ECONOMIC TASK FORCE HOLDS ORGANIZATIONAL MEETING

The big "guns" from state and federal bureaucracy were present on Tuesday when the organizational meeting for the Ontonagon County Governor's Task Force was held at the Community Building in Ontonagon.

Chairing the session was Bruce Lindstrom, U.P. representative for the Governor's Office, who introduced the various appointees of the Governor, including spokesmen for local government and the private sector, state and federal government as well as development and planning organizations in the Upper Peninsula region.

Lindstrom stated his instructions from Milliken were to continue a strong pursuit for assistance from the Small Business Administration for area businesses suffering from a two-year-old economic downturn and to speed the development of a special task force to search for alternate means of stimulating the afflicted economy of Ontonagon County. According to Lindstrom this would involve using all available state and federal assistance of a technical and hopefully financial nature. Toward these ends the group will work in the coming months, said Lindstrom.

Under particularly heavy attack for its past record of assistance to the area, was the Small Business Administration. Criticism came from local spokesmen, including Walt Wierzbicki, president of the county Economic Development Corporation, who charged the SBA with a responsibility to carry out the intent of Congress in its legislation authorizing SBA assistance to economically dislocated areas. Wierzbicki also reminded the group that the governor's intent in organizing the task force was to "get Ontonagon County back on its feet," when it appeared some of those present seemed to be leaning for a time toward a more regionalized planning approach. Another spokesman reiterated the sentiments of Wierzbicki. Ken Frankland, Governor's Legal Counsel, had some harsh words for the SBA's foot-dragging and for the obvious difficulties encountered by small, poorly-funded groups such as the county EDC to accomplish anything in the face of an unresponsive and contradictory bureaucracy. An example of the frustration experienced came with the late arrival of the U.S. Economic Development Administration' representative, Jack Arnold of Duluth. The study grant applied for by the county under Title IX of the EDA act is still languishing in the Chicago office of EDA and must yet make the journey through the Washington headquarters red tape before it is known whether approval or denial will be the result. County Controller James Hainault, who has been directly involved in the grant application, queried Arnold as to the reasons for the delay. Arnold's best response was that this is "bureaucracy." Neither could he offer a timetable for completion of the remaining "bureaucratic" red tape.

Among others making brief statements on behalf of their organizations and agencies were the following: Vi Brusso, Ontonagon County Equalization Director; Harold Amos, County Board; Toivo Kuivanen, County Planning Commission; Tom Condon, Ontonagon County Area Chamber of Commerce; Joe Cronan, President - Mineral River Merchants Association; Robert Mitchell and James Triembull, Farm Home Administration; Leo Lucchesi, Upper Great Lakes Regional Commission; William Lontz, Michigan Dept. of Management & Budget; Richard Dunnebacke, Operation Action U.P.; Richard Tieder, M.T.U.; Fran Cole, WUPPDR; Peter Walters, Michigan Dept. Commerce; and Bill Jeeves, SBA.

The appointment of an executive committee and co-chairmen plus a schedule for the next meeting of the Task Force will be announced in a later issue.

The bottom line for success of the group's stated goals lies in the amount of participation and hard work which can be generated from within the local community. No work - No pay - is still the rule, and despite all the free hot air, politicking and P.R. to be had from the "big guns" the job of reviving and stabilizing the economy of this county must and will be accomplished by those with everything at stake... its own citizens. The most encouraging words that could be heard -- "Let's Get To Work On It" -- will come from the people who call Ontonagon County home!

VILLA ST THOMAS PURCHASE BY FOREST SERVICE HELD UP

Marenisco - Spokesmen for the Lake Gogebic Improvement Association say the people spoke out loud and clear on June 5th in an advisory vote opposing the U.S. Forest Service proposal to place a Young Americans' Conservation Corps facility on Lake Gogebic at the Villa St. Thomas property.

The 193-70 vote also had a definite effect on USFS plans, according to Ottawa Supervisor Marvin Lauritsen in Ironwood. Lauritsen said the Forest Service has deferred exercising an option to acquire the property until public opinion has been sought out and viewpoints fully considered. "It has been my contention that strong local support is essential in pursuing this project, since it directly affects the livelihood of our local citizenry," he said. "I conclude that public support is inadequate to warrant moving ahead with the acquisition of this property. It will be my intent to finalize this tentative conclusion by July 10 and cease all further efforts in this regard."

Public opposition to the acquisition of the 143-acre parcel on the lake's east shore has been strong, especially in the Marenisco Township area, where the advisory vote was held on the 5th. According to acting president John Miller of the Improvement Association, the township board has also passed a unanimous resolution opposing this particular acquisition and all others which may be contemplated in the future by the federal government. This resolution was passed on Tuesday evening at a session of the township board.

Others taking a stand against the proposal have included the Bergland Chamber of Commerce, the Marenisco Chamber of Commerce, and the Ontonagon County Economic Development Corporation, which reversed its stand in April and came out in opposition to the acquisition of the Villa St. Thomas parcel for the YACC project, although the EDC did give its support to the project itself.

Lauritsen stated that the Forest Service had gone into the purchase negotiations on the property with the assumption that the intended use would be beneficial to the local economy. Lauritsen stated that the funds allocated for the project will now go to other national forests in other states where similar opportunities exist.

John Miller and his association co-members argue, however, that congressional funding would not guarantee a program lasting past 1980. The group feels that purchase of the land would remove it permanently from the area's tax base and view the program as an excuse for the land acquisition and little more.

Lauritsen encouraged "new publics" to make their viewpoints known on the issue before the 10th of July. "Those who would alter their previous position should also advise us accordingly," he said.

Dennis Erickson was re-elected to the Bergland Board of Education and Leslie Newhouse edged Richard Bailey for the second four-year term. Erickson tallied 159 votes; Newhouse 143 and Bailey 142.

THE CASE OF THE RUPTURING MONEY HOSE

On a day not too long ago mayors of the nation's largest cities had gathered in the White House in the nation's capitol to hear President Carter's long-awaited announcement of his New Plan to aid the cities. The mayors were excited. They had lobbied long and hard, and the $8.3 billion program was more than two-thirds of the amount they wanted. They were aware, of course, of the press agency contained in the figures. As politicians tried and true, they knew that probably only $2 billion was likely to happen, and this amount - divided among 300 cities - would have little real impact. But, it would provide project announcements of high political value. As a former mayor once said: "How people perceive things is sometimes more important than what the facts really are. Perception is very important!"

Away from Washington, one could almost feel the shrug of national indifference. Most people saw the new program as the Great Society, this time dressed with a wider tie and much wider lapels. Why pay attention? If it's a political event without national importance, why bother they seemed to be saying.

Well, why not think of that $2 billion as an 'add-on', as an expenditure that will increase inflation, raise false expectations, and fail in its objectives? Why not use the figure to put the whole federal spending process into perspective? This 'little $2 billion tidbit', for example, amounts to more than the 1977 profits of the entire aerospace industry! These companies all had a healthy profit in 1977 and reported a combined total of $1.2 billion.

Another way of gaining perspective might be to consider Mr. Carter's "tight, cautious budget" for 1979. In some respects it is "tight"....having the smallest percentage of increase in years. Yet the increase is still $40 billion!

This is an amount equal to the combined sales of the aluminum industry, the computer industry, the farm machinery and equipment industry, and the entire paint manufacturing industry!

At this point in the story of the "money hose" the plot should reasonably be expected to thicken. Just the opposite. For there are no villains in this story and no conspirators. The federal government got into this mess in incremental stages... and, no one really noticed. Not even federal officials. The money just happened to be there.

However, as an observer looking back, three milestones appear. The first was the invention of the withholding tax... Initially tried in this country in 1936 to collect Social Security taxes, the device proved successful and was applied to personal income taxes in 1942. Withholding at the source turned out to be a most effective way to tax the average man by taking his money away from him before he got it. Not surprisingly, he didn't even feel it. He viewed his "take-home pay" as the reality.

For the first time the central government in Washington could tax just about everybody, and do it cheaply and effectively with a minimum of protest from the citizenry.

And so was born the federal "money hose", sucking up immense quantities of money to finance World War II. When the war ended, nobody thought to turn the valve down. The money hose continued running wide open. Federal spending, which had been $9 billion before the war, climbed to $40 billion by 1947 and... like a bowl full of yeast dough in a warm oven... kept on rising!

The country's policy makers rode the tide of an economy that grew because of television, jet engines and the computer. By 1970 the money hose was picking up $194 billion a year. Succeeding Administrations were ingenious in spending the money. First...they rebuilt Europe with the Marshall Plan. When that job was completed they turned the money hose toward underdeveloped countries. When that effort appeared fruitless, the stream was pointed at the space program.

The second stage got its start in the mid 60's with the advent of the 'Great Society' programs. The money hose was aimed at Poverty, Health, Education, Planning and Welfare. Business was booming and these new costs were paid easily from the money hose. Deficits were generally less than $2 billion annually, except for Viet-Nam war expenditures.

These new programs were different, however. The federal government still collected the money, but now it was piped to state and local governments. In the Great Society programs these units of government had the responsibility for spending the money. To do so, they built planning staffs, welfare staffs, and increased their budgets for schools, hospitals and clinics.

State and local governments created a payroll structure which needed money forever into the future. These new employees had been born and reared in the entrepreneurial spirit of America and this meant that they knew how to find more and more customers for their government services.

Even though employment in these governments grew rapidly under the impetus of this multitude of new programs, a more important development was occurring in Washington. Associations of public officials began to grow in financial resources, power and influence. These organizations soon conceived more new programs and lobbied for increases in the old ones. Among the largest and most successful were the National League of Cities, the U.S. Conference of Mayors, the National Association of Counties, and the National Governor's Conference. Following closely were the International City Managers Association and the Council of State Governments.

The power of these organizations became phenomenal. They organized their members in disciplined ranks and sent them off to Washington to obtain more and more for state and local government. They usually lobbied to the theme of unemployment but they were not limited to that and also employed a variety of others. This was no group of amateurs writing to Congressmen, but rather seasoned public officials. When an important bill came up, the organizations sent their members "to town"... at public expense, and they called on "their" Congressmen!

They spoke the same language as their Congressman....they knew the pressure points for election and how to reach them. Most Congressmen, when considering a grant-in-aid issue, could expect a telephone call or a personal visit from several county supervisors, from mayors, from his state's legislators and from the governor. Top officials of federal agencies were quick to see the power, and soon found a way to form alliances with the "Associations." They accomplished this largely through government contracts with the Associations. The purpose of the contracts was usually to explain new programs to state and local officials, and show them how to make out the applications. Association managers count on government contracts to provide a substantial portion of their annual budgets.

No doubt about it, it was all good clean fun while it lasted. In fairness, we probably all had our hopes that these programs could and would succeed... but we know now that they have failed to live up to their promise and have grown instead into a monster... a monster that feeds on the lifeblood of this country with the aid of the money hose!

The money hose has now entered its third stage... let us call it the deficit stage. The huge new payrolls of state and local government are locked into place, and continue to rise. According to the respected Advisory Commission on Intergovernmental Relations, THE FEDERAL GOVERNMENT IS NOW FURNISHING FORTY-FIVE (45) PERCENT OF STATE AND LOCAL GOVERNMENT BUDGETS. This demand, coupled with extravagant new Social Security payouts now exceeds the capacity of the money hose. So our government has turned to deficit spending to supply the difference... it has become "a way of life!"

From 1971 through 1975 the deficit averaged $22 billion a year. From 1976 through the proposed 1979 budget, the average deficit is $61 billion. The third stage is not yet over. It may be the beginning of the terminal stage or it may not. Around the country there are signs of air escaping from the money hose. California's Proposition 13; like movements in Michigan, Ohio, Oregon, Pennsylvania, Idaho and a number of other states; formation of national citizen groups such as Citizen's Choice; smaller local but just as vociferous groups in communities all across the country are playing a beat of determination to put the money hose out of commission. The answer to the future of the money hose lies within each of us! We must listen to our conscience, consider this nation's past, and act with wisdom but without panic for its future.

The Ontonagon County R.E.A. Annual Meeting will be held this June 19 in Pelkie, Michigan. At the last R.E.A. Annual Meeting I pointed out errors in the annual report amounting to $8,977.00. The presence of these errors was later verified both by the local management of R.E.A. and Mr. Zoller, Northeast Area R.E.A. Director in Washington, D.C.

As of this date we and the Michigan Attorney General's office have been assured that a correction of the errors will be sent to R.E.A. members in the upcoming annual report. Admission of the financial errors then, is not to be made to the membership until more than a year after commission of the error.

Since it is my belief that to delay notification of an error of this magnitude (15% of the net profit for the year) is not good business practice, I suggest that the membership request that in case of a significant error R.E.A. management inform the membership through the appropriate media within sixty days of discovery of the error.

CARTER STILL ON FENCE OVER ELF, SAYS 'NOT SURE OF PEOPLE'S FEELINGS'

WASHINGTON - Presidential press secretary Jody Powell said this past week that the newest version of Project Seafarer has delayed President Carter's final decision on whether to build the submarine communications antenna.

Powell, speaking in Lansing on a campaign stop for Democratic Rep. M. Robert Carr, said that since the scaled down version of Seafarer included facilities in Wisconsin as well as Michigan, the wishes of Wisconsin residents must now be taken into account.

The Navy proposal, when it was called Project Seafarer, was to have been located entirely in Michigan's U.P. and would have featured a 4,000 square mile grid of underground cables. The current proposal, known as Project ELF (Extremely Low Frequency), calls for a smaller grid in the U.P. that would connect with an existing antenna at Clam Lake, Wisconsin.

Powell said that since Wisconsin again was a candidate site, the administration's current desire was to "let those people have a chance to take a look at it and have their say also."

He said Carter would stand by a campaign pledge not to build Seafarer in Michigan against the wishes of the people. He said, however, "he did not know whether Carter was satisfied that he knew what those wishes were."

The original plan for the project when it was known as Project Sanguine, called for construction of the full system in Wisconsin, but state opposition forced the Navy to look elsewhere!

FED HOME LOAN BANK TO ENCOURAGE LOW INCOME HOME LOANS IN OLD NEIGHBORHOODS

WASHINGTON - President Carter is setting up a $10 billion fund to encourage savings and loan associations to loan more money for housing in old neighborhoods. The money will permit repairs and construction of about 300,000 houses over the next five years it is estimated.

The money will not come from taxes, according to the president, but will be financed by securities sold by the Federal Home Loan Bank Board. This board is supported by fees paid by savings and loan institutions which are regulated by it. Carter said the loan fund is an important part of his urban program and will "institute the vitality of the deteriorating neighborhoods in our country."

Savings and loans which volunteer for the program must give the board a plan of action on how they will loan the money for declining neighborhoods. If the plan is approved, a savings and loan can then borrow from the fund at rates below what they would normally have to pay. The money then would be loaned to homebuyers in old neighborhoods at normal rates.

The board says it also wants to encourage loans for lower and moderate income people. Robert H. McKinney, chairman of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, says the "loan fund provides the carrot for urban lending while recent redlining regulations provide the "stick."

It is not clear why the homebuyer loans themselves would not qualify for the lower interest rates nor whether the separate statement relating to the board "also wanting to encourage loans for lower and moderate-income people" was an intimation that the bulk of available loans would go to some other income group.

CARTER PROPOSES TWENTY-SIX WATER PROJECTS

WASHINGTON - President Carter's recent announcement of the administration's approval of 26 new water projects was not particularly exciting for those who had the whole story. 20 of the "new" water projects already are in the House public works appropriations bill and the remaining six are very small in scale. The 26 proposals will cost an estimated $718 million. Earlier in his administration Carter had incurred the wrath of Congress and a number of states with his attempts to kill water projects.

Rep. Jake Garn, R-Utah, after hearing of the president's backing for the 26 projects, commented, "I hope he does not consider this announcement the maximum he will accept but rather the minimum on which to build."

Another western senator remarked that "He's coming in a little late."

Included in the projects approved or recommended by Carter are a number that do not fit the traditional work for a water project. One, known as the Big South Fork National River and Recreation Area, does not include dams, irrigation ditches or dredging. Instead Carter proposed spending $140 million to acquire land in Kentucky and Tennessee to preserve "as a natural free-flowing stream the Big South Fork of the Cumberland River, major portions of its Clear Fork and New River stems, and portions of their various tributaries."

The only construction will consist of "day-use facilities, historical sites, primitive campgrounds and access roads." Another is the $78 million Lower Snake River Fish & Wildlife Compensation Plan, which is included in the House bill, and sounds more like a conservation project. Most of that money will be spend to buy land along the river in Idaho, Oregon and Washington with construction limited to fish hatcheries and "subsequent development of these lands for wildlife."

The other five Carter projects not already included in the House appropriation bill would add a fifth hydroelectric unit at Hartwell Lake, Ga., $18.4 million; enlarge Metlakatla Harbor, Alaska, $6.9 million; build a seawall and levee to stop flooding at Point Place, Ohio, $6.3million; deepen the harbor at Two Harbors, Mn., $260,000; and expand the West Bench Irrigation District in Montana, $3.1 million.

BATF WITNESSES CREDIBILITY QUESTIONED

WASHINGTON - The credibility of the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms (BATF) was brought into question during a recent hearing on the agency's proposal for a national firearms registration program.

"In a virtually unprecedented action in an oversight hearing, the truthfulness of federal government witnesses...was challenged," according to Mary E. Marcotte, director of information for the National Rifle Association's Institute for Legislative Action. The government witnesses were BATF Director Rex Davis and Richard Davis, assistant secretary of the treasury.

"I'll say for the record that I don't believe these witnesses have been honest," Rep. John Ashbrook, R-Ohio, said. "I believe they have been evasive. I believe they have deceived this committee (the House Judiciary Committee's Subcommittee on Crime)."

During the hearing, Nel Knox, ILA executive director, testified on the proposed regulations and spelled out his organization's clear objections to the national firearms registration-by-regulation plan. He also testified on the wider issue of the history of what he called civil rights abuses by BATF and on "the highly questionable law enforcement practices of the agency." One cannot testify on these proposed regulations without bringing to light the past and present conduct of the agency which is proposing them," Knox said. "I am talking about police brutality--on an unprecedented national scale. I'm talking about blatantly unconstitutional practices which have been institutionalized by BATF."

He added: "BATF proposed to take for itself the authority to computerize information on firearms ownership and on lawful and already licensed firearms commerce. It must not be trusted with any further power or growth. In fact, this agency should not even be entrusted with powers which Congress already has bestowed."

SUPREME COURT HALTS OSHA INSPECTION PRACTICES

WASHINGTON - Everybody's favorite - the Occupational Safety and Health Administration - has received a slap on the hard hat from the Supreme Court. The high court recently ruled that the federal government may not make unannounced inspections of the nation's workplaces. It struck down as being unconstitutional a portion of the Occupational Safety and Health Act that, up till now, has allowed Labor Department inspectors to carry out spot checks of factories and business places since 1971.

The court ruling stated that the Constitution's protection against unreasonable searches applies to commercial premises as well as homes.

In 1976 a federal court in Idaho had ruled that government inspectors must first prove to a judge or magistrate that they have "probable cause" to believe safety hazards exist at a workplace.

The latest ruling effectively guts the Labor Department's strategy of keeping private employers alert to safety needs by holding over them the possibility of a surprise visit.

The U.S. Chamber of Commerce praised the decision, saying "The business community and the 75 million people earning paychecks in the private sector should be delighted with this blow for freedom."

Government attorneys were reportedly less thrilled with the decision.

U.S.-CANADIAN FISHING DISPUTE MAY SLOW TOURIST ACTIVITY

CLEVELAND - A breakdown in negotiations between Canada and the United States was apparently responsible for a recent announcement by the Canadians that Americans will be banned from using Canadian fishing waters of the Great Lakes.

Washington retaliated by closing its waters to Canadian fishermen. The boundary has been a source of confusion for all since limits took effect last year, placed by the U.S. because of charges that foreign vessels were overfishing off the U.S. coast. A conference was held to try to establish a 200-mile treaty for all nations but it failed. Since that time a number of foreign ships have been seized by the U.S. Coast Guard. Other nations have been making like seizures off of their coast.

The temporary treaty which has been in effect left much to be desired...especially where to draw the boundary, particularly along the rich northern third of Georges Bank off Nova Scotia and Maine. The Canadian officials say they grew impatient with the uncertainties of the treaty, thus the recent closure action for the Great Lakes waters. Canada did clarify its position, saying that licensed sport fishermen from the United States could continue using Canadian waters. The United States, however, did not reciprocate...its ban applies to sport fishermen, except for Canadians fishing from vessels registered in the United States. The U.S. Coast Guard is warning all U.S. fishermen to stay out of Canadian waters and let it be known that any Canadian boats found fishing in U.S. waters of the Great Lakes could be subject to seizure.

Owners of resorts and related businesses on the Michigan side of Lake Superior are predicting the ban could have dire results for the area's tourist industry.

PROPOSITION 13 A WARNING TO CONGRESS-& STATE GOVERNMENT

WASHINGTON - California's overwhelming support of a tax-limitation proposal has waved the red flag at Congress in the midst of its efforts to reach agreement on a final budget.

Promises of tax cuts varying in their numbers of billions of dollars and their ways and means of accomplishment have been sent out of Congress and the Administration for weeks. With the Congress pressing for an October adjournment so members can go back home to campaign for re-election, and with other still-unsettled issues awaiting action... the question of whether any tax cut bill has a chance of passing this year is now being raised.

The chairman of the House Ways & Means Committee, Al Ullman, stated in a recent interview that there is as yet no meeting of minds on the committee regarding various tax cut proposals.

President Carter has agreed to scale his tax cut proposal down to around $20 billion from the $25 billion originally requested. But committee members are still apparently divided over a number of proposals and some of the members don't favor any tax cuts this year, preferring to continue reductions enacted last year. These are due to expire on Dec. 31 if the Congress does not reapprove them. If the Congress does nothing, it will not only mean no tax cut for 1979 but taxes will actually rise by about $9 billion. Some committee members are still favoring a roll-back of at least part of the increase in Social Security payroll taxes scheduled to take effect next year.

A veteran budget planner was quoted as saying that this year's budget may be the tightest ever seen. The administration is expected to announce next month that federal government is underspending its 1978 budget by $2 billion to $3 billion. This would reduce the overall shortfall in government spending to near $20 billion. The Administration and Congress are agreed that reducing the deficit is essential in the face of the rising inflation rate, if only for psychological reasons. The economic experts are beginning to worry that a new recession may be inevitable if inflation isn't brought under control. The criticism has come from widespread quarters that the huge federal budget deficits have contributed in major part to the worsening inflation.

ANDERSON HAS BWCA BILL IN HIS COURT

WASHINGTON - Minnesota Sen. Wendell Anderson is now in the driver's seat position for reshaping the controversial Boundary Waters Canoe Area bill, which last week won overwhelming House approval. The House voted 324 to 29 for the bill which included a tough set of restrictions on motorboats, a key issue for both sides in the dispute.

Anderson is thought to favor the plan of Rep. James Oberstar, whose district includes the Boundary Waters Wilderness area.

In 1964 the area of approximately 1,000 lakes and one million acres was included in the federal wilderness system. At that time use of motorboats was allowed on 124 lakes. As the new bill came to the floor, it would have restricted motorboats to 12 lakes and devoted the remainder of the area to canoe use. Oberstar argued that the motorboats are the backbone of local recreation as well as local business. His proposal was to keep 92 lakes open for motorboating.

At that point, Minnesota Reps. Bruce Vento and Donald Fraser, representing the environmentalist lobbyists interests, proposed keeping 14 of the most popular lakes open. Some of these, however, would be closed to powerboats in July and August. They billed their plan one of balance between "national environmental and local business interests." When put to a vote the Vento-Fraser plan won. All of the state's GOP delegation had sided with Oberstar.

Anderson is a member of the Senate Energy and Natural Resources Committee, which will draft the legislation that will go to the floor. He can hope to persuade his fellow committee members to accept an approach matching Oberstar's or he may resort to delaying devices on the Senate floor itself.

The legislation which passed in the House will ban logging and mining allowed under the earlier BWCA bill. Local interests had not argued these provisions but had fought for no increase in the size of the BWCA, motor use as originally promised in the first BWCA bill or at least not the drastic reduction they were left with. Snowmobile use was also contested. Oberstar would have allowed snowmobile use on 92 lakes but the Vento-Fraser measure restricts use to just two corridors at the edge of the area. Another section of the bill would require the federal government to purchase local homes and business properties at 1977 fair market prices, which was considered by present property owners as grossly inequitable if not unconstitutional.

The national battle over BWCA is a landmark case history of federal legislators susceptibility to the highly-organized and well-funded environmental coalition to the ultimate squeezing out of individual rights and stated wishes and concerns... even when those wishes and concerns are expressing the will of the majority of the taxpaying residents of an area. The rhetoric of "common good" and the blinding bannerhead of "environmentalist" have succeeded in fooling "almost all of the people almost all of the time." In BWCA country, there are many who weren't fooled this time around. Promises and compromise, and, in many cases, truth are qualities which were demanded of the Boundary Waters residents... but not reciprocated by the "common good" confiscators. The BWCA case history should be required reading for all residents of an area under consideration for Wilderness designation. True, there are two sides to every story; but there is one side to the BWCA story that is not at all pretty... and this time it is the side of government!

SEEK RE-ELECTION

IRONWOOD - Joseph S. Mack is seeking re-election as state senator from the 38th District. An 18-year veteran of the Michigan Legislature, Mack has decided to seek reelection as senator "rather than accept the many pledges of support to seek the congressional seat being vacated by Congressman Ruppe."

"Major legislation affecting the growth and development of timber, mining, agriculture and industry stems basically from state, rather than federal legislation. It would be a grave injustice to our people who have given me their unqualified support for 18 years to leave now and seek another office," said Mack.

"The down-state pressures to enact state control over private property under the guise of so-called land use bills, or confiscation of swamp lands under the title of wetlands preservation will hurt the U.P.," the senator declared.

"These two bills alone would effectively restrict present paper mill and lumbering operations, future expansion of both the forest product and mining industries and any other industrial development which is now being planned for the U.P.," he continued.

"I am confident when I think about the future of the U.P., but I feel that strong voice, backed with years of seniority, is needed in Lansing to assure continued economic development," concluded Mack.

HELLMAN'S OPTIONAL BREAKFAST
BILL RUNNING INTO HEAVY GOING

LANSING - A bill sponsored by Rep. Russell Hellman to make adoption of school breakfasts a local option got rough handling by the United Auto Workers lobbyists who promoted the mandatory breakfast legislation which is slated to take effect this October, with the "free lunch" portion and the phasing in of free breakfasts by October of the following year.

The Hellman bill sought to dilute this law by making it a local option whether or not to provide the breakfasts. School administrators and school boards, particularly from the U.P. and the northern portion of the Lower Peninsula, had opposed the UAW-sponsored law for various reasons, including added transportation problems for large districts, additional financial reporting aspects, and requirement for additional staff to supervise eating rooms. The state allocated $8 million to reimburse districts for actual costs of free and reduced-price meals, plus a portion of their expense in buying new kitchen equipment. However, to date school districts have submitted claims of more than $13 million for estimated costs for the program, and the Department of Education will now have to make decisions on how much to give particular districts.

The UAW brought its weight down on the House Education Committee in a telegram sent recently in which the union declared it would brook no compromise on the issues: Breakfasts must be provided poor children.

While some educators complain that the union has no business getting involved in an education issue, UAW lobbyist Frank D. Garrison stated that it had always been involved in social issues. "We have a long-standing tradition that we have to not only protect members and their families at their work places but also in their other pursuits."

Donald Elliott, the deputy executive director and lobbyist for the Michigan Association of School Administrators, stated his group's views as follows: "We're not anti-children. We certainly are pro-children and want to help any hungry youngsters. But we feel that to mandate it isn't the best way." Even some districts which already have both lunch and breakfast programs agree that the mandatory approach is not good.

The House committee studying Hellman's "option" legislation didn't kill the revisions it proposed; but it did the next best thing by referring the bill to a special subcommittee. The effect will be to put it out of sight... but not out of mind, as school administrators will try again to change the current mandatory portion of the law before the breakfast provision takes effect next fall.

A counterpart on the national level is seen in the branchchild of Sen. Robert Morgan, D-NC, who is proposing something called a Universal Free School Lunch Program. The program now in operation costs taxpayers $2.2 billion a year and provides that free lunches are given the poorest students in our public schools, reduced-price lunches are available to less-poor students, and slightly-reduced lunches are served to the rest. The figures for 1977 show that nationwide students paid about $1.3 billion for their lunches, which went to their respective school boards. The program is a bureaucratic nightmare for administrators and all concerned, but Morgan proposes we take it one step further and legislate a free school lunch program for the entire country.

He blithely says that his idea would "not cost much more than what is being spent now," and concedes that "some increase" in cost may result from higher participation in the program. The current participation is about 62 percent of the total schoolchildren eligible.

When questioned further as to particulars such as actual increase in cost, how local school boards would make up the loss of federal subsidies, etc... Morgan was distressingly vague. His vague replies, however, were better than his specific. For example, when asked about making up the loss of federal subsidies, he pointed out that his bill (S2991) says that any such losses will merely be reimbursed by the secretary of agriculture, who at last check was receiving his funding from your tax dollars and mins.

If Senator Morgan dreams at night, one wonders if he has visions of hordes of Americans leaving their jobs at quitting time each night to troop to the free federal soup kitchens, where "supper" will be provided for all... at no charge to anyone! Utopia, here we come. Uncle Sam's gonna do it all!

GOVERNOR SIGNS INSURANCE MORATORIUM - AUTO & HOMEOWNER POLICIES

LANSING - For the coming six-month period insurance companies in Michigan will not be able to cancel or modify homeowner's or auto owner's insurance policy except in extreme circumstances... unless, that is, they beat the deadline last Tuesday and sent you a letter postmarked before that date.

A moratorium on the cancellations was signed into law on June 6 by Gov. Milliken in an effort to give lawmakers the time needed to work out the kinks in a massive bill aimed at eliminating insurance discrimination.

The bill now being considered will attempt to outlaw the practice of redlining, the denial of insurance based on where a person lives.

The moratorium imposes a six-month stay on cancellations, alterations or non-renewals of homeowner and automobile insurance policies unless: the policy holder does not pay his insurance bill; the policy holder is guilty of fraud or other forms of misrepresentation; the insurance company goes bankrupt; or, a major physical change occurs in the insured house or car which could alter the policy.

A policy holder must also agree to provide the firm with claims information or other necessary data. Companies may also cancel auto policies if the insured has been convicted of drunk driving, accumulated six or more driving points during a 12-month period, or has had one or more accidents which were the insured driver's fault.

Sponsor of the measure, Rep. Michael Benane, D-Detroit, said, "These bills are only short-term protection against insurance redlining practices. The long-term answer is adoption of the comprehensive insurance redlining bill."

WETLAND SALES BEING BLOCKED ON LOCAL LEVEL

LANSING - WETLAND SALES are being blocked on the local level and the federal and state programs for acquiring such lands are hitting up against opposition. While the push to preserve wetlands was justified in many cases, the movement had become unrealistic in numerous others. Any type of development, or sometimes no development at all, had triggered a reaction by some environmental groups to either prohibit the development with court action or force sale of private property by its owner.

Now the other side of the coin has turned up and, in Minnesota, one farmer who wanted to sell his property to the state DNR for wildlife use was blocked by county officials, who resented both the conversion of a farm to other purposes and the loss of a tax base. County boards can take such intervention measures only when a sale involves a public unit, such as the state DNR or federal agencies. Sales between private parties are beyond their jurisdiction.

In the state House of Representatives, a newly revised Wetlands Protection Bill continues to be the point of considerable discussion among members. Substitute H-6 for House Bill 4329, which was offered as a replacement for a previous version of the wetlands bill on the House floor, is still in limbo and under threat of referral of the entire issue to the House Committee on Conservation, Environment and Recreation. Sponsor Thomas Anderson has stated that the new version was only offered to put the state in compliance with federal requirements for wetlands protection under the revised Section 404 of the Federal Clean Water Act and subsequent guidelines issued by the E.P.A. Anderson insists that the new bill "does not represent a sly effort to gain adoption of a stronger wetlands protection measure." Some House members however are opposing the bill on those grounds and insist it be sent back to the committee for a thorough study.

GOVERNOR REQUESTS ANOTHER $400 THOUSAND FOR KINCHELOE

LANSING - Gov. William Milliken is requesting an additional $400,000 in state money for use in adapting the former Kincheloe Air Force Base near Sault Ste. Marie into private development. A new state prison opened at the site on January 16.

In fiscal 1978 the state appropriated $100 thousand to be used in the base transition. The governor said that the additional $400,000 will be used for a new sewage lagoon, fire protection and the repair of heating and water supply systems. The appropriations request would be inserted into a general supplemental appropriations bill which is now awaiting House action.

The state has announced that it intends to maintain public utilities at the former base until private businesses and industry assume responsibility.

STATE BEATS FED TO WIRE WITH ENERGY BILL

LANSING - The state of Michigan last week beat the federal government to the finish line and enacted a new law which authorizes utility companies to implement home energy conservation programs. The new measure, signed into law by the governor, gives power companies authority to provide low-interest loans to homeowners to help them weatherize their homes. The unpalatable aspect of the legislation, from a customer's point of view, is that then the utilities can pass along the cost of such programs to all their customers in the form of rate hikes.

The bill whistled through the Legislature when it appeared that Congress might enact an energy law which would ban such weatherization programs in which utilities' would spread cost of such loans to customers' bills.

The federal law will probably allow exemptions for any state which already has such a law in effect when Congress acts, which explains the rush in Lansing to pass the measure.

Gov. Milliken said, "This new conservation program can help assure Michigan's energy future by stretching our gas supplies and postponing the day when alternative energy sources must be used." Lawmakers, however, were not unanimously agreed with that opinion. A voting record on the measure was not available, but...irregardless of who or how many lawmakers argued its merits...it is now on the books as law!

LOBBYING BILL STILL GOING 'ROUND 'N 'ROUND

LANSING - The much-amended lobbying bill before the state Senate, if approved, would allow Michigan's political candidates far less money from organized labor and other lobbying groups. More important than the amounts involved, however, is the fact that public officials would face an outright ban on soliciting campaign donations from lobbyists, now a common practice.

Nearly a dozen amendments to the original bill have now been studied by the Senate, including a provision for disclosure of how lobbyists spend their money. Reporting on "wining and dining" expenditures were also tightened.

The effect in a campaign year could be dra-

tic. The influence of such strong lobbyists as the United Auto Workers, AFL-CIO, Michigan Education Association and other labor groups which historically have bankrolled certain candidates would be sharply curtailed and controlled.

The limitation on contributions from lobbyists brought loud outcries from numerous Democrats who depend on union help in getting elected. The measure would also apply to business groups, who traditionally support Republicans, but in a lesser fashion because of their organizational structures. Current law allows political committees to donate up to $4,500 to a state Senate candidate, $2,500 to a House candidate and $17,000 to a statewide candidate such as governor or attorney general. However, the UAW and others actually donate much more simply by setting up numerous political committees in various areas of the state.

The amendment being considered would treat all such related committees as a single unit for donation limit purposes, if they all belonged to the same organization or lobbying group. The amendment received plenty of support. One proponent stated, "Lobbyists don't buy votes by buying coffee and meals, they buy votes by buying candidates with campaign contributions." The state senator most outspoken against a legislation to regulate lobbyists says the chairman of the Michigan Democratic Party, Morely Winograd, and the United Auto Workers, is using lies and deception to gain passage of the bill. Basil Brown, chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee, suggested the Democratic Party, the UAW and other supporters of the bill are using the issue to attack its opponents in the election and called for removal of Winograd as state party chairman. Basil Brown, chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee, was accused by Winograd of attempting to gut the lobbyist control bill.

The Senate concentrated on the redrafting of the bill and backers say it is in good shape. The amendments have been adopted in informal vote and could still be reconsidered before full Senate vote. The measure still faces action in the House.

10 PERCENT OF NORTHERN L. P. DEER STARVED LAST WINTER

LANSING - One out of every ten deer in northern Lower Michigan died last winter of starvation and other causes, say DNR biologists, the worst figures ever recorded in the state. The DNR want to trim the herd to prevent even worse wintertime losses. Of the 53,400 deer in Lower Michigan which perished in the deep snow and cold of last winter, 26,300 died of starvation, according to a DNR spokesman.

Joseph Vogt, northern habitat manager for the DNR's wildlife division, said that part of the reason for the size of the die-off was the number of deer to start. Vogt said that the northern Lower Peninsula was the only part of the state checked because it was believed the only place where deer losses were thought to be heavy. Many of the animals which survived the winter are still in poor condition and this is expected to result in a very low number of fawns this season, further reducing the size of the deer population.

The Natural Resources Commission is expected to set deer quotas for 1978 at its July meeting, and the die-off of last winter will be one of the things considered.

Last week the Commission met to draw up regulations for the 1978 firearms deer hunting season. Two days of public hearings had been held prior to the meeting to take testimony regarding 'special permits' for property owners to hunt deer on their own property. Numerous property damage reports had resulted from last winter's starving herd invading farmers' fields, etc.

The Commission ruled in favor of the special permits. Those who obtain landowners' permits will be exempt from the open drawing to determine who gets the limited number of deer hunting licenses available. Anyone submitting an application for the regular drawing will be declared ineligible for the special permit.

ONTONAGON COUNTY BOARD DEFERS TO COURT ON CHILD SUPPORT ISSUE

ONTONAGON - The Ontonagon County Board of Commissioners decided at last week's meeting to ask for a recommendation by Circuit Court Judge Munro on what action to take regarding a portion of the cooperative reimbursement program which provides 75 percent reimbursement for the handling of non-support cases by the Social Services Department. The issue had come up at a previous meeting of the board, resulting in Richard Powell of the Social Services Department attending last Tuesday's session to provide an explanation of the system.

Powell told the board that the program had nothing to do with Social Security taxes but is covered under Title 4 of the Social Security program. He said that in Michigan prosecutors and friends of the court have always been obligated to render assistance when requested in non-ADC child support cases. Powell said the federal government has passed legislation that would reimburse counties 75 percent for such assistance. He offered the opinion that since Michigan had been giving such assistance all along, such a reimbursement would now be "a gift....now you get paid for doing what you always did before." Powell was not able to cite specific figures as to how much this reimbursement would be and he then denied allegations made at an earlier meeting that the listing of non-ADC cases would constitute an invasion of privacy. He traced the positive impact of the overall cooperative reimbursement program, in which counties are rewarded financially by forcing divorced fathers of public assistance families to pay child support. Powell said that because of this program the ADC caseload in the state had decreased last year. In Ontonagon County child support payments rose by 50 percent in the same time period.

Before concluding Powell also reviewed some of the proposed new programs in this field.

The commissioners agreed to ask the Circuit Court for its recommendation on whether or not to accept the 75 percent payment offered for carrying non-public support families on its rolls.

Two members of the County Supervisors Association, Leslie Curtis and Toivo Kuivanen, thanked the board for the assurance it had given that no new millage would be levied for the construction of the new county courthouse. They asked, however, if such assurance would bind another board elected at a future date. The Commissioners were agreed that they could not envision any such move by a future board. Attorney Roy Gotham assured the supervisors that the Building Authority has no authority to levy taxes. A member of the Authority stated that it was committed to a ceiling price of $1 million for the courthouse project.

Supervisor Kuivanen made a request for an ambulance for the Bergland area which was tabled by the board so that they could obtain use figures on the backup ambulance in Ontonagon as well as the number of calls for service in Bergland.

The board changed the date for the July 4 meeting to the following evening, July 5. An executive session was held with the sheriff, deputy Terry Dove and union representative Bob Raffaelli. In other action the board passed a resolution of commendation of Owen Gusler, U.S. Forest Service ranger stationed in Ontonagon, who was recently notified of transfer. The board agreed to a letter of intent to commit $11,000 to the Commission on Aging for 1979. A salary raise was approved for Bea Ross, deputy register of deeds and deputy clerk; a request by a group of county employees to make Monday, July 3 a holiday was denied; and a request by the county Planning Commission that one of its members be suggested to the governor to serve on the newly-formed Task Force for the county was approved. The board will contact the governor with the request and ask that Toivo Kuivanen, the chairman of the Planning Commission, be invited to represent that group.

ROBERT KENNEDY - IN RETROSPECT

"Every generation has its central concern, whether to end war, erase racial injustice, or improve the condition of the working man. Today's young people appear to have chosen for their concern the dignity of the individual human being. They demand a limitation upon excessive power. They demand a political system that preserves the sense of community among men. They demand a government that speaks directly and honestly to its citizens. We can win their commitment only by demonstrating that these goals are possible through personal effort. The possibilities are too great, the stakes too high, to bequeath to the coming generation only the prophetic lament of Tennyson: 'Ah, what shall I be at fifty, Should nature keep me alive, if I find the world so bitter, When I am but twenty-five?'"

VANDETTE FILES FOR RUPPE SEAT

HOUGHTON - Republican Edmund Vandette, President of the State Board of Education and an announced candidate for the 11th Congressional District seat, filed petitions last week with the Secretary of State's election division.

Vandette, former campaign chairman for Congressman Philip E. Ruppe, is a native of the Upper Peninsula and a professor at Michigan Technological University at Houghton.

Earlier last month Stephen H. Fletcher of Alpena, a candidate for the same seat, withdrew from the race and gave his support to Vandette. Fletcher informed his supporters, "Since my withdrawal, I've given considerable thought as to which of the remaining candidates can best fill the seat being vacated by Phil Ruppe. Over the past few years I have been one of Bob Davis' constituents, and I have known both Jack Payant and Ed Vandette from working with them at many Republican conventions and during my tenure as 11th District Chairman. I feel that I have come to know all of these candidates well.

"I have concluded that Ed Vandette stands out as the person most suited to take Phil Ruppe's place as our Congressman. I have found Ed to be a man of the highest moral and intellectual honesty and a man of great integrity. I believe that he can serve us not only honestly but capably in our Congress. Therefore, I am offering my wholehearted support,

TED ALBERT - VIEWS ON INFLATION

IRONWOOD - Ted Albert, a Democratic candidate for the 11th Congressional District, stated his opinions in a recent news release regarding the issue of inflation....of such great national concern at this time.

Albert said, "Many casual theories have been offered to explain inflation. Many segments of our society have been offered up as scapegoats for public condemnation. They include merchants, speculators, big business, aliens, labor unions, consumer greed.

"Price is the amount of money paid for a specific amount of a specific product. The more money bidding against the goods, the higher the price and vice versa. Prices are determined by supply and demand. If a good crop of corn is poured on the market, the price of corn will drop. Likewise, if the crop is poor and the supply drops, the price will rise on the market. If inflation is to be caused by the "supply" side, there would have to be a steady and persistent fall in the production of the economy. We know, however, that the supply of goods and services goes up, year after year, and decade after decade.

"The cause of inflation, then, must be from the "demand" side. Consumers have more and more money, year after year, to spend on goods and services, thereby bidding prices up and up. It is a fact that long term inflations are accompanied by long term increases in the supply of money. The culprit then is the money supply. Where does it come from, and who controls it? Money is almost always a precious metal such as gold. The supply of money is whatever gold has been dug out of the ground, and the currency unit is some unit of weight of gold. In the 19th century, "the dol-both financial and moral, to Ed Vandette in his candidacy. I am also putting the organization we have developed in Alpena behind his candidacy."

WATANEN ENTERS CONGRESSIONAL RACE

Marquette - The only Upper Peninsula Democrat currently holding a statewide office has announced his candidacy for the 11th District Congressional seat. John Watanen, a member of the State Board of Education, made the recent announcement, citing a recent poll that he said favors him over anyone in the race to win.

He referred to an Alpha Agency poll of precinct delegates, Demo. Party county officers and members of the district's State Central Committee. He said the poll gives him a two-to-one edge over his nearest competitor.

In outlining the issues, Watanen said he sees unemployment and inflation as the two major problems facing the people of the district.

"The working men and women of the 11th Congressional District must receive the benefits of legislation which will enable them to do more than merely catch up with the loss of buying power of their wages and salaries," he said.

Retired citizens were cited by Watanen as especially hard-hit by inflation. Other issues high on his priority list are government intrusion into the lives of its citizens, the Navy's Project ELF and the district's "need to have a responsive representative in Washington."

"I am confident I can do a superior job in Washington representing the views and interests of the people I hope to serve," Watanen said.

lar" was roughly equivalent to one-twentieth of an ounce of gold. Gold is a costly, rare and durable metal so that the annual production of gold is a small fraction of its accumulated stock in the economy. The production of goods and services increases faster than new gold is mined, so that the trend of unhampered capitalism is a gently falling price level.

"Then, if all of this is true, why do we have the persistent tendency of inflation? The answer is that government persists in tinkering with the supply of money - having seized the absolute control over the supply of money. Governments are now able to increase the supply of money at will, now that "dollars" are no longer pieces of gold metal but are pieces of paper issued by the central government which must be legal tender for all debts. They print as much money as they want - as much as they can get away with. The government does today what is essentially "legalized counterfeiting" through the banking system, by printing new bank deposits through its absolute control of the national banks. It does so by lowering reserve requirements, and largely by the Federal Reserve purchasing of assets. Every time the federal government buys $1 billion dollars of assets (government bonds) it rapidly generates a $6 billion increase in checking deposit money, and still more in savings deposits. By inflating the money supply, the government accelerates the inflation menace," he concluded.

Albert stated he would have additional remarks regarding "removing the government from the marketplace" in a future article.

MARVIN MARKS IS ALIVE & RUNNING

IRONWOOD - Marvin Marks, Ironwood, says that despite news reports and articles to the contrary he's still in the race for State Representative for the Western Upper Peninsula's 110th District Seat. Commenting on the mixup over his candidacy, Marks said, "Rusty Hellman wishes I were not in the race, the rich and powerful supporters of Rep. Hellman wish I were not in the race, but the working taxpaying man and woman is glad to see me in the race because they want a change!"

Last week the Secretary of State had released an unofficial list of candidates for state offices on which Marks' name had been excluded. However, Marks had filed his petition papers and other necessary documents by mail. These had arrived on time before the deadline for filing, June 6th. Marks' name will appear on the ballot, both in August and November, since Marks faces no opposition in the Republican primary.

Marks said in response to the false alarm, "Nope, I'm not out of the race; in fact, we're ready to campaign and ready to win!"

MS BUBOLZ REPLIES TO PRESS CRITICISMS

ONTONAGON - A Michigan State University professor who authored a report on three communities in Ontonagon County has stated she was "very upset to see the negative impression given by the headlines" in a recent news story quoting her study.

Margaret J. Bubolz, professor of family and child sciences sent a letter to the Ontonagon County Tourist Association in which she stated that much of what was in the news story of her study were the comments of the reporter and were not made by her in the study report.

Dr. Bubolz said that the news stories, in "interpreting and reporting the study gave impressions which were the opposite of what was intended." The professor said the purpose of the study was to gain more understanding of family and community life of long-time residents of rural areas and of the values they hold which are important to their quality of life. She said the villages studied were Ewen, Mass City and Greenland and the information about services and facilities was only of those communities and of the the Ontonagon or White Pine areas. Tourist Association spokesmen said the newspaper article referred to by Ms Bubolz, in quoting the study let the reader believe the information concerned the entire county as regards medical care and shopping facilities.

Professor Bubolz, who said she has lived in the U.P. and has Finnish roots, found that "the people whom we interviewed were very satisfied with their communities, liked living in them and were pleased with their quality of life." She said the things people in Ewen, Mass City and Greenland considered most important were family time, work, health, financial security, religion, independence and achievement.

"I share many of your feelings about your area and believe as you do that it is one of the most beautiful parts of our country, and that this natural beauty must be preserved, she concluded.
