TOO HOT, COLD, SAY FISHERMEN

Variable Weather Over State Gives Anglers Headaches

The weatherman has been playing tricks on the fisherman, who has been obliged to carefully select his fishing spots as a result of variable weather throughout the state. Sectional reports received in the past week by the fish division of the state department of conservation show the weather running the scale from too-hot to too-cold and rainy, with fishing luck and prospects acting accordingly.

Western parts of the upper peninsula saw continued popularity of bass and bluegills, and better trout fishing. Lake Superior counties reported all species were doing fairly well. Scattered showers in the Menominee-Delta district failed to bring up water levels to help the trout situation, but pike in large numbers were taken.

Eastern upper peninsula counties told of growing success of lake trout trolling. Lake fishing and trout casting were "holding their own" especially during ideal weather early and late in the day.

Pike Fishing Good
The lower peninsula, at its northern portion, experienced rains that varied the results in streams. The grasshopper season was found well on its way and fairly productive. In the Alpena-Montmorency-Presque Isle section, exceptional pike fishing marked the lake fishing, and bass and panfish were taking flies and minnows better than usual.

Counties surrounding Roscommon told of good results only on certain lakes for pan fishing. The section east of there reported all species giving good angling. Northwest of Grand Rapids, a six-county area underwent heavy rains which improved stream fishing in general, although some localities had high water difficulty. Deep water pan fishing was most productive in southwestern counties, although some good catches with flies were recorded. Calico bass in that district were active. South central counties divided between good and fair fishing for bass, bluegills and wall-eye. Southeastern counties reported bass catches were far above average.

Governor Will Help Combat Delinquency In Juvenile Cases

Lansing, Aug. 16 (AP)—Governor Dickinson pledged his support today to a plan to enlist the aid of churches in a war on juvenile delinquency in Michigan.

He refused, however, a request of Dr. Lowell J. Carr, director of the Michigan Child Guidance Institute at Ann Arbor, to create a state commission to enlist churches.

"Only recently I abolished a number of such committees because I felt that the state had too many of them and they were not doing much," the governor said. "To create another . . . would be rather inconsistent."

Dickinson said he had no objection to the institute creating a committee of its own to work with churches.

Japan Regrets Slapping
Informants said that a conference in Danzig yesterday between League of Nations Commission Prof. Carl J. Burkhardt; Arthur Greiser, Danzig senate president, and Marian Chadecki, Polish commissioner general, over customs administration was "purely technical, not political."

Official Poland remained detached from all settlement reports, although it was said the British-Polish alliance soon would be signed formally.

Great Britain was said to view the situation as "serious but not alarming." However a census of her manpower was ordered.

In the Far East Japan directed her North China forces to strive for "the friendliest relations" with Americans. The action followed a strong protest by the American government against the face-slapping Tuesday of Mrs. Mary Frances Richard, American widow, by a Japanese entry.

Japanese forces drove the Chinese from a 13-mile section of Kwangtung province, bordering British Hongkong. In a swift move which caused British troops to mount guard along their side of the boundary.

PRIVATE SHOT DOWN
Danzig, Aug. 16 (AP)—Polish and Nazi officials were brought face to face across a conference table in a new effort at peace negotiations today as bitterness was heightened by the killing of a Polish soldier by Danzig border guards.

Both Polish and Danzig officials were investigating the killing, which occurred early today on Danzig territory near the border station of Kohling about six miles south of the city itself. Private Aleksander Rozanovski of the Polish army was shot to death.

Private Rozanovski was the third man to die in border incidents in recent months. One Pole and one Danziger were killed in the other shootings.

While there seemed to be no immediate inclination on the part of the Poles to make a serious issue of today's killing, a sharp protest was expected.

Danzig officials said Rozanovski was shot by three guards when he refused to answer a command to halt about 300 yards from the border. According to the Danzig story Rozanovski fired once at the Danzig guards before he was shot down.

Polish investigators said the soldier apparently lost his way in the early morning darkness and was only about 17 yards from the border when he was slain without raising his rifle.

The Poles were especially bitter about the detention of two Polish customs inspectors who were arrested when they attempted to examine the contents of two ships entering the harbor. Danzig police said the inspectors and a third Pole were held on suspicion of bringing in anti-Nazi leaflets.

Polish circles insist that the two ships contained munitions for the Danzig "protective police force."

would continue to "do our best" to meet problems of government. Tributes For Green

Both Vandenberg and Dickinson paid tribute to former Governor Green and Fred Chapman, "fathers" of the Free Fair which has become a traditional stamping ground for Michigan Republican leaders.

Their audience included Chairman James E. Thomson of the state central committee; congressional and legislative leaders and members of the administration's official family; Harry S. Toy, former supreme court justice who unsuccessfully sought the gubernatorial nomination in the 1938 primary election and others influential in party gatherings.

The last group included former State Treasurer Frank D. McKay of Grand Rapids and Edward N. Barnard of Detroit, out-state and Wayne county ring-leaders, respectively, of a coalition that ruled the last Republican state convention. McKay and Barnard sat together at luncheon, but refused to be photographed together and expressed irritation when a newspaper camera man snapped them in a "candid" pose.

Purchase Of Second Father Divine Heaven Near Roosevelts Blocked

New York, Aug. 16 (AP)—Despite President and Mrs. Roosevelt's assurances they would have no objections, the plans of Father Divine, Little Harlem negro cult leader, for a second "heaven" near the Roosevelts' ancestral Hyde Park home, apparently went a-kiltering tonight.

For from swank Newport, R. I., came word that Mrs. James Laurens Van Allen, socialite-owner of the beautiful, 700-acre Vanderbilt estate, would not sell it to Divine or his followers. Father Divine had offered $80,000 for the estate, once valued at $500,000.

The negotiations, carried on between representatives of Mrs. Van Allen and negotiators secretly representing Divine, were revealed today when Divine's white secretary, John Lamb, made public a series of letters between the cult leader and Mr. and Mrs. Roosevelt.

Later, Divine disclosed the negotiations were stalled. "It was brought to my attention today," he said "that she (Mrs. Van Allen) said she'd refuse to sell to any of my followers."

But Mrs. Van Allen's refusal may not stop him, he indicated. "I understand it is for sale," he said, "and if they (his followers) desire to have it, they cannot hold them out of it, if it is sold to the public."

Mrs. Van Allen, mother of Princess Louise Mdivani, widow of Prince Serge Mdivani, inherited the estate from her uncle, Frederick Vanderbilt.

In the series of letters made public by Lamb both Mr. and Mrs. Roosevelt agreed with the father that he had the right to buy the property. They both made it plain, however, that the president had hoped that the estate, because of its great wealth of mature and rare trees, might be made into an arboretum for the public. Divine said that was all right with him, under the condition that if his people bought the place "they will give me and my immediate staff a suite in the main building, but no doubt will allow the main floor to be used as a public museum."

Divine already has one heaven up the Hudson, a 500-acre property just across the river from Hyde Park, which he bought last year—without consulting the Roosevelts—from Howland Spennard, a bitter critic of the president. (Other Divine properties are 22 Manhattan heavens, a 50-room "private retreat" for the evangelist himself here on Madison avenue, 50 upstate heavens; mansions in fashionable sections of Yonkers and New Rochelle, N. Y., and prospective heavens in exclusive Newport, R. I., and Chestnut Hills in Philadelphia and elsewhere—presumably financed from a $15,000,000 fund which the father's followers are reported to have amassed.)

Escapers At Ionia Free Only 2 Hours

Jackie Coogan Gets $126,000 In Court; Trust Fund Planned

Los Angeles, Aug. 16 (AP)—Jackie Coogan's long battle for a share in his earnings as a child movie star ended today with superior court approval of an agreement giving him $126,000. The other half of the fortune estimated by attorneys at $252,000 went to the 23-year-old actor's mother, Mrs. Lillian Coogan Bernstein, and his stepfather, Arthur Bernstein.

Coogan's attorney said Jackie's share would go into a lifetime trust fund. Young Coogan started his action for an accounting of his earnings, which he estimated at $4,000,000, more than a year ago. A preliminary settlement was reached last April pending liquidation of parts of the Coogan-Bernstein holdings.

Pending in superior court is a divorce suit filed by Jackie's wife, Betty Grable, film actress.

KUHN ALMOST HAS FIGHT IN DIES HEARING

tering an indistinguishable combination of German and English words. Starnes cut him short with an imperious gesture and a question whether the purpose of the organization was not the establishment here of a government like that in Germany.

"That's an absolute lie!" Kuhn shouted. "A flat lie!" Starnes jumped to his feet and lunged toward the witness, stumbling through photographers and newsmen. A big Capitol policeman ploughed through after Kuhn but seemingly could not overtake the irate congressman. Another made for Kuhn, who, red-faced; was still placidly seated in the witness chair.

In all Starnes advanced about five paces, and still had another half-dozen to go before he could reach the witness. There he stopped. "Don't you call me a liar!" he cried.

By that time an officer had gotten between Starnes and Kuhn. Many spectators were doubled up with laughter. Chairman Dies was thunderously pounding for order. Still standing where he ended his charge, smoothing the rumpled sleeves of his white linen coat, Starnes turned to Kuhn and said, "Didn't you testify that Mr. Hitler was anti-Communist and anti-Semitic?" "Yes."

"And that your organization is anti-Communist and anti-Semitic?" "Yes."

Gets $500 A Month
Starnes looked triumphantly at the audience and observed that his point was proved. Quietly Dies suggested that perhaps Whitley had best resume the questioning. He did so, but Starnes was back again a little while later.

"You are ready to join any movement in the United States that is anti-Marxist?" he asked. "Yes."

"Are you against Nazi-ism in the United States?" "Absolutely. It is something for Germany but it wouldn't fit the United States. Conditions are different here."

"Is there any difference between national socialism in Germany and the type of government you would favor here?" "We have two entirely different problems."

Kuhn testified, too, that he heads several organizations allied with the bund, all of which jointly pay him a salary of $300 monthly.

When the bund held its celebrated Madison Square Garden rally last winter, he told the committee, Father Charles E. Coughlin, Major General George Van Horn Moseley, retired, a recent occupant of the committee's witness chair—aid James True of America First, Inc. were invited to be speakers. All declined, he said.

Kuhn testified he had reprinted a number of Coughlin's speeches for distribution to bund members, and had also issued documents defending and praising the Detroit priest.

"Are you an admirer of Mr. Hitler?" Dies asked in ending the day's session. "I am an admirer of Hitler, of course."

"Do you think he has done a great job?" "Yes."

Ex-Marine To Preside At Legion Convention

Department headquarters for the state American Legion convention at Escanaba will be opened at the Delta hotel at 5 a. m. Saturday by W. Bea Waldrup, ex-marine, who is rounding out his term as state Legion commander, and Donald G. Glascoff, department adjutant for the past several years. Several other state Legion officials are arriving in Escanaba today and tomorrow, and a pre-convention meeting of the department executive committee is scheduled for 3 p. m. Saturday on the second floor of the Elks Temple.

Legionnaire Waldrup was elected 20th Michigan Legion commander at the state convention held in Battle Creek last year, and is a veteran, with an outstanding war record.

He enlisted in the United States Marine Corps in December 1917; received his preliminary training at Parris Island, South Carolina, and Quantico, Virginia, being assigned to the Sixth Machine Gun Battalion with which outfit he saw overseas service in the bloody Belleau Woods battle and at Soissons. He was wounded at Soissons and was in an overseas hospital four months, being invalided home and discharged from active service from the Marine Corps in April 1919, bearing a disability which remains with him today as a result of his service.

Bea Waldrup was born November 2, 1895 at Oxford, Indiana, his parents being pioneer Indiana settlers, his great grandfather having been born in an Indiana log cabin and the family line having continued more than 200 years in Virginia and Indiana. In fact, so long has been the male side of his family in this country that Commander Waldrup does not know exactly what his original nationality was, probably either Scandinavian or German. On his mother's side he is of Scotch-Irish descent.

As a youth he attended West Lafayette, Indiana, high school, and then moved with his family to Colorado where he attended Central Business college at Colorado Springs. He came to Detroit in 1916 and was employed by the General Grocery company, remaining in that city until his enlistment in the Marine Corps.

Commander Waldrup recalls that in 1916 he went to Windsor, Ontario, with the idea of joining the Canadian Expeditionary force, but hadn't any more than left the Detroit-Windsor ferry than a big Scotch Highlander Sergeant accosted him on the street and "balled" him out for not being in the army. This angered him so much that he made an about face and returned to Detroit, so that the Canadians lost a good soldier and the American Expeditionary Forces gained one a little later.

Following the war he returned to Detroit; attended the University of Detroit for four years graduating from that institution; and later also attended the Detroit Institute of Technology for a year. He has been connected with the Detroit Bank since 1921 and is now assistant cashier in that financial institution.

He resides in his home in Detroit with Mrs. Waldrup and his mother.

Want Car Owners To Assist During Legion Convention

The transportation committee for the Legion convention is sending out an "S.O.S." for more car owners to assist in the transportation of convention visitors. A number of owners have already generously come forward offering the use of their cars for the many errands and the moving of out-of-town Legionnaires and members of the auxiliary.

Because of the large number of convention delegates who will be coming by boat and rail, a large number of automobiles will be needed for the state American Legion convention sessions Aug. 19 to 23, and those who will have cars available for all or part of the convention week are asked to list their names with the Chamber of Commerce, so that they may be assigned by the transportation committee. Special stickers, and special parking spaces will be provided for the local courtesy cars.

Missing Nahma Man Not Located; Search Halted By Officers

After combing miles of territory in the Nahma district, searchers Wednesday gave up their hunt for John Summers, 74-year-old Nahma resident who has been missing from his home since last Friday. The search failed to turn up a clue regarding Summer's trail after he left his home.

Assisting officers of the sheriff's department were CCC enrollees from Morman Creek camp in charge of Charles L. Grodeski, Albert Morley, Richard Ewald and Thomas Ohl. Alieu Mercier of the Bay de Noquet company, Nahma, also aided.

"Thanks On Armistice Day," Suggests Local Man; Or On a Monday

When the Daily Press inquiring reporter questioned 13 (yes, thirteen) Escanabans yesterday in regard to their opinions on the change, or at least proposed week earlier change, in the date of the annual Thanksgiving Day, which was announced in President Roosevelt's proclamation to the nation three days ago, the results were somewhat unique.

For instance, five citizens, including an office girl, a college student home for a vacation, one masculine and one feminine soda fountain attendant, and one young mother and housewife, had never heard of it. Reason, in a chorus—"we haven't read the papers very much this week."

Two were rather mildly in favor. One, a barber, said, "It's all right if the people want it that way. Why blame the president? The businessmen wanted it that way in the first place."

The second, a housewife, said, cautiously, "It would be better balanced—" and added hastily, "—but it makes no difference to me."

"It's Screwy!" And then, as there always are and always should be, two were against the measure, heart and soul.

Said one, "I don't think they can do it. It's screwy!" And the other, staunchly, "I can't see why they want to change."

The majority of local citizens, however, were one or two jumps ahead of the administration and everyone else, and have it all doped out for themselves. Their suggestions and views, some surprisingly original and perhaps not so dubious at that, follow:

The first, a prominent local businessman, decided that a combination of Armistice Day and Thanksgiving might be appropriate and very sensible, if the order of things was going to be changed. "Thanksgiving-Armistice Day"

"Armistice Day is a time of thanksgiving, anyway," he pointed out. "The distribution would be better, too," he added. "We would have one holiday, Labor Day, in September, a second, the Thank-

Saturday or Monday," he firmly stated. "Should Be On Monday" A college man, home for the summer, concurred in this belief, saying that it would help, since it would make the week-end longer and permit a more lengthy stay at home and likewise make it possible to come home from school early enough to spend some time there before returning.

And similarly ran the view of a storekeeper, who said that a Monday or Saturday or would extend the businessman's holiday so he would have time to do something really worth while in the line of recreation. Thursday, he asserted, split not only the holiday, but took time out of the business week and wasted the days after the day off, as business did not return to normal for the rest of the week anyway.

Two Thanksgivings? Finally, there was the gentleman who very simply said, "Why not just have two holidays?"

First Holy Mass Of Fr. Fabian Jolicoeur, Flat Rock, Celebrated Here

St. Anne's church of this city was the scene of the beautiful impressive ceremony on Tuesday morning, the First Holy Mass of Rev. Fr. Fabian Jolicoeur, of Holy Family parish, of Flat Rock, whose ordination to the priesthood took place on Saturday at West DePere, Wis. The occasion was a particularly joyous one for members of the young priest's home community, in that he is the first member of Holy Family parish to be ordained to the priesthood, and his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Paul J. Jolicoeur, were the first couple to be married in Holy Family church.

Officers of Mass
Assisting Rev. Fr. Fabian in the celebration of his first mass, which was at 10:30 o'clock, were Rev. Fr. M. H. LaViolette, pastor of Holy Family parish, who was assistant priest; Rev. Fr. Francis Guynet, deacon; Rev. Fr. Joseph E. Guertin, sub-deacon; and Rev. Fr. Lester Bourgeois, master of ceremonies. The sermon, an inspiring tribute to the young man and his vocation, was delivered by Rev. Fr. George Laforest, of Vulcan, who was formerly pastor of Father Fabian's home parish. Many clergymen of neighboring parishes also were present.

Gladioli were used with lighted candles in the beautiful altar decorations. The Mass in Honor of Our Lady of Pompeii, Eduardo Marzo, was sung by the soloist choir of the church, with Miss Lucile DeGrand, organist director, and Leonard Moreau sang Millard's "Ave Maria" at the offertory. In the procession from the rectory to the church, which preceded the mass, the newly ordained priest was escorted by Fourth Degree Knights of Columbus and the acolytes and members of the clergy. The little bride, in the traditional ceremony was Father Fabian's sister Lorraine, who was beautifully costumed in white, and her attendants, also in white, were Jerome Besson and Charles Lancoir, who were pages, and Winifred Lancoir and Marlene Klug, flower girls.

Testimonial Dinner
A testimonial dinner, sponsored by Holy Family parish, was served in honor of Father Fabian in St. Anne's parish hall, Rev. Fr. George Laforest was toastmaster of the dinner program. Speakers were Rev. Fr. Guertin, who gave the welcome; Rev. Fr. Nolan McKevitt, of St. Patrick's church, whose subject was "Our Priesthood"; Joseph Groos, who presented the greetings of the laity; Rev. Fr. Leonard Wagner, O. Praem, who spoke as "The Voice of St. Norbert's"; Rev. Fr. LaViolette, and Rev. Fr. Fabian, whose talk was in the form of a response to the honor accorded him. Music during the dinner was played by the Joseph Busineau's string ensemble with Miss Margaret Clouse, director.

The festivities of the occasion closed Tuesday evening with a reception for Father Fabian, attended by seventy-five guests, held at the family home in Flat Rock.

WE, the WOMEN

BY RUTH MILLETT

A mother might as well relax when she sees that her daughter isn't the college boy's dream. For there is nothing she can do about it but offer bad advice.

A mother—no matter how young she is— invariably has the quaint idea that a girl can make herself "terrific" simply by trying. She doesn't see why her daughter didn't ask the new boy she met the night before to come and see her. Or why she says, "I'd rather die" when her mother suggests that she invite the most popular boy in town to her club dance.

She thinks that by pointing out the tricks the local glamor girl uses—her own shy daughter can be shaken out of her awe of her. The sad thing is, though, the mother's ideas seem logical, the girl is right.

If she invited the new boy over to her house and he came, she wouldn't get anywhere with him. He would resent being hooked in by a girl the other boys ignored, and he would drop her to start pursuing one of the popular girls the moment he had them spotted.

She can't ask the good-looking boy with the good-looking car to her club dance, because even if she screwed up courage he would have a polite excuse—and in all likelihood he would tell a few people that she had asked him. She knows the tricks the neighborhood glamor girl uses. But she can't quite put them over herself, so what good does it do her to see through the girl? The boys don't.

FUTURE IS FAR MORE IMPORTANT
The mother ought to accept things as they are at present—and concentrate her efforts on seeing that the daughter develops into the kind of girl who is popular at 22 instead of 16.

By that time she will be dating men old enough to appreciate intelligence—and to make up their own minds about a girl, instead of following the crowd.

It's a funny thing, but the most charming and successful women seldom were "terrific" at 16. Both a mother and daughter, ought to realize that—and not be lickered by the decision of 18-year-old boys.

Escanaba Pioneer Family Member Is Ninety Years Old

Mrs. Elizabeth Hansen of Rockford, Ill., a former resident of this city, and a sister of the late John Roemer, pioneer of Escanaba, celebrated her ninetieth birthday anniversary Tuesday at a family dinner at the home of her grand-niece, Mrs. Celeste Peterson, 705 South Tenth street.

The dinner, for which a large birthday cake, and seasonal flowers formed an attractive centerpiece, was followed by an informal reception.

Among guests at the party were Mr. and Mrs. Siphon and daughters, Maybelle and Elaine of Chicago, Mr. Siphon, a grand-nephew of Mrs. Hansen.

Mrs. Hansen, who is well known to many of the older residents of the city, is spending a part of the summer here with her niece, Mrs. Caroline Quinn, 905 Ludington street.

Each year, Canadian smokers account for 700 cigarettes and 14 cigars each. Nearly 7,000,000, 000 cigarettes are consumed in that country annually.

The circus this year is completely equipped for any emergency, having its own ambulance, doctors, nurses ready to administer aid to any trainers...

The circus is free to the public but seating and standing room is limited. Last year it was estimated that five thousand people jammed the park with the last few hundred able to see only the giraffe's head...

Hermansville Band Coming to Legion Convention Here

Hermansville, Mich.—The Floriana Post of Hermansville will head its delegation to the state Legion convention at Escanaba with the high school band of that village.

The band will appear in its new blue and gold caps and capes which the Legion played a very important part in securing for the Hermansville group. These new uniforms were purchased last spring just before the close of school and the band has been a hit in its various appearances since they were uniformed.

The high school band appeared last Sunday at the Lions celebration held in the Wells state park in Cedar River. It has also appeared in various fairs and celebrations in the nearby counties. This is the third year for the local band and its rise to an organization of forty pieces is a tribute to the leadership of Mr. Lucke, their director and to the diligent practice of the members of the band.

Lure Book Popular; Liked By Michigan Tourists, Travelers

Marquette, Mich.—At the recent meeting of the Upper Peninsula Development Bureau's executive committee in this city, it was decided to issue another edition of the organization's Lure Book next year.

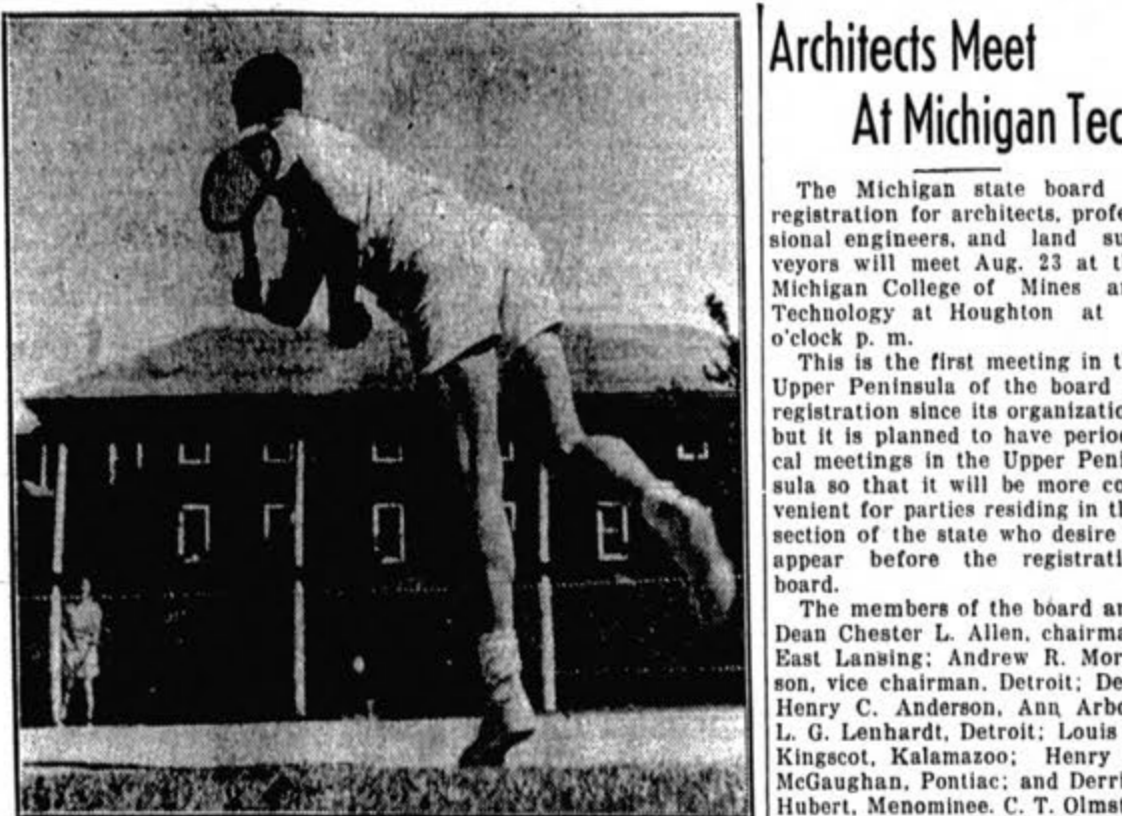

The 1940 book will be the sixth of the series. It will be printed by plate process, with new covers, color scheme, art work and editorial copy throughout. A new decorative lure map of Michigan in color will go with each book.

"The various editions of the bureau's Lure Book have won a unique place for themselves in the resort and travel world," said J. Herbert of Manistique, the bureau's president. "Copies of the book have circulated throughout the earth and have brought numberless appreciative comments not only from tourists and travelers, but from members of the printing and publishing crafts. The publication has an undoubted carry-over value and appeal, and the issues have been filed and are in constant use by thousands of reference libraries, schools, and other institutions and groups contacting the public."

"With regular elimination of toxic impurities through the use of Krugon," said Mrs. Anna Johnson, 1115 First Ave., Faribault, Minnesota, "My health problems have been solved. I was totally unable to work, in fact I could hardly walk and then only with the aid of a cane. I did not have complete use of my body from my hips down and my arms were badly affected too. I had to have assistance in washing, dressing and combing my hair as I could not get my hands to my head. I could not eat a meal without distress with gas and bloating afterwards. Often I would blast until I felt I would smother as it became difficult for me to breathe. It seemed I could get no relief but finally I began Krugon's use and what a difference it made."

MRS. ANNA JOHNSON

"The quick change that Krugon brought actually surprised me," continued Mrs. Johnson. "I am now feeling fine, am working every day and my former health troubles no longer bother me. Those toxic poisons are being properly eliminated from my body and the awful aches and pains have been relieved. I enjoy the foods I want without discomfort afterwards, have full use of my body, get around with ease and cannot begin to praise Krugon enough for its wonderful benefits to me." BEHIND THE SCENES

By Bruce Catton

First of a United States tour series by Bruce Catton, NEA Washington columnist who's out calling on America.

Joseph N. Pew, Jr.

Philadelphia—If you want to find out how the Republican party aims to get back into power, and what it is likely to do with that power if it succeeds, you might profitably study the group which is booming Gov. Arthur H. James of Pennsylvania for the nomination.

This group may never nominate Governor James. But it has played such a very large part in the recent refashioning and revitalizing of the party's national machinery that it is apt to have a great deal to say about who is nominated and what he does afterward.

Dominant figure in the group is Joseph N. Pew, Jr., of Philadelphia, wealthy vice president of the Sun Oil Co. Teamed with him is Col. Carl Estes of Texas, another oil man. James, Estes, and Pew recently returned from a 10-day Canadian fishing trip.

The following day Estes announced at Harrisburg that he thought James "an ideal candidate," and James remarked that while he was not actively seeking the nomination, "no man could refuse" the nomination if it were offered.

Neither Pew nor Estes does much talking. It is possible, however, to make a fair summary of a general political beliefs held by this group.

These rest largely on a firm belief that a thumping business revival is just around the corner, that it will stay around the corner until Franklin Roosevelt leaves the White House. It is the president's general personal attitude toward business and business's needs which is chiefly objected to, rather than any specific New Deal measure.

Believe Country Ripe For Change From New Deal

Next there comes a firm belief that the country is ripe for a change—that the people are fed up with the New Deal and sorely disillusioned, that platforms that do not matter very much, that the American people generally vote against someone rather than for someone, and that right now they are getting their mouths fixed to vote against Mr. Roosevelt.

The group also tends to feel that it is time for the old system of party responsibility to be revived; that it should be the party, rather than the individual office holder, who shapes policies, the party to whom the voter's loyalty should be directed.

Depending on your point of view, you could probably say either that this means a leaning toward "weak" presidents or that it represents a reaction against one-man control.

But if this is a business group, which is inclined to see perils in too much democracy, it is not a low-wage group. Quite the contrary, in fact.

High Wages Held Necessary To Return of Prosperity

He got a scorching answer. High wages, he was told, are essential to prosperity. Prices must come down, yes; but any attempt to reduce wages ought to be resisted to the utmost.

On relief, the chances are that this group would favor returning control of direct relief to counties and townships, under state responsibility.

In place of WPA, there is suggested a system much like PWA—direct contracts for any construction work the government goes, with full prevailing wages paid. This, it is admitted, would be an expensive way to handle the work relief program—theoretical. Actually, it is argued, it would be much cheaper, for a business revival would immediately be touched off by this system and the relief rolls would dwindle rapidly.

Here, rather roughly outlined, are some of the leading viewpoints within this group. And whether Governor James becomes the nominee or not, it is extremely likely that this group will have a great deal to say about both the nomination and the ensuing campaign.

SERIAL STORY

Murder on the Boardwalk

BY ELINORE COWAN STONE

COPYRIGHT, 1939, NEA SERVICE, INC.

CAST OF CHARACTERS
CHRISTINE THORENSEN—came to visit her cousin, found a mystery.
BILL YARDLEY—had a reason for watching Christine.
GEORGE WILMET—employed Christine as a Boardwalk artist.
CHANDRA—looked into the future—and into the past.

Yesterday: Unable to locate her cousin, Christine moves to the hotel named in her mysterious telephone conversation. Almost down to her last cent, Christine accepts Wilmet's offer, agrees to do sketches at his Boardwalk concession.

CHAPTER III
Christine hurried back to the hotel to assemble her sketching materials. She was to meet her new employer by the Twentieth Century Pier. The new employer's name, she had learned, was Wilmet—George Wilmet.

When it had come to giving her own name, Christine had hesitated with an unprecedented reticence. Then, almost as if someone else had spoken, she heard herself blurt out, "Nevin—Grace Nevin."

Hurrying along the crowded Boardwalk, avoiding the omnipresent wheel-chairs, the loitering pedestrians, and the pigeons that swarmed under foot, eager for the grain thrown them from the benches that lined the promenade, Christine tried to explain her squeamishness about giving her name. Eventually she excused it on the grounds that Cousin Emma would be embarrassed to find that a Thorenson was working on the Surf City Boardwalk.

She found her workshop to be a small booth next door to the Twentieth Century Pier—one of the noisiest amusement centers along the Boardwalk. It was several feet below the level of the walk, and you went down to it by a ramp at one side. The "studio" was frugally furnished with an easel, a camp stool, and at the rear, on the beach side, with a bench some eight feet long, having a slab of concrete for a top.

The place had apparently taken a beating from dampness and frost, for the walls were cracked and crumbling; and someone had recently mended the top of the bench and the floor about it with fresh cement, into which Christine's heel sank and stuck.

Mr. Wilmet, coming to her rescue, was nervously apologetic: "I'm so sorry, Miss Thorenson. I had to do some repairing."
Christine got out her sketching materials and prayed for a chance to use them.

When, after 15 minutes, no customers appeared, Christine suggested, "Nothing draws a crowd like the sight of someone working at an easel. Why don't I begin with the Maharajah of Bahawalpur—or whatever his name is?"

She indicated a figure that stood by one of the pillars of the pier.

He was, as Christine had intimated, a magnificent spectacle—his warm brown skin set off by a robe of some rich Oriental material and belted with a golden cord, through which was thrust an exquisitely chased dagger. About the head of the "maharajah" was draped a turban of bright silk, fastened with a single gem; and his slender brown feet were laced into jeweled sandals. He stood like a statue, his arms majestically folded, gazing with brooding brows out to sea.

Already Christine was at work, and almost immediately a curious crowd began to gather along the railing of the Boardwalk above. As she sketched, she heard someone say, "She's drawing Chandra—you know—that Indian swami over there."

As if he had heard, the gorgeous Oriental turned, fixed his eyes upon Christine, and detached himself from the pillar. Although he was not a tall man, there was in his bearing an air of authority before which the crowd fell back. He moved to the railing and stood, looking down. His eyes, Christine was surprised to find, were not dark, but a tawny brown, with lurking yellow lights.

At length the "swami" extended a hand and said in a voice astonishingly deep and resonant: "It is good. I will take it."
When Christine passed the sketch to him over the railing, he slipped a bill into her hand and turned away.

"Wait!" Christine called. "Your change—"
"I have said that it is good," he returned, and strode away. A woman said, "Of course that people advertise each other."
It did prove to be good advertising. Soon Christine was busy. For a while Mr. Wilmet hovered on the outskirts of the booth; but eventually he melted away into the crowd, and Christine did not see him again that day.

He had been surprisingly generous about her commission. Although she had worked only a little over a half day, it would be almost $4.
She must, however, look for cheaper quarters. She found a room on a side street, and having already committed herself as "Grace Nevin," she registered under that name, and hurried back to the Crestview to retrieve her belongings, and see if Cousin Emma had not sent some message.

But there was no message. Christine went upstairs, puzzled and uneasy. She told herself that it was this uneasiness which accounted for her strange feeling that something was amiss in her room.

She had unpacked very little the night before. Getting ready to move should not take long. . . . Nevertheless, she sat down, a frown between her brows.

The maid had finished her work here before she had returned from breakfast. There was no reason why anyone should have entered the room afterwards. . . . Nor why the bags should have been disturbed on their rack. . . . Yet they had been.

When Christine made an inventory of her few possessions, they were all in their places; yet her uneasiness persisted. . . . Descending in the crowded elevator, she was startled out of her preoccupation by murmured conversation behind her:

"It couldn't have happened if Emma Talbert had been there."
". . . She's been fighting this merger tooth and nail—and she owned enough shares to lick it single-handed. Why in God's name do you suppose she didn't come?"
The murmurs added unreasonably to Christine's uneasiness. Even if Cousin Emma did not take her responsibility as hostess in a life and death way, it was out of character for her to play truant when money was concerned.

Once established in her new odgings, Christine's restlessness made the indoors unendurable. Going down to the street, she turned without conscious volition toward the brilliant lights of the Boardwalk, climbed the stairway that led from the street, and came out near the Twentieth Century Pier. The glare of a hand and the shrieks of the crowd told her the shows must be in full swing. A little forlornly she stepped down into her own booth, next door, to listen to the band.

The booth was in almost total darkness; but a gleam of white caught Christine's attention. It proved to be a sheet of paper fastened to her easel. Carrying it to the lighted Boardwalk, she read:

"If you are worried—if you are unhappy—consult Chandra. Free public readings at the Temple of Truth every evening at 10."

Christine crossed the Boardwalk and sauntered along. A doorman, resentful as a rear admiral, stood in front of the hotel just opposite her booth.

Then came a shooting gallery—so poorly patronized that the proprietor had leisure to follow Christine with an appraising stare. Afterwards: the window of the Paris Smart Shop, featuring one jade green hat and a cluster of violets; a small, gas-enclosed stage on which tiny mechanized mannequins displayed the fabrics of a manufacturer of synthetic cloth; a cosmetics exhibit, in Chinese red and silver jars; a bowling alley; an auction room; an oculist's window, with a grotesquely animated replica of a pair of human eyes. At last she came to an entrance that looked like the facade of an Oriental temple.

Over this concession Christine read the words, "Temple of Truth."

Holbrook's New Book Tells of Ore Trimmers

"Iron Brew," a saga of the men who work in the iron mines and steel furnaces, written by Stewart H. Holbrook, well known to Escanaba residents, will be off the press on Sept. 11, according to a notice received from the MacMillan Publishing company. One chapter of the book is devoted to the work and bravis of the ore trimmers, who worked at Escanaba's docks in this iron port's early years.

Mr. Holbrook was scheduled to serve on the faculty of the Nahma Vacation School this year, but he was obliged to abandon his plan to come here after receiving a contract from the MacMillan company to write a book about Ethan Allen.

Worked in Lumber Camp Stewart H. Holbrook is an eighth generation New Englander. After school days in Vermont and New Hampshire, he went west, worked on a Winnipeg newspaper, and for one cold winter tramped with what he recalls as possibly the worst dramatic company ever to play the opera houses of Manitoba, Saskatchewan, and Alberta.

During the World War he served in a New England field artillery regiment, seeing action in the Meuse-Argonne. In the Douglas fir camps of the Pacific Northwest he took to writing articles, and later edited a lumber journal. Then he began contributing to national magazines. His early encouragement came from H. L. Mencken who bought his articles for the American Mercury, and Hewitt H. Howland, then editor of The Century Magazine. Since 1934 he has been a free-lance writer.

Visited Mining Towns When he finished his classic study of lumberjacks—the best-seller "Holy Old Mackinaw," Mr. Holbrook set out to write the book he had been longing to do since 1914, when he first saw the iron mining country of the Lake States and a steel mill in South Chicago. It was to be a book about iron and steel, not dry and technical, nor written to attack or defend the industry, but a story of the men who dig the ore and the men who make it into shining steel. It was to be a story of the life and times of miners and steel workers, past and present; of the legendary characters of the industry; of the bloody strikes that shook the industry from end to end; and of the Steel Barons.

Mr. Holbrook spent some time in the mining towns of Michigan, Wisconsin and Minnesota, visiting all six iron ranges; and spent still more months in the steel mills in grimy towns of Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, and Pennsylvania. He went down 3000 feet into mines, and up 300 feet into the air in ore crushers. At night he watched the lurid glow of Bessemer, looking through the doors of open hearth furnaces, and blinked his eyes at white-hot trails pounding through rolling mills. He listened to the talk of veteran miners and steel workers and has put it all into this book.
