Four Bright Planets Within One Reach of the Eye-Venus, Mercury and Jupiter Will Be Especially Brilliant This Month-How to See the Stars to the Best Advantage.

To those who are especially interestthe month of October offers an unusuof the eye, while not an epochal event, is quite out of the ordinary and as pleasing as it is unusual. October is the month perhaps of all the year most favorable for amateur study, and the conditions this year for those who desire to make a beginning in sky lore can never be excelled.

By far the best plan is to go out soon after sunset, before the sky has watch them as they develop one by one, the planets first, then the first magnitude stars and the lesser stars following in order as the shadows deepen. It gives a most surprising evidence of the unreliability of the untrained eye when two stars of seeming equal brightness when seen against the background of a dark blue sky are seen most unequal under the test of twilight.

Look first to the west and gaze upon the "tender star of love," Venus, whose brilliant rays break forth before the gold and purple of the setting sun has faded from the sight. Then look to the south and see another star of exceeding brilliancy, second only to Venus of all that are in the sky. This is Jupiter, vastly more distant than Venus, but reflecting from his mighty disk of 80,000 miles diameter so much of the sun's rays as to make him one of the most conspicuous objects of our sky.

In the few minutes that have elapsed since we came out a number of the brighter stars have emerged from their hiding and are seen scattered over the great dome of the sky. Another appears near Jupiter, a little to the left, as viewed from this locality. This is Saturn, the next greatest of the planets and the most distant of those observed by the unaided eye. A telescope is of course needed to see his rings, and those who have the opportunity to look through such an instrument should make haste to do so as the conditions will grow less favorable for several years to come. To the naked eye Saturn appears as a standard first magnitude star, with a light pale, but clear and strong.

Turning again to Venus we find a not particularly bright star in her near vicinity-a star right enough, however, to be at once identified. This is Mars, whose increasing distance from the earth and the fact that his face is partly averted from the sun combine to lessen his erstwhile brightness. In a few weeks he will be hidden in the rays of the sun, and we shall see little of him until 1903. Mars and Venus will be in conjunction on the morning of the 10th and may be looked upon the evening before and after. Mars will appear about two moonbreadths north of the brighter planet. On the evening of the 15th the crescent moon will hover above the two planets, a rarely beautiful sight and one which and the creed will probably spread to only cloudy weather should be an ex-

In this neighborhood on the evenings from the 11th to the 14th we may He will be seen quite near the planets just described a little toward the horizon. There will be no other star in the neighborhood to confuse, and so mistake is impossible. The view of Mercury is exceptionally favorable this month, for he is seen at the unusual distance of 25 degrees from the sun. This happens because we see him at his greatest angle only a few days Small or large jobs of Stone from the time of his aphelion. Though seldom seen, because usually in the daylit sky, Mercury shines as a very bright star, this because, being very near the sun, the planet receives an enormous amount of light.

This gorgeous planetary programme does not in the least mean that we Estimates given on all work should forget our friends, the ever about midway between the two planetary groups we see a single first magnitude star whose ruddy color is at once apparent. This is Antares in the constellation Scorpio. The winding figure of the scorpion is easily traced If the night is dark and clear.

Almost due south at this hour is another first magnitude star of a pale white color, suggesting Saturn. This is Fomalhaut in the Southern Fish. It Is the most southern first magnitude star ever seen from this latitude.

endure. It says:

"Like all modern alliances, the dual alliance has a purely political character and is based upon reasons of interest; it is, therefore, beside the mark to wonder at the friendship between two states which are at opposite poles in their constitution and ideals. It is probable, for that matter, that an old misapprehension of the relations between the czar and his people and the nature of a sovereignty which is rather a popular theocracy than a depotism proper makes the contrast seem even more violent than it is in fact. In any case, it is on the ground of political utility that all that is most republican in France (for the socialist protest is merely an incident of French domestic politics), like all that is most autocratic in Russia, has long ago accepted the alliance. "It is something when no positive antipathy proceeding from the memory of recent injuries (as is to some extent the case with countries forming the triple alliance) divides the peoples whose masters commit them to a dynastic amity. The quarrels between France and Russia in the past have only been dynastic; their interests in most parts of the world are identical, and, perhaps, the only serious possibility of their ever conflicting concerns the protectorates which they exercise in Syria and other parts of the Ottoman empire over the Latin and Orthodox Christians respectively. But there are also certain moral bonds between the two. Much as the national characters differ, it must not be forgotten that either is essentially a people of peasants, and that they have in common a genius for sympathetic assimilation which no other European race has shown. Moreover, from the time when the Empress Catherine corresponded with the encyclopedists the educated classes of Russia have been the most faithful vassals of the French intellectual empire."

The New Game of Gryllo.

Gryllo is a new game which is gaining popularity in England, says the on the principle of double wicket cricket, but the operations of batting, bowling and fielding are done with a lawn tennis racket instead of the hands. A net at each end of the pitch takes the place of the stumps. The rules are not at present crystallized, and six a side is thought to make a satisfactory number, as every one fields and the last man out bowls. The game has been Queen's club, West Kensington.

Ah, Ethel! When we hear the name, We think of hair of gold On maid who ponders o'er a book
As chaste as ice and cold
And gentle, loving, kind and true, With slender form and eyes of blue!

And Mayme! The handle conjures up A vision of a girl Who's always ready for the dance, Who'll laugh and shout and whirl; Big hearted, jolly, skip and run, With nothing in her life but fun!

And Liz! We hear the name, and then Far off our fancy looks

And sees a girl come home from school Who hampered with her books
The boys who teased her! Ah, my maid, Of boys you never were afraid!

Names seem to give an insight to Our minds until we look And think we see the owners like
A picture in a book! e loved little Mollie Hall, But, ah, today they call her "Moll."

It is a small volume printed on thin $1100.00 though opaque paper, but within its 350 pages can be found pretty nearly every fact that anyone is likely to inquire for concerning our state, and the reputation of the author is sufficient warrant for the accuracy of the statements. Under the head of each county will be found accurate map with the townships and sections marked out. Every farm of 40 acres in the state can thus be accurately located without difficulty.

One of the more valuable special points is the population figures of unincorporated villages, some of them having as high as 3,000 people which are not 1000.00 enumerated in the United States census. 1671.50 Another is the careful statement of the ger and Ticket Agent, Chicago. amendments to the constitution, showing at a glance not only what the reading now is, but it used to be.

Along with the book Mr. Farmer is publishing a map of the state prepared on paper with cloth back which is likely to supersede all others. #### A WOMAN'S LOVE.

A sentinel angel sitting high in glory Heard this shrill wail ring out from purgatory: "Have mercy, mighty angel; hear my story! "I loved, and, blind with passionate love, I fell.

Love brought me down to death and death to hell, For God is just, and death for sin is well. "I do not rage against his high decree Nor for myself do ask that grace shall be,

But for my love on earth who mourns for me. "Great Spirit, let me see my love again And comfort him one hour, and I were fain To pay a thousand years of fire and pain."

Then said the pitying angel: "Nay! Repent That wild vow! Look! The dial finger's bent Down to the last hour of thy punishment!"

But still she wailed: "I pray thee, let me go! I cannot rise to peace and leave him so. Oh, let me soothe him in his bitter woe!"

The brazen gates ground suddenly ajar, And upward, joyous, like a rising star, She rose and vanished in the ether far.

But soon adown the dying sunset sailing, 3.50 And like a wounded bird her pinions trailing, 1.50 She fluttered back, with broken hearted wailing.

> She sobbed: "I found him by the summer sea Reclined, his head upon a maiden's knee. She curled his hair and kissed him. Woe is me!" She wept: "Now let my punishment begin! I have been fond and foolish. Let me in To expiate my sorrow and my sin."

The angel answered: "Nay, sad soul; go higher! To be deceived in your true heart's desire Was bitterer than a thousand years of fire!"

The Usual Way. "Do you expect to realize a fortune from your latest invention?" asked the capitalist.

"No," said the inventor, "I don't realsuppose it will be the usual programme. I'll imagine the fortune and some one else will realize it."-Washington Star.
