One of the most important railroads of the country in respect to the territory it serves (the Southern Pacific) has not on its route a coalfield from New Orleans to San Francisco and has had to import its coal from Alabama, New Mexico and Colorado. Oil in great abundance has been used recently as a fuel by all the railroads running through Texas, and on some southwestern divisions of the trunk lines of that section it is being used almost exclusively for passenger locomotives.

Originally American railroads used wood only as fuel. At present coal, soft or anthracite, is most generally used, the average train requiring about two tons of anthracite for each 100 miles run and about a ton and a half of soft coal for the same run. Soft coal, more available for the railroads of the west and south, costs about 50 per cent per ton less than anthracite, but oil as a fuel has been found to be very much cheaper than either and as it comes into more general use is superseding coal as coal superseded wood.

The chief peculiarity in the new engines is that the driving power is applied to the rear driving wheel by a direct rod, thence by a parallel rod to the front driver. This arrangement does away with the angular thrust, with its lost power, between crosshead and crank pin, that the direct application of the driving power to the front driving wheel gives.

Electric headlights are to be attached to every locomotive of the Chicago and Alton road. The work of equipping the engines of the company has been commenced at the shops in Bloomington, Ill., and will be kept up until every one is supplied. A year ago, according to the Chicago Inter Ocean, the company placed an experimental order of twelve of these lights for the fast passenger engines, and the service has been so satisfactory that it has been decided to outfit every engine owned by the company. An order has been placed for 110 sets with a Chicago concern, and others will be ordered later. The passenger and fast freight engines will be equipped first and later the heavy freighters. When all are Small or large jobs of Stone supplied, the Alton will enjoy the distinction of being the only road that can boast of such an acquirement. How to Catch the Polar Bear. I listened attentively the other night to a gentleman who gave me a great deal of valuable information concerning these interesting regions. He knew I was a tenderfoot and a newspaper reporter and felt at liberty, therefore, to talk freely, so I got a lot of yarns about polar bears and walruses and other creatures, large and small, which are not related in natural histories. I believe it was one of the advisers of "Alice In Wonderland" who suggested that the best way to catch a rabbit is to get behind a stump and make a noise like a carrot, and I learned with The new locomotives 1986 and 1987 great satisfaction that the easiest way of the West Jersey and Seashore rail- to catch a polar bear is to hide behind road are the largest passenger engines an iceberg and make a noise like the in the world, says the Philadelphia aurora borealis. From such beginnings the advertising practice has come. Thousands of dollars are now spent not only in advertising itself, but in devising clever catch words, ingenious phrases and illustrations which will stick in the memory of the reader as well as new general methods.-Youth's Companion.

ELECTRIC PRINTING.

Greene Process.

An account of the interesting process of electrolytic printing devised by Mr. Friese-Greene was given in a lecture by R. C. Darling to the Royal Artillery institution last year and is published in the proceedings of that society. The object of the inventor is the supersession of printing ink, with its accompresses and type can be used as herethe latter is connected to the negative paper used is impregnated with suitable chemicals, while the pressure rollers are connected to the positive line. by a sharp impression of the type ap-

The amount of chemicals needed to give a good impression is small. Thus in one experiment with a silver nitrate paper the current used was measured, with a man, a cousin, he thinks, of the and on deducting therefrom the two mentioned, who also lived in the amount of silver liberated it appears Rocky mountains at one time. He had that an eight page newspaper could be printed with the liberation of 0.134 grain of silver. Of course silver niof buffalo a day-buffaloes were plenty trate, though convenient for experimental work, is unsuitable for practical use, since a paper impregnated with this salt turns black on exposure to light. The chemicals originally suggested for use in the industrial development of this scheme were a mixture of manganese sulphate and nitrate of soda, both of which are very cheap. This yielded an impression of a very dark brown, which tends to become blacker with age. Other salts have, however, been discovered which give perfectly black prints, the impression, it is stated, being sharper than can be obtained with ink. The rate of production is very great, the experiment going to show that some 36,000 impressions per hour are quite feasible, and it is possible to print on both sides of the paper, which is of course essential if the process is to compete with the older methods. By suitably selecting the impregnating salts prints can be obtained in a great variety of color. It has further been suggested that the method might be applicable to the typewriter, the inking ribbon being done away with and the prepared paper used in conjunction with metallic type connected to the negative main of an electric lighting

A "Sand Bow."

The unusual optical phenomenon of a rainbow produced by the sun shining not on raindrops, but on particles of sand suspended in the air by wind, was witnessed over a part of the Great Salt lake recently by Professor James E. Talmage of the University of Utah. The colors were very brilliant, and there was a secondary bow visible. The main bow was fully double the width of an ordinary rainbow. Only a segment of it was seen. The sand was oolitic, consisting of calcareous spherules of fairly uniform size, ranging between the limits of No. 8 and No. 10 shot, which are polished and exhibit a pearly luster. Professor Talmage points out that the production of the bow must be due to reflection from the outer surfaces of the spherules and cannot be explained on the principle of refraction and total reflection, generally applied to the explanation of the

NEW YORK, Sept. 1, 1901. Marble Safety Axe Co.

Gentlemen.-I wish to express my gratitude to you for manufacturing both your pocket axe and hunting knife at a price which is within the reach of all sportsmen. Heretofore it has been impossible for a sportsman to buy a perfect axe or knife. On my recent camping trip in Idaho, Wyoming and Montana, there was no other item in our outfit which contributed so much to our pleasure and comfort as these two tools of your manufacture. Nearly everyone I met wanted to buy, beg, borrow or steal one of them. Wishing you success in your venture which you so well deserve, Yours truly, Marble Safety Axe Co.: Gentlemen.—I had the pleasure today, in answer to a circular letter sent to all the medical officers of the United States Army asking them to suggest some implement to be carried by the members of the hospital corps for use in camp and field, to recommend your safety axe as the one implement I considered the best and to enclose to the chief surgeon of this department your advertisement cut out of Recreation. I have never used one of your axes but saw its usefulness from the advertisement.

Writing a Book.

The following confession of a novelist as to the method in which he wrote one of his books is not without interest. He had had the story outlined in his notebook for a long time and ought to have been able to write it, but did not feel able. Then one day he happened to think of it again and saw, almost as if it had been a stage scene, the little tableau with which the book was to close-one of those ends which are also a beginning. So he began to no reason that he can give, there was a were secret and attended by about 150 was engaged last week by a woman to Jump, and he wrote the chapters which are now numbered XXI and XXII, the last in the book. Then he went back and wrote straight on from IV to XVII.

The story had been with him so long that it was the easiest thing in the world to write it, and so he got through this part of the work with remarkable celerity. In the eighteenth chapter nothing happens. Every day for a fortnight he rose, breakfasted and tried to write that chapter; every night he tore up a big pile of manuscript which he knew to be hopelessly bad. Then he got desperate. The chapter should be written and should stand, whether house because it was bad and he had resolved net to tear it up. Next day he wrote chapter XIX, and on the morsomehow or other contrived to get into it all that he had failed to get before. Then he wrote chapter XX, and the book was completed.-London Post.

They Found the Pail.

During a spell of particularly hot weather a well known baronet came across three workmen engaged on a job on his estate. One of them remarked, as workmen not infrequently do, on the dryness of the job. The heat had perhaps extended itself to the baronet's temper. At any rate, he turned Foresters of America has a member- had filled the house with, so I made up away, with the reply: "If you are my mind that they would see them if thirsty, you know where the well is.
