The Early Bird.

Bishop Brewster of Connecticut is noted for his funny stories, and his latest is said to be about an old reprobate who decided to repent and announced to every one that whatever wrong he had done should be made right, so a man whom he had cheated out of a large sum of money went around at midnight to demand it.

"But what did you come at this hour for and wake me up? Why not wait till tomorrow?" said the old sinner crossly.

"I came now," replied the man, "to avoid the rush."-Harper's Weekly.

The Rev. C. N. Wright, Wardie vicarage, Rochdale, for a personal reminiscence, writes: "In my third living there was a very crowded congregation the first morning I officiated. The parishioners were evidently curious as to the build, color of hair, etc., of their new vicar. As a matter of fact I was, though a young man, very bald. A litthe thought would have caused me to make my first appearance on any morning but the 8th, but it was the 8th, and, in the Psalms, which were read and not sung, I had to say: 'My sins are more in number than the hairs of my head." FIFTY-TWO OTHERS INJURED IN W. T. Hardy and Partners Alleged to FRIDAY'S TERRIBLE WRECK IN ILLINOIS.

MOTORMAN IS MISSING.

Man Blamed for Disaster Flees from the Scene During Confusion Following Wreck.

MATTOON, Ill., August 31.-Fourteen persons were killed and fifty-two injured many of them so seriously it is believed they will die—when a trolley car of the Mattoon-Charleston electric line was crashed into by a heavily laden freight car of the same line on a sharp. freight car of the same line on a sharp curve one mile west of Charleston yesterday. There were 99 people in the car.

The victims were on their way to Charleston to attend the county fair, and found. the car in which they were riding was crowded to its capacity, many of the passengers being women and children. Responsibility for the disaster was placed by the traction company on the shoulders of Benjamin McCleary, motorman of the express car, who disappeared immediately after the crash. The dead:

Trains Crash on Curve. The collision occurred on a dangerous curve half a mile west of the "Clover Leaf" crossing. The cars which crashed were the regular freight No. 14, in charge of Motorman Charles Botts and Conductor Frank Gucker, and the express, in charge of Motorman Benjamin McCleary. Both trains were running at high speed and the impact when they came together was so terrific that the passenger trolley was telescoped by the freight.

There were no warning whistles and no chance for escape for any of the pas-sengers by jumping. The motorman had not time even to apply the air brakes for the use of the battleships.

Owing to the fact that the telephone apparatus with which each car was equipped was ruined, there was no way to summon assistance until some of the survivors rap to Charleston, a mile dis-

As soon as the frenzied passengers who escaped serious injury realized what had occurred, they rendered every assistance possible in taking out and caring for the injured.

Improvised stretchers were made of car seats and the rescue work began promptly. The traction officials here were notified from Charleston of the disaster and a city car was pressed into service, carrying almost every physician and surgeon who could be located in the short space of time which elapsed before the car left. A fast run was made to Urban Park, where the cars bearing the dead and injured to Mattoon were passed. Several of the physicians returned to Mattoor caring for the injured en route, the others continuing to the scene of the wreck to assist the Charleston physicians in caring for the injured still lying on improvised stretchers and the ground.

Heat Adds to Suffering. The heat of the day added greatly to the suffering of the injured and to the hardships under which the rescuers Racked by fever and pain, the unforwater immediately available, no way to get it until the relief cars arrived. The search by survivors for missing ones added to the confusion about the wreck. Women sobbing, ran about as if half demented, and swooned when they found the lifeless body of the one they hunted. Men broke down and wept at the pitiful scenes enacted about them.

The disaster has cast gloom over the entire city. The theaters are closed and will so remain until after the funerals of the victims.

NEW YORK, Sept. 4 .- The customs fficials believe that they have uncovered a syndicate of smugglers who in the last thirty years have brought into this port more than $1,000,000 worth of dutiable goods. They believe that by the arrest of a dapper, thin-voiced young man who arrived yesterday aboard the North German Lloyd steamship Kronprinz Wilhelm they have knocked the syndicate to smithereens.

Mr. Hardy did not lose his good humor, even after the biggest of his trunks had been opened. In this trunk, on the top layers, were more than a dozen neg-ligee shirts, all of which were pinned as if they had just come from the haber-dasher. Inspector Campbell lifted one of the shirts from the trunk and looked down into the neck of it. He found sev-eral dozen yards of lace folded in such a manner that a cursory observation would not have revealed it.

Mr. Hardy, seeing that the game was up, touched the inspector on the shoulder and said: "You needn't examine the rest of those shirts. They are all alike."
Col. Bishop decided, after he had brought to view several thousand dollars worth of laces and dress goods, to arrest both Hardy and his companion.

WAR CRUISE MEANS BIG SHIFT IN COAL.

Atlantic Fleet, Once in Pacific Ocean, May Never Return East-Fuel Is a Problem.

PHLADELPHIA, Pa., Sept. 4.-According to steam coal experts, a revolution is impending in soft coal shipments from this and other Atlantic ports due to the removal of the Atlantic battleship fleet to the Pacific coast.

In the first place the belief is general here that the fleet will go to the Pacific never to return. This would mean the shipment in the next few years of mil-lions of tons of coal to Pacific coast ports

Coal Must Come from East.

Necessarily this coal must go in ships from eastern ports as the railroad freight rate makes the price of coal delivered on Pacific coast almost prohibitive. Recognizing the importance of the situation, John C. Grady, director of the department of wharves, docks and ferries of this city, has notified the government at Washington that ships desiring to load coal for United States war vessels will be given preference at this port.

Store Fuel in Advance. For some time past government agents have been quietly collecting information regarding the coal shipping possibilities of the various ports on the Atlantic coast with a view to using those most available when the government demand begins. It is the desire to store coal in large quantities on the Pacific coast in advance of the arrival there of the battleship fleet.

DOWAGER PICKS AIDES.

Empress of China Chooses Strongest Men in Her Empire as Ministers.

PEKING, Sept. 4.—The action of the throne in calling to the capitol Chang Chi Tung, who is China's greatest scholtunates maimed in the crash, cried out in vain for water. Delirium followed this plea in many cases, but there was no caused an excellent impression. No ofthe progressive Chinese statesmen, has caused an excellent impression. No of ficial changes since the passing of Prince Luan, Yung Lu and Li Hung Chang are comparable in importance with the steps just taken by the Dowager Empress. It is expected that Luan Fang will shortly be made viceroy of Chili province, succeeding Yuan Shi Kai. The dowager Empress in thus sur-rounding herself with the strongest and most eminent men of the empire has surprised even those who were aware of the throne's apprehensions and its de termination to fortify the government to the utmost. The board of foreign affairs, with Yuan Shi Kai, Na Lung and Chang among its members, becomes the strongest in the history of China's foreign relations and is especially acceptable to China's unaggressive friends.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Sept. 4 .-Louis Glass, vice president of the Pacific States Telephone and Telegraph company, convicted of having bribed Supervisor Lonergan to vote against granting a franchise to the Home Telephone company, was today sentenced by Superior Judge Lawler to five years' imprisonment in the state prison at San Quentin.

Triumph for Langdon. The conviction and sentence of Glass marks a triumph for District Attorney Langdon and his assistant, Heney. Glass is the man who, according to the confessions of supervisors, did much to corrupt the county board. HIS MUSIC WORLD FAMOUS.

Wrote Wierd Settings for Old Norse Legends-His "Peer Gynt" Suite Being Best Known.

BERGEN, Norway, Sept. 4.-Edward Hagerup Grieg, one of the world's foremost composers, died this morning.

He intended sailing for Christiania yesterday and his baggage was already on board a steamer, when he complained of feeling ill and the symptoms appearing serious, he was removed to a hospital, where he died.

Grieg had been growing weaker for some years, necessitating the greatest care of his health. He leaves a widow, who was well known as an interpreter of his works, but no children.

of his works, but no children.

His death is a profound shock to Norway. Probably no man stood higher in the estimation of the Scandinavian people. His weird setting to the old Norse legends made him famous the world over, particularly his suite written for Ibsen's "Peer Gynt." He was decorated by most of the crowned heads of Europe.

Nordraak's Influence on Grieg.

Dr. Grieg was born in Norway, June 15, 1843, one year after the unfortunate Richard Nordraak, who afterwards exercised so powerful an influence upon the expression of Grieg's genius. On the completion of his studies at Leipzig in 1862, he went to Copenhagen for a period of study with Gade, whom he determined to emulate, and immediately plunged into the close study of Norse saga literature, legendary lore, folk mu-sic, and national melodic characteristics It was at this period of his development that Richard Nordraak entered into his cincinnati.

His residence in Christiania was inaugurated by a concert of Norse music which he gave, at which Mina Hagerup (whom he afterwards married) sang romances written by Nordraak Kjerulf and himself. A stay of a few months in Rome in 1870 was made possible by the grant of a government stipend. Here he received much encouragement from Liszt, to whom he dedicated his Foran Sydens Kloster (from Bjornson's Arnljot), a work magnificent power and conception. No

GRAVE DANGER OF CENTRALIZATION.

By James A. Tawney, M. C. The true reason why the people are willing to let the national government perform and pay for so many things which properly fall within the obligations of the States is found in the fact that they do not realize that they are themselves paying for the things which the national government pays for.

The federal revenue is secured by indirect taxation, while the money in the treasuries of the several States is secured by direct taxation upon the people.

When any State increases its appropriations for any purpose, every legislator knows that that means an increase in the direct tax upon the people. Moreover, he knows that the people know this, and that they watch with zealous care the tax rate which they must pay in cash from their own pockets. Therefore, needed legislation is postponed because of the expense it involves, and the federal government is appealed to whenever possible through the President, through the people's representatives in Congress, and through the various departments and bureaus of the government. When popular demands are strong enough, and it has become obvious that the States will not severally or jointly undertake obligations belonging to them, though seriously needed, the experience of the last ten years shows that the federal government, through its legislative and executive departments, is only too willing to undertake such responsibilities and relieve the States of the burdens they involve. I do not plead for States' rights. I plead for the right and the duty of the federal government to protect itself and its treasury against encroachments of the States and private interests upon its powers, its duties, and its revenues. I lay no claim to prophetic powers, but I bring to you the thought of many of the ablest men in the public service to-day, when I say that we are unconsciously drifting toward a highly organized, bureaucratic form of federal government, such as has become the bane of most of the old-world governments of Europe.

There is at present no yellow fever in Panama, and malaria is well under control. The men working on the canal and their families are as vigorous as they could be in this coun

It looked as if the canal could never be built unless yellow fever were exterminated. The fever could never spread now, even if it were introduced from outside, through our rigid quarantine. I am inclined to think that the advances made in tropical sanitation will have a much wider and more farreaching effect than freeing Havana and Panama from yellow fever or enabling us to build the Panama canal.

I think that the sanitarian can now show that any population coming to the tropics can protect itself against yellow fever and malaria by measures simple and inexpensive.

With these diseases eliminated, life in the tropics for the Anglo-Saxon will be, I believe, more healthful than in the temperate zone, and gradually, in the next two centuries, tropical countries, which offer a greater return for man's labor than the temperate zones, will be settled by the white races and become again the centers of wealth, population and civilization, as they were at the dawn of history.

EMPHASIZE THE GLORIES OF PEACE.

By President Schaeffer.

The greatest problem of the twentieth century is the boy, with one exception-the girl. As soon as the girl takes up the study of history, gradually she reaches the conviction that everything great and heroic belongs to the other sex. The boy is apt to form similar ideals from the text books on history and the methods of teaching the subject. The names of admirais and generals, the battles they fought and the victories they won, the causes and the effects of the wars in which they were engaged, constitute a very large part of the material of instruction. The boy loves power and admires every exhibition of personal and national

It seems to me that our text books, our examinations, and our instruction should glorify the arts of peace above the arts of war. In other words, history should be taught from a more rational point of view. While it would be wrong to rob the soldier of a just share of glory, it will nevertheless be wise to emphasize the victories of peace above the victories of war.

HOW TO ABOLISH CONSUMPTION.

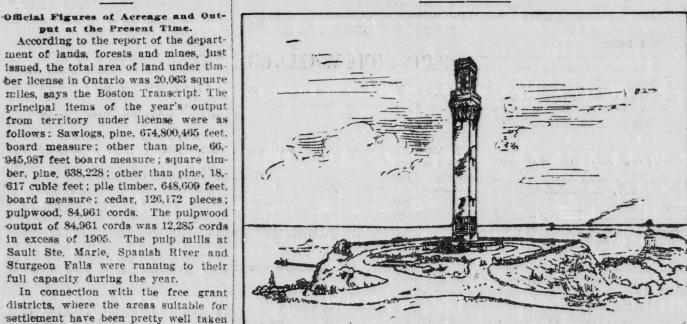

By Dr. F. C. Shattuck.

The only way to eradicate tuberculosis is to totally eradicate its seed. Cleanliness, good and sufficient food, plenty of air, ample water supplies, public parks, playgrounds and bathhouses—these are among the things needful. The hygiene of workshops must be looked after, and there must be all needed enactments in the interest of the public health. Nowhere will co-operation, enriched by public spirit, yield a richer harvest than in striving along broad lines to prevent tuberculosis. Our work for the immediate future seems to lie in the direction of generalizing and systematizing. An immense service can be rendered by arousing the interest of private and incorporated employers of labor. Mill owners and managers, as a class, are intelligent and humane, and their attention should be called to this matter by their physicians. The result would be a saving, not a loss, to the employers, while the benefit to the individual workers would be great. If the word in medicine is "work," the word in the tuberculosis fight is "education."

MINNESOTA ROADS FIGHT 2 CENT FARE.

Corporations Ask Injunction Restraining Enforcement of the New Rate Law.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Sept. 3.-Judge William Lochren in the United States district court today began hearing arguments in the matter of application of the stockholders of the railroads operating in Minnesota for a temporary injunction restraining the state from attempting to enforce the commodity rates contained in a law passed by the Legisla-ture last winter, and the 2-cent passenger rate law and the merchandise rates ordered by the railroad and warehouse commission last year.

Question of Injunction.

The hearing today is on the application for a temporary injunction pending the final judgment. Some time ago Attorney General E. T. Young entered a motion for the dismissal of the suit as against him on the ground that by making him a party defendant the suit was in fact against the state and hence against the constitutional provision exempting the state from being sued without its con-sent. This motion Judge Lochren denied and the case now comes up on the ques-tion of the issuance of the preliminary in-

CARACAS, Venezuela, Aug. 31.-Via Willemsted, Island of Curacoa, Sept. 3.) -In view of the attitude of Brazil and Venezuela at The Hague, President Castro today was asked his opinion of the reported proposition to constitute prize and arbitration tribunals by graduated representation, giving some powers permanent representation while others would be represented only periodically. The President made the following statement and authorized its publication:

"This proposition of the powers is equivalent, in my opinion, to the head a nation inviting all or some of the heads of other friendly nations to a feast in his house and after assembling them there, proceeding to a classification in order to determine who should eat at the first table, who at the second and so on, and who should dance in the principal rooms of the palace and who in

TAFT IS A DEMOCRAT.

Secretary Taft adopts the views of the free traders when he argues that the protective tariff is responsible for the trusts and the advance in prices of of nearly all commodities. Trusts exist in free trade countries, as well as in protective countries. They are incident to industrial development; and it is a theory long exploded that a reduction of the tariff will destroy trusts. On the contrary it will have a tendency to strengthen trusts, for it will drive out all small competitors if any exist.

Secretary Taft cites the resolutions of the American Manufacturers' association in favor of tariff reduction. This association is composed largely of "free State Railroad Commissioner Cassius raw material" Democrats—those who L. Glasgow will pass through here Sat- | want the duty reduced on their raw maurday, and make a trip up the Rapid terial, but who oppose a reduction in the charge over this week. He is at River line. He will then go through to the duty on their finished products. There is no such thing as "raw material," except commodities that are in a state of nature. The moment labor is put upon any natural product, it becomes a finished product. What is raw material for one is a finished product to

So Secretary Taft should not indorse too much the "raw material" theory, for it will not hold water.

While no tariff law is sacred, it is very doubtful if the time has arrived for tariff revision. A tariff revision cannot be hold of a friend; that no man driven by piecemeal—it must be thorough, consistent and harmonious. Is the business of the whole country ready for a comdisturbance?

ROBBERY IN PARIS CAFES.

No Prices on Bills of Fare, and Waiters Impose on Guests.

"I tell you," said the returned European traveler, taking up the bill of fare, "it's a good deal of relief to get to a place where one can know the exact cost of things to eat and drink. When on the other side I narrowly escaped nervous prostration because of the latitude in the prices of items on the menu. Paris is about the worst offender among European cities in this respect. In restaurant after restaurant there prices are omitted from the bill of fare simply to give an opportunity to rifle the pockets of the unwary. Take my advice and have as close an approach to an ironclad agreement as possible with your garcon regarding the 'demnition total' of your meal before giving your order. If you don't, there's trouble and pecuniary loss ahead. The waiter, with the connivance of the proprietor of the cafe, will do all he can to impose upon you.

"One tragic story that I can vouch for may be of interest to American tourists. It shows one variety of restaurant robbery in Paris illustrating incidentally French ingenuity. An American woman gave a small luncheon at a well known place to a half dozen friends. She had no intention of making it an elaborate affair. She knew French ways and had a careful estimate made of the cost of the repast ordered. After the second course she noticed that the waiters were pressing upon her guests delicacies for which she had not stipulated, and she observed, too, that a point was made of asking each person if she would have some of this, that or the other thing. Of course the viands were accepted. These extras were succeeded by others, the poor hostess not being able (or felt she was unable, which amounts to the same thing) to stem the tide rapidly overwhelming her pocketbook. When she had a stormy session with the proprietor she could get no satisfaction. The things were offered; they were eaten. 'Of a surety, madame had ordered them, else they would not have been served. It is impossible that madame would wish to have consequences most unpleasant?' She wisely paid the bill, but the experience cost her dear.

A southern representative in congress is reputed to be of such a persuasive manner that, no matter what party may be in power, he outdoes his colleagues in procuring favors for his constituents.

One afternoon the statesman was met by a newspaper man. "Well, major," asked the latter, "how many appointments and appropriations have you arranged for today? We all know your way of getting everything that you go after."

"Nothing today," responded the representative rather wearily. "My experience this time reminds me of the old Confederate soldier that I knew in Tennessee. 'I went into this war,' said he, 'with the motto "Veni, vidi, vici," and I came out vice versa."-St. Louis Republic.

The Ideal as to the Useful Life.

I doubt if ever in the history of the human race so many people were reaching out toward ideals of usefulness as

Perhaps this is because there are so many individual creeds, and so much liberty of belief is granted to evolving humanity.

Each soul today con, if it will, see God in its own way, and worship Him according to its own light, and its own power to see light. It is not an age of church-going, but it is an age of increasing spiritual hunger.

Long ago I used to think it would be a great thing for the world were there one great church, one creed for ity, and no individual thinking done by the masses of humanity. The more creeds the better for the evolving race. The one thing to desire is that each soul lives up to the highest requirements of his faith.

Orderly habits, becoming and wellworn clothing, agreeable voices, correct language, proper pronounciation, an at-tractive manner, are all steps toward living an unselfish and useful life. They help to beautify the earth. An atractive manner necessitates an easy, graceful poise of the body, a good carriage, a knowledge of how to sit, stand and walk, and the ability to listen Careful table manners are important factors in an unselfish life. Nothing more selfish than spoiling the meal hours for others by spread elbows, audible eating, and the toothpick habit.

The habit of self-reliance and the abitity to make one's own enjoyment, is another unselfish habit. The woman who is forever relying upon others to enter-tain her or to open ways for her to entertain herself, can never be a great helper in the world.

To sum up—the cultivation of all the agreeable and pleasing qualities, the selfreliance which develops mental resources for enjoyment, thoughtful lines for others in small things, an avoidance of gossip and tale-bearing, a nature which rejoices in the pleasures of others and sympathizes with their troubles, and knows how to divert the minds of the sad to hope and cheerfulness, this is the practical method to "help humanity" and make "the world better."

Ventilation Once More.

"If they would but keep their windows open at night, there would be little need of my doctoring them at all," said a plain-speaking physician, referring to a certain class of his patients.

Many people are really afraid of "night air." They sem to have a feeling that God has put something very deadly into the atmosphere that surrounds the earth after the sun has disappeared. Now, look at that thought, just a moment. It isn't in the least after the manner of God's provision for his children. Be-sides, it is really the same air that has over the earth, lighted and heated and cleansed by the sun all day; nothing whatever has happened to contaminate it. Again, there is no air to breathe, after sunset, but "night air," ouside or inside. True, air at night is apt to be a little damper and cooler than it is

during the day, but that does not affect it for breathing purposes, else how could humanity endure days that are damper and cooler than other days? how could live and thrive at the seashore as they do? Another thing to think of is whether night air could possibly be any more fa-tal to health than is air filled with the carbonic acid gas thrown off by action of the lungs, a real poison. For a test, breathe into a clean bottle, then stop it quickly and tightly; after several hours smell of the contents of the bottle. Your nose will tell you a very unpleasant story. Fill a clean bottle with clean water, take it out of doors after dark, pour out the water and let it fill with air, stop it tightly; then smell of it in the morning. Your nose will have nothing different to say than it would had you experimented with daylight air. Some morning, after you have been out of doors and had a good sniff of fresh air, enter a small room, tightly closed, in which one or two people have been sleep-Your sense of smell will be greatly ded. If your room is small and not well ventilated, and you become rest ss so that you cannot sleep, wrap yourself warmly, throw the window open and draw in deep breaths for a few minutes. The fresh, pure air from outside replaces the poison-laden air in your lungs, and makes you comfortable. You'll sleep, at least till the air of the room gets "stuffy" again.

One needs to be very careful about drafts across the bed, about having too strong a wind blowing upon one; nor need one rush to the extreme of sleeping in air as cold as it is outdoors on some winter nights-though we hear from all sides that consumptives are cured by sleeping in the coldest air. The doctor' plea always is for pure air, not merely for cold air. Cold air may be impure,

Women in New Fields.

It is a difficult matter in these days of woman's activity in many fields of industry and usefulness to say what is a new field for woman. The sex are so home about the time he does and throws rapidly, though quietly, invading so together a dinner, when by remaining mere form such a religion would become, with a few figureheads in authority, and no individual thinking described as the such a such a religion would become, with a few figureheads in authority, and no individual thinking described as the such as fore so many follow that the new field becomes an old and well occupied one. In the professions and in the trades it has long since been accepted that practically nothing is closed to women, and while they do not always excel in every calling, they are seldom actual failures to the wide range of women's work as compared with the work for which she It is a line of thought as old as the universe, and is nutritious for the mind, as whole wheat bread for the body.

A young woman who has been as the large transfer of the was supposed to be fitted only a few and callings in which were industries.

The older walks of activity and means has fallen into this line of thought, and she is anxious to make her life a blessing to the world. Just how to live an come crowded with women, and they are unselfish and worthy life, and benefit mapping out new paths and investigating and experimenting in new directions. The success the sex meets with in this direction confirms the modern belief that women are resourceful, and the old idea that a woman could not originate, but had to follow some beaten path is as er-roneous as it is obsolete. As proof of this take the case of the young woman in an eastern city who, on being thrown on her own resources, and sizing up her stock in trade as to talents and training. nd herself as she thought, almost krupt Accustomed to wealth and security that wealth brings in matebankrupt. rial things, she was at first in a sad plight from being entirely without any sort of a qualification for earning her own living. She had a knack at story telling, and she studied out a plan that resulted in the organization of a number of story clubs. She read the latest and best novels, digested them, and at stipulated times met with her clubs and the stories. It proved popular, and she soon had all the clubs she could possibly serve, and at good compensation.

Somewhat along the same lines is the work of a young Philadelphia woman. She was at her wits' ends until she hit on the reading club idea. She turned her attention chiefly to lonely old ladies, and for a couple of hours each day, at a stipulated time, she reads to them by telephone. It isn't even necessary for these old ladies to go to the trouble of going to club meetings, or even to dress, as women must dress when going out. They can sit in their own bed rooms and hear the reader. She can have as many as a dozen or a score listening on so many different wires at the same time, and they all pay her generously.

Looking towards somewhat different fields, it is said that a woman is one of the best sugar beet raisers in California. She has broad fields, and superintends her beet growing herself. From a very modest beginning she has built up a great business. There is a woman in Nevada who supports herself and several children raising and selling pampas plumes. At Pasadena, Cal., several la-dies make a specialty of preparing os-trich feathers for the market.

With these examples before us-and they are only a few of many—it would be folly for any one to say that any field of industry or any occupation of usefulness is closed to women. It seems there is always something new, and the sex no longer has cause to complain of continued belief in our ability to attain the narrow limits within which they are the ideal—these are all that are needed permitted to compete with men.—Woman's National Daily.

To the Girl With Nothing a Year.

The girl with the least to spend is fre quently the one upon whom obligations rest most heavily, and in the season of weddings she feels that some return, however small must be made to the brides-elec, who have probably done much at one time or another to contribute the second of the sec ute to her own good times. Silver and glass are both expensive from her point of view, for in either from $8 to $10 has to be spent in order to get anything that does not look small and almost cheap, so her choice therefore must swing towards things in brass or some quaint antique, which if she is clever she will be able to find at one of two or three little shops not far from the hum of the busiest streets of New York and quite easy of access. At one an old-fashioned cut glass bowl, the design ground on the cutting that was nine inches in diameter, was shown for $1.50, which is now merely quoted as an exam ple, for at these shops, such opportuni ties last but a day perhaps, the list of attractions ever changing and ever new, though genuinely old. Wives Who Dislike Work.

I do not believe the average man wants his wife to work downtown unless there are some unusual circumstances which make it necessary or unless she prefers to do it and insists upon it. Perhaps what inspired the remark by the young man in question that he would not object to having his wife work downtown was the apparent worthlessness of some married woman of his acquaintance. A couple of women sat across from me in the street car the other night and one of them remarked to the other "I do hope John is not home when leget there." The other replied: "It is only ten minutes after 6; I thought he never got home until 6:30." The reply was: "He does not usually because works after 5:30 nearly every night, it always happens on my card club day that he leaves the office promptly and so gets home before I do and then fusses because dinner is not ready. I believe he plans to get home earlier on Wednesday for meanness."

I confess to a feeling of sympathy for the husband of this woman, coming home to an empty house after a hard day at the office and having to wait for his dinner. She seemed to me a worthless woman-one to whom home making is a secondary consideration. I know of an office clerk who gets $75 to $80 a month and works harder than a day laborer, whose wife spends nearly every afternoon "shopping." a at a card home in the afternoon or at least getting home by 5 o'clock she might have a oast, some hot biscuits, and a nice pudding at no greater cost than the dinner of fried meat and hurriedly prepared vegetables. These people are always from one to two months behind with their bills and the husband gets more discouraged every day. I believe he would be justified in saying that he would not object if his wife worked downtown.

DOG MEAT EATEN IN GERMANY.

Kingdom of Saxony the Center of Cynophagy-Use Authorized by Law.

Not only is the flesh of horses and mules eaten in Germany almost as much as in France, but also there is a growing consumption of dog meat, and in some localities dogs are fattened for market, and there are even special abattoirs for slaughtering them. The use of dog meat is said to have had its origin in Saxony, and there are statistics going as far back as 1869. But on June 3, 1900, a law was passed which authorizes the sale and consumption of dog all over the German empire.

Dr. Villapadierna, a Spanish physician, who investigated the subject and prepared a report on it, is quoted by a Paris paper as saying that the growth in Saxony is steady. In 1869 the number of dogs recorded as killed for food was 468; in 1900 it was 1260; in 1902 it was 2869. Later figures are wanting, but the consumption in 1906 is said to been at least 5000.

All the dogs slaughtered for the market are rigidly inspected and only passed if in strictly healthy condition. The meat is again inspected after killing. This is required by the law which authorizes its saie, but no other step is taken to discourage the growth of the habit of "cynophagy." Relatively to population the city of Dessau is the largest consumer of dog. It is the capital of the Duchy of Anhalt, which is wedged into the Saxon province of Prussia. It has a population of about 50,000 and eats 250 dogs a year. In Chemnitz 312 dogs were eaten last year, and Leipsic 103, but these are vastly arger places. The taste for dog is reported as extending throughout Silesia and into Bavaria. In Munich dogs are regularly slaughtered and the flesh is sold by low grade butchers. The Germans, however, declare that they do not buy it in that region and that the demand is confined to the lowest class of Italian laborers. No dog flesh is sold in Berlin as yet.

HATS AND HATPINS.

Psychology and Philosophy of the Manner of Wearing the Individual Headgear.

The ravages of psychology are daily inreasing. Not content with turning the individual and the crowd inside out, for our edification, psychologists are bent on giving us the rationale of every object in the heavens above and the earth beneath. What we eat and what we wear, what we do and what we are forbidden to do, our habits, our emotions, our rela-tions, both external and internal—everything must now have its "psychology The latest is "The Psychology of the

In such a case one's first instinct rightly is cherchez the German professor. He is the guilty man this time and his name is Prof. Hans Gross of Gratz. In a recent work on criminal psychology he has a long disquisition on the hat as an index of character. It is all set down, of course, after the severest fashion of science. Gladstone used sometimes to entertain his friends by amusing discourses about hats—the styles different public men affected, comic accidents he had seen in connection with headgear, and so on. But this was mere personal anecdote and persiflage. The German professor knows nothing of such trifling. He has made a long series of observations on the manner of wearing the hat and solemnly publishes the results of his studies for the behoof or warning of

It is not the nature of the hat itself which counts so much as the angle at which it is worn. Thus we learn that if a man wears his hat exactly "perpendicular to the vertical axis of the certainly a pedant or a bore. A hat carried very much on one side of the head is an infallible mark of insolence and presumption. Wearing the hat on the back of the head is a sign of recklessness. Prof. Gross is convinced that it is also a sign of being in debt. If you meet a man with his hat very far back you may set him down as pretty near bankruptey. This is a hint to street and bonding companies. But there are many distinctions and subtleties here into which our professor does not go. A "shocking bad hat," for example, may be an index of either dire poverty or great wealth. The very rich may be as independent as the hopelessly poor in this respect; a duke may wear a hat indistinguishable from a dustman's. On the other hand, we are informed by an observant friend that a man whose credit is suspected must be very careful about his hats. They must be of the best make and latest fashion if he would not see his accommodation at the bank mysteriously cut off. But it is the moral nature, not the size of the bank account, at which Prof. Gross is most anxious to arrive by way of the hat; A regulation has gone into effect in accordingly, he notes the fact that a hat pulled far down over the forehead should of children under 14 years of age in put you on your guard against a sulky temper.

But that stone age of the hatpin is now left far behind. "We may go on pretending that the function of the hatpin is to fasten the hat to the hair, but this fiction is difficult to maintain in the face of seven of them, all bristling round one small toque; and some milliners are frank enough to reject it altogether and to in-clude hatpins as part of the trimming."

"Women must look to it, lest in their hurry to seize upon a new means of ornamentation they get the primary use of the hatpin." Norman Duncan, the novelist, was a few years ago a slender lad performing the duties of assistant town clerk in a lit-tle town in Ontario. His remuneration was the princely sum of $5 a week. but, after all, he was very young and the work and hours were very light.

Duncan worried about that salary a g good deal. It didn't strike him as being just right—and to Duncan, in those early years, not to be right was to be very wrong indeed, for he had been reared under the strictest sort of sur-roundings. He knew it was his duty to perform his work properly, and he also knew it was due to himself that a proper salary be paid.

So one day he approached the chief clerk, and, with some hesitation (for the clerk was an elderly rentleman who took a personal interest in him), suggested that the amount of salary might with propriety be altered. The clerk looked at him for a few nor

"Do you mean to tell me, Norm, that you want your salary changed?" he almost roared, at length.

SOMEONE'S LETTER.

"You and I have always been such good comrades, Peggy, I am going to tell ago I suffered with you something," Adams began, leaning blighted," he responded, with an attempt forward to obtain a better view of Miss Bruce's pleasant features.

"Only a little while ago, as I was so near that I grabbed it, and had read it, before I realized what I was doing. It was part of a letter in which some girl described her ideal man for her best friend's information, and—I know you will laugh—I couldn't below. oming along the beach, the wind caught recognizing myself.

"What a conceited thing to do," Peggy retorted, smiling. "Gisls write lots

"This wasn't nonsense, if you please; it rang true. I mean to find out who that girl is," he declared.
"I believe you are half in love with her already," she insisted mischievously.
"Perhaps I am," Adams admitted, called." nonsense.

"Oh. Mr. Adams," they heard in affected tones, as Violet Sincell hurried to where they were seated on a ledge of rocks near the sea. "I hope I haven't kept you waiting long."

"That's all right," said Adams, rising. "We're going sailing, Peggy.
Won't you come along?"
"No thank you Lhong remains." "No, thank you, I hope you will have a pleasant time." She waved her hand in farewell, and returened to the Bruce cottage, at which she and her father were entertaining a small party composed of Emory Adams, a young lawyer whom she had known from babyhood, and his mother, besides her two friends, Violet

Sincell and Bernice Shaw.

Sea and sky were a soft, cool gray, the light changing from moment to moment. By the time Violet and Adams returned from their afternoon's outing an impalpable curtain shut off the ocean from view, rain began to fall, and the waves dashed thunderously against the rocks. A constraint seemed to have arisen between Violet and Adams, and, after dinner. Miss Sincell, pleading fatigue, went to her room. The remainder of the party were engaged in a game of bridge, with the exception of Peggy and Adams Miss Bruce, who Adams thought looked very well in a soft, white gown, seated herself at the piano and began the Brahms Wiegenlied, while he leaned against the instrument, listening to her playing. Suddenly she raised her brown eyes from the keyboard to his face, its strong features framed in smooth lustrous hair. "You look worried, Emory?" she observed. "Did you and Vi have a quarrel this afternoon?"

"Oh, bless you, no," he hastened to y. "She was frightened at the fog. say. "She was frightened at the fog, and once she clutched me around the neck and nearly upset the boat. "Now that is too bad," Peggy told him. "Vi has take a great fancy to you. She speaks of you and Boston in the same tone she uses when referring to heaven and the angels."

The consternation expressed on Adams' face at information sent Peggy into a gale of laughter. "Don't look like that," she gasped: "I don't believe her infatuation is serious-you needn't feel obliged to propose." Adams came nearer to Peggy's side. "Miss Shaw is hardly the kind of a girl who would disclose her feelings easily, it seems to me" he confided, in a lowered tone. "I like her; she has a strong, fine personality. But—"

"Are you determined to run that poor girl, who wrote a silly letter, to earth?" Peggy interrupted. "Take my advice,

He visited one or two shops to make a few purchases on his own account. Then, as considerable time remained, he went to the library, where, in the reading room, his eyes fell at once upon Bernice Shaw.

"Not they!"

As he lounged on the beach behind a summer hotel he pondered deeply over the mystery of the authorship of that confession. Perhaps Miss Shaw's embarrassment was caused by her con-sciousness that the letter was in his possession. Certainly he was in a pre-dicament, for he was obliged to own that he did not feel either one of the two girls would satisfy him in a wifely "You once."
"Indeed?" the summer girl replied coldly, "you have quite a memory for

"Really!" Adams replied, absently.
"He is a good fellow; I know him well."

"Don't be so glum," Peggy answered after a little, when significant silences were punctured by remarks on the weather and the scenery. "If you are still worrying about Vi, I will tell you that I saw that new boarder we met at the Ocean View going out with his camera shortly before she decided not to join us."

Then her young affections are not into his throat.

"Peggy!" His voice rang out, stern, imperious, as he rushed forward and, seizing her arm, jerked her violently out of the dangerous position she was in.
There was a dull roar, and a granite ledge was riven apart. A block fell pre-cisely where she had stood. The color died out of Peggy's face.
Adams drew her hand within his arm.
"Steady, dear Peg," he said tenderly.
"Forgive my roughness. I hope I didn't hurt you."

"It didn't matter. I—I don't know how to thank you," she stammered.

In the twilight they walked home together, both sobered by the danger Peggy had escaped; Adams quite as much by the new knowledge of his own heart. "Little girl," he said abruptly. "I didn't know how much you meant to me until I thought I was going to lose you I've fallen in and—out of—love any number of times, as you know; but am done with trifling. Some New Sleeves.

The sleeve is a very important feature of a costume. It has more effect on the general style of a dress than any one other part of it. Sometimes an old dress may be made to look gain a fine quite fresh and up to date by some slight change in the sleeves alone.

Dressmakers are always looking for novelties in the sleeve line, and here are three of the very latest new and pretty models.

The first one is a sleeve of fine into the oddly shaped cuff by fine handmade tucks. The cuff is embroidered and trimmed at the edge with a fine valenciennes insertion. At the elbow a lace edged ruffle is buttonholed on. The ruffle is finely knife plaited.

Though the short sleeve is to be worn a great deal during the summer, tendency to be just a little more above the elbow than at the shoulder.

This cuff is embroidered on to the hand tucked puff, and the lower part of the cuff is trimmed with fine tucks going around.

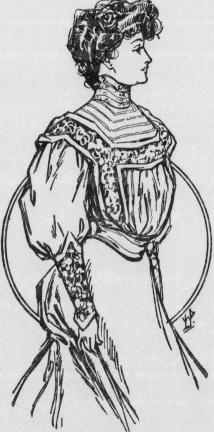

Fine wash net is quite fashionable for summer waists. This sleeve has an any other war in which the United States may elaborately embroidered cuff with a full puff of the net gathered into it. The embroidery on net is done with mercerized linen thread and is most effective.

To Anchor the Hat.

They complain that no be given by due and proper publication. matter how many pins they use the hat will slip to one side or over the face. any way but the way it should go, and though they start out on a shopping tour or to make visits with every angle right and every ribbon bow or quill or flower in the position it ought to occupy, they are horrified a little later to find that they present a ludicrous and ridiculous appearance on account of a queer tilt their hat has assumed and of with the provisions of the act of Congress of which they have been wholly unaware June 3, 1878, entitled "An act for the sale of until suddenly brought face to face timber lands in the states of California, Orewith their mirrored reflection. This is gon, Nevada, and Washington Territory," as no uncommon experience of the gentler extended to all the public land states by act of gladly forego. There is a way to keep the hat straight on the head or anchored at the proper angle with a single hatpin. That is by thrusting the north, range No. 20 west, and will offer proof to pin in from the middle of the back to show that the land sought is more valuable for is put in securely it will prevent any tilting of the hat and will keep it from before the Clerk of the Circuit Court of Delta sliding in any direction. To make it doubly secure, however, in case of sudden gusts of wind or jostling in a crowd, it is wise to fortify the hat with a second pin stuck through from one side to the other. When fastened on in this manner it is absolutely impossible for a hat to get awry.

A Lingerie Waist.

The arrangement of the wide embroidery bands on the lingerie waist, here illustrated, is pleasing. It simulates the bretelles, which have been favorites during the winter and spring.

The deep cuffs match the rest, and, somewhat unusual, on an embroidery trimmed blouse is the lace yoke, made of rows of valenciennes. The material of the waist itself is fine handkerchief

Smart Bathing Suits.

Many of the smartest of the bathing suits are made without the wide flapping white collar. The neck is finished with a pointed front, and there is a Windsor tie knotted and drawn through a gold buckle or ring. Other necks are finished double breasted and piped with a contrasting color, and some of these are very smart indeed.
