HONEYBEE QUEENS.

THE MANNER IN WHICH THEY ARE FED BY THE WORKERS.

There Are Numerous Safeguards In the Hive to Provide Against the Administration of Poison Honey-It Is Different With Wasps.

The safeguards provided against the administration of poison to the despotic oriental rulers are rudimentary compared with those which stand between queens of the honeybee and such a risk. Curiously enough, this is a phase of the internal economy of the beehive which appears to have escaped observation.

In the British isles no poisonous honey is collected. If it exists the bees have learned to avoid it. Probably there is none, as the honey from at least one dangerous plant, the deadly nightshade, is harmless. Ivy honey would be the most suspicious of any gathered on a large scale, and it only exerts, so far as observation goes, a slightly laxative effect on the digestive organs. Although in this country no poisonous honey is known, it is met with in other places, notably in Asiatic Turkey. It was in this region that Xenophon's soldiers were poisoned 2,300 years ago by honey from the Azelia pontica, a plant which still flourishes in Armenia. Some centuries later a Roman army suffered similarly, but less severely, there being no deaths.

The precaution of compelling the cook to eat a portion of every dish, which is the usual safeguard of despotic rulers, or the still more primitive plan of giving the first helping to a little dog, can be eluded by a clever Borgia by having only one-half of a bird or pastry poisoned. In a wasps' nest each forager on returning proceeds directly to the queen and offers refreshment. Consequently the queen is sometimes destroyed by slowly act-A fine line of Easter Flowers, viz: Easter Lil- ing poison. Further as regards wasps, it is observed that when any larvæ Daffodils, Hyacinths and Tulips at reasonable not recently fed perceive the queen receiving food they become restless. If nearly grown they wag their heads in a suggestive way, which plainly con-Our local agent, MRS. ARTHUR FISCHER, Veys a demand for a share. > In the case of the honeybee one possible reason why no virulently poisonous honey reaches the hive may be that the insect foolish enough to collect any would probably die, as the so called honey sack is really a stomach in which a preliminary digestive process proceeds. This is proved by the polariscope, which shows that, while the nectar of the flowers is pure cane sugar, or levulose, the substance in the hive cells is sacrometrically half dextrose and half cane sugar. Dextrose is invert sugar, a coarse variety of which is the glucose of commerce. Forager bees returning to the beehive place the half digested product known as honey in their storeroom with other honey. This mixing would have the effect of attenuating a poisoned load should such be brought in. Foraging bees never feed the queen or young larvæ, but they give a mouthful or two to drones in passing. Just before sealing for the metamorphosis workers and drones are fed with honey mixed with pollen. Not so the young queens, who only get a further supply of the redigested milky substance known as chyle, which is the sustenance of all larvæ indiscriminately during the first three days of their existence. During the chrysalis stage there is no feeding. It is the business of a gang, distinct for the time being, to cater for the queen and young. They bring the food from the stores and submit it to the digestive process referred to, after which it is regurgitated to supply the needs of the queen and young larvæ. The attendants are numerous, and each supplies only a minute quantity. The queen bee is so constituted that her digestive system is capable of assimilating only the prepared food of chyle. She will die in a few hours on a comb containing honey, although kept at the temperature of the hive. Thus it would appear that the safeguards are:

First.-A bee collecting poisonous honey would probably die before reaching the hive.

Second.-If one succeeded in depositing poisoned honey, the circumstance that it did so would prove the poison to be not virulent, and its mixture with other honey in the storeroom would still further attenuate the poison and render it harmless. This is the stage at which the product becomes human food. It has, as stated above, occurred that poisoned honey has passed both these lines of defense. Third.-Should the honey be still deleterious the alimentary attendants of the queen would first suffer, and only those bringing wholesome food would reach her, as a struggle for the privilege of feeding her majesty is continually in progress. Fourth .- Should the stores pass the three safeguards before mentioned there is still another-viz, that each one of the queen's attendants feeds her only for a second at a time, and thus she would never get a sufficient quantity to affect her seriously. The queen is always on the move and the competition to feed her so great that she is continually bringing fresh bees Manistique, Mich. in front of her, from which position

An Italian Brigand's Horse.

Among south Italian brigands even their horses are taught to resist the officers of the law. During the encounter at Rana Bucca, in which the brigand Mirto was killed, the gendarmerie was amazed by the furious behavior of his horse, which lashed out on all sides, and succeeded in injuring one of the officers. On inquiry afterward among the prisoners taken it was ascertained that the horse had been trained to behave in this way by being repeatedly flogged until he kicked one of the brigands, dressed as a carabineer, approaching him. The horse at last became such an adept that he might be relied upon to kick and rear furiously at the mere sight of a uniform.-London Globe.

Through the entire civil war General Gordon's wife accompanied him, never leaving his side save when the exigencies of campaign made her presence impossible. To the faithful devotion of his wife General Gordon owed his life. In the bloody battle of Sharpsburg, Gordon, while in the midst of the carnage, was shot five times. Fred came forward with a look of resolve on his face.

"Mr. Hilton, not for your entire fortune would I enter that mine to save your son, but for humanity's sake 1 will do my best to rescue him."

A cheer from the miners greeted these words. With a wave of his hand, Fred commanded silence and, running his eye over the crowd, said slowly:

"I must have three men to help me. Who will go?"

Charles Gray, Fred's chosen companion, stepped to his side. Two more men quickly followed, and they were lowered into the shaft. The first act of the workers was to place extra beams, which were lowered down the shaft for the purpose, as near as they could to the fallen roof, to bear any strain that might be resting on those already there. At the end of three hours of cautious digging they came to the car which Fred and his companion had stayed behind to fill, and they stopped for a few moments' rest.

In half an hour they had reached an opening caused by two large rocks which had fallen together in such a manner as to leave a space between them. In that space lay Carl, with one arm doubled under him and one foot pinioned by a stone. The poor fellow was terribly bruised and cut, but conscious

"God bless you, Fred, and your brave companions," said Mr. Hilton huskily as he grasped the young man by the hand. "From my heart I thank you."

The crowd soon dispersed, and Carl was conveyed to his home. After many weeks of suffering he recovered, but the crushed foot was useless-he was a cripple for life.

As soon as he was able to do so Carl sent for Fred.

"Forgive me, Fred," he said frankly. "I was wrong, but my punishment has been great."

About a year afterward Mr. Hilton bestowed his daughter's hand upon the young man who had saved his son's life, and on his wedding day Fred became one of the owners of the mine .--

Japs Puzzle Russians.

It is considered possible that the Japa-nese may have decided that the time is opportune to land at Kin Chou, with the object of cutting off and investing Port Arthur. The chances of effecting a land-ing in neutral Chinese territory on the coasts west of the Liao Tung penisula are now regarded as remote, as the Rus-sians do not believe the Japanese will dare to risk arousing the Chinese and thus bringing down upon them the con-demnation of the powers, whose good opinion they are striving to obtain. The fact is that the Russians seem greatly at a as to the Japanese plans. In the best informed military quarters the correspondent of the Associated Press finds considerable skepticism ia regard the reported Japanese landing in Liao Tung gulf and an inclination to think it has been too widely advertised to prove more than a ruse. If a heavy landing occurs now, except in Korea, the Russian authorities are more disposed to Russian authorities are more disposed to believe that it would be near Taku Shan. VICE PRESIDENTS WHO HAVE BECOME PRESIDENTS

ANDREW JOHNSON.

Inasmuch as the presidential campaign of 1904 is drawing near, with President Roosevelt mentioned as the probable candidate of the Republican party, it is of interest to note that his nomination would mark the exorcising of the seeming "hoodoo" that has in the past militated against those of our chief executives who became President by the death of the elected head of the nation. Prior to President Roosevelt there have been four Vice Presidents elevated to the presidential chair by the demise of its incumbents, the four being John Tyler, Millard Fillmore, Andrew Johnson and Chester A. Arthur.

Mr. Tyler was elected Vice President in 1840 on the celebrated "Tippecanoe and Tyler too" ticket and became President within little more than a month after the inauguration of General William Henry Harrison, who died in April. 1841.

The Whigs again came into power with the elections of 1848, General Zachary Taylor, of Indian and Mexican war fame, being elected Vice President. In July, 1850, President Taylor died, and Vice President Fillmore was at once sworn into office, forming a new cabinet, with Daniel Webster as Secretary of State.

The third accidental President was Andrew Johnson, who attained the presidency in 1865 when the assassin's bullet killed Abraham Lincoln. President Johnson's tenure of office was marked by a succession of disputes between the Chief Executive and Congress, the apex of dissension being reached when he was impeached for the removal from office of Secretary of War Stanton, etc. The break between the President and Congress hinged on the method to be followed in reconstructing the American Union.

Chester A. Arthur, who in 1880 was elected Vice President on the Republican ticket headed by James A. Garfield, took the oath of office as President of the United States Sept. 20, 1881, the day after Mr. Garfield died at Elberon, N. J., victim of Gulteau's pistol. Mr. Arthur's administration was not marked by any event of momentous importance, but was characterized by his opposition to extravagance in appropriations, his views on this matter leading him to veto the river and harbor bills of 1882.

Northern Securities Wins.

New York, April 19.-At the conclusion of the arguments Vice Chancellor Bergen yesterday dismissed the application the Continental Securities company an injunction against the meeting of the stockholders of the Northern Securities ompany on April 21.

The vice chancellor stated that there was no question of the right of the Northern Securities company to reduce its capital stock, which action was con-ceded to be legitimate; that no proof had been presented that the proposed method of distribution of the stocks would be an injury to the complainant; that the de-cision of the United States circuit court of appeals and the United States supreme court did not order any distribution of the Northern Pacific and Great Northern railroad stock, or describe any method for their distribution, but that the decree simply prevented the Northern Securities company from getting any benefit from the holding of those stocks; that the stocks of those railroads are actual assets of the Northern Securities company, and may, therefore, be distributed to stock-holders, as, in the opinion of the court, their sale in the market would be tre-mendous injury to the public welfare, and that the methods adopted and heretofore announced for such stock distribution are perfectly fair.

LONDON ALCOHOL EVIL

Women and Children Take Drinks in the Baker's Shops.

A new encouragement to feminine vie tims of the drink habit has arisen in recent years in London, and has become such a glaring scandal that at last it is receiving the attention of the confectioners' union and also the licensing trade.

There are in London scores of pastry cook shops holding licenses for the sale of wines and spirits, and at which scenes more regrettable than are witnessed in more regretable than are withessed in many public houses take place daily. These "baker's shops" are patronized al-most entirely by women, who go there to consume drink ad libitum under the guise of buying a bin. They have a more pernicious influence on the female mind than the much-criticised grocer's h-conser "They actual processed cense. They capture women who would scorn to enter a public house, or shrink from having drink charged as "tea" on their grocer's bill. The "baker's" is less notorious; he does not parade the fact of his ligance is actioned on the fact of his license, its existence even is little known to the general public, and so a woman with a weakness for intoxicating drinks, secure in the belief that her object is unknown, enters the shop to drink, for a bun or piece of pastry is the limit of her actual refreshment. In the west end these "bakery pubs" are common, and their abuse has grown infamous. Publicans feel strongly on the matter, because under more favor-able and privileged conditions these shops compete with them, and yet at the same time have developed into businesses worse, if anything, than the regularly licersed house, since the customers are only women and children. The organ of the candy trades, The Confectioners' Union, is taking up the fight for the reputation of the non-licensed section of their trade

"We have long recognized the growing scandal of the thing, and I am not sur-prised that public attention has at last been called to it," remarked an officer of the Church of England Temperance union. "There is really no restriction on the customers, and women sit for hours drinking wines or surjets without interdrinking wines or spirits without interduration of the serious phase of the question is that these women are frequently accompanied by children. I have seen women come from these places the worse for drink-women who would blush to be seen entering a public house. It is a difficult problem to deal with, however. These confectioners find it easy to secure licenses. The authorities cannot see what evil there can be in an innocent baker's shop, and it is hard to convince them. clever thing the other day when he was asked to describe a certain man who was suspected of being a book thief. Instead of floundering around in the details of a personal description, which would have fitted any one of a half million New Yorkers, he drew a pencil sketch of the suspect and gave it to the police. Some hours later the man was arrested, and the sketch proved to be a marvelous likeness. To make the incident complete a perfect case of systematic stealing has been made out against the culprit.

Lincoln Steffens in his book tells this story:

A business man told me that a railroad which had a branch near his factory suggested that he go to the municipal legislature and get permission to have a switch run into his yard. He liked the idea, but when he found it would cost hang. The same is true of boiler makhim eight or ten thousand dollars he ing. Details of all kinds that formerly gave it up. Then the railroad became slow about handling his freight. He understood, and being a fighter, he ferried the goods across a river to another road. That brought him the switch; and when he asked about it the railroad man said:

It is this universal feeling that has caused a large class of able and honorable men to shun politics. Only when the mass of voters is stirred to anger by long continued rascality is it possible to overthrow the men who make politics a trade.

LONGER TERMS.

The custom of short terms for municipal officers benefits no one but the ward striker. Last week The Delta advocated bistory of England which would fit it longer terms, and is pleased to reproduce this unbiassed statement from the Menominee Herald:

Wholesale and Retail Business District Wiped Out. LOSS IS SIX MILLION.

Two Hundred and Fifty Firms Were Put Out of Business-Large Area

Is Burned Over.

CITIES APPEALED TO FOR AID.

Toronto, Outario, April 20.-The fire that raged throughout the night and up to an early hour today in Toronto's wholesale and retail business district was the most disastrous in the history of the city. The total loss is conservatively estimated at $6,000,000. The principal warehouses of the city were reduced to moved from the hotel. ashes and nearly 250 firms were put out half of business.

Large Area Burned.

The area covered by the fire is three blocks in length and varies from half a block to two blocks in whith. Every building on Bay street from Melinda street southward to the Esplanade at the water front was wiped out, and the fire spread on Wellington and Front streets and the Esplanade, along the water front from their intersection with Bay street, for distances of a few hundred feet to a whole block.

The total number of buildings destroyed were: Bay street, east side, 20; west side, 30; Wellington street, north side, 12; south side, 7; Front street, north side, 22; south side, 27; Esplanade, 4; Piper street, 1.

Calls for Aid.

Early in the evening, when the fire assumed alarming proportions, appeals for assistance were sent to London, Hamil-ton, Montreal and Buffalo. Special trains were at once started from these points, but it was long after midnight before the first of them began to arrive and in but it. the meantime the local firemen were hav-ing the fight of their lives.

Whole City in Peril.

From the time the fire started on the north side of Wellington street, a short distance east of Bay street, in the E. & S. Currie neckwear manufacturing plant, until it burned itself out at daybreak, there was not a moment when a shift of the wind to the north would not have resulted in the destruction of the greater part of the city.

Fire Chief Injured.

At an early stage of the fire Chief Thompson was trapped by the flames and forced to jump from the top of a building. A network of wires broke his fall and saved his life. He escaped with a broken leg. When the chief made the leap for his life a traveler from Montreal was on the roof with him and no trace of him has since been seen. It is prob-It is probable that he perished in the flames.

The Gordon Mackbuilding on the northwest corner Front and Bay streets, which for nearly seventy years was one of the finest es-tablishments in the city, made a fierce blaze. The Copp Clark building and Warwick Brothers & Rutter's was destroged at about the same time.

Scene Is Appalling.

The scene when this whole block of great wholesale buildings was ablaze was appalling. The heat was so great and the smoke and flying embers so thick that the firemen were absolutely helpless and could not get near enough to the fire to pluy a single stream upon it. To add to the terrifying effect of the scene came bombardment of exploding giant crack-rs and other fireworks stored in the Copp lark building. The fire next leaped across Front street to the McPherson Bros,' boot and shoe warehouse and adjoining buildings. Eastward on Front street and south to Esplanade the flames leaped from building to building with irresistible fury. In forty-five minutes the flames had leveled every building between Front Tiger's Roars Became Yelps.

The tiger died fighting, but his dying gasps were more like those of the whipped cur than of the king of the jungles. His accustomed roars were transformed into yelps. The passing of Hearst as a presi-dential factor had no obsequies as its ac-companiment. Had Grover Cleveland been present in the convention hall he probably would have diagnosed the cause of the publisher's death as innocuous des-netude. Hill Clinches His Victory.

David Bennett Hill himself wielded the knife which ended the life of the tiger. After Tammany's heavy firing Thomas F. Everybody expected him to speak, but he only laconically suggested that the roll be called by counties on the rock-ribbed plank instructing for Judge Parker under the unit rule. From him a suggestion was a command. The double death blow to Tammany and Hearst was administered by a vote of 301 to 149.

Exit Tammany, enter Hill! Exit Hearst, enter Parker! "The King is dead, long live the King!" Tammany has passed from national Democratic politics for at least four years to come and Hill is supreme in party councils in the Empire state.

The plank instructing for Judge Parker was approved by the committee on resolutions between the afternoon and evening sessions of the convention by a vote of 29 to 11, with eleven absentees. Gave Offense to Japan.

On August 12 last, after Japan had submitted an inquiry as to whether Rus-sia was disposed to reopen the negotia-tions respecting Manchuria and Korea, a viceroyalty in the far east, a special secretary of state, and an advisory com-mittee were created, Alexieff being appointed viceroy and Bezobrazoff secretary of state.

Seventeen days after these appoint-ments were made M. Witte, who had been opposed to the policy of Alexieff and Bezobrazoff, was relieved of his portfolio as minister of finance.

It was through his new official ad-visers that the Emperor conducted nesolutions with Japan, and it is claimed that they misjudged the temper and pur-pose of the Japanese and left the Em-peror in ignorance of the preparations for war which Japan was making and the rising war spirit of that empire.

The enemies of Alexieff have persistently asserted that as the man on the spot he should have kept the Emperor informed concerning these vital points. On the eve of the war Alexieff ap-parently still had the confidence of the Czar, but the lack of preparedness of the Port Arthur fleet, as shown in the cases of the battleships Retvisan and Czarevitch, called the attention of the Em-peror to the slackness of the naval administration in the far east.

* MELPING CLARA.

Arithmetic is not Clara's forte. But this does not trouble her greatly. If she cannot solve the problems in her daily lesson her mother can, and Clara. believes that parents who make children study arithmetic against their will should be responsible for their examples. Mrs. Hamilton usually gives up her evenings to Clara's arithmetic; but not long ago, the Chicago News says, she came short one problem because Mr. Bond, the president of the baking-powder company with which Mr. Hamilton was connected, was visiting them and had to be entertained.

After dinner that evening Clara's eyes were so red that her father asked her if she had got something in them. "No," said Clara, beginning to cry again. "Mama couldn't get one of those old examples, and now I'll have

"Don't cry!" exclaimed her father. "I'll get it for you. Excuse me a minute, Bond."

Then he followed Clara from the room, and went into a close session with the problem.

Mrs. Hamilton and Mr. Bond discussed every subject under the sun while they waited for Mr. Hamilton to return. At last they heard him in the adjoining room throw down the book and declare that the answer in the back was wrong. The man who wrote the book did not know what he was about-that was all.

"No, papa," piped Clara. "Teacher said the answer was right."

Now Mr. Bond had more than once in his district school-days been pronounced a "born mathematician. He promptly offered to work the problem for Clara, and the dog-eared arithmetic was turned over to him. After a quarter of an hour, during which only his hard breathing disturbed the quiet of the room, he announced that the problem was solved. So Clara went to bed happy.

The next evening, as soon as dinner was over, Mr. Bond complacently offered to help Clara with her arithmetic, giving Mr. Hamilton at the same time a sly dig about his inefficiency. But Clara hung back, and said she wanted her mamma to help her.

"Oh, do let Mr. Bond help you! He can do them so quickly!" exclaimed Clara's mother.

Still Clara shook her head, and when they continued to urge her, she blurted out that Mr. Bond had not worked the problem right the night before.

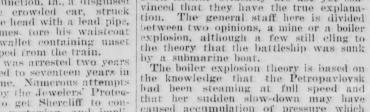

"Why, he had the right answer." said Clara's mother, in confusion.

"Yes, but he didn't do it right," explained Clara. "Teacher says we shouldn't just work for the answer, but should know the logical steps by which it is worked. He worked it backward."
