

INLAND MINES HAVE PARTIES

Christmas Songs Heard 1,450 Feet Below the Ground Surface

Ishpeming, Mich., Dec. 18. (AP)—Miners of Europe probably went to work under military supervision today, but in this northern Michigan town, the heart of the Marquette iron range, workers of the Greenwood and Morris mines of the Inland Steel company went to work gay and light hearted. They were eager to go underground for their annual Christmas party.

At the Morris mine six trumpeters from the Ishpeming high school band, dressed in red and green herald uniforms, were the last to descend the shaft. Some 1,450 feet below surface more than 100 miners waited while from above came the strains of "Joy to the World, the Lord is Come." Miners listened in quiet attention and the strains grew stronger as the trumpeters approached the station.

Jim Fowler, shift boss and traditional Santa Claus for the miners, strode forth and picked gifts from under the tree for them. At the Greenwood mine, where miners held a Christmas party for the first time, Ed Sequist, a miner, impersonated Santa. A male quartet sang carols.

No Justification Seen By Uruguay For Sinking Spee

Montevideo, Dec. 18. (AP)—The Uruguayan ministry of foreign affairs tonight asserted there was no "possible" justification in law or international custom for the blowing up of the German raider Admiral Graf Spee by her own crew.

Reporting the German protest that Uruguay was responsible for forcing the Graf Spee to leave the harbor before she could be made seaworthy, the foreign ministry statement said Uruguay's 72-hour limit for the stay of the Graf Spee was fixed in accord with the recommendation of a technical commission named by the government to inspect the ship.

The statement said Uruguay acted at every step in full conformity with The Hague convention and then declared: "In no case is it possible to justify what has happened to the Admiral Graf Spee since if that vessel, its time limit having expired, had had to remain in our port, the natural solution of its situation would not have been other than the legal one already provided for—its internment by Uruguayan authorities until the termination of the war."

Special Election Feb. 19 To Choose Mapes Successor

Lansing, Dec. 18. (AP)—Governor Dickinson said today he planned to call a special election February 19 in the fifth congressional district to fill a vacancy caused by the death of the late Rep. Carl E. Mapes.

He explained that was the date set for a Grand Rapids municipal election and that several surrounding townships and villages in Kent county would hold elections on the same date. The district is composed of Kent and Ottawa counties.

A primary election will be held not fewer than 20 days earlier, he said. "We will use that date," the governor said, "because it will save at least part of the expense that otherwise would be occasioned." He had said earlier it would be mechanically impossible to conduct the election much earlier than February 15.

"Reputed the first day" said Smith. Try a For Rent Ad today.

CRUISER SUNK; PLANES CLASH AT HELGOLAND

which sank the 5,000-ton German cruiser accomplished its feat "although surrounded by no fewer than six German destroyers," Churchill described last week as "the best week we can remember in this or the last war."

British press accounts charged that Nazi airmen "loosed a new terror drive on defenseless ships," contending the attacks were mainly on fishing and merchant craft. (The new ship losses, not counting the German cruiser the British claim to have sunk, raised the toll of sea warfare to 247 ships of $17,777 gross tons. The death list totals at least 2,679. Britain has lost 134 vessels of 502,436 tons.)

By MELVIN K. WHITELEATHER Berlin, Dec. 18. (AP)—Speedy Nazi fighting planes shot down 34 of 44 attacking British bombing planes today, Germans declared, in a giant sky battle off the naval base of Helgoland.

German scouting planes also were said to have sunk four British steamers and damaged three British warships in a bomb and machine-gun raid on a convoy yesterday.

(British spokesmen in London admitted the loss of four ships in the North Sea to Nazi bombers but made no mention of damage to warships. Late today the British air ministry announced 12 German Messerschmidt fighters were shot down and seven British bombers "unaccounted for" in an air battle over Helgoland Bight.)

Admiral Scheer Loose The huge air battle, extending over 20 miles of sea between the coast and Helgoland, took place within 20 miles of the mouth of the river Elbe where the British asserted one of their submarines sank a 6,000-ton German cruiser Thursday. German official sources denied the British report.

Announcement of Nazi successes as announced by German spokesmen asserted the scuttling of the German pocket battleship Admiral Graf Spee at Montevideo will mark "the beginning of new attacks by our fleet against England."

Unconfirmed reports said the sister ship of the Graf Spee, the Admiral Scheer, was loose in the south Atlantic and ready to continue raids against the allies. Wreckage On Shore The air battle at Helgoland was apparently the largest aerial engagement of the present war.

As the fleet of British bombing planes swept in from the North Sea, squadrons of Messerschmidt pursuit ships, Germany's fastest fighting planes, rose to meet them, Germans said.

The defense craft were under the command of Captain Schumacher, who, Germans said, led fighters in destroying 10 of 20 attacking British warplanes December 14.

The Nazis said their fighting planes dispersed the oncoming bombing fleet and soon the battle was sprang out in the sky in individual combats from Helgoland to the coast of Germany.

As the diving, darting planes approached the shore, anti-aircraft batteries started shooting at the British ships.

There was no indication of how long the battle lasted, but tonight Germans said the wreckage of many British planes was being washed up on shore. Two British "plane crews were reported captured.

Only two German planes were reported lost. Their crews were said to have escaped by parachute. News of the air battle closely followed upon the DNB, official German news agency, announcement of the raid on the British convoy.

German planes were returning from a scouting trip when they sighted the convoy and attacked with bombs and machineguns. "One group of German scouters attacked the convoy protected by man o'war," the news agency said. "After the first bomb fell among the ships, the convoy scattered to the four winds. Several explosions could be observed."

Among the four ships destroyed, DNB listed the British steamer Serenity, 487 tons, and the Pearl.

The band led by a venerable negro who said, "I tell 'em I'm 40," blared the Washington Post march and the troops yelled "When do we eat?" and "Hall, Hall, the gang's all here."

The force is completely mechanized and was drawn from Canadian militia, with the officers and non-coms from the regular army. It left port for intensive training in Britain.

"They are not yet combat troops but they'll be all of that when they are needed," General McNaughton said. "Their spirit is wonderful. They say 'we don't like all this fuss but let's get this fool out of the way and get back to our jobs and homes.'"

Former Nazi Agent Denied Citizenship In Detroit Hearing

Detroit, Dec. 18. (AP)—After a dramatic all-day appeal, Kurt George Ludecke, former Nazi agent and author of "I Knew Hitler," was denied United States citizenship this afternoon by Federal Judge Arthur J. Tuttle.

Acting as his own attorney and presenting his wife, an American, as his only witness, Ludecke had told the court that "the Nazi agent is dead and a new Ludecke stands before you."

Judge Tuttle denied the petition with prejudice, which for five years bars Ludecke from again seeking citizenship in this country. The judge, who had once continued the case in order to give himself an opportunity to read Ludecke's book before ruling on the citizenship plea, said he was not convinced that "the old Ludecke is dead."

"I am not certain," he continued, "that you have undergone the changes in your theories that you say you have. I am convinced that you have not given the elementary principles of Americanism. Your theories of government may be good—but they are not American."

World War Souvenir Shell Injures Two Youths At Mecosta

Mecosta, Mich., Dec. 18. (AP)—The explosion of a shell from a French 75 field gun, a souvenir of the World War, injured two youths seriously here today.

The victims are William Winchell, 18, a member of the high school basketball team, and Patrick Onley, 18, a garage mechanic. The shell exploded as the boys attempted to drill a hole in its side. Winchell's face was torn by fragments and metal, and he suffered severe abdominal wounds. Onley suffered wounds in the legs and shoulders.

The explosion tore a hole in the roof of the Stebbins garage in which the accident occurred. Winchell was rushed to a Grand Rapids hospital and Onley was taken to a hospital at Lakeview.

Sensibar Is Towed To Manitowoc Dock

Grand Haven, Mich., Dec. 18. (AP)—The crippled steamer Sensibar was towed into Lake Michigan again today as tugs headed her for drydock at Manitowoc, Wis., to repair damage sustained when the freighter was buffeted on a sandbar near here.

Forest Future Is Seen In Pulpwood Growing

Madison, Wis., Dec. 18. (AP)—Charles L. Cecil, Duluth, Minn., pulpwood operator, declared here today that the future of the lumber industry depends on pulpwood development rather than sawmill operations.

Appearing as a witness before the joint congressional committee on forestry, Cecil suggested that the industry concentrate on development of plastics and new uses for wood derivatives.

The committee, concluding a nation-wide study by examining the forest problems of the lake and prairie states and the central hardwood area, opened a hearing here with about one hundred conservation and forestry officials from ten states in attendance.

Suggestions for rehabilitation of the cut-over lands of Michigan, Minnesota and Wisconsin occupied much of the first day's testimony. The congressmen were informed that the lake states, despite vast acreage available for forest production, must depend on the west and south for more than half their needed timber.

A succession of Wisconsin residents, including O. T. Swan of Oshkosh, secretary and manager of the Northern Hemlock and Hardwood Manufacturers association, declared federal reforestation, research and rehabilitation programs should be continued.

Dr. J. B. Eastwood, of Spooner, president of the Wisconsin County Boards association, dissented. He said federal projects usually aided only those persons living near the project areas, and suggested that each man on relief in the cut-over region be given two acres for cultivation, be advised to preserve crops and seek some private employment.

"We can do more good with less money that way," he said. Dean Samuel T. Dana of the University of Michigan's college of forestry and conservation, predicted the lake states would have to use their "police powers" to solve the cut-over land problem, restricting private logging and forcing land owners to adopt "constructive measures."

Ben East, conservation editor of the Grand Rapids (Mich.) Press, declared no broad rehabilitation program should be launched without including recreation, which he described as a "cash by-product of forestry."

Another witness was Russell Watson of Manistique, Mich. Pine Pulp Papermill Previewed In Texas Lufkin, Tex., Dec. 18. (AP)—Directors of the Southland Paper Mills, Inc., attended an informal "preview" of the new $6,000,000 newsprint plant at Herty today.

The plant, world's first pine pulp newsprint mill, is expected to be producing in commercial quantities shortly after Jan. 1.

Wisconsin Justice Is Considered For Supreme Court Job

Washington, Dec. 18. (AP)—Friends of John D. Wickhem, Wisconsin supreme court justice, said today he was being considered for appointment to the supreme court of the United States to succeed the late Pierce Butler.

They described him as a "Democrat, Catholic, liberal and midwesterner." Wickhem, 51, is a former professor of law at the University of Wisconsin. He practiced for a time in Milwaukee and was appointed to the state supreme court by Gov. Walter J. Kohler in 1930.

Attorney General Murphy, who had been considered a likely choice for the appointment, said at a press conference last week that he thought he ought not receive it and that others were better qualified.

Case 11 Years Old Ended In U.S. Court Detroit, Dec. 18. (AP)—In a case described as the oldest on the federal court docket here, Gordon R. Danforth pleaded guilty today to a charge of aiding in the embezzlement of funds from the now defunct National Bank of Commerce of Detroit. Danforth was indicted by a federal grand jury on 17 counts in 1928.

er the captain and his officers and crew would be interned but the German officers might be granted their freedom if they would pledge personally not to participate further in the war.

The German ambassador to Argentina, Edmund von Therman, was engaged with the Argentine naval minister, Rear Admiral Leon Soasso, in a discussion of the lot of the Graf Spee's crew.

With Captain W. A. Brereton, United States naval attaché to Montevideo and Buenos Aires, I went within a few yards of the sunken hulk of the Graf Spee today and viewed the havoc caused by the explosions of her magazines.

Close inspection showed the 10,000-ton vessel is little more than a steel shell, its insides apparently blasted by explosives and fire. The exterior shaft control tower is torn and twisted by the powerful blasts.

Mayor Of Detroit Ousts 3 Members Of Health Board

Detroit, Dec. 18. (AP)—Mayor Richard W. Reading today ousted three members of the city's board of health in a dispute over the proposed reinstatement of five physicians to the list of accredited doctors in Detroit's anti-tuberculosis campaign.

Those dismissed are Gustave A. Pope, who served 22 years; Dr. Ledru O. Gelb, 20-year board veteran, and Mandell Bernstein, whom Reading appointed two years ago.

The three refused to comply with Reading's request that the board rescind its action recommending that the five physicians be reinstated. The only other board member, Dr. William A. Evans, voted to comply.

The five physicians were removed from the accredited list more than a year ago after testimony placed before the Dies committee alleged they had billed the city for examinations other than tuberculin tests.

Moscow Announces Pitkajarvi Taken

Moscow, Dec. 19. (Tuesday) (AP)—Occupation of the Finnish town of Pitkajarvi, over 50 miles south of the Finnish arctic port of Petsamo and near the Norwegian border on Finland's narrow corridor to the Arctic sea, was reported today by Russian army commanders.

The communique issued by the headquarters of the Leningrad military area said the Finnish town was taken by Soviet troops in yesterday's fighting.

(Since the start of the war, Russia has been seeking to drive a wedge across Finland, particularly in the central sector. However, today's communique indicates Soviet troops have advanced to the vicinity of the Norwegian border in the far north.)

(The Norwegian telegraph agency reported yesterday from Svanvik that exhausted Finnish soldiers were beginning to cross the border into Norway. At least 40 men were disarmed and interned. They said they had not slept for five days and had fought until their ammunition was exhausted.)

Man And Wife Held In Bark River Case

Mr. and Mrs. Jake McCullough of Harris were arrested Monday afternoon at Harris by Sheriff William E. Miron and Deputy Paul Creten and will face assault and battery charges, the sheriff said, in connection with a free for all melee at Bark River Thursday night.

Milton Root, 26, of Chippewa Hill, Ontario, who was reported to be a visitor at the Joe Philemon residence at Harris, was taken to the hospital early Friday by sheriff's men following the altercation on a Bark River street, in which Mr. and Mrs. McCullough and others were allegedly involved.

No charge had been placed against Mr. and Mrs. McCullough last night, but they probably will be haled into justice court this morning, the sheriff said.

Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Nowash, also were arrested in the Harris vicinity late yesterday and will be charged with assault and battery in the same case, the sheriff said.

Police Search For Fellow With Large Load Of Dynamite

Police were feeling around, more or less with kid gloves and stepping softly yesterday, in search of the thief or thieves who made off with 500 pounds, or 16 fifty-pound boxes of 40 per cent dynamite, from the warehouse of a local hardware firm two blocks north of the Chicago & North Western railway viaduct on U. S. highway 2-41.

Store officials reported the loss at 9:30 yesterday morning, saying that the stock had been taken some time after last Tuesday, when the building was last visited by employees.

The dynamite is packed in wooden boxes, marked with the hardware company in heavy, black letters.

CHILDREN SAFE IN BUS MISHAP

20 Saved from Plunge By Guard Rail In 3 Way Collision

Hjalmar Korpi of near Traunik, one of the drivers in a three way automobile collision at 4:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon 12 miles north of Rapid River, probably will face a reckless driving charge, the sheriff's office said, when he is released from St. Francis hospital where he was taken last night. He is expected to be released today.

Other vehicles in the accident were a school bus loaded with 20 children and driven by Leonard Nelson of Rapid River, traveling north as was the Korpi car, and a logging truck traveling south and driven by Roy Boerschinger of Spalding. None of the children or the driver was hurt.

Harold Johnston, deputy of the sheriff's office investigated and reported that Korpi had apparently attempted to pass the school bus and that the three vehicles had mixed in a crash when there was not room for the passage.

The school bus suffered a badly mashed left side and the gasoline tank was torn off and the vehicle was halted from a plunge into a deep ditch by a highway guard rail. The log truck struck the school bus, and came to a stop 45 feet south of it on the left hand side of the road, against the guard rail. The Korpi car, Deputy Johnston said, continued 123 feet north of the accident spot and came to a stop upside down and crosswise of the road.

Korpi was brought to the hospital by George N. Harder and George W. Brown of Wells, who were enroute home from Marquette.

Korpi suffered a bruised side, but was able to walk into the hospital, it was reported.

Pedestrians Recovering
Ralph Martel, 306 1/2 North Fifteenth street, and Clarence Brown, of Rapid River, both pedestrians injured in automobile accidents Saturday night within a few blocks of each other in the northwest part of the city, were reported in satisfactory condition last night at St. Francis hospital.

Martel was struck shortly before midnight at First avenue north and Fourteenth street by a car driven by Norbert Elms of Cornell, who was driving a truck south on Fourteenth street and turning onto First avenue as Martel was crossing. First avenue while walking on Fourteenth street.

Martel was badly shaken and several X-ray pictures were made to discover possible broken bones, but last night it appeared there were none.

Brown was reported recovering satisfactorily after being struck at 6:45 o'clock Saturday night at Third avenue north and Fifteenth street. He suffered a slight brain concussion, hospital attaches said.

Walter Kasbohm, 523 North Twentieth street was driver of the car in the earlier accident. Both drivers were held blameless.

Lions Hold Annual Christmas Party At Meet This Evening

The regular meeting of the Escanaba Lion club, which has been moved from the regular Monday night date to this evening, will be given over to the club's annual Christmas party.

The meeting will begin at the usual time, 6:45 o'clock and all members will bring toy gifts for the gift exchange. Santa Claus or one of his helpers will be on hand to gather up the toys after the party and turn them over to the Salvation Army for distribution to those children of the community who might otherwise be overlooked in the bewhiskered gent's busy day of the year.

Hoodlums Warned About Yule Lights
There can be no peace on earth and good-will to men, or boys, in Escanaba, as long as a bunch of youngsters insists on defacing outdoor Christmas decorations about the city by stealing the lights, Chief of Police Michael F. Ettenhofer said last night. He asked that the youngsters please refrain from such destruction unless they are prepared to face punishment.

John Ettenhofer, Son Of Chief, On Furlough

On Furlough

John F. Ettenhofer, son of Chief of Police and Mrs. Michael F. Ettenhofer, arrived home yesterday for an eleven-day furlough from the United States Military Academy of Music, Navy Yard, Washington, D. C.

John entered the navy last January as an enlisted man, then took examination for entrance into the musical college and was one of only a few who were accepted on the basis of general musical ability. He was one of 40 students in his class when he was accepted. He is the only member from the Upper Peninsula and there are just three college members from Michigan.

During the year, he has advanced to the rank of second class musician. He will be in school for another year and then will be assigned to a regular naval band, aboard a battle ship or at a naval base.

The musical department, along with other branches of the navy, however, has expanded rapidly in the last year, so that now instead of just 40 students, there are nine 20 piece band organizations, or 180 students in the school.

John was graduated from Escanaba high school in 1938. He studied cornet in high school under R. P. Bowers, and gives Mr. Bowers credit for much of his success. He is only 19 years old now. He plans to make the navy service his life work and he will be eligible to pension after 20 years, or when he is 38.

Indicative of the stress caused by the European war is the fact that John's furlough was at first scheduled to be for 19 days.

John F. Ettenhofer, 19, son of Chief of Police and Mrs. Michael F. Ettenhofer, arrived home yesterday from Washington, D. C., where he is a student in the United States Military Academy of Music. He is on an eleven day furlough, following completion of his first year's work.

The boys then sang a song "When Day Is Done" and gave a yell.

Handicraft articles made by the Cubs were displayed.

Mrs. C. L. Riegel, director of District 7-B, Michigan Congress of Parents and Teachers spoke on "The Value of Cubbing." Some of the points stressed were: "Cubbing is a perfect partnership of parents, leader of den and the Cub himself. Cubbing helps to form a good character which is formed by the time a child has reached the age of twelve. The parents' important duty is to live with the child and think with the child. The child should be considered first in every community and this can be done by helping

JUDGE DELAYS FIGHT VERDICT

Decision To Be Announced Dec. 27 in Norman-MacGillis Case

Testimony in the case of Gunnar Norman, charged with assault with a deadly weapon, was closed at 3:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon before Justice of the Peace H. E. Ranguette, who continued the case until December 27 for a verdict.

The question is whether Norman shall be held to the circuit court on the assault charge or released.

Norman On Stand
Heard yesterday were Orville Tupper, who was a waiter at the restaurant near Twelfth and Ludington streets where the assault took place early on November 6; Joe Godin, who was working as an extra cook that night, and Jack McArthur, a customer, who was something of a surprise witness for the state.

Norman, himself, took the stand as the case closed, and admitted falling the knife, demonstrating to the court the wide side-arm motion he used.

The defense brought out, however, that the knife was in Norman's possession almost accidentally. He had it in a tool kit in his car and had been using it in repairing the car roof after a heavy hail storm. After he had suffered a split lip at the fist of John MacGillis in a fight in the restaurant, he had gone to the car and had attempted to make a crude clip from a piece of pipe, using the knife in the process, he said. Then he had stuck the knife in his pocket, he said, just as a precaution.

Saw Spilled Coffee
MacGillis testified last Friday as the hearing opened, that he had been offering to "make friends" with Norman on the sidewalk, when the attack came. MacGillis said he had placed one hand on Norman's shoulder and was extending his right hand to shake hands when he saw a knife. He shoved Norman away, he said, and fled, but felt the knife in his back.

MacGillis has admitted striking Norman in the restaurant, but testified that his act was provoked by Norman's rowdy manner and the spilling of coffee from Norman's cup onto MacGillis' trousers.

Whether the coffee was spilled has been a point of contention. Neither Tupper nor Godin would substantiate this claim, nor had any previous witnesses, but McArthur said that although he did not see the coffee spilled, he did see that MacGillis' pants had coffee spilled in them at the time.

The case consumed two hours Friday afternoon and was resumed at 10:30 a. m. Monday, with a luncheon recess before adjournment at 3:30.

Testifying Friday were MacGillis, Dan Russell, 1204 Ludington street, Carl Stone, and the arresting officers, along with Dr. Harold Groos, who dressed wounds of both MacGillis and Norman.

Police Watch Roads For Postal Robbers

City police and sheriff's forces kept a sharp watch of roads into the city all day yesterday as word was spread through the state police that a gang of desperate post office robbers might be headed this way.

Facts of the robberies were vague here, but it was said that the gang had robbed the Ashland, Wis., postoffice Sunday night and that they were believed responsible for robberies of about 100 postoffices in Minnesota and Wisconsin.

The description here was that they were traveling in a black sedan of expensive make, bearing Minnesota license 63780.

Would Hasten Zoning

RURAL zoning would be adopted much more readily in Michigan and other states if the recommendations for federal aid to forested counties, submitted by the Delta county committee to the joint forestry committee at Madison, eventually are embodied in congressional legislation.

Henry W. Wylie, secretary of the rural zoning committee of the Delta county board of supervisors and spokesman for the Delta county delegation to the forestry hearing in Madison, suggested that federal aid be given only to those counties, which have shown their willingness to put their own house in order by adopting zoning for the control of the uses of land.

Costs of local government are much higher than they should be because in the past families have been allowed to settle on land that was unsuited for farming. Unable to earn a livelihood off the soil, many of these settlers have been forced to ask for welfare aid. In many instances also the county and township governments have been put to unwarranted expense in building roads and schools to serve a few isolated settlers.

Removal of much land off the tax rolls through federal acquisition also has created fiscal problems for local governmental units within national forest boundaries. When lands revert to the state because of tax delinquency, the state conservation department pays 10 cents per acre to the counties on all lands included in state forest, park and refuge areas, but the federal government at the present time does not pay anything on the land it has acquired.

Of course, the Forest Service will return 25 per cent of the gross income from the sale of timber on the forest lands to the local governmental units, but the difficulty is that on many of the cut-over areas there will not be any merchantable timber for many years.

In view of this situation, a movement was launched sometime ago in Upper Peninsula counties to secure legislation whereby the federal government would compensate local governments in the interim for the loss in tax revenues on forest lands.

In this connection, the Delta county committee's report states: "We recognize that local people assume their fair share of the responsibility of getting the greatest possible value from these federal funds, and we believe that this federal aid should be given only to those counties which have shown their willingness to put their own house in order by adopting an official use district map and a rural zoning ordinance for the control of uses of land in their county."

With federal aid wrapped up in this kind of a package, it is quite likely that more interest in zoning and other problems of proper land utilization will be shown in the Lake States cutover region.

Allies Cheered

DESTRUCTION of the German pocket battleship Admiral Graf Spee by its Nazi crew after it was forced to leave the Montevideo harbor by the Uruguayan government on Sunday is hailed by the Allies as the first great naval victory of the European war.

The German admiralty apparently made the best possible choice in a bad situation. A fleet of British and French warships waited outside the harbor to resume the battle, in which the Graf Spee was badly crippled last week and forced to seek refuge in the Montevideo harbor. To again engage in a fight with the Allied ships quite likely would have meant defeat and the loss of many lives.

The other alternative was to submit to internment for the duration of the war. This would have meant the loss of important naval secrets to the enemies, according to the German admiralty's explanation. Nazi propaganda already has been started to blame Uruguay for the loss of the Graf Spee, with charges that the South American government did not give sufficient time for repairing the battleship.

The sinking of the Graf Spee leaves two German pocket battleships, roaming about the oceans as a threat to allied and neutral shipping. The British are greatly encouraged, however, because they have demonstrated they are able to cope with the sea raiders with the naval equipment they have at their command. The psychological effect of the Graf Spee incident is quite certain to work to the advantage of the Allies.

Not Vote Conscious

AN interesting report on the voting habits of Ann Arbor citizens in 24 elections held in the period from 1924 to 1932 has been completed by Dr. James K. Pollock, professor of political science at the University of Michigan.

The study shows that in an eight period the men had a voting percentage of nearly nine per cent higher than that of women. The average participation of voters classified according to race or nationality was 35.5 per cent for the foreign-born.

33.1 per cent of the native-born, and 21.2 per cent for the Negro voters. An average of only 22 per cent of the registered voters between the ages of 21 and 30 voted in 10 elections from 1924 to 1932. Of the eligible voters between the ages of 31 and 40, the average was 32.8 per cent. In the age group from 41 to 60, the average was 43.3 per cent.

The statistics reveal that the foreign-born show a greater appreciation of the privilege of voting than do the native-born. This should set back some of the so-called 100 per cent Americans, who have been endeavoring to arouse racial prejudices against those who have come here from other lands to enjoy the rights and responsibilities of American citizenship. The figures also seem to indicate that our young people in America are not being trained adequately to assume their duties as citizens in their respective communities.

It may be that the young people are disgusted with the manner in which their elders are running the government, and therefore are not interested in politics. But here is where the schools and other agencies must come in to convince the younger citizens that only by their active participation in politics can they get the kind of government they feel they deserve.

Lesson on Pensions

ANY unemployed Colorado resident over the age of 60 is eligible to receive an old-age pension grant of $50 a month. This is $20 a month more than the maximum paid in other states to jobless persons over 65. The federal government now is willing to kick in as high as $15 for every grant to persons above 65. After Jan. 1, Uncle Sam will go as high as $20. That still leaves it up to Colorado taxpayers to manage the additional $30—the entire $50 in the cases of folks between 60 and 65.

As a result of this pension law, property taxes in the city of Denver shot to an all-time high. In order to meet its share, the city increased its tax rate to $18.70 per $1000—a gain of $2.14. A nuisance tax of 50 cents a wheel was placed on automobiles and trucks and a one-cent levy was placed on cigarettes. In addition, all firms doing business on the installment plan must pay a $50 annual license fee.

States which have rejected abnormal jumps in their pension programs should be particularly thankful in this season of the year when budgets must be drawn and tax levies figured out.

RESULTS OF GOP POWWOWS

Last week's gathering of Republican leaders in Washington brought two principal results: Agreement that the probabilities point to a Republican choice for President between two men—Dewey and Vandenberg; Decision by the executive committee of the Republican National Committee to refer the question of fixing the date for the national convention to a meeting of the full committee, probably in February.

National floodlights are turned on—on Vandenberg, 56 years old next March 22, Michigan's famous and respected Republican senator—on Dewey, 38 next March 24, the former Michigan youth who rose like a rocket to become New York's "favorite son" for President.

To say that Michigan has exceptional interests is putting it mildly. The political spotlights focus on two sons of the state and on their attitudes. On Dewey's part, an active campaign for the office is waged; on Vandenberg's part, his personal preference to remain in the Senate is repeatedly reasserted. The membership of the 1940 GOP convention was fixed at exactly 1,000 delegates. The prospects are believed to be against Dewey having anywhere near 501 at the start.

Vandenberg's qualifications, together with his reluctance to assume the heavy burdens he knows will fall on the next President, are regarded as assets placing him favorably as leader in the Republican race.

If the Democrats adhere to their practice they will make their convention plans early in January. The postponement of the Republican action appears to increase the chances that the Republicans may reverse their former course and hold their convention after instead of before the Democrats.

By so doing, the Republicans (1) could take advantage of turns in international affairs which may occur and affect home politics importantly; and (2), if they act after the Democrats, they can name their candidate and adopt their platform in the light of what the Democrats will have done. Vandenberg, it is known, favors this plan. Dewey, as indicated by a statement in course of his recent interview with Washington correspondents, apparently does not.

THEY SHOULD HELP

The rules laid down by Attorney General Read for guidance of Michigan justices of the peace and local traffic officers in handling minor violation cases, are an effort to protect motorists by discouraging speed traps and highway arrests for "revenue purposes."

The rules should not fix justices and deputies who are intent only on doing their duty. And some of them may be an aid to officials who have erred in the past chiefly because of faulty knowledge of their duties and powers. They in no way give motorists a license to disregard either general or local traffic regulations.

The instructions by the Attorney General should be unwelcome only to the minority of officials who have been "on the make" at the expense of the public and the public treasury. And for a time at least the members of this minority will be wise in watching their steps.

However, it will be wrong to gain the comfortable impression that any law, or any set of instructions issued from the

Washington, D. C.—Reports that the recently formed government in Spain may establish a naval base on the island of Minorca recall the fact that this was the last of the Balearic group lost by the Loyalists. Believing that the island would prove advantageous to the winning side, the Loyalists fought desperately to keep possession of this historic spot off the eastern coast of Spain. Their loss of it is said to have been one of the turning points of the conflict.

Before the capture of Minorca, an international tangle developed there when British and French ships patrolled the waters surrounding the island to protect their nearby interests. Minorca, like the entire Balearic group of which it is the second largest, is almost as close to French and Italian territory as to Spanish. Expand Minorca four times its natural size, and even then it would not match the area of Rhode Island.

Strategic stepping-stones between Europe and North Africa, the Balearics lie in the path of two imperial sea lanes. Minorca, easternmost of the islands, is a geographic halfway mark between France and her North African possessions. To the south runs the British short-cut to India, by way of Gibraltar and the Suez Canal. In addition, on both sides of the islands, ships ply direct routes that link the Atlantic Ocean with ports of north-east Spain, southern France, and western Italy. There is no question but that the island would afford an ideal naval base.

Minorca's location near British trade routes gave it seventy-one years of history under British rule, which left an English imprint upon the island and its people that is still noticeable.

The population of Minorca is approximately 45,000, and more than half live in Mahon, the capital—the most English spot on the island. The name of Mahon is used daily around the world, in the sauce said to have been named for it—mayonnaise.

Except in a few spots, its people and its buildings might be at home in an English village outside London. Because of early British occupation, women of the island stay at home, while their Spanish sisters on nearby islands work side by side in the fields with their husbands. Instead of the soft oxidized Spanish sandal, the Minorca maid wears shoes. And she tells how Lord Nelson, during the war with Europe, at the end of the eighteenth century, came to Mahon, and seized and lived in a mansion overlooking Mahon's fine harbor.

The excellent port of Mahon on the southeast coast suggests the English provinces, with its gleaming brass knockers and lace curtains. Visitors to Minorca's country homes tell of seeing eighteenth-century English furniture and French engravings from the time of the Revolution. Of special interest to the people of the United States is the fact that this little island in the Mediterranean is the ancestral home of Admiral David Farragut of Civil War fame. George Farragut, father of the Admiral, was born in Minorca of the ancient Spanish House of Ferragut, as it is spelled there.

—EARLY HISTORY—

Minorca's authentic history begins with the arrival of the Carthaginian Mago, brother of Hannibal, in 210 B. C. The island was the cause of frequent conflicts between European sovereigns and the scene of pirate raids for centuries. In the war against Rome, the Carthaginians made good use of the Minorca's special talent for sowing warfare. Eventually, however, the Romans took over the island. The Vandals and Moors followed, after which Minorca, with the rest of the Balearics, became a Moorish kingdom—a pirate stronghold.

Conquered by James I of Aragon in the thirteenth century, the island was seized by the English five centuries later. Under British rule, Minorca prospered from the early part of the eighteenth century until the Seven Years' War. The ownership of the little island also was involved in the American Revolution when the French and Spanish captured it while England was busy overseas. Sixteen years later, at the beginning of the long struggle with Napoleon, the British again captured Minorca. It remained British until 1802, when, under the Peace of Amiens, it passed to Spain.

In the protected inlets around the island are small fishing villages, whitened by frequent coats of whitewash. Back of these villages, the natives raise enough wheat for home needs. Wine, olive oil, peaches, figs, and almonds are abundant. Some cattle, sheep, and goats are raised. If it were not for the scarcity of fuel, the lead, copper, and iron deposits could be profitably worked.

The airplane and the submarine have changed the technique of war, and the isolated places of the world are becoming more and more important centers for landing fields and submarine bases. With large portions of the world at war or holding an unfriendly attitude toward other nations, the Spanish Government is likely taking time by the forelock and making preparations for its future protection. Military strategists say that Minorca would make an ideal naval base. At any rate it would put to modern use one of the oldest known islands in the world.

office of the attorney general in Lansing will alone put an end to speed traps and similar devices for tapping the pocket-books of unwary drivers.

These abuses will come to an end only when the voters in the counties and municipalities see to it that their justices of the peace and their marshals and deputies that guard the highways are capable and trustworthy men who can be depended upon to do their duty honestly and intelligently, and for the sole purpose of maintaining public peace and safety.

Like everything else, the problem of good highway control is up to the people.

A. A camel can take a load of water amounting to as much as fifteen or twenty gallons.

Q. Can you tell me about the Christmas Creche; what is the origin of the name? L. H.

A. Creche is a French word meaning a crib. Usually, the Creche represents the stable at Bethlehem with the infant Jesus surrounded by the Virgin Mary, St. Joseph, the adoring shepherds and Magi, as well as oxen and asses. The Italian equivalent is "presepio" or manger, and tradition says that St. Francis of Assisi made the first presepio on Christmas Eve, 1223, in the little town of Greccio.

Q. What is the distance across Bering Strait, between Russia and Alaska? A. H.

Q. Are horses ever born completely white? B. R.

A. Very few horses are white at birth. They may be born gray and as they grow older turn white. Circus horses are usually Arabian horses. Gray is common in this breed. If they are very light gray at birth they may turn pure white by the time they are four or five years old.

Q. What should be used to keep leather storm boots in good condition? M. G.

Further activities in the Newberry-Ford election controversy became apparent here yesterday when three operatives of the department of justice arrived in the city and took up headquarters in the postoffice building.

A number of local men were summoned before the trio and were questioned as to what they knew about expenditures in this city and county during the campaign. Just how many men were examined in this hunt for evidence was not announced, but it is known that several proprietors of public places where things political are likely to happen were summoned. Some thought, when they were called on the phone, that they were being kidded by friends, and in some instances they refused to comply with the investigators until the government men stepped into certain places and flashed their badges to prove that they meant business.

New York Column

BY GEORGE ROSS

New York — Richard Allen Knight packed his bags the other day and announced as his next destination, Pago-Pago, fictional stop-off of Sadie Thompson, where the rain pelted down relentlessly and a man can be more or less alone to brood over his harried past.

And Richard Knight has much to brood over, for few playboys, including the ubiquitous squire of New Rochelle, Tommy Mayville, have left such a trail of empty bottles and rowdy-dawd pranks behind them lately.

One of the most spectacular crashings of the front pages by Dick Knight was on the occasion of the plush premier at the Metropolitan Opera House. His exploit was well publicized.

He provided a merry holiday for those who record the nocturnal doings and highlinks of a prankish town. Then he started packing luggage for his threatened self-exile to Pago-Pago.

GOINGS-ON WERE SOFT-PEDALED

For Richard Allen Knight never was cut out to be a playboy—not for the social notoriety of being a steady-item character in the gossip columns. For several years there was a kindly tendency to play down his temporary aberrations.

When he broke the windows of a taxicab because he didn't like the driver, the incident was localized, and when he crashed a ten-foot wall, similar fashion, and crashed through the windows into his house because he had forgotten his keys, the neighbors were inclined to look the other way, since Richard Knight was an important man-about-town.

But when recently he walked into a neighbor's home and walked off with two caged canaries and a radio, it became an open scandal, since he was marched off to court on a charge of second-degree burglary.

There were mitigating circumstances and the neighbor was not vindictive, so the case was dismissed, but the story already had provided enough after-breakfast gutfares for the morning papers. The asbestos hair was a mere runner-up to Richard Allen's Knight-mare.

WAS SUCCESSFUL AS A LAWYER

Less than ten years ago, Knight hardly dreamt that he would be the center of such irreverent attention. He had been one of Manhattan's most successful lawyers, up from Dallas, with skill, brain and unquenchable ambition.

He specialized in divorce actions and his clientele soon read like a marital Who's Who of the town.

Then the downdraft. The stock market crashed and obliterated his fortune, his practice dwindled and his pranks began.

After a while, he began to rebuild his personal empire and was well on route to a complete recovery. He married and became somewhat of a family man with two children. But marital discord set in and his wife went to Reno to cut the marital knot, a routine which had provided the canary and covary of her husband's career.

England did not fully realize what the Russian meant in his strategic position on the continent. Over a period of 600 years the rejected over her industry to invasion and her sovereignty of the importance of the Rhine and the North Sea.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

BY PHARSON AND ALLEN

Washington—The naval battle between pocket-battleship Admiral Graf Spee and the three British cruisers took place a long way from the U. S. A., but for American admirals it was extremely important. For it settled the old feud inside the Navy Department between the eight-inch gun admirals and the six-inch gun admirals. That two inches in the size of a gun could read the U. S. Navy literally saunders is hard for the average laymen to understand. Yet it happened.

It happened in the days from 1922 to 1925 when the size of cruisers was limited by international treaty. One group of admirals believed that the United States should build nothing but eight-inch gun-cruisers, while another group, headed by Admiral William V. Pratt, believed the Navy should have a few six-inch gun-cruisers.

The row got so bad that the late Admiral Hilary Jones, who championed the eight-inch guns, came home in a huff from the London Naval Conference, and subsequently testified before a Senate committee that the American delegation to the conference had sold America short.

By this time, every admiral in the Navy was lined up on one side or the other. They belonged either to the Jones group or the Pratt group—with only two inches of a gun's diameter separating them. But these two inches seemed wider than the distance between heaven and hell.

—FAST SIX-SHOOTERS—

Admiral Pratt maintained that a six-inch gun cruiser could shoot faster, and was much more effective at close range, at night or in foggy weather, and that the American Navy should have some of them. For holding this view, some of his fellow admirals would hardly speak to him, members of the Senate Foreign Affairs Committee berated him, and the last days of his active career were most uncomfortable.

But in last week's naval battle fought off the coast of South America, it was the two British six-inch gun cruisers, Ajax and Achilles, which chased the Admiral Graf Spee into Montevideo. The British cruiser Exeter, carrying eight-inch guns, was put out of commission.

The advantage which the six-inch gun cruisers had was that they could fire faster. Their shells were smaller and the guns were loaded by hand. On the other hand, eight-inch shells of the Exeter and the eleven-inch shells of the Admiral Spee were so big they had to be loaded by crane.

Also the six-inch gun cruisers were able to maneuver rapidly behind smoke screens and get close to the Admiral Graf Spee, thus canceling out its superiority in range.

Admiral Pratt is now retired, and sitting by the sea at Belfast, Maine. But his ability to shoot fast, and to hide was exactly what he argued during the capital war which split the Navy for ten years.

—QUACK, QUACK ICKES—

Harold Ickes not only can dish it out, but he can take it. Toughest skit at the Gridiron dinner was one aimed at him. Ickes was represented in the figure of Donald Duck, who answered all questions in a hilarious ten-minute interview with a noisy "quack, quack, quack." It was a murderous take-off.

Minnesota's young Governor Harold Stassen, who sat next to Ickes and was experiencing his first Gridiron show, was quite embarrassed. Finally, in an effort to ease the strain, Stassen remarked, "The boys get kind of rough at times, don't they, Mr. Secretary?"

"Quack, quack," shot back Ickes with a broad grin.

—TELEPHONE DIPLOMACY—

The State Department, like any household, is struggling to keep down the phone bill. Despite economy efforts, however, the bill keeps soaring.

Trouble is that officials are developing the habit of picking up the phone and saying, in an offhand way, "I want to talk to the Embassy in Havana."

Last (fiscal) year's telephone bill reached the tidy figure of $18,400, but this year it climbed to $21,500, or higher by $3,100.

Transatlantic calls are the most expensive, but they are not so numerous as the calls to Latin America. No one except the Secretary or the Under Secretary is supposed to make a trans-Atlantic call, unless by authority of one of them.

But in the Latin American field, the rules are not so rigid, and with increasing Good Neighbor business, it's a common thing to call not only Havana and Mexico City, but even Rio de Janeiro and Buenos Aires.

WE ARE NOT POOR With four to feed and clothes and school. The rent and the fuel to pay. There's nothing left from last week. To save for a rainy day;

We own no bonds, and no future ahead Wherein we can rest secure. But to one of my boys I answered "No." When he asked if we were poor.

Tonight as I sit and look to the west, Where the sunset colors pour Their liquid paints on cloud and earth, I hear no-canon roar;

The lark still flies in unbroken skies, The song birds come to moor Their sailing bars in the boughs of our trees, And I know we are not poor.

A crust and a sock are wealth over here, A body criteria is gold. The scattered children of this warring world, In poverty better and sold; For the friends we have and the cheer we know, With love to lead and lure, I know it was right that I answered "No." When he asked if we were poor.

On The RECORD

By Dorothy Thompson

THERE IS A TIME

When Lord Halifax protested yesterday against the appeal of Lord Darnley and Lord Arnold, Conservative and Laborite peers for a negotiated peace, he warned that a such peace would create the impression that Britain was not substantially united. He also declared sharply that Britain had never closed the door to negotiation.

The British Foreign Minister summed up the Government's view—which is undoubtedly the view of most of the country—that, although a peace after a long and bitter war would present difficulties, they would be no greater than those attending the making of a "patched-up" peace.

Dorothy Thompson

This column believes that a "patched-up" peace is not only impossible, but would merely be an armistice in a continuing war. You cannot "patch up" the differences between the totalitarian European conception of the Nazi government and any other conception which might be called free, democratic, or humane, or consistent with anything in the tradition of Western civilization.

The differences between the Nazis and Stalin's Communists are, this column has consistently maintained for years, superficial and adjustable.

The differences between either of them and the rest of the Western world are essential and incompatible.

This does not make the struggle a struggle between capitalism and socialism. It is a struggle between a dynamic, revolutionary process, whose object is the total overturn of everything existing, and great nations of people who resist in behalf of reason, experience and the right to evolve the necessary changes and adjustments in peace.

The outcome of this struggle is not a matter of indifference to the neutrals. For the European neutrals it is as important as it is to the European belligerents. For the outcome will determine the form of life and society which they must eventually share with the rest of Europe.

Nor is the outcome a matter of indifference to the United States. If the outcome should be general anarchy or sporadic revolutions, arising out of exhaustion and despair, the burden upon the United States of supporting and maintaining civilization on this continent will be intolerable. I greatly doubt whether we will be equal to it. That is the worst that can be envisaged.

In any case, the outcome of this struggle will determine the economic organization of Europe, and that economic organization will determine the whole world economy, of which ours is a part.

Either it will be one with which we can collaborate, with adjustments that can be made by reasonable men, or it will be one with which we must ruthlessly compete, with all the possible consequences of that competition—namely, and eventually, war, with ourselves as chief protagonists; unless we are willing simply to enter it, when the struggle is over, as the docile followers of the victors.

The above statement is too categorical to be allowed to pass without further elaboration, but a column limited in space, and for the time being I will argue from it, and return another time to elaborate and justify it. I believe it to be so; and from it maintain that the neutrals, and especially the United States as the only large and powerful neutral nation left, must begin to formulate their plans for the future of Western civilization. Neutrality must not mean waiting and preparing to accept any outcome that can be imposed by the victors.

The neutrals must be dynamic. They must not be passive and disinterested observers, but an active force, working for the only kind of future world that will have any stability at all—a peaceful world whose policies are based upon reason, intelligence, realism, and humanity.

The neutrals are in the advantageous position of objectivity, which is a quite different thing from impartiality. Objectivity means weighing the evidence and deducing conclusions in reason. Impartiality means refusing to consider the evidence or to reach any conclusion that might be favorable or unfavorable in whole or in part to either party.

That, at any rate is the interpretation of impartiality, advanced by the neutrality advertisements currently appearing in

"Look." They invite us to suspend all thinking on world issues for the course of the war, on the grounds that thinking is dangerous. But nothing could be more dangerous for us, as a nation, than to follow their advice. It implies that impotence is a blessing because it spares people many earthly troubles. The grave, too, spares them all earthly troubles, so why not commit suicide?

The "Look" advertisements—I mention them as a particularly appalling example of the moral and intellectual depths to which it is possible for well intentioned people to fall—cynically deny all idealism. "America's Heart Is America's Tragedy," says one of them. We have too much sympathy for the oppressed. The idea of "making the world safe for democracy, of liberation of oppressed minorities, sound rather silly now, don't they?" the advertisements ask.

No, they don't. They sound tremendously real and sane. A goal is not silly because it has not yet been achieved. Walt Whitman said of liberty that "it is not daunted by one failure or two failures or any number of failures, nor by the sharp show of the tushes of power"—but he was an American poet and not a clever writer in an advertising office.

Idealism is a force, and vision is something without which—says the Bible—the people perish. The vision of an immense nation whose frontiers are two great oceans was, is and will be a world vision. Our neutrality should increase and sharpen it, not diminish it.

If we look around the world with the clarity that absence of panic can afford us, it is possible to discern some hopeful signs, suggestive of direction. Those hopeful signs are discernible in every nation of Western civilization—in all the belligerents, and among the neutrals.

We shall try tentatively to record some of them—some of these small lights in the dark—and ask how we, as neutrals, can increase their wattage.

Escanaba Residents In Auto Accident

Ontonagon, Wis.—Mrs. Walter C. Richer and daughter of Escanaba escaped serious injury about 9:30 a. m. Saturday when a car driven by Mrs. Richer left highway US-41 between Brookside and Ontonagon, and rolled over several times. Both women suffered bruises and shock.

The accident is believed to have been caused by the frost which was brought to the surface of the highway by warm weather. Mrs. Richer, who was driving south, applied the brakes, according to information, and the car skidded into the ditch and upset.

Leo J. Erditt of Marinette drove to Brookside Saturday morning and brought Mrs. Richer and her daughter to Marinette from where they returned to their homes in Escanaba. The new car was towed to a Marinette garage and is reported to have been badly damaged.

TINKER KNOWN IN PENINSULA

Directed Establishing of Hiawatha, Marquette, Ottawa Units

E. W. Tinker, who has resigned as assistant chief of the state and private forestry division of the U. S. forest service to become executive secretary of the American Pulp and Paper association, is well known in the upper peninsula.

Tinker, a graduate of Michigan State college and the Yale forestry school, for many years prior to his promotion as assistant to the director at Washington was supervisor of the forest service's North Central region, which includes Michigan, Wisconsin and Minnesota, and played an important part in the founding of national forests in these states.

At the time of his retirement he had completed 24 years in the forest service, which he joined in 1915. Like most of the high-ranking federal forest officials, Tinker started at the bottom as a forest ranger and gained promotion through continuous service in various forest regions of the country.

During his term as supervisor of the North Central region, Marquette national forest in the eastern end of the peninsula, Hiawatha national forest in the central area and Ottawa national forest in the western end of the peninsula were greatly expanded and now are among the most important forest and recreation areas in the upper peninsula.

Under Tinker's direction federal forest land acquisition also progressed rapidly in Wisconsin and Minnesota where federal forest holdings now total several millions of acres.

Tinker's success in dealing with private interests in rounding out the forest service's land acquisition program in the lake states was paramount in his promotion as assistant to the director in charge of the state and private forestry division.

In the three years he held this post, Tinker's main job was the complex one of being liaison man for the forest service in its relations with state forestry departments throughout the country.

U. P. Forestry Plan Outlined At Hearing

Recommendations for the rehabilitation of the Upper Peninsula cutover areas were contained in a report submitted by a Delta county delegation to the joint congressional committee on forestry at the hearing which opened in Madison, Wis., yesterday.

Members of the Delta county group at Madison are: Henry Wylie, secretary of the rural zoning committee of the Delta county board of supervisors; A. R. Vogel, state highway forester; and City Manager George E. Bean.

Recommendations listed in the summary of the recommendations were as follows: Congressional approval of the cooperative forest restoration bill, otherwise known as House Bill No. 7271, and Senate Bill No. 2927, introduced into the house of representatives last summer by Congressman Fulmer of South Carolina, and in the United States senate by Senator Walsh of Massachusetts, LaFollette of Wisconsin, and Byrns of South Carolina.

Retention of the CCC program without curtailment. Congressional approval of Rep. Fred Bradley's bill, introduced at the last special session of Congress, providing that the U. S. Forest Service acquire right-of-way and plant trees along state, federal and county highways.

That every means be taken to give unemployed woodsmen work in the rehabilitation, development and protection of forest lands. That the federal government give financial assistance to those counties in which the government owns large acreages of forest land until such time as the 25 per cent gross income to the counties from these lands equals the income lost by the transfer of these lands from the state to the federal government.

Wylie Testifies. Mr. Wylie, serving as spokesman for the Delta county delegation, testified before the congressional committee at Madison, in addition to submitting the written report. Delta county's problems were described as being typical of those of other counties in the Upper Peninsula cutover district.

Practically all of Delta county was originally in forests, Mr. Wylie pointed out. The development and settlement of the county went hand in hand with the harvesting, milling and shipping of the timber crop. A majority of the towns and villages started as a result of the sawmills. During the harvesting of the crop a considerable area was developed as farms. Ready markets were available locally as a result of the lumber industry.

As areas were cut over the mills shut down. A number of the mill owners, loggers and millmen moved to other logging areas, but a large number also remained. Many attempted farming, often on marginal and submarginal land but due to the loss of local markets and inability to no longer secure at least part time employment in the woods or in the mills, many were unable to make sufficient income. As a result land tax delinquency and unemployment followed. Mr. Wylie stated that at times as much as 50 per cent of the population has been dependent upon public welfare aid.

Mr. Wylie reviewed the history of land zoning in Michigan, and said that Delta county is ready to start on a program of developing the forest, agricultural and rural land of the county on a permanent, substantial basis. Endorsement of the National Resources Committee report on the Northern Lake States was also given.

Objectives of Bill. It was explained that the objectives of the cooperative reforestation bill are considered highly desirable in the Upper Peninsula. It is felt that the legislation will accomplish the following ends: Keep private forest lands in private ownership, prevent tax delinquency on privately owned forest lands; increase the county tax income from forest lands in those counties which need these funds so desperately at the present time; encourage reforestation of selective cutting; and make more private forest land; encourage forest jobs for unemployed persons residing within forest boundaries.

Bradley's Bill Endorsed. In urging approval of Rep. Bradley's land acquisition bill, the report states that experience has shown that roadside timber cuts snow drifting to a minimum and reduces winter maintenance costs. It also points to the importance of preserving the scenic beauties of the roadsides as tourist attractions.

The necessity for providing more work for unemployed men in constructive forestry work was emphasized in the report.

"The greatest immediate need in Delta county today is jobs for our unemployed men," the report stated. "Large areas of Delta county land lie within the boundaries of the Hiawatha National Forest. The federal government now owns 170,000 acres of these lands. Last Friday, Dec. 15, there were 1,850 Delta county men who were employed on WPA projects.

"Local sponsors have been informed that the regulation requiring a local contribution of 25 per cent will go into effect Jan. 1, 1940, on all projects. When it does, the maximum number of

Rotarians Stage Holiday Shebang; Waldorf Is Guest

With Lynn Waldorf, coach of Northwestern university, as guest, members of the Escanaba Rotary club yesterday held their annual Christmas party and they made it an occasion of merriment.

The program started out with President Ed Edick asking for some music. Program Chairman Ollie Thatcher had nothing planned but called on R. P. Bowers, music committee chairman. Bowers had nothing planned either and, taunted by failure to do his duty, he hastily called on a group of so-called singers, who former a double octette—with two to spare—and sang such favorite barber shop tunes as "Jingle Bells" and "Sweet Adeline." The group consisted of Bowers, Thatcher, Rudy Olson, C. Arthur Anderson, Harold Gessner, Rev. D. E. Evans, Jim Degnan, Jim Frost and Charles Larson.

After the impromptu concert, gifts were presented to Rotarians, each gift being humorously symbolic of the individual. The gifts later were turned over to an organization to be distributed among unfortunate children for Christmas.

Waldorf spoke briefly, telling of Tennessee and Tulane, two football teams which will play in the Rose Bowl and Sugar Bowl, respectively, this year. Coach George Ruwitch of the Escanaba high school team also was a guest of the club.

Robert Finnerty Dies at Powers

Robert H. Finnerty, 76, resident of Powers for close to a half century, died at 2:30 o'clock Monday afternoon at the home of his brother, Michael. He had been in poor health for the past two years, but was seriously ill only a short time, a stroke which he suffered two weeks ago, causing his death.

He was born in Petersboro, Ontario, Canada, June 30, 1863, and spent his childhood there. When a young man he came to this country, to Mount Pleasant, Mich. He moved to Powers forty-eight years ago, and had been a continuous resident of that community, from that time. He engaged in farming there, retiring several years ago. He was an active member of St. Francis Xavier church, and was affiliated with the Holy Name society of the church.

He was unmarried, and his brother, Michael, is the only survivor. The body was taken to the Boyle Funeral Parlors at Bark River to be prepared for burial. Funeral arrangements are incomplete.

"Old Faithful" was the name of a horse that produced $175,000 worth of diphtheria antitoxin.

Lucille Gessner Guest Artist at Christmas Tea

The Franklin school auditorium was the scene of the Escanaba Woman's club annual Christmas party, Monday afternoon, a holiday tea, at which Miss Lucille Gessner was guest artist.

Mrs. K. W. Stilling presented Miss Gessner to a large and appreciative audience which thoroughly enjoyed her dramatic interpretation of Lillian Hellman's latest successful play, "The Little Foxes," which gave Tallulah Bankhead the worth-while starring role she had long awaited.

TOWEY SPEAKS TO KIWANIAN

Anti-Tuberculosis Work In State Described By Speaker

Receipts from the sale of Christmas seals, which amounted to $207,000 in Michigan last year, could not begin to take care of the hospitalization and treatment of tuberculosis sufferers in the state, but are used to finance an extensive educational program to combat this disease, Dr. John W. Towey of Pinecrest Sanatorium explained in a talk before the Kiwanis club yesterday noon. Dr. Towey is a member of the board of directors of the Michigan Tuberculosis association.

Dr. Towey explained, however, that the Michigan Tuberculosis association does not receive all the money collected from the sale of seals because a portion goes to the local organizations, who conduct the seal sale campaigns. These local organizations, like the Escanaba Woman's club in this city, use the money for various child health activities, including the buying of medicines, milk and other food items for undernourished children. X-ray examinations also are financed by some organizations with this money.

The Michigan Tuberculosis association started its anti-tuberculosis educational work 32 years ago, Dr. Towey said. There are now 4800 hospital beds in the state for the care of patients, and the death rate has been reduced to only 36 per 100,000 population. Upper Peninsula counties have a higher death rate due to the fact that certain racial groups are more susceptible to the disease, and because of poor housing conditions and certain occupational hazards, particularly in mining where workers become victims of silicosis. Delta county's tuberculosis rate is 62 per 100,000 population.

The increase of state financial aid to the counties for the maintenance of sanatoriums was credited to the educational work of the Michigan Tuberculosis association. Without the state aid of $1.50 per day per patient, the counties would be unable to operate tuberculosis hospitals under the 15-month tax limitation, he said. The speaker also gave some data concerning the Pinecrest sanatorium at Powers, which is jointly owned by Delta, Menominee, Dickinson and Iron counties.

Salvation Army in Finland

In order that all our friends who recently have made inquiries concerning the work of The Salvation Army in Finland may be informed, I desire to assure all interested that our officers and soldiers of that country have been actively engaged in war relief ever since the first day of the Russian invasion.

At the present time more than a thousand officers and workers are engaged at three hundred and eighty centers from Helsinki to the Arctic set to bring physical and spiritual aid in this time of need.

Across the border into Norway and Sweden large numbers of destitute Finns are streaming into havens of refuge under neutral skies. The northernmost outpost of Army centers in Norway, located at Kirkeness, directly across the border from the "Finnish corridor" into the Arctic Ocean, is perhaps the busiest of all stations as the "Red Horde" pushes before it the remnants of once thriving communities in this "land of the midnight sun" during the summer months—now, land of the Arctic night.

Other centers for refugees are maintained by the Salvation Army at Vadsø, Vardo, Hammerfest, Tromsø and Narvik with the northern division with corresponding stations southward for southern Finland.

Funds and supplies for war relief work in Finland through The Salvation Army is cleared through Oslo, Norway and Stockholm, Sweden. All Salvation Army officers throughout the world are authorized to accept donations for war work on all fronts. Gifts will be gratefully received at the organizations headquarters for Del-complications to develop. My foods would not digest properly and what little I ate would cause me unbearable suffering. Attacks of indigestion would follow every meal, gas would fill my stomach and in spite of my strict dieting I would feel miserable anyway. Dizzy spells also attacked me and I was forced to be up several times every night. Then I developed awful aches and pains over my body which settled mostly in my knees. I was so lame at times I could scarcely get about and my legs would almost give-out on me when I was walking. Once I began KruGon I found the one medicine I had been wanting all this time. "This modern capsule remedy did not waste anytime giving me proper bowel action and soon I found myself improving in many different ways," continued Mr. Wagner. "Those awful aches and pains have been relieved, eat and sleep better and with the proper rest and nourishment I am feeling the best I have in years. It is no wonder so many people are praising KruGon."

KruGon is sold by West End Drug Store, 1211 Ludington St., this city.

Colored Lights Used In Homes; Handed By Boys

Colored lights are appearing on side streets throughout Escanaba as a result of the Cub and Scout campaign to make Escanaba a city of colored lights during the Christmas season.

When residents remove the white porch light and insert a colored light the streets look like a chain of colored lights and are in keeping with the lighting plan of Ludington street.

Any Scout or Cub will deliver colored lights upon call.

Pat O'Dea Still Bothered With Bad Leg; But His Version Of Accident Differs

For about the fourth time in a year, Patrick Kenneth O'Dea, crippled youth from Montana, is visiting Escanaba—or, as visiting is perhaps more correct.

Yesterday Pat, well dressed and clean cut looking, wandered around the lobby of a hotel and sought aid from members of the Knights of Columbus organization. Pat had a sad story to tell. He was a free lance photographer for the Associated Press and his leg was seriously injured in an airplane accident. Left high and hitch-hiking his way back to his home in Missoula, Montana. His listeners were sympathetic—Pat was a quiet sort of a fellow and, apparently the victim of adversity.

However, someone recognized Patrick Kenneth as one who had previously visited Escanaba. His story at that time was a bit different. In fact, the sport page of the Daily Press under date of February 25, 1939 carried this yarn about Pat:

"Penniless and with the prospect of hitch hiking 1,700 miles over lightly traveled highways in the depths of winter, Patrick Kenneth O'Dea, attractive 22 year old chap with a pleasant smile and an inoffensive braggadocio, stopped at the police station Thursday night and asked for lodging.

"Pat had an interesting yarn to tell. It was a story of a fellow who has kept his chin up in the face of adversity and whose only thought in mind is to get back to a ranch, the Paxton Ranch near Missoula, Montana, whence he left about three years ago. The blond traveler, with a set of teeth which would do credit to any movie hero, is undaunted in his long journey in spite of the fact that he has difficulty in walking—he wears a newly acquired artificial leg, replacing the leg he lost in an accident on the Michigan-Indiana border about a year and a half ago.

"Are you a reporter?" O'Dea asked upon hearing mention made of a newspaper being in the station. Receiving an affirmative answer, he continued:

"What does the name Pat O'Dea mean to you?"

"Pat O'Dea," the scribe replied, "was a brilliant football player at the University of Wisconsin many years ago. About four years ago, he was—"

"Yet, I know," broke in the wayfarer. "Four years ago, he was brought back to Madison and was guest of honor at a big homecoming celebration. They put on banquets for him and flags and banners with his picture were hung around the town. After that, he went back to the coast and died about two years ago in California.

"Pat O'Dea, the immortal Wisconsin football player," continued the smiling youth, who by this time was rolling up his overcoat for a pillow and preparing to lie down on the hard board bunk in the north cell block of the station, "was my father. And he was not such a good father at that. When my mother died when I was six years old, father put us kids in an orphanage at Missoula and did very little for us. He was making pretty good money as a foreman in lumber camps in Washington but never spent much on us and only came to see us once in a while. Then, about four years ago, some newspaperman discovered dad up in a lumber camp and wrote a story about him. You see, after he left Wisconsin, nothing much was heard from him and people back in the Midwest thought he had died. So there was a big fuss and he was brought back to the homecoming. After that, he went back out west. He always had symptoms of TB and died about two years ago."

Never Liked Football

"The youth, upon questioning said he never was interested in following the footsteps of his famous father, who drop kicked a 62 yard field goal against Northwestern in 1938 and who placed kicked one for 50 yards against Chicago the previous year. He said he had tried a little boxing and was in several Golden Gloves tournaments in Kansas but dropped it when he found it didn't pay. He has a half brother, however, who has tried his hand at pro ball but wasn't much of a success.

"And so, Pat O'Dea is on his way back to a Montana ranch in spite of heavy obstacles in the form of winter weather and an artificial limb. He knows when he gets back to Montana he will be welcomed by a sister on a ranch there."

SKI SCAFFOLD WILL BE BUILT

Rotary Club to Finance Material Cost of Project

Expenditure of $70 for purchase of materials to be used in construction of a ski jump scaffold at the Gladstone Sports Park on Days River was approved by the Gladstone Rotary club yesterday.

Material necessary, including timbers and planking, will be secured at the present time for the above amount, it was explained by Dr. O. S. Hult, ardent outdoor sports enthusiast and booster, who presented the matter before the club and urged cooperation.

It is planned to build a 56 foot tower and slide atop the hill used last winter for jumping purposes and to use the entire slope for landing. The landing hill is approximately 95 feet in height which will make the vertical distance from the top of the tower to the foot of the landing hill about 160 feet.

Detailed plans for the structure will be drawn within the next two weeks by an expert who has had considerable experience in designing ski towers.

The Rotary club had its annual Christmas party yesterday and gifts were exchanged by members. They were then gathered by the Fellowship committee and are being turned over to a local charitable organization for distribution.

HUNTER WOUNDED

Marquette—Emanuel Johnson, 50, who resides at 342 East Park street, was painfully, but not seriously wounded yesterday when he was accidentally shot while hunting rabbits.

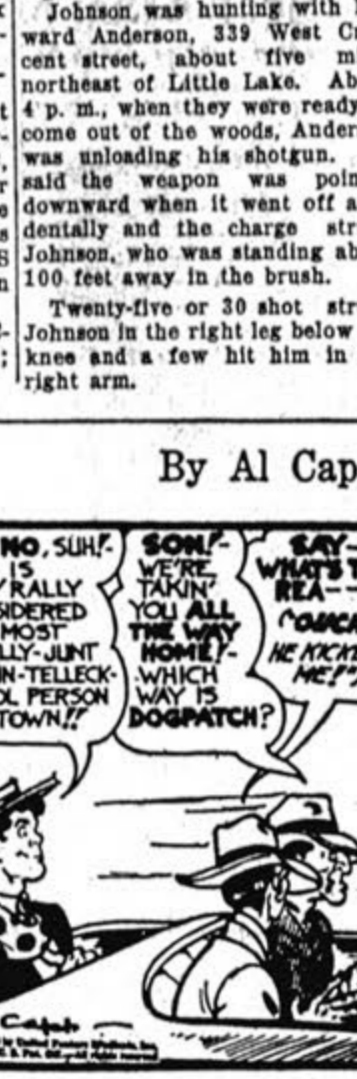

Johnson was hunting with Edward Anderson, 339 West Crescent street, about five miles northeast of Little Lake. About 4 p. m., when they were ready to come out of the woods, Anderson was unloading his shotgun. He said the weapon was pointed downward when it went off accidentally and the charge struck Johnson, who was standing about 100 feet away in the brush.

Twenty-five or 30 shot struck Johnson in the right leg below the knee and a few hit him in the right arm.

St. Joe and Eskymo Gridders Feted At Banquet

WALDORF GIVES FINE ADDRESS

Many Persons Attend Seventh Annual Grid Bust

Coaches and players of Escanaba and St. Joseph high school football teams were guests of the Escanaba chamber of commerce at the seventh annual football recognition banquet held last night at which about 150 persons were present.

Lynn Waldorf, genial football coach at Northwestern university, lived up to all advance notices of his speaking ability with a fine inspirational talk which won him a tremendous round of applause as he finished.

Waldorf, in pointing out his ideas of the value of football to the youth of this country, brought in a number of incidents, some humorous and some serious, which have happened to him in his long career as a player at Syracuse, where he was an all-American, and as a coach at four universities.

"Athletics, I feel," said Waldorf, "have a definite place in our educational system and it gives me a great deal of satisfaction to take a green boy in practice, work with him slowly and painfully, and then watch him develop into a polished player. They all react differently to different situations and that is what makes the sport interesting. Sometimes, of course, we do not always attain the end for which we are striving but that makes the satisfaction all the greater when a boy does respond to coaching and develops.

Waldorf told a bit about Bill DeCorrevont, his prize sophomore who was one of the most highly publicized high school athletes in the nation two years ago and who was called a flop this fall when he failed to live up to expectations as a runner.

"DeCorrevont," said Waldorf, "is a fine boy. At no time was he ever touched by the reams of publicity he received. His coaching very well and his inability to continue as a runner was due mostly to our lack of blocking. He did develop into a fine all-around player and, as the season ended, was the best defensive safety man we had. I can safely say that Correvont is the first sophomore I have ever seen who did not lose the ball once during the full season and who did not allow one completed pass in his territory all season. That is something few sophomores are able to do. He developed into a fine passer and punter and was a very valuable man to the squad even though he only scored one touchdown all year—that one winning the Minnesota game."

Introduced by Dr. Hira, Waldorf concluded by moralizing the value of athletics as a health builder in pointing to the great mile race between Glenn Cunningham, world famed miler from Kansas University, and Archie San Roman, diminutive star from Emporia, teachers' college in Kansas, at the Randall Field try-outs three years ago. Both of these athletes had been informed by doctors at one time that they never would be able to walk again. But, by careful athletic training, they overcame obstacles and became the best runners in the world.

J. Clyde McGonagle presided at the meeting as chairman. John P. Norton, president of the chamber of commerce, delivered the brief address of welcome, and short talks were given by Coaches Carl Kant of St. Joseph and George Rutwick of the Eskymos. Persons introduced included Athletic Director Rev. Paschel Kerner of St. Joe, Supt. John A. Lemmer, Prin. Edward Edick, Coaches James Rouman, Bill Puckelwarth and Dick Schram, and Sportswriters George Mathison of Gladstone and Charles Larson. Waldorf was introduced by Dr. Fred Hira of this city, former Northwestern football player. Music was furnished by a senior high school boys' orchestra.

"Pappy" Waldorf Finds "Celery" League Tougher Than Big Ten; Schedule Is Heavy

Lynn Waldorf's Northwestern university football team wasn't the champion of the Big Ten league this year but there's no denying that the personable Wildcat grid mentor is near the championship of the "celery" league.

Since the football season closed, Waldorf has been in great demand as an after dinner speaker. In fact, "Pappy," as he is affectionately known by his intimates, has covered plenty of ground. He has spoken in West Virginia, some east, Louisiana in the south, Colorado in the west and now in Upper Michigan.

MICHIGAN WINS IN SECOND HALF

Connecticut loses, 62-45 and Dayton trims Rhode Island

White Plains, N. Y., Dec. 18 (AP)—Two western invaders, Michigan and Dayton university, gave their eastern rivals a lesson in basketball tonight in the first court doubleheader of the season at the county center.

Basketball

Illinois 41; Princeton 25. Indiana 51; Pittsburgh 35. Dayton U. 56; Rhode Island 51. Duquesne U. 35; Penn 20. Kent State 41; Baldwin-Wal-lace 28.

PLAYER SUES SCHOOL

Omaha, Neb., Dec. 18 (AP)—Sebastian A. Circo, 17, a high school basketball player who complained his coach failed to remove him from a game after he was hurt, sued the Omaha school district D. Collins for $25,756 in district court today for alleged bone injuries suffered in a 1936 state tournament game.

BUTLER DOWNS IOWA

Indianapolis, Dec. 18 (AP)—Butler university came out behind with a blistering second half attack to down a husky University of Iowa basketball team, 35 to 22, here tonight and put its season's record of three straight victories. Byron Gunn, forward, led the Bulldog attack with 11 points.

TROJAN SQUAD HAS NO WORRY

But Fans Are Grave Over Coming Rose Bowl Tilt With Vols

Los Angeles, Dec. 18 (AP)—Except for one group, everyone standing around the football practice field at the University of Southern California today seemed very grave and solemn about the coming Rose Bowl encounter.

The unworried faction was composed of members of the Trojan grid squad, and the way they shouted and laughed, you'd never guess what anxiety and responsibility their elders were shouldering. The sight was enough to send the downtown Quarterbacks' association into executive session right on the spot.

Coach Howard Jones didn't even appear to be overly concerned with his rolicking Trojans or the prospect that soon they'd be colliding with one of the great teams of the nation, Tennessee. It was most unusual, because Howard Jones is one of the best open field warriors in the business. It may be that he's over-trained in the brow-wrinkling Washington and U. C. L. A. games.

EXPERTS PICK BIGGEST FLOPS

Johnny Vander Meer and Northwestern Share Doubtful Honor

New York, Dec. 18 (AP)—Johnny Vander Meer and the Northwestern university football team can go stand in a corner together. The ninth annual Associate Press poll gives them the doubtful distinction of having been the year's most decided disappointments.

FAKED THOMAS FIGHTS DENIED

Manager Insists His Man Did Not Lay Down for Schmeling, Galento

Chicago, Dec. 18 (AP)—Nate Lewis, one-time manager of Harry Thomas, made categorical denial before the Illinois state athletic commission today regarding Thomas' charges that he laid down in fights with Max Schmeling in New York and Tony Galento in Philadelphia.

Lewis, a colorful figure in boxing for 40 years, termed the charges, published in the Chicago Tribune October 30, an "absolute lie." He read his denial from an eleven-page prepared statement.

"Thomas' charges are definitely untrue," Lewis said. "He did not lay down in either fight. They were stopped by the referee at a time when he was taking a terrific licking. If he had agreed to a fake, he could have asked the referee to stop it at any time, but against Schmeling he fought for eight rounds and was knocked down eight times. If the fight was a fake I could have thrown a towel in because Thomas was taking such a terrific licking."

Lewis, however, made the admission that there was a fourth undisclosed person present at the meeting in a Chicago hotel when Thomas charges the deal was made for him to lose to both Schmeling and Galento.

War Finance Problems Are Worrying Britons

BY OSWALD G. VILLARD

No question is more vital than this one of England's capacity to finance a long and dangerous war and in no other field does one hear as much anxiety expressed. Already, J. M. Keynes is in the forefront with a suggestion that there be compulsory savings, to be used by the government, which has met with bitter opposition on the ground that that would be imposing another income tax and that the burden would rest too heavily upon the working classes.

Everybody recalls the tremendous financial aid given by the United States to England in the last struggle and wonders what will take its place. Indeed, the problem of how to get the dollars that will be necessary under the cash and carry plan of our Neutrality Law is without doubt the most serious one that confronts the Chancellor of the Exchequer and will continue to cause him the greatest anxiety. It has already led to the decision to restrict imports from the United States in the most ruthless way—one American publisher has shown me his correspondence with the government in which he says that a continuance of the present embargo on importations will put an end to his London business, necessitate the discharge of his numerous English employees and the loss of his position in the British publishing world, in which he has been of especial help in introducing British authors to the American public. He cannot even get an answer to his repeated communications. The government has decided that it will cut out every import from America that England can live without in order to conserve every dollar for essential war materials and requirements. All cultural needs will go by the board, which is the case in all wars.

Chancellor Criticized

As for the new taxation, I have heard the Chancellor called both a Bolshevik and a Fascist by business men, but the consensus is that he was a first-class budget and that he did exactly the right thing in putting on heavy taxes at once. As it is he will only get about 150,000,000 pounds out of this year and perhaps not more than 220 or 230,000,000 pounds next year which is less at the present exchange than one billion dollars and it is certainly not necessary to tell Americans what a little way a billion dollars goes in a modern war. Already the war is costing England $30,000,000 a day and the first appeal to buy war bonds has met with what the London newspapers could only call "fair" success. Sir John Simon wishes to raise half the sums needed by taxation and half by borrowing. He may be able to do this but it is open to doubt.

These things, however, are certain: If this war lasts a couple of years the most tremendous sacrifices will be required of all who have means. England will steadily have to make inroads upon her capital—her people will be lucky if they escape a capital levy, which people in Germany are already expecting will be their lot. England will have to sell, after a time, the assets of its citizens abroad, that is overseas investments of every kind and may have to sell control of some of its own industrial establishments to any neutral purchasers who may be induced to buy it.

In return, the private English investor, who will be forced to turn over his foreign owned property to his government, will receive its promises to pay which may or may not be good when the war is over.

Two years of this and England will face tremendous social and financial readjustments.

Danger of Inflation

The danger of inflation is present cannot be denied. Unless the government can finance itself by taxation and the borrowing of real savings there is certain to be an inflationary rise of prices which will increase the cost of the war and upset conditions generally. Some rise in prices is inevitable, if only to compensate for the fall of the pound. I am assured that the government is watching this phase very closely, being fully aware of the danger of a spiral rise of wages and prices. This danger was without doubt also one of the reasons for the steepness of the first war budget.

But, as one of the leading financiers has just admitted to me, if the orthodox methods of financing the war do not suffice, then inflation will come "because the government must get what it wants" in order to win the war. He does not think that moderate inflation will make much change during the war but he admits that it will intensify the post-war problem if productive resources are diverted to the Government by inflation rather than by taxation and borrowing. Today all export of British capital abroad is strictly prohibited, as is almost all private investment at home—save where it is connected with war expansion. This has the war already checked the growth of England and all savings are being "ruthlessly" shepherded into the government fund not to go into creative undertakings but to be spent as ruthlessly for the destructive purposes of war.

I am often asked if the condition of England at the outbreak of this war was not financially far less favorable than when the last came in 1914. In some respects England was not as well off this time. In 1914 the English public held enormous quantities of American securities, notably railroad bonds and stocks which were then gilt-edged and stood very high. Today, comparatively few American securities are owned in England and many of those are so low that their realization will produce relatively little.

As already pointed out, England will not be able to borrow from us, which is however somewhat offset by the fact that she does not have to finance a number of small Allies as during the last war. Again, the British balance of payments was not as favorable last August as in 1914, which was probably due to the recall of British capital from abroad as British investment opportunities increased and became more attractive. This shows again that the government has less overseas purchasing power than when it last went to war with Germany.

Some Better Advantages

On the other hand, there are a number of points where the situation of England is better this time. It is true that the national debt stood at seven billion pounds as against only 600 millions before, but the income which carried the 1939 figure is at least one-third larger—and this despite all the losses of the last war and of the depression. Indeed, economists are certain that all classes of Englishmen, and particularly the lowest paid, have a larger quantity of all kinds of goods such as food, clothing, housing and amusements than twenty-five years ago. Thus there is much more fat to be drawn upon, particularly as it is estimated that of the national income no less than about two billions of dollars was being saved.

Not only are the total resources bigger, but never was there so large an overhauling, reorganization and reorganization of British industry as during the depression. This makes for increased efficiency, insures a greater war potential, and means that in some respects England was much better prepared for war than when the pistol shot at Sarajevo set the world aflame. England is especially proud of the way its aircraft industry has expanded during the last twelve months. It is called by those in the confidence of the government "one of the most amazing industrial developments of modern times." In twelve months it expanded sevenfold. Eighteen months ago it was smaller than the American aircraft industry. Today it is probably four to six times as large.

Economy Well Organized

Finally, the British government is proud of the fact that the machinery for contracting civilian consumption and diverting all productive resources to the sole aim of war needs is already as well

Munising News

Santa Will Arrive In Munising Friday

Munising, Dec. 18—"Santa's on his way!" That's the latest word received from the North Pole and according to the present arrangements he'll be in Munising on Friday, December 22, to call on the children in the Munising schools. Santa's assistants, members of the Roderick Prato Post of the American Legion, held a get-together on Sunday evening and packed 1400 baskets for distribution to the children. The workers timed themselves and it took the 24 men only an hour and eight minutes to pack the Christmas goodies.

Santa is scheduled to put in his appearance at the Lincoln school at 1 p. m., on Friday afternoon, at the Washington school at 1:30 p. m., at Sacred Heart school at 2 o'clock, and at the Mather school at 2:30 p. m. The visits will possibly be a little behind schedule because of the many duties which Santa must officiate at and of the distance between the schools, since he is traveling by car this year, and doesn't have Donner and Blitzen and his reindeer team along.

City Of Munising To Give Employees Cash Yule Present

Munising, Dec. 18—City of Munising employees will get their annual Christmas present this year from the city in the form of a day's wages. The amount is to be given to the employees before December 25. The disbursement of the gift was authorized at the meeting of the city commission held in the city hall on Saturday.

TAX PAYMENTS ARE DOUBLED

First Week of December Payments Bring Nearly $20,000 Total

Better times financially were reflected in a report of the first week's tax payments at the city hall yesterday. The figures covered Monday through Saturday of last week and the total was $19,838.49, or nearly twice as much as for the period through December 16 last year.

Last year's payments on December 16 totalled $10,852.69, according to the city treasurer's office.

A total of $156,586.30 is scheduled for collection this year, providing payments are 100 per cent. Taxes were payable December 10 and will bear a penalty after January 10.

developed as it was only in the third year of the last war. Rationing of consumption, machinery for priorities, and control of equipment have all been organized and are functioning or ready to begin. That mistakes have been made and serious ones no one will deny. There is grave danger that in the effort to save a few dollars here and there serious damage will be done, notably in the interminable delays and losses to exporters and the failure to permit a substantial proportion of exports in payment of indispensable imports.

In short, British business is suffering severely because of over control. But there is no denying the fact that England has mobilized and is mobilizing its resources far more speedily than in 1914-15. Even so, the prevailing belief is that England will get into serious straits if the war should run well into a third year. As one high Treasury official said to me: "There are no limits to what you can spend on a war when airplanes cost ten and twenty times as much as they did in 1914 and the cost of everything else is up in proportion. But there are definite limits to the means of the British people and therefore to what may be extracted from them by taxation. We are told to take it out of the rich, but there are no longer such an awful lot of rich people in the United Kingdom."

The commission also voted to purchase a sedan delivery truck, for use by the city police department, from W. A. Tidd at a bid of $616. The Cox Chevrolet Sales submitted a bid of $650 and the Munising Nash Sales, a bid of $758 on a Plymouth truck.

The city sanctioned a tavern contract of license for Hobson Richards, subject to the approval of the Michigan liquor control commission.

The commissioners also agreed to the request of Walter Corey and Benjamin Hankin, representing the American Legion Christmas candy committee, that any amount up to $100 would be given by the city to make good the deficit which the committee might have in the fund used for the distribution of Christmas candy in the Munising schools.

Walters, on the charge of cutting and removing trees without the written consent of the property owner. Both were fined $25 and paid costs of $3.35. Thornton was brought into court Saturday and McAfee's case was heard this morning.
