

INJURIES FATAL TO RACE PILOT

Gold Cup Entrant Dies After Boat Wreck In Detroit River

Detroit, Aug. 29 (AP)—The powerboat world tonight mourned the death of Joseph J. Schaeffer, gold cup race pilot who died today of injuries suffered last night in the wreck of the Delphine IX in a trial run on the Detroit river. The boat was going 30 miles an hour when it suddenly shot into the air, settled back and sank in 25 feet of water. Schaeffer and his mechanic, Ed MacKenzie, were thrown into the water. MacKenzie escaped with painful but not serious injuries. Schaeffer died of a crushed chest, broken arm and ribs and internal injuries. Schaeffer had leased the boat from Horace E. Dodge. He was a veteran of gold cup races as a mechanic and pilot. For many years he piloted racing boats for Dodge. His principal occupation was with Packard Motor Car Co. as a mechanic in the engineering and experimental department, and he was in charge of Packard's boat-works on the Detroit river. The crack-up of the Delphine, a jinx boat in a jinx race, narrowed the field for the Labor Day event still further. The Alagi, Count Thero Rossi's cup defender, will be out of the race because of the inability of the count and his mechanics to get out of Italy during the international crisis. The boat is here but essential parts are in the possession of the mechanics and it is not possible to have another pilot substituted. Last year the Notre Dame, then the defender, was wrecked in the St. Clair river in a trial run and the veteran pilot, Clell Perry of Algonac, was badly hurt. Dodge's boats have encountered trouble of one kind or another repeatedly and led to his decision to turn his boat over to someone else for this year's race.

POLES WORRY ABOUT TROOPS ALONG BORDER

(Continued from Page One) house of commons today that Great Britain is "ready for any eventuality"—war in defense of Poland if need be or peaceful negotiation of the German-Polish quarrel if Adolf Hitler agrees. Britain's determination to fight at the side of Poland in event of aggression stands firm, the 70-year-old prime minister reiterated, and the issue is squarely up to the German Fuehrer. "The issue of war or peace is still undecided," he said. "We still hope and will work for peace, but we will not abate any jot of our resolution to hold fast to the lines which we have laid down for ourselves." Frontier tension must be diminished, he said, as "the first prerequisite" for peaceful negotiation of the quarrel. Chamberlain disclosed but little of the diplomatic exchanges that have been flying back and forth between London and Berlin because of the "extreme delicacy" of the situation in which grave issues "hang precariously in the balance." Danger Not Lessened Chamberlain's 16-minute address informed the crowded house that there had been little change in the situation since the house met last Thursday, despite the flurry of diplomatic maneuvers, and that the danger of war had not "in any way receded." The "main points" of the discussion with Hitler, he indicated, were these: Hitler left "no doubt as to the urgency of settling Polish-German questions" but "was concerned to impress upon his majesty's government his wish for an Anglo-German understanding of a complete and lasting character." 2. Britain "would naturally welcome an opportunity of discussing with Germany the permanent issues" looking toward a "permanent agreement." 3. "Everything turns upon the manner in which the immediate differences between Germany and Poland can be handled and the nature of the proposals which might be made for any settlement." 4. "We have made it plain that our obligations to Poland, cast into formal shape by the agreement signed on August 25th, will be carried out."

Other officers installed for the ensuing year are: Vice commanders, William Ehnerd, Ed Anderson, Mike Bink, Elmer St. Martin; adjutant, H. F. BRITAIN GETS GERMAN NOTE; POLAND TENSE

(Continued from Page One) after Chamberlain had warned, before a cheering house of commons, that Britain was ready to fight for Poland or to enter "free" negotiation in an atmosphere cleared of the current tension. Officials In Flurry The Hitler message was immediately transmitted to London where, amid a flurry of activity in government offices, it was studied by Chamberlain and Foreign Secretary Lord Halifax at length. Meantime, King Leopold of the Belgians and Queen Wilhelmina of the Netherlands offered to exert their good offices to mediate the crisis. France accepted the mediation offer but Paris officials took so little hope from it and Hitler's reply to Britain that they called the situation "simply stationary." Welcoming Chamberlain's "firm stand," France continued her war preparations. Mobilization Considered There was a note of optimism in Berlin in contrast to growing tension in Poland. Poles asserted German troops were further encircling her borders and two Germans were arrested in connection with a bombing which killed 17 persons and injured 38 at Tarnow, in southern Poland. It was stated officially in Warsaw that the situation was so "grave" as a result of the completion of German "mobilization and concentration" on Poland's borders that general mobilization in Poland appeared likely tonight. Hitler's message was an answer to the British statement of her position which was sent in reply to the German demand for Danzig, the Polish corridor to the Baltic sea, and other concessions. Mussolini May Intervene An informed German source said Hitler's reply would leave the door open for further negotiation and that, without waiting for drafting of the formal reply, Hitler had sent a personal letter to Chamberlain by plane this afternoon. The plane arrived in London after the short meeting of parliament had adjourned until next Tuesday, unless developments necessitate a recall earlier. Immediate after handing his formal message to Henderson, Hitler conferred with Italian ambassador Bernardino Attolico. In Rome, British Ambassador Sir Percy Loraine talked with Count Ciano, the Italian foreign minister. There were reports in diplomatic quarters there that Britain was seeking to influence Hitler toward a peaceable settlement through his exis partner, Premier Mussolini, who was indicated as an active peace intermediary. "The issue of war or peace is still undecided," Chamberlain told the house of commons. Rome Takes Precautions The nature of Hitler's reply, Chamberlain added, would decide whether there would be further time for work toward peace. But he declared Britain would not move one jot from her position of support for Poland if there is an attack. Soviet Russia's high command decided to strengthen garrisons of its western frontier. European tension was given as the reason. Nominally independent Slovakia was placed under German martial law by her Nazi protectors. In Italy, the first appeal was issued to citizens to move out of big cities as an air raid precaution and to facilitate food distribution in the event of war. Electric signs were darkened in Rome and public conveyances traveled with dim blue lights. The United States embassy in London announced plans for speedy evacuation of Americans in war time through four British "evacuation sectors" in southern and central England, Scotland and Ireland. Panama Guards Posted While the London embassy had negotiations under way for hiring two small cruise liners to take stranded Americans home, one concentration of Americans in Paris prepared to sail tomorrow aboard the liner Manhattan for New York. The American minister to the Netherlands advised Americans to go home now rather than risk difficulties should war come. Panama Canal officials ordered military guards posted on all ships passing through the canal as "an extraordinary precaution appropriate to the neutral status of the United States" and to eliminate the possibility of "some foolish or rash act which could inflict damage." In the far east, General Shunroku Hata, who commanded Japanese forces in central China most of last year, became minister of war in the new cabinet of General Nobuyuki Abe, who retained the foreign ministry portfolio in addition to the premiership. Abe's government was expected to pursue a moderate course in international affairs, now that Japan has embarked upon a policy of "splendid isolation" as a result of the German-Soviet Russian non-aggression accord. It also was expected to push vigorously Japan's undeclared war in China.

Louis-Pastor Bout Advance Sales Up To $200,000 Mark

Detroit, Aug. 29 (AP)—Joe Louis and Bob Pastor today resumed training for their heavyweight title fight Sept. 20 while Publicity Director Walter St. Denis announced $200,000 worth of tickets already had been sold. Promoter Mike Jacobs, St. Denis said, now believes a $600,000 gate is possible in view of the sales three weeks in advance. St. Denis said a special train carrying 1,000 fight fans was expected from New York. Other trains will come from Chicago, Cleveland, Michigan points and Texas, he said. The fight will be staged at Briggs Stadium. Advance sales have been large enough to cover expenses, it was announced. St. Denis said $200,000 was "more than enough to take Mr. Jacobs off the nut." Training camps are being operated outside the main promotion. Joe Louis never has broken even at a training camp. St. Denis explained. The best a Louis camp ever drew was $4,500 below expenses. The Pastor camp is being operated on a percentage basis. The owner of the cottages and acreage takes half the receipts.

Michigan Lines Up With Roosevelt On Thanksgiving Shift

Lansing, Aug. 29 (AP)—Michigan definitely fell in line today with President Roosevelt's proposal that the Thanksgiving holiday be advanced one week to November 23. Governor Dickinson announced his intention to proclaim the holiday on the date the president suggested, but added that the proclamation also would mention presidential policies of which he disapproved.

"More important than the selection of a particular day is the necessity for this state and this nation to be living under conditions for which all may be truly thankful," he said, but declined to elaborate on the statement.

Producers Benefit By Federal Control Of Chicago's Milk

Chicago, Aug. 29 (AP)—Federal control of milk sales in the vast Chicago marketing area was ordered by Secretary Wallace today amid indications that the retail price of the product may be increased.

Under the new program, to begin next Friday and to affect approximately 15,700 dairy farmers in Illinois, Wisconsin, Indiana and Michigan who supply a daily average of about 5,000,000 pounds of milk to Chicago and several suburbs, the agriculture department will establish minimum prices which distributors and handlers must pay to producers.

A representative of the Pure Milk association, largest producer cooperative in the region, figured that on the basis of current prices the dealers would pay from four to six cents a hundredweight more for class one milk.

No Women, No Cars, As G. A. R. Parades

Pittsburgh, Aug. 29 (AP)—Veterans of the Grand Army of the Republic shined up their muskets and dusted off boots tonight in preparation for a strict military parade—without women and automobiles.

Declaring they would have no part of modern machines to carry them over the mile long uphill parade route tomorrow, the 100 odd "boys in blue" insisted they would march behind their state department colors.

After the parade tomorrow they will hold their first business session at which spokesman said a resolution urging pensions for widows of civil war veterans married after June 27, 1906 probably would be presented.

Congress decreed that widows married after that date were not entitled to pensions.

SPONSORS HOLD U. P. MEETING

Jacka Elected to Head Group at Conference At Iron Mountain

The preparing of applications in order that their approval might be expedited, material allowances and similar details were the main topics of discussion at the meeting of the Upper Peninsula Project Sponsors' association which was attended by A. V. Aronson, city engineer.

C. A. Serrine, of Lansing, state director of operations, was in charge of the discussions. The meeting disclosed the fact that all sponsors are not acquainted with all of the WPA rules of which there is a constant flow.

Organization of the association was made permanent, with William Jacka, city manager of Crystal Falls, being elected president, and C. A. Miller, village manager of Kingsford, being chosen secretary.

It was decided to hold the next meeting of the organization in Escanaba in September in connection with the meeting of the Upper Peninsula Road Builders' association which will be held here at that time.

Serrine answered the questions of various sponsors and pointed out that the present 30 day lay-off of WPA workers who have had 18 months of continuous employment could not be altered inasmuch as it was a provision in the law enacted by congress. He stated there was no guarantee those laid off would be reassigned, as they enter the same classification as new WPA eligibles and must take their turn within quota limits.

Local Man Saves Drowning Woman

Curtis, Mich.—Diving into the water fully clothed after running some distance to the edge of the lake, Roy Anderson, Escanaba, who is employed by R. E. Russell of Curtis, rescued Miss Jeanne DeLary of New York City when she became entangled in weeds while swimming here last Thursday.

Miss DeLary, who was a guest of Mr. and Mrs. Earl Peterson, of Detroit, at their cabin in Russell Woods, knew how to swim, but became entrapped in the weeds and was unconscious when Anderson reached her and brought her ashore.

Anderson was a considerable distance inland when he heard the cry for help and had no time to remove his cumbersome clothing, but after running to the shore of the lake, continued into the water and freed the young woman from the weeds.

In 1938, Rumania has 30.8 babies per thousand; Poland, 24.9; Italy, 23.8 (raised to 24 so far this year); the Dutch, 20.6; Germany, 19.6; Great Britain, 15.1; and France 14.6. The baby who is used to illustrate this chart is not being raised to be a soldier. He is an American, son of Don Grubbs, featured diver at Miami.

Communication

LET'S NOT FORGET THE DUCKS

Along the south shore from Sand Point to Portage Pond, Escanaba has a unique natural resource, probably unequalled in any city of its size on Lake Michigan, but like many of the water resources of this part of the country, it is so close to us that we are prone to overlook it entirely. Probably many of the people living on the south shore who often speak so regretfully of the summer of 1929 when the water came up to the foot of their gardens have failed to see the interesting ecological changes which have occurred in the old lake bottom since the lake has receded. To some people the marsh may be an eye-sore and possibly a disgrace to the city but they are probably not acquainted with the many interesting birds, animals and plants which have found the marsh an ideal environment in which to live.

Redwing black birds, grackles, bitterns, marsh hawks, jack snipe, little green herons, big blue herons, sand pipers and dozens of other marsh and shore birds nest here. Muskrats have built their homes in the marsh and the early rising fisherman or duck hunter may see a mink along the shore if he is lucky. Rabbits live on the higher sandy ridges east of Portage Pond, and only a year or two ago a young deer came in along the south shore almost to Ludington Park before he was frightened away. In the drier parts of the old lake bottom dozens of species of flowers, including the rare fringed gentians and orchids may be found.

The water-fowl residents of the marsh have attracted the most attention. A few years ago due primarily to the efforts of Ed Voght, the Bay de Noc Water Fowl Sanctuary was established in this area. Now green and blue winged teal, mallards, grey and black ducks, nest and rear their young here among the rushes and cattails. During the spring and fall migrations, ten or fifteen species of ducks stop to feed and rest along the shore. Flocks of snow geese, Canada geese, and sometimes a few rare swans rest and feed in the area. Every fall a local hunter achieve the ambition of a life time by shooting snow geese at Portage.

The great flocks of black ducks which rest in the sanctuary during the day and feed in Portage Pond at night during the fall migration offer an annual wild life picture of unsurpassed beauty that has passed unnoticed by many local people. To sit in the rushes at Portage in the evening and watch these big black ducks come in close over head and settle down to feed is a rare sight in these modern times. With the black ducks customary fearlessness of man at dusk, flock after flock come swinging in from the bay and settle down to eat. Where they spend the day in such numbers is a puzzling question to those of us who enjoy watching them.

Some of the usefulness of the area as a sanctuary has already been diminished by the construction of the harbor, and the skating rink. The filling operations along Ludington Park have already destroyed some of the valuable duck feeding grounds. These improvements are worth while and to some the weed beds may have been unsightly. To others the old axiom "No food, no ducks" holds true. It should be possible to do this work without forgetting the ducks.

The city should secure the services of a competent water fowl specialist to study the south shore and suggest methods of improving it for the ducks. One of the Michigan conservation department specialists would undoubtedly do the work at no cost to us or perhaps a biological survey expert could be borrowed from the Seney marsh refuge for a few days to make the study.

The public now makes much use of the Portage area. Some of it which is now private property should be purchased by the public to preserve the duck feeding grounds and the public hunting grounds. Those directing the improvements in the sanctuary at Ludington Park should keep the destruction of duck feeding grounds to a minimum. More duck food should be planted in the sanctuary and along the south shore to Portage. The new harbor and skating rink are all valuable

DRIVE ON RAGWEED

Marquette—The city health department has undertaken a partial survey of ragweed in and near Marquette and is pushing its eradication program for the benefit of hay fever sufferers, Dr. C. P. Drury, city health officer, said yesterday.

A crew employed by the city will cut down patches of giant and common ragweed that have been marked by Dr. Drury to prevent development of pollen and to destroy the weed.

"We will not be able to destroy the entire crop by cutting down the plants, because some already have pollinated" Dr. Drury said. "But we will destroy a good many plants and the crop will be much thinner next year."

recreational assets to the people of Escanaba, but the people of Escanaba in their desire to improve, should not forget the ducks because when man improves for himself, he usually destroys for wild life. COMPLAIN OF NAILS ON ROAD

Sheriff Hears Complaint From Motorists About Boys' Pranks

The sheriff's department yesterday issued a warning to persons who have been guilty of placing nails on the highways near Escanaba that anyone arrested on a charge of this kind will be prosecuted to the limit.

Several complaints have been received by the department in the past few days from motorists who have had punctures resulting from nails placed on the highway. An Indiana motorist yesterday reported that he had ruined a new tire by picking up four roofing nails on highway US-2-41 in the vicinity of Pine Ridge and what is known as Shantytown. The nails, which were all two inches in length, had not been dropped accidentally but had been lined up at intervals on the black line in the center of the road.

Officers of the department immediately investigated the scene in which the punctures have occurred and picked up a total of 21 nails along the highway.

"The placing of these nails was a deliberate act," Under Sheriff John Frederickson, who investigated the case said. "The motorist who complained to us yesterday declared that he saw several boys run into the woods as he was stopping his car.

"Such acts as these may cause serious accidents that may result in fatalities and even though the boys are not very old they should have better sense. It is apparent that this is the work of boys living in the vicinity of Shantytown and Pine Ridge.

"We intend to patrol the highway in the future and anyone who is found committing an act of this kind will be arrested. We intend to take anyone who is arrested in to justice court and prosecute them to the limit."

New Traffic Law

Correct Use of Traffic Lanes

Editor's Note: This is the fourth of a series of ten articles, prepared by the Michigan State Police, high-spotting Michigan's new traffic law which becomes effective Sept. 29. Important changes have been made in customary driving habits. Greater safety—and fewer traffic arrests—will result from a close study of these articles.

In the past, driving rules have been designed for the conventional two-lane highway. It was not until the Michigan Traffic Control Zones proved successful that regulations were set up for driving on the wider highways. The state's new traffic law lists these regulations in detail. They are summarized in the brief but valuable rule: If there is room to the right, drive to the right.

Vehicles on highways of three or more lanes shall drive entirely within the extreme right-hand lane except when overtaking and passing. It is unlawful to straddle lane lines.

The middle lane on three-lane highways and the second lane on four-lane highways shall be used for overtaking and passing only.

It is unlawful to drive into the far left lane of a three-lane highway or cross the center line on four-lane highways.

If these rules are observed, head-on crashes will be eliminated and side-swipes will be reduced.

Rules similar to these have been in force on US-10 south of Saginaw, US-33 between Saginaw and Bay City, US-24 in Monroe county and on US-12 in Berrien county. Michigan state police records show that they have saved countless lives.

Simply stated, the rules provide that traffic keep well over to the right—and DON'T CROSS THE YELLOW LINE.

SCHOOLS START WORK SEPT. 6

Classes At Mather High Begin at 8:30 a. m. Wednesday

Munising, Aug. 29 — Munising township schools will open here on Wednesday, September 6, for the 1939-40 school year. Schools will open on Wednesday instead of Tuesday so that returning vacationers may avoid the Labor Day rush if possible.

School work begins at Wm. G. Mather high school next Wednesday morning at 8:30 when all pupils from the seventh to twelfth grades meet in their home rooms to receive their daily program schedules before beginning classes at 8:30 o'clock.

All classes will start on the opening day. Text books will be given out, lessons assigned and the work for the year discussed. All pupils will bring notebooks and pencils the opening day. If they have not completed all arrangements for the first day, they should do so before Wednesday. Putting off matters of routine enrollment until the opening day may delay their entrance in some class a day or so and give them a bad start. All pupils new to the Mather high school or the Munising township system should make all enrollment arrangements prior to Wednesday. Principal Jackson will be in his office daily.

As heretofore, pupils are assigned to home rooms according to the number of units they have fully earned, as follows: Less than three units, ninth grade less than seven units, tenth grade; less than eleven units, eleventh grade; eleven units or more, twelfth grade. Home rooms are as follows:

Twelfth grade boys: Room 123, Miss Cole.
Twelfth grade girls: Room 121, Miss Walsh.

Surviving are four sons, Albert, Edward and Albin of Detroit and Theodore of Flint, and three daughters, Mrs. Hilda Anderson of Skandia, Mrs. Alma Loucher of Chatham and Mrs. Esther Johnson of Munising.

SERIAL STORY

Murder on the Boardwalk

BY ELINORE COWAN STONE

COPYRIGHT, 1939, NEA SERVICE, INC.

CAST OF CHARACTERS CHRISTINE THORNSON—came to visit her cousin, found a mystery. BILL YARDLEY—had a reason for watching Christine. GEORGE WILMET—employed Christine as a Boardwalk artist. CHANDRA—looked into the future—and into the past.

Yesterday, "Lucille" is a d s Christine to Chandra. She realizes that it was he who met her at the station. He admits he is "partly responsible" for Mrs. Talbert's death because he did not warn her of impending danger.

"I don't believe it!" Christine cried hotly. "I don't believe that my cousin ever went to a fortune-teller in his life. She was too—"

"Too sensible, you mean? I am sorry to disillusion you; but Mrs. Talbert has been one of my best clients for years."

"And I let you make me promise not to warn the police!" Christine swung on the girl.

"Please!" the girl spoke swiftly. "I brought you here because there are things you must know that only my uncle can tell you. And this is the only place in Burt City where he is safe from the police."

Then a door opened and another person came quickly from an adjoining room.

Christine cried on a caught breath, "Jaspar!"

But this wasn't the caricature of Jaspar she had seen last night. This was the same immaculate, decorous Jaspar she remembered moving smoothly about his duties at Cousin Emma's.

"Miss Christine," he began respectfully. "I had almost given up hope of speaking with you until you called my niece as I told her to ask you the other night to do."

"You'd better hurry home, Lucille," he told her in an undertone.

The girl nodded, and slipped obediently out of the room.

"There wasn't any chance," Jaspar went on, "even after I saw that you had recognized me, Miss Christine. . . . That is—you did recognize me, didn't you?"

"Oh, yes," Christine told him. "I recognized you all right."

For a moment Christine stood speechless, her thoughts scattering like leaves in a wind.

Apparently the butler was here under Chandra's protection—a trusted confederate. Yet if the clairvoyant had learned about those bonds from Jaspar, why had he tried to warn her? . . . Or supposing he had really wanted to warn her, why hadn't he given her the information plainly, in words of one syllable, without all that theatrical clap-trap? Unless, perhaps, he had some reason for distrusting the butler, and wanted to make sure before he committed himself. . . . Unless he had some reason for suspecting that Jaspar was involved in Cousin Emma's death.

But when she had talked with Chandra, Cousin Emma was still alive—at least, her death was not public knowledge.

No, it's too thin, Christine thought. These two are working together.

"I hope, Miss Christine," Jaspar went on, "that you haven't just left those papers lying around—or that you're not carrying them about with you?"

So that was what they wanted—to know whether or not she had the bonds here—now. . . . Someone, the inspector had said, "who knew he could get them from you as easily as he left them."

Christine said steadily, "I turned the bonds over to Inspector Parsons the first thing this morning, and told him where I found them. . . . And, Jaspar, it seems to me that you are the one who—just left them around. How did you know where my room was, and how did you get in?"

"That was the simplest part of it, Miss Christine. You see, not being able to meet you myself at the train, I asked Mr. Chandra, who has been in Mrs. Talbert's confidence for years, to make certain where you went. And at the hotel, all I had to do was to find one of the maids who used to work under me at your cousin's home. I told her I had been sent with a parcel for you, and she admitted me to your room without question. . . . Mrs. Talbert had made me promise, Miss Christine, that if—anything happened to her before she saw you, I would make certain that you had the securities."

"I beg your pardon, Miss Christine—something had happened. She had disappeared. I hoped, Jaspar was going on anxiously, "that I might be able to get help to Mrs. Talbert before—before it was too late; and I had to get the papers to you the best way I could."

"I should think the bank was the place for them."

"Yes, Miss Christine," Jaspar agreed uncomfortably. "But—of course you couldn't know this—for some time Mrs. Talbert had been growing more and more—well, strange, about things like that. She insisted that you must have them in your own hands."

"But if you knew she was in danger, why didn't you go to the police?"

"Because that was another thing Mrs. Talbert had made me promise. You see, Miss Christine, she had been expecting something like this for a long time. Perhaps you wouldn't remember, but almost 12 years ago, her only nephew was kidnapped in much the same way."

"Mrs. Talbert paid a sweet ransom," Inspector Parsons had said, "but the boy was never found."

"And Mrs. Talbert wouldn't have the police called then, either," Jaspar finished.

"Why should she expect to be abducted?"

"Well, Miss Christine, lately she's had—threatening letters—just as the family did before Mr. Earl was taken."

And who, Christine thought, would be in a better position than you to see that those letters were safely delivered?

For a moment she hesitated for words. Then she went on, feeling her way carefully, "Then why didn't you leave a note with the bonds—some explanation?"

Before the butler could answer, a sharp knock sounded on the outer door. Jaspar and the medium exchanged startled glances. Then with a reassuring gesture Chandra went out into the hall.

Christine had never expected to be gladdened by the sight of Inspector Parsons; but when he came briskly into the room, she could have fallen on his neck. Behind him were Bill Yardley—his eyes seeking her out with a kind of angry relief—Mr. Wilmet, and sobbing miserably into her handkerchief, the girl Lucille. . . . In the hall beyond, Christine saw several uniformed figures.

The inspector looked Jaspar over with a satisfied smile of recognition and favored Christine with a glance that was far from friendly. Then he turned to a uniformed man.

"Take this girl home," he directed, indicating the butler's weeping niece; "and see that she stays there till further notice."

He swung upon Christine. "Some of these days, Miss Thorsen," he said coldly, "you'll learn that, when murder's involved, it pays to tell the whole truth."

"Wait a minute, Inspector!" Bill's voice crackled. "I told you that Miss Thorsen hadn't any idea where she was coming to find, or whom she was going to find. . . . And a sweet chase you've led me!" he swung on Christine. "If Wilmet, here, hadn't happened to see you following that girl, I don't know how we'd have run you down. It was pure luck—his recognizing her when she came back along the Boardwalk."

Christine, out of that day of sickening anxiety about Bill, recognized his brusqueness for what it was—the nervous explosion of one worried beyond endurance.

The knowledge that her safety meant so much to him brought a glow of happiness so warm that she almost forgot the danger that hung over both of them.

Inspector Parsons had turned to Chandra.

"I was on my way here when Yardley burst in about Miss Thorsen's disappearance," he said. "So you do cut in on this after all!"

"I thought you'd work around to that idea, Inspector."

The clairvoyant's voice was cool; but his tawny eyes were watchful.

"When I talked to you this morning," the detective went on, "that dagger looked like a deliberately planted clue—and a pretty stupid one. I didn't know then about your talk with Miss Thorsen last night. . . . Interesting that you should have known that Mrs. Talbert's bonds had been stolen—and where they were. . . . And I didn't know," he added very slowly, "that on the night Mrs. Talbert disappeared, she was last seen going into your Broadway studio."

BEHIND THE SCENES

By Bruce Catton

Boston—If Attorney General Murphy goes through with his announced plan to conduct a sweeping investigation into the seamy side of life in America's greatest cities, he will find a good deal of material to examine in Boston.

Sober, staid and decorous on the surface, Boston contains all the makings of a first-class sensation.

A legislative committee is now investigating handling of pardons and paroles. The grape-vine report is that its findings will necessitate a special session of the legislature before the year is over.

Internal revenue bureau agents are working more or less in liaison with the committee, looking for income tax irregularities.

ROBBER'S PAROLE SPURS PROBE

This investigation was provoked by release from state's prison late last year of Ray Patriarca, who had served approximately 80 days of two concurrent sentences for robbery.

Patriarca was known as Rhode Island's "public enemy number one" and was intimately connected with a powerful race track ring. His unexpected parole during the final weeks of the administration of Gov. Charles F. Hurley stirred the whole state.

Last May, urged on by Gov. Leverett Saltonstall, the legislature created a committee to look into not only this specific case but the whole mass of current rumors about improper use of the pardoning and paroling power.

There is also big-time gambling. A powerful fraternity controls race-track betting, dog-track betting and an extensive numbers or policy racket. Its total "handle" is said to reach $50,000,000 a year or more.

It is interesting to contrast this with the situation during prohibition, when a Bostonian guest at Al Capone's Florida home asked the Chicago gangster why he didn't move in one the Boston field. Capone told him there wasn't enough money in the Boston racket to make it worth while.

That, say those who are in a position to know, may have been true then but it isn't true now. It is asserted that the underworld has more (and richer) big shots now than it had during prohibition.

One angle of this is the generally-accepted report that Boston has become a key importing and distributing center for the drug racket.

DISBARRED LAWYER MAKES COMEBACK

One of the bizarre aspects of Boston's situation is the influence reputedly wielded by Daniel H. Coakley.

Coakley was once one of the city's ablest-lawyers. He was disbarred some 17 years ago for engineering a fantastic and lucrative shakedown racket. The unsavory testimony about the "blackmail ring" drove him out of law practice. It might have been expected to end his public career.

But it didn't. Coakley made a comeback, built up a private political machine in South Boston, and got himself elected to the governor's council—a body which in Massachusetts passes on the governor's appointments, on warrants for state expenditures, and acts with the governor in dispensing pardons and paroles. He has served on this body for some years now and is a figure of genuine importance.

PRIEST LOSES CLOTHES

Menominee — Fire of undetermined origin starting in an upstairs cloister of the residence of the Rev. Father Victor A. Karch, pastor of St. Adalbert's church Sunday morning, burned all of the priest's clothing, and made it necessary for him to call in other priests to conduct masses at his church.

Father Karch was sitting downstairs listening to a radio at 5:15 a. m. Sunday when the fire on the second floor was seen from the street by Jacob Waler, church janitor. Waler closed a door from Father Karch's bedroom into a hallway and summoned firemen.

Clothing and personal effects of Father Karch in the bedroom closet were destroyed and the rooms scorched. Father Karch described the fire loss as slight, and covered by insurance.

STOCK TRADERS ARE OPTIMISTIC

STOCK MARKET AVERAGES

BY FREDERICK GARDNER New York, Aug. 29 (AP)—Wall Street saw further hopes today that the European conflict would be confined to a "war of wids" and stock market traders bid up prices to around 3 points.

While sentiment was notably improved in boardrooms, speculative contingents were still inclined to discretion rather than valor and few buyers showed an urge for favorites. The result was an exceptionally thin market.

While the Associated Press average of 40 issues was up .3 of a point at 47.3, transfers for the five hours amounted to but 433, 340 shares against $69,510 the day before. It was the lowest turnover for a full session since August 17.

Analysts noted that the industrial average had regained about 45 percent of its recent decline, which they considered altogether in line with normal market action.

Stocks advanced at London, Amsterdam and Paris. In addition, sterling at London rallied in terms of the dollar.

In the home sector prominent share gainers included U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, General Motors, Chrysler, American Telephone, U. S. Rubber, Sears Roebuck, Woolworth, United Aircraft, Western Union, Consolidated Edison, Westinghouse, Loft, Celanese, General Electric, Texas Corp., Santa Fe, Great Northern and Du Pont.

Fractions to more than a point higher in the curb were Electric Bond & Share, Lockhead, United Gas and American Cyanamid "B," Mead Johnson shot up 6 and Minnesota Mfg. & Mfg. 2 1/2, both on small deals. Turnover of 60,000 shares compared with 85,000 Monday.

DOLLAR ISSUES LEAD ADVANCE

New York, Aug. 29 (AP)—U. S. treasury and foreign government dollar issues led a general rise in the bond market today.

Gains in the American issues averaged about 3/4 point, wiping out yesterday's recessions. As for the foreign list, the advance in the Associated Press index was 1.3 points and 4 points in Canadian, Australian, Danish and Norwegian issues.

Among the few declining loans in the strong market were Prussian and industrial German issues such as Rhine-Westphalia, Ruhr Chemical, Berlin City Electric and Berlin Electric Elevated.

Investors' hopes for a termination of the European war scares were reflected in a wide range of advances, throughout the corporate issues.

Advances of a point or more were recorded for such representative loans as Postal Telegraph 5s at 12 1/2; Western Union 5s of '60 at 6 1/2; U. S.
