently by President Guy Stanton Ford of the University of Minnesota. Carlson, director of university high school training school, is well known here.

Pressure is more than 90 pounds to the square inch at 230 feet under water.

Disabled Veterans To Hold Meeting

Menominee — The fourteenth annual convention of the Disabled American Veterans, department of Michigan, and the fifth annual convention of the women's auxiliary will open in Menominee Friday and continue thru Sunday. Among the visitors expected to attend are Owen A. Galvin, national commander; Frank R. Klett, department commander, and Michael A. Whalen, department adjutant.

The first business session will not be held until Saturday morning, the veterans meeting at 9:30 in the Eagles hall and auxiliary members at the same hour in the Odd Fellows hall. Registration will take place all day Friday at Hotel Menominee and a banquet for the national commander will be held at 6 o'clock Friday evening at Betsen's Beach Grill. The opening session will be at 7:30 Friday evening for each organization.

The Italian army is said to have been the first to employ aerial bombing as part of its offensive, its pilots showering enemy troops with crude, hand-thrown bombs while attacking Tripoli in 1912.

Miss Ettenhofer, Nap Morin Jr. Are Wed On Tuesday

At a prettily appointed wedding of June which took place Tuesday afternoon, Miss Beatrice L. Ettenhofer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Ettenhofer, 310 North 11th street, became the bride of Nap Morin, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Nap Morin of this city.

The marriage service was read at 5 o'clock by Rev. Fr. Paschal Kerner, O. F. M., in the rectory of St. Joseph's church.

The young people were attended by Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Moersch. The bride wore a becoming street length frock of dusty pink, with powder blue brimmed hat and matching accessories, and a shoulder corsage of tallman roses, snapdragons and forget-me-nots. Her attendant wore a street length dress of powder blue, with white accessories, and dream roses, snapdragons and forget-me-nots were used in her shoulder bouquet.

A wedding supper for immediate members of the two families was served at the Morin home, the tiered wedding cake with an effective arrangement of flowers, centering the table. Mr. and Mrs. Morin will remain in Escanaba until fall when they are leaving for Los Angeles, Calif., which will be their permanent home.

The bride is a graduate of Escanaba high school, and the bridegroom of St. Joseph's high school. Mr. and Mrs. Donald Morin of Los Angeles were among guests at the wedding.

To all in this mood, an ancient university has one parting counsel. Weigh the present against the past, the claims of the individual against those of society. The dignity of man is vindicated as much by the thinker and the poet as by the statesman and soldier.

President James B. Conant, of Harvard University.

WE, the WOMEN

BY RUTH MILLET

The June graduates who are going to be the first in their classes to get jobs (excluding the ones whose fathers know somebody) are the ones who can do more than one thing.

During one of Mary's interviews, some employer is sure to say something like, "We don't need a secretary now. But we have been talking of taking on someone in the publicity department. Have you ever done any writing?"

If Mary can say that she was on the staff of her school paper all through high school or college, that she helped out in the school's publicity department, or that she worked on the local paper one summer—she may get a chance at that job.

And she might very well turn it into something better than the secretarial job she went after originally. Or it may lead to a secretarial job.

Today it isn't enough for a job-hunting boy or girl to know how to do one thing.

Walter Pitkin says, "In my opinion, anybody above 18 who cannot do at least five tasks for which wages are paid is a pretty poor stick."

USE SUMMER TO LEARN SKILLS That is being pretty harsh about it. But it certainly is true that the graduate who goes out looking for a job knowing that he can do several different things, stands a better chance of getting a toe-hold in some business than the one who has to wait for an opening in the only line he knows.

Young people who are still in school—and those who are waiting for fall before starting the job-hunt—could spend the summer months advantageously by picking up at least one more skill than they now have.

RAIL WORKERS NOT COVERED

Michigan Job Insurance Not Affecting Them After June 30

Harry A. McDonald, chairman of the Michigan unemployment compensation commission, yesterday announced that railroad workers will be removed from the protection of Michigan's job insurance system after July 1.

Responsibility for the compensation of railroad workers who become unemployed after that date will be assumed by the federal railroad retirement board, under terms of the federal railroad unemployment insurance act.

McDonald said that after July 1, 1939, no benefit rights shall accrue or be recognized under Michigan's law on account of wages earned in employment with railroads.

"This means," he said, "that for workers who had nothing but railroad employment prior to July 1, their rights to benefits under our law will be terminated as of July 1 and taken over by the railroad retirement board."

For those workers who had both railroad employment and non-railroad employment and who continue their claims for benefits for a compensable period after July 1, a reduction will be made in the length of time they may draw benefits. This reduction in duration will be determined from the amount of railroad earnings which must be excluded.

For workers who had both railroad employment and non-railroad employment and who file their initial claim so that the first compensable period will be after their benefits rights from the Michigan commission will be determined only after earnings from their railroad employment have been excluded.

"In other words," McDonald explained, "only the worker's earnings from employment with employers subject to Michigan's law, other than railroad employers, will be taken into account in paying benefits after July 1 under our law."

Workers wishing to file claims for benefits under the railroad program should do so with their most recent railroad employer, or if not accessible, then with any railroad employer with whom arrangements have been made to accept such claims.

Prior to July 1, an employed railroad worker may claim for waiting period credit under the railroad act, for the period of June 16 to June 30 inclusive, regardless of the fact that he may have claimed state benefits for such a period.

This may be done by registering June 26 to June 30 with a railroad employer.

After July 1 a worker is prohibited from claiming waiting period credits or benefits under the railroad program if claiming benefits or waiting period credits under a state law. The reverse also is true.

The Vacation Industry

Travel Agents Find It's The Missus Who Enjoys 'Showing Off' On Trip

BY PAUL ROSS
NEA Service Staff Correspondent
New York—Where do people from crowded cities like to go on vacation? To crowded places? Where do small townsmen and villagers prefer to spend their two weeks off? At solitary forests and lakes!

That is just one of the paradoxical facts about the American-pleasure-bent whose likes and dislikes, bookings and cancellations, goings and comings all add up to a $5,000,000,000-a-year business—the vacation industry.

Here are a few other current habits and "trends" as revealed by travel agents whose business it is to cater to American vacationers:

The people most difficult to arrange domestic itineraries for are school-teachers. They have been everywhere before and have seen everything.

Finland, a comparatively out-of-the-way spot and not a particularly exciting one, is a favorite objective of American pleasure travelers. Why? Because Finland paid its war-debt to the United States. Everybody likes Finland.

OFF MONTH NOW GETS PLAY
September, formerly an "off" month, got such a big play from people anxious to avoid crowds that now September schedules are crowded, too.

People don't like to go away until after July 4th.

Ocean travel to West Indian and South American ports will jump this season because many mid-Westerners who won't or can't pay fares to the coast, plus boat fares, will be coming to the World's Fair, anyway.

WAR SCARES SCARE OFF TOURISTS
When Hitler and Mussolini started cutting up on the Continent, Americans stayed away from European bookings in such numbers that the big lines (including Italian and German companies) pulled vessels out of the European runs and put them into summer cruises. The result is that there are now three times as many short cruises planned as last year.

There is a definite correlation between news and travel. One travel expert explained that Americans are kept from traveling by: a. rumors of war; b. actions of politicians (domestic and foreign); c. "economic fear, not economic fact."

Americans have developed a "trend to South America." But this will collapse as soon as such spots as the Mediterranean are "cleared up."

The average vacationer comes home tired but when he started out. Otherwise he wouldn't think he'd had a good time.

WOMEN ARE CHAMP GADABOUTS

Deluxe-class travelers are chisellers. "Why not?" commented one travel expert, "that's how they got the money to travel deluxe."

Well-to-do women travel in pairs and are very thrifty. They prefer fairly long ocean cruises to romantic spots. Women of the clerk-stenographer class travel alone in search of husbands, prefer short cruises or motor trips, spend 2-3 weeks vacationing.

Sixty to 65 per cent of all travelers are women. They have more leisure time and their men can give them the money to travel. Even when they pay for their own vacations they frequently spend all their savings. Men, on the other hand, hold on to savings for a "black day."

WOMEN TRAVEL TO SHOW OFF

Well-to-do men go alone to big, isolated camps in the Canadian woods. Men of the clerk-stenographer class go on motor trips, to the seashore, or boating.

Eighty per cent of ocean travelers come from places within 100 miles of the ocean, and most of them originate in five states: Pennsylvania, New York, New Jersey, Connecticut and Massachusetts. Other leading places are Illinois and California.

Women travel to show off, to "put on the dog," as one travel man phrased it. Consequently they prefer big, crowded resorts and ships. Men travel to see something or to get away from something. Consequently, they like the woods, boat trips, camping trips, where they won't have to shave.

BEHIND THE SCENES

By Bruce Catton

Washington — Although the New Deal has been quietly, but effectively, defending both the Wagner act and the wage and hour law, a flank attack which might wreck both of them is now gaining headway in the House.

The fight centers about resolutions brought in by Congressman Howard Smith of Virginia, one calling for an investigation of the labor act and the labor board and the other demanding a similar investigation of the wage-hour act and the wage-hour administration.

Friends of both laws admit that these resolutions represent the most threatening attacks yet made.

Working with Smith to push the resolutions through is another southern Democrat, Congressman Eugene Cox of Georgia, one of the New Deal's most bitter foes.

What is worrying the New Dealers most, however, is the fact that the administration's leadership in the House is apparently going to refuse to make a fight on the matter.

The Smith resolutions represent an unusual procedure, in that they take legislation away from a duly constituted committee and short-circuit the normal procedure by which amendments to existing legislation are considered.

It goes without saying that if Majority Leader Rayburn and Speaker Bankhead really wanted to kill these resolutions they could do so without trouble.

So far, however, the gossip in the House lobby is that neither will make a fight.

The wage-hour law is in less danger than the labor law. It is the less unpopular of the two; many northern congressmen, who will vote enthusiastically against the Wagner act, are less likely to open up on the wage-hour law, partly because the wage-hour administration has refused to adopt differentials to protect low wage rates in the south, which is pleasing to representatives from industrial districts that have been feeling southern competition.

In addition, there is a fairly general feeling that the wage-hour law is still so new that it deserves more of a run for its money before a thorough overhauling is in order.

REPRESENTS A DEMOCRATIC SPLIT

But the Wagner act is abundantly equipped with enemies, and none of them are more determined than Congressmen Smith and Cox.

The whole fight, incidentally, illustrates the sharp cleavage that exists within the Democratic party over "advanced" New Deal legislation.

The administration possesses such a heavy party majority in the House that no anti-New Deal campaign there would have a chance—if the party were united. But it isn't.

The fact that these resolutions are being pushed by Democrats Smith and Cox, and are not being fought enthusiastically by Democratic leaders Bankhead and Rayburn, highlights the fact unmistakably.

Hostile action toward the Wagner act in the House might cause similar action in the Senate. So far, Senate New Dealers have staved off Wagner act amendments; but if such amendments had actually passed the House, the "back home" pressure on senators to follow suit would be much stronger.

CHAPTER V

She looked at him with unceasing admiration. "How clever! I'd have never thought of that."

"When you get as old as I am," said Roy, "you learn to take these precautions. Incidentally, I've been wanting to see you."

"Me! I'm flattered." "Quit kidding. Your dad's been showing me his museum."

"Oh! You saw the Gobi dinosaur?" "Yes. Wicked-looking beast, isn't he? The point is, if I don't pretty soon learn something about things like that, I'm going to be in a jam. Your dad thinks I'm an evolutionist."

"Yes. He mentioned you at breakfast." "He did, eh? What did he say?"

"It'll probably swell your head, but he thinks you're the only intelligent young man who's been on the place since he can remember."

"Is that so? Well, what do you think?"

She smiled at him out of her great eyes. "I think you've got your work cut out for you."

"Just what do you mean?" "Well, you've got to find out something about evolution, haven't you?"

"Yes." "And you've got to help me out in various ways."

"Now that," said Roy, "is saying something. That's exactly what I want to do most. Which brings me to this point: Did you know today was Thursday?"

"Of course." "Well, this golf match is on Saturday. We've got to work fast."

"I don't get you," said Babs. "I say we've got to work fast or the match will come off."

"Why, of course, it will come off. Why wouldn't it?"

"But if it does, then you've got to marry either Ronald or Wilfrid."

Babs tapped her foot impatiently. "Yes, certainly. We went into all that yesterday."

"We did. But don't you see that circumstances alter cases? I—well, I wasn't consulted about this match."

"You?" Her eyes were wide. "Yes. In other words, now that I've met you, I—I think we ought to have a new deal all around."

She looked away from him. "What about my word to Ronald and Wilfrid?"

"I've planned for that," said Roy. "As I got the arrangement, that only holds good if the match is played on Saturday morning."

"That's right. But what's to prevent it from being played?"

"That," said Roy, "is what we've got to figure out."

"We? You don't expect me to help you, do you?"

He grinned at her, his gray eyes humorous. "Sort of thought you might. After all, you practically admitted yesterday that you haven't exactly fallen for either Ronald or Wilfrid."

"Well," Barbara began moving away, "go to it!"

Roy's heart gave a bound. "Does that mean..."

She was definitely walking in the direction of the house now. Over her shoulder she threw him a bright glance. "It might mean anything. It might mean nothing. Take it or leave it." And with a laugh that Roy, in a poetic mood, would have described as silvery, she ran away across the lawn.

The round face of Mr. Wilfrid Peyton wore a sober and studious look. It was a face, magenta-colored now from exertion, a face possessed of two brown cowlike eyes.

Ever and anon as he stood on the Ganning lawn woffling golf shots with machine-like regularity, his white teeth bit painfully into his lower lip and a grim determination brooded about the corners of his mouth.

Mr. Wilfrid Peyton was out for blood and his was a nature composed of stern stuff. Absorbed in his work, it was some minutes before he noticed an unfamiliar young gentleman who stood under a hyacinth bush with an expression of sardonic amusement on his face.

Wilfrid liked not that expression. He had a shadowy idea that he was the cause of it. And even less did he like this presence observing him. It was not conducive to concentration.

Wherefore, he ceased his mayhem upon the Ganning lawn and spoke. "Hey!" he said. "What are you staring at?"

The alien young gentleman shifted his feet. "Me? Oh, nothing much."

"Well then," said Wilfrid, in a mandatory tone, "go and do it somewhere else. I'm busy."

"So I see," said the young man, without moving. "You're building a tennis court, aren't you?"

"Tennis court? What are you trying to do, be funny?"

"Not at all. You're taking up all the grass so I naturally thought you were trying to get at the soil beneath. And that suggests a tennis court, see? It's what you call a deduction. Sherlock Holmes used to make them."

For folderol of this sort Wilfrid had little time. The fellow was a wise-cracker of some kind and under ordinary circumstances he would have replied devastatingly.

But serious business lay ahead and he could not be disturbed. He therefore addressed another ball and waggled his club, and swung.

The ball, barely topped, bounced a few yards and lay in a dandelion, looking up at Wilfrid like an accusing white eye.

"Well played," said Roy encouragingly.

Wilfrid turned on him in a fury. "Maybe you could do better."

"I could," said Roy. "Lend me that club."

Wilfrid's wrath rose higher. "I'll bet you five dollars," he shouted, red in the face, "that you don't hit it first time."

"I'm taking that," said Roy, hefting the club.

There was a sharp neat click. The ball rose majestically and soared away in the direction of the swimming pool.

Wilfrid watched it, fascinated. In all his hours of frantic practice he had not achieved a shot like this. His jaw dropped.

"Hey," he demanded, "who the devil are you, Henry Picard?"

Roy handed him back the club. "No. I'm Baskerville's cousin."

"What? The chauffeur's?" Roy nodded.

"Well, I owe you five bucks." "Forget it," said Roy. "It wouldn't be fair. I've played a lot of golf. I—er—I used to be a caddy."

Wilfrid stood silent a moment, thinking. Suddenly a crafty expression stole over his face.

"Say," he said, "could you teach me to hit a ball like that?" Roy looked doubtful. "I don't know. How soon?"

"Oh, by tomorrow night." Roy shook his head. "Impossible. I'd have to have more time than that."

Wilfrid's eyes were almost pleading. "But you could teach me something, couldn't you? You see, it's very important. I've a match..."

CITY COUNCIL OKEHS BUDGET

Appropriation Ordinance Calls for Tax Rate of $16

The annual appropriation ordinance, providing for the raising of $60,358.50 by taxation for the fiscal year, was passed by the Manistique city council Monday evening at the city hall. The appropriation will result in a tax rate of $16 per $1,000 of assessed valuation on real and personal property. The council authorized an appropriation of $30 for the Upper Peninsula Law Enforcement Association meeting to be held at Manistique August 10.

A petition for the installation of curb and gutters on Park avenue, between Range street and Steuben, on both sides of the street was presented to the council. The petition requested the improvement be made into a WPA project, with property owners paying special assessments for materials and supervision. The petition was tabled for a later meeting of the council.

The council adopted a resolution opposing the planned relocation of highway M-28 four miles north of its present location. The rerouting would cut off some of the small communities now located along the highway.

Motorcyclist Fined As Reckless Driver

Omar Morey of Manistique was fined $50 and costs of $5 when he pleaded guilty to a charge of reckless driving at arraignment in justice court here Monday. Morey was arrested on River Street Monday night by local officers and charged with reckless driving of a motorcycle. He made arrangements to pay the fine. Two passengers were fined $5 each for disorderly conduct.

Grand Marais

Club Entertained
Grand Marais, Mich.—The Grand Marais Woman's club members were entertained Thursday, June 22, at the Log Cabin home, "Sandy Side", of Mrs. William Donahay at AuSable Lake.

A co-operative luncheon was served at one o'clock in the spacious living room around the fireplace. Plans had been made to eat on the picnic grounds around the cabin, but due to rain, this was not done. However, during the afternoon, the weather clearing, the beautiful flowers and surrounding grounds of the hostess.

After the luncheon, the group by reading excerpts from an interesting book entitled "The Garden of a Commuter's Wife", and story telling and visiting were enjoyed during the afternoon.

The interior of the cabin has many unusual pieces of furniture and articles of interest. The lock on the cabin door is over 150 years old with a very unique handle and massive key, and was given to Mr. and Mrs. Donahay by Mr. Donahay's brother, United States Senator Victor Donahay of Ohio, who also gave them many other rare things in their cabin.

Another brother, Mr. J. H. Donahay, who is a cartoonist for the leading Cleveland, Ohio, newspaper, gave them the bear rug made from the skin of a bear shot near here. There are stones in the fireplace which Mrs. Donahay brought back with her from the various European countries where she traveled a couple of years ago. On the walls of the cabin are reproductions of the rare paintings of Currier and Ives prints, and hand made curios from Yucatan and Mexico, which were given to Mrs. Donahay by the Senoritas who became her friends during her visit there.

It was a very interesting and delightful afternoon to the club ladies. Those present included Mrs. Isadore Roberts, Mrs. Joe Desjardins, Mrs. Mary McIver, Mrs. Arthur Tulloch, Mrs. Ray Meldrum, Mrs. Mina Moeles, Miss Isabelle McCall, Mrs. Farmer Masse, Mrs. James Buckland, Miss Hilda Peterson, Mrs. Roy C. Hill, Mrs. Eddie Bennett, Mrs. Frank Vandriuel, Mrs. Lawrence Phoenix, Mrs. Forrest Carter,

CITY PROTESTS SOO LINE PLAN

Goes On Record Against Pulling Off of Trains 86-87

A resolution protesting proposed abandonment of the Soo Line of Trains 86 and 87 was adopted by the city commission in regular meeting Monday night.

Action on a proposal by the Delta County Health Unit to assume charge of health work in Gladstone during July and August for a consideration of $100 monthly was tabled at the request of several commissioners who desired to know just what work the county health unit took care of in Gladstone. They also desired to know the reason for the $100 monthly when property owners here now pay a millage tax to support the health unit. The letter to the commission was under the signature of Dr. Rolf Lanting.

Payment of $486 to William Heslip for the annual spring alley cleaning was approved. City Manager A. F. Raddant told the commissioners he had made a final inspection and that Heslip had done a neat, workmanlike job.

Gladstone will have clean alleys the year round if there are no legal bars to block it, it was decided by the commission when the bid of Heslip to carry out the work for a full year from date for a consideration of $900 was accepted by the commission. Acceptance was contingent upon a ruling from City Atty. G. W. Jackson whether or not the bid could be accepted without advertising the proposal.

If the ruling is favorable alleys will be kept clean throughout the summer and fall until snow blocks the alleys. Then in the spring Heslip will start earlier and the cleanup will be made the latter part of March or early in April.

The question of establishing several parking lots on Delta avenue to alleviate crowded parking conditions on Saturday nights was discussed and City Manager Raddant authorized to contact owners of several parcels of property in the 1000 block on Delta avenue with a view of using it for this purpose.

The offer of August Mattson Post, American Legion, to donate $50 towards the purchase of a power lawn mower to be used in the upkeep of Memorial Isle was tabled.

The E. M. Johnson-Ole Peterson squabble appeared ready to break out anew when Erickson appeared before the commission and read a prepared statement in which he attacked Peterson's record as a commissioner and intimated that Peterson might use his influence as a member of the board of supervisors to procure a county position.

Peterson made a blanket denial of Johnson's allegations and declared he would not renew the argument.

Johnson in his statement offered an explanation of how his place of business happened to be accorded the residential light rate. He stated he had just had a power installation made at the place upon which to operate an ice cream cabinet when the single-meter system was adopted here and that because of the big jump in his bill, former City Manager E. H. Waterhouse adjusted the rate.

He declared he was of the belief that the city should reimburse him for the cost of the useless power installation amounting to $25. He also declared that he would continue to pay at the residential rate, even though placed on the commercial or higher schedule and would not pay the difference unless forced to do so.

The first of a group of National Farm Loan associations' annual meetings was held yesterday afternoon in the council chambers of the city hall. This association is known as the Gladstone NFLA and consists of the former Delta, Rock, Bark River and Tenney associations.

The secretary-treasurer's report shows that this association now has 157 loans aggregating $252,220 in effect, and the office also services 58 Land Bank commissioner loans for a total of $77,400 in effect. At a subsequent meeting of the new board of directors, Mr. Dahlberg was elected president, Julius Sivula vice president, and A. Theodore Sohlberg, secretary-treasurer.

Louis Meets Galento At Yankee Stadium Tonight

50,000 FANS TO ATTEND FIGHT

Both Fighters Confident of Victory; Experts Favor Louis

BY SID FEDER
New York, June 27 (AP)—The "gimmick" reared its ugly head again today, along with other assorted varieties of prize ring mayhem, as the fight industry looked toward Yankee Stadium and tomorrow night's heavyweight title bout between Champion Joe Louis and the pudgy challenger, Tony Galento.

to be more like it, however. Galento Continues Work
Louis, his training ending on a fine boxing display yesterday, took things easy today. But the beer-swilling Galento, unorthodox in the end, surprised everyone by going through 12 rounds of work in a gymnasium in Newark, where he drove from his Summit, N. J., camp. Although he did no sparring, he went through five rounds of bag-punching and seven of shadow boxing and rope skipping. Then he added a brief "secret" session in the Orange Y.M.C.A.

Just to finish off on the same keynote, he'll do seven miles of roadwork tomorrow morning, and then retire to count the cash registers in his bar in Orange. Promptly at 7 p. m., he's going to turn it over to his bartender, and say simply: "I've got a date in Yankee Stadium tonight, so you handle this for a couple hours till I get back." There are many who believe if Tony gets back at all that evening it'll have to be with plenty of assistance, for tangling with Mr. Louis is usually no fun for the other guy.

In fact, Tony's sole advantage when he gets into the ring will be in the weight department. He and his ample "bay window" should tip the beam at something like 230 pounds, while the tan titleholder, rated off his recent starts, will go at about 200.
The recent starts, incidentally, include knockouts of less than one round each over Max Schmeling, John Henry Lewis and Jack Ripner. While Tony has a mighty left hand and boasts of never having been knocked off his feet in 11 years of campaigning up and down the cauliflower circuit, it must be remembered he's never been in a tea party like Louis has on these days.

"I jes goes out and gets it over with soon as possible," Joe says. "I dunno how long Tony'll take me, but as soon as I ketch him comin' in, I'll finish it."
"Yeah," hollered Tony in reply, "that's what he says. I'll flatten dat bum. I'll do it in five rounds."

Meanwhile, Boston banged Harry Kelley for 11 hits in eight innings, including two doubles and a triple.

Fenske, Overlooked In Bumping Incident, Remains One Of Nation's Best Milers

BY DILLON GRAHAM
AP Feature Service Sports Writer
New York—Now that the furor over Princeton's "bumping off" incident has slackened perhaps we can introduce the forgotten man: Chuck Fenske.
All he did was to win the Princeton mile. But he got lost in the shuffle. Like a bridegroom, he was overlooked in all the fuss over Wooderson and Rideout and Old Man Cunningham. I'm not kidding, though. He was there. And he won.
Chuck just kept putting one foot ahead of the other, kept close behind Solicitor Syd, the pace-setter, and, when they struck the last furlong, he decided it was time to quit treading water and go somewhere in a hurry.
But, with a juicy international incident a-simmering, everyone turned his back to our Chuck and began demanding: "Was Woody fouled, or was he?"

CHUCK FENSKE

Clash "Unavoidable"
From my press-box perch I couldn't tell whether Wooderson stepped on the rail, bore out and bumped Blaine Rideout, or was bumped. Perhaps Rideout cut in a trifle too hastily. But it was just one of those unavoidable accidents that occur in the heat of a race.
Fenske can do better than the 4:11 he had at Princeton. But he allowed Wooderson to set the pace and, after Woody dilly-dallied through a 64-second first quarter, it was certain that the ballyhooed "mile of the century" was a fluke.
It seems as though Fenske or Lou Zamperini, Southern California's intercollegiate mile champion, likely will represent Uncle Sam in the 1,500-meter race at the 1940 Olympics. On the evidence to date they're our best milers. Cunningham and San Romani are getting no younger fast.

There should be a great race at Lincoln, Neb., July 4 when Fenske, Cunningham, Rideout, San Romani and Zamperini get together in the 1,500-meter contest.
As a Freshman, 4:40
But, back to Fenske: He couldn't do better than 4:40 as a Wisconsin freshman. But as a junior he won the Big Ten indoor mile in 4:12.9. Since then he's been coming along strong.
He won the 1938 Big Ten indoor event in 4:11. And then ran the fastest mile in Midwest history with a 4:08.9 to win the Armour Tech relays. Tackling fast company in 1938, he lost to Cunningham by a stride of 4:09.3 in Chicago's Banker's mile.

This year he beat Cunningham in the Chicago relays in 4:12.8; whipped the negro, John Borican, over one thousand yards; and beat San Romani in the Memphis Cotton Carnival mile in 4:11.5. He also beat Cunningham in the indoor Columbia mile and he won the N. C. A. A. mile.
When the Olympic roll is called next summer, Cunningham may find that he is too old to match strides with the youngsters. The same goes for San Romani, Fenske, Zamperini, Rideout, John Munkit of Missouri and Leslie MacMitchell of N. Y. U. are the boys to watch.

Each team used four pitchers today. The game lasted 5 hours and 15 minutes with Whitlow the Dodgers, staying the longest, 16 innings.
The Bees scored their runs in the second when West, Cucinello and Majeski all singled and Miller sent up a sacrifice fly.
The Dodgers scored once in the third on Coscarart's double, Wyatt's single and Almada's infield out. They tied it in the eighth on hits by Ted, Camilli and Hoy.

FELLER BLANKS TIGERS, 5 TO 0

Bengal Big Guns Spiked; 13 Batters Fanned In Night Game

Cleveland, June 27 (AP)—Bob Feller held the Detroit Tigers to one hit, a single by Earl Averill, as the Indians scored a 5 to 0 shutout tonight in the first American League night game in Cleveland. A crowd of 55,305 saw the game.
Feller fanned 13 batters, getting Barney McCosky four times and Hank Greenberg three times on strikes.
Buck Newsom, who started on the mound for the Tigers, was removed for a pinch hitter in the third inning after the Tribe nicked him for four runs in the first two frames. George Coffman followed on the mound.
Cleveland scored twice in the first inning on a triple by Hemsley, a walk to Campbell, a single by Chapman, and Trosky's sacrifice fly. The Indians added two more in the second on singles by Grimes, Webb, and Campbell, and a sacrifice by Hemsley.
Campbell's single in the fourth scored Feller, who had walked.
Baseball celebrities attending the game included President Will Harridge of the American League, W. O. Briggs, president of the Detroit Tigers, and Leslie O'Connor, secretary to Baseball Commissioner Kenesaw Mountain Landis.
Averill Gets Hit
A huge crowd of 55,000 fans in the big lake front stadium roared its approval of Feller's fireball, which virtually was blowing down the Tigers faster than they could come up. The young star struck out at least one man in every inning except the eighth, and in the sixth he retired the side on strikes.

It was left to Averill, a former teammate, to carry the villain's role and ruin Feller's no-hitter at that same sixth frame.
Opening the inning, McCosky and Pete Fox had fanned. Averill, a favorite of Indian fans and star of yesterday's game in his first Cleveland appearance since he joined the Tigers, came to bat and drove a single to center.
The blow killed Feller's prospects for a no-hitter and started a series of events which gave the Indians worrisome moments. Feller walked Higgins. Then he walked Kress to fill the bases.
Two were out, and Greenberg came to bat. And Feller got down to serious business, and Hank struck out.
The defeat cost the Tigers their one-day hold on third place, the Indians taking it back again.

SPILLING the DOPE

BY JOHNNY INKSLINGER

EVEN A Glenn Cunningham can't expect to run 4:10 miles forever. Yet a number of keen observers refuse to write the great Kansan's track obituary... rather expect him to again meet the emergency when he defends the national 1500-meter championship at Lincoln, July 4... A year ago in Buffalo, Cunningham beat Chuck Fenske by no more than a foot in 3:52.5, with Archie San Romani, Louis Zamperini, Josef Mostert, and Blaine Rideout trailing... The younger men, such as the bespectacled and barrel-chested Fenske, winner of the "mile in a century" at Princeton, and the Southern California junior, Zamperini, are stepping on his heels.

CUBS DEFEATED BY CARDINALS

Warneke Allows 7 Hits In Annexing His 9th Victory

St. Louis, June 27 (AP)—The Chicago Cubs had lean Lon Warneke in a hot spot in the first inning today but he fought his way out, marked up his ninth victory against two defeats and drove in two runs as the St. Louis Cardinals won 5 to 2.
Stanley Hack opened the game with a home run. Billy Herman doubled. Two walks following an infield out filled the bases. Then Warneke forced G. Russell to pop to Johnny Mize and Gleason fled to Terry Moore.
Warneke had the situation well in hand thereafter but Manager Blades yanked him in the ninth as Manager Gabby Hartnett singled to open the inning. Bob Bowman then retired the side.
One of Warneke's two doubles came in the Cards' four-run fourth driving in two scores after Enos Slaughter's first homer of the season had accounted for a pair.

CARNIVAL MAN IS SENTENCED

Attacker of Menominee Child Gets One to Five Years

Menominee, June 27—Evans B. Sparr, alias Robert Evans, 41-year-old operator of a merry-go-round at the World of Pleasure shows which operated at Marinette during the past week, was sentenced to serve one to five years in Waupun prison today by Marinette County Judge William Haase, after he pleaded guilty to taking indecent liberties with a 10-year-old Menominee girl near the carnival grounds.

Sparr was arraigned before Police Judge Loren Tait Monday afternoon and admitted the charge. He was bound to county court and bond, set at $5,000, was not executed.

"I just can't help myself," he was quoted by District Attorney Norman B. Langill. "I just get the urge."

Sparr, a native of Shreveport, La., was arrested in Marinette by Deputy Sheriff John Reindl of Menominee, after hearing of the incident from the little Menominee girl.

Sparr admitted enticing the child to an abandoned box car near the carnival lot with money and carnival tickets, but he denied attacking her.

Race Track Fraud Nipped In Detroit; Three Are Arrested

Detroit, June 27 (AP)—Recorder's Judge Donald Van Zile today signed warrants charging three men with attempting a $12,500 race track swindle. The three, arrested Monday, are George Raymond, 74, of Battle Creek, Mich., and Jack Porter, 26, and Charles Wilson, 40, who said they were from Los Angeles.

The specific charge in the warrants was larceny by trick and the complaining witnesses was Earl Lipchin, Eastport, Md. coin machine manufacturer.

Lipchin and his son, Jack, said they met Porter and Raymond at a Battle Creek sanitarium several weeks ago after which they met Wilson who was said to be a big racing gambler. The Lipchins were told, according to Police Inspector William Dresden, that $52,500 was to be bet on a horse that "couldn't lose" at the fair grounds race track here and they were offered an opportunity to buy in for $12,500.

Police arrested the men in a hotel room as the Lipchins ostensibly went through with the transaction. Dresden said he found $42,500 in fake bills with a little genuine money on the outside in possession of the trio.
