NATION SHOCKED BY NEWS.

Deceased Had Long Been a Sufferer from an Insidious Intestinal Trouble.

INCIDENTS OF HIS LAST HOURS.

PRINCETON, N. J., June 24.-Grover Cleveland, former President of the United States, died suddenly at his home at Westland here at 8:40 o'clock this morning. Death was due to heart failure complicated with other diseases. The passing away of Mr. Cleveland was not immediately announced but was delayed until an official statement had been prepared by the physicians who had been attending him in the various periods of his illness.

The statement is as follows: "Mr. Cleveland for many years had suffered from repeated attacks of gastro-intestinal origin. Also he had long standing organic disease of the heart and kidneys. Heart failure complicated with pulmonary thrombosis and oedema were the immediate cause of his death."

When asked for further details concerning Mr. Cleveland's death, Dr. Bryant said: "The heart failure which occasioned death was induced within the door and then entered the house.

Mrs. Cleveland was at home when her distinguished husband passed away. The children are at the Cleveland summer home at Tamworth, N. H., in charge of Mrs. Perrine, Mrs. Cleveland's mother.

While Mrs. Cleveland did not wish to alarm her friends last night by telling them that her husband was again quite ill, and in fact, as-sured them that he was doing well, it became known today that he took a slight turn for the worse during the afternoon. There was nothing alarming in his condition, it was thought by the physicians, and the former President passed a fairly night notwithstanding the oppres

ATTORNEY FOR OHIO ASSOCIATION DECLARES ORGANIZATION IS NECESSARY.

NOT ALL SALOONS ARE BAD.

He Says the Vision of the Leaguer Is No Larger Than Keyhole.

MUST WEED OUT ALL THE DIVES.

NIAGARA FALLS, N. Y., June 24.-That the American public is at fault for the condition of some saloons was the point made by A. J. Frieberg, attorney for the Ohio Wine and Spirit association at the convention of the National Wholesale Liquor Dealers' association this morning. He said in part:

"The American drinking place, its manners and customs are determined largely by the people who frequent it. I do not mean by this to condemn the whole American public, but simply point out that the few saloons which are the subject of criticism-and proper criticism—on the part of society, are those saloons which cater to a class of society who demand that kind of thing in some form or other.

Prohib's Vision Small.

"But the unfortunate part about it is that your Anti-Saloon leaguer finds the bad saloon ready to his hand from which to draw the illogical conclusion that all places where liquor is sold are bad. The vision of the Prohibition fanatic is no larger than a key-hole, and when he makes use of an unfair syllogism, he does not know that he is doing an injustice.
"It therefore behooves the distillers and brewers of this country to gird up their loins and give as much publicity to their side of the question as the Anti-Saloon league has succeeded in doing by the aid of the yellow magazines of the country. Conditions differ in every state, but even if they did not, it is simply a physical impossibility for a national association without help to cope with this stupendous

Weed Out Bad Places.

"The Anti-Saloon league has district organizations and these are the ones that do the effective work. Therefore the liquor dealers hould have their local organizations, not merely to educate the public and have it know the real truth, but also to apply the surgeon's knife to their business in such a way that the skeptical public is convinced beyond per-adventure of their sincerity in weeding out the objectionable features which we all know sometimes accompany the sale of liquor.

Illinois Man Speaks. William E. Hull of the Illinois State association was another speaker. He said in part: There never has been in the history of the state a political campaign fought more viciously than the one that was fought April 7, 1908. The local option law in the state of Illinois is an unjust

"That in union there is strength we have illustrated in the state of Illinois by bringing an organization together composed of the distillers, wholesale liquor dealers, brewers and manufacturers, and there is nothing but harmony ex-sting in this organization. "I believe at the present time that we have eliminated from the minds of a great many in the state of Illinois the prejudice that existed against our bust-

The Lonely Ones. In speaking of a recent suicide, a thoughtful observer, who had known the unfortunate man, remarked impressively: "I believe loneliness was at the bottom it. I believe loneliness is at the root of a very large part of the unhappiness in this world. I believe this because conversely there is no doubt that congenial companionship is the source of a very large part—probably most—of the happiness in this world."

This view seems right and reasonable. One source of our respect for the pioneer is that he is willing to go off into the wilderness, away from friends and companions. Everybody knows how "queer and crabbed most of those become wh live by themselves. The soul turned inward constantly—shut away from the calls of human sympathy—long unresponsive to the moods and tenses of its fellows-becomes warped, unnatural-ofter ripe for "treason, stratagems and spoils."

Those who have worked much among the young men who are constantly pour ing into our city from all over our land have been painfully impressed with their loneliness. Think of the thousands of such young men, living in hall bedrooms, or in lodging house dormitories, with no place in which to spend an evening, and no one to speak to except their chance acquaintances There are Christian associations and boys and men's clubs, but timidity, or distate or other reasons keep many from resorting to them. Some of these young men have confided to their friends that their loneliness amounts to actual tor-ture. It literally "drives them to drink" —and to all sorts of vice. Some of Dau-det's novels picture the ways in which some of the poor and friendless young men and women of Paris walk, because of this loneliness. There are m in our own "Christian" land. There are many such

Even if there is society at hand for the strange boy or girl-or older emi-grant-it may be so uncongenial as to be almost worse than none. A refined and gentle soul, placed among the coarse and sordid. must suffer unspeakable pangs. He must feel a loneliness of heart to which that of the body is as moonlight unto sunlight. It is the loneliness which death brings about which graves the deepest marks upon our faces and our souls. To lose the loving companion—wife, husband, mother, father, sister, brother—to whom your every word and thought was interesting, who wanted to know every aetail of your busy day, and told you hers or his—ah! this is the loneliness which strips off all the glamour from life. But it is through this awful scourge of loneliness that the higher spiritual forces make their appeal. Driven al-most to despair by its longing for that loving and intimate companionship which the world no longer furnishes, the port among the bereaved and lonely. But as education and common sense increase, it would seem as though the really strong and pure religious must be more and more utilized to meet this terrible need of the world—its inevitable and omnipresent loneliness. The wise tell us that it is in order to make us flee to powers that are higher than we that the great crises of life must be met by each human soul alone. "Alone man alone he dies, alone he goes up to judgment.

This view holds in other than religious matters. Nothing is achieved in the realm of art without loneliness. The man must shut himself often away from all companionship if he would accom-plish any great thing in literature or inpainting or sculpture. It seems as though no one could enter into the austere corridors of truly high art unless he goes alone. There, as everywhere, the loneliness means sorrow—that sorrow which is the nurse of pobility.

But, among the rank and file of mankind, let us remember that social loneliness presses and degenerates. judgments and in our charities, do we take enough account of this common source of misery and crime?—By Kate Upson Clark in Exchange.

-0-10-Should Cousins Marry?

A correspondent asks this question. Biology answers, No. The facts of heredity are against the intermarriage of cousins. It is possible for cousins to marry without any unhappy results, but the risk is too great to be disregarded. the risk is too great to be disregarded. The facts are simply these:

No human being is perfect. Every one is born with weaknesses and deficiencies of some sort. In members of the same family these defects are likely to be identical in character, and consequently the intermarriage of such persons will have an inevitable tendency to empha-size and increase the defects. The proof of this is found in the fact that serious defects, physical, mental, and moral, are found to be much more usual among the children of those in whom close blood relationship exists than among the chil-dren of those in whom there is no such relationship. Cousins who are descended from a common ancestor through their fathers, when both "take after" their fathers, are similar in temperament and general physical and mental develop-ment. The children of such parents are more likely to show defects than ordinary children. On the other hand, when cousins marry, one of whom "takes after" the common ancestor while the other shows decidedly the characteristics of the other line of ancestors, the danger of evil results will be far less. Stockmen understood perfectly well the evils of close breeding, and carefully guard against it. Human beings should give more attention to the principles recognized by stock breeders.

-0:0-A Bridal Shower That Is Original.

A new and charming method of showering simple but very useful gifts upon a prospective bride was discovered by a club of fourteen bright girls, when the first of their number announced to them a short time ago her approaching

While in this case a linen shower was decided on by the participants the idea is equally applicable to a presentation of kitchen furnishings or any one of the useful selections where small articles are

To prepare for it the young women fashioned of heavy wire a hoop so large that the entire fourteen could encircle it without crowding one another. The wire was padded all around with cotton batting and then covered neatly with broad white tape, which was wound tightly over and under, the ends only being tacked down where these came to-

After aturn or two the dancers halted and the bride was asked to remove one of the gifts from the circle. As she did so, the girl who had given the present recited an original verse appropriate to the object in hand.

No great amount of poetic talent was required for the verses, the fun being more in their timeliness and the promptified with which they were recited ear.

Childhood and maidenhood have also continued to change the daily routine. In many homes where daughters do the many homes where daughters do the work is changed to keep one from continued work of one kind.—Woman's National Magazine.

-0-:-0-Women Immigrants.

Influences are also at work that are changing the moral fiber of the immigrants. Formerly they came for some strong religious, or economic reason. They meant to win their way by hard work. They had to suffer many privations in orde rto come, and they came to stay-to make this their home, and not to earn as much money as possible and then go back and live in ease. Strong characters equal to these privations came and they made equally good citizens. Now the desire to emigrate is artifically stimulated. Stimulating emigration is more successful in such countries as Russia and Hungary. In Ireland and Sweden there are anti-emigration societies which prevent many young girls from coming to America, and these countries. including Germany, have a knowledge of the lack of protection given young women in our cities, and prevent many from coming.—Frances A. Kellor in At lantic.

Concerning Polished Floors. Hardwood floors of either pine, maple, birch, or oak should never be varnished. Therein lies the pitfall which the landlord, seeking for cheap and speedy results, prepares for our feet, since the black corners and white spots are sure to come in time even with the best of floors the process is comparatively simple. We are advised by the best authorities to provide against future grease spots by applying first two coats mixture containing equal parts of linseed oil and turpentine, combined with a japan drier. The drier must not omitted or the oil will combine with the wax, and the results will be anything but satisfactory. After allowing this which the world no longer furnishes, the noble soul reaches out into the dim spaces of the spirit. Religion offers the surest solace. There are "fake" religions, and they find their strongest supmore even if this is done, but to avoid making the floors excessively slippery it is sometimes omitted. Some woods do not need it. When the floor is thoroughly dry it is ready for the paste of wax and turpentine, which may be applied burns, or grease pops around from bakwith a cloth in an even coat, not too thick, and allowed to dry overnight. -0-10-Home Is What We Make It.

A man may own a handsome and well furnished residence and yet may not pos-sess a home—that is, a home in its best and purest sense, where domestic felicity eigns supreme; for only amid such surreight supreme; for only amid such surroundings can we find the happy home.

So understood, there is not sweeter word in the language than "home," and one has well said, "Few words lie nearer the heart than that word 'home." To the neart than that word dome. To those of us who were trained in good homes, how deep, how heartfeit is the pity we feel for those who were deprived of that moral and social stimulus that is "Where is your home?" a little boy was asked by an acquaintance.

"Where mother is," the little fellow replied, as he looked lovingly across at her. The little boy's philosophy would be en orsed by many of maturer age. Un doubtedly the mother of a family, the mistress of the house, has much to do with the "tone" or quality of home-life. The author of "The Chronicles of the neenberg-Cotta Family," says: "Of our nother I cannot think of anything to say. She is just the mother—our own dear, patient, loving little mother; unlike everyone else in the world, and yet it seems as one else in the world, and yet it seems as if there was nothing to say about her by which one could make anyone understand what she is." In other words, the "dear, patient, loving little mothers" are weetly indescribable, their fragrant lives eing often compressed into that single ret significant sentence, "She makes

Childhood and maidenhood have always an attractive beauty of their own. Go where you will, in strange and half-barbaric lands, you find the touch of grace and freedom that charms you in

"Little Indian, Sioux or Crow, Little frosty Eskimo Little Turk or Japanese."

But with maturity you look for some-thing more; and how many are the countries in which you find something less—a womanhood from which the charm of wild youth had vanished without a com-pensation. These are the countries in which a false social order, an imperfect and partial religious rule, a low national aspiration, a split sense of humanity, has blocked or bewildered the upward path for half the race.

To discover that path and keep it clear and open, so that the feet of the young maids may walk in it with joy, is one of the vital problems of civilization. It is not woman's problem only, but man's also, and in some ways it presses upon him more closely than upon her. For as the arrangement of the world's laws still lie, for the most part, in his hands, so it rests with him to remove the hin-drances and obstacles, false standards of propriety, and ill conditions of life, that woman may have liberty and incentive to rise to her full development. Never yet was a fine womanhood unfolded in a country where the dream and the desire of her fulfillment were not cherished in the heart of man.—Harper's Bazar.

-040-The Care of Gas Stoves.

If the asbestos of stoves or fireplaces becomes discolored or blackened from the gas smoking, as it frequently does, says What to Eat, the thing to do is to sprinkle the feathery fiber with common table salt, then light the gas and let it burn the same as usual. The sooty appearance of the asbestos departs like magic and the mineral soon resumes its natural whiteness again. It happens, too, that the tiny apertures through which the gas flows become gummed and partially filled in; when such is the case, run a hat pin through the holes, or a round toothyink and it will readily free. round toothpick, and it will readily free

It is important also to give particular to come in time even with the best of care. Waxing is the only proper method if we may start afresh, and with new especially true where it is in constant service for cooking. Things inclined to boil over quickly, like milk or coffee, should be watched to prevent it happening, as they clog the burners and corrode the iron and zinc linings, causing them to rust and get a stained, unsightly appearance. About once or twice a week according to the use of the range, the burners should be lifted out, turned upside down, and lightly tapped to knock out any dust or soot that might have lodged in the circular aperture that supplies the flame. A hat pin is good for picking out any particles that resist tapping. When not using, keep the lids on the stove.

Keep clean by rubbing with a dry cloth, particularly the oven floor and racks. When anything flows over and other coat is put on the next morning and allowed in its turn to dry, when the

HOW OTHERS SEE HIM. Beethoven, Cross Old Bear; How He Once Snubbed a Count.

A hitherto unpublished journal of Louis Cramolini, who died in 1884 at Darmstadt, where he had been tenor and afterward manager of the Court theater, gives a pathetic picture of Beethoven's last days, observes a writer in the Boston Transcript. When Louis was a child his mother had taken him three successive summers during his vacations to Bruhl, near Vienna; they were lodged with friends, the Lederers, in the very house in which Beethoven lived. There was not much intercourse with the solitary man, deaf and savage in his ways. However, he willingly exchanged a few words with Mme. Cramolini, who spoke slowly and pronounced very distinctly; and he showed some kindness to the child when he learned that its name was Louis, like his own. The mother made Louis, like his own. The mother made-bold to tell him that her son, having a fine soprano voice, wished to be a musi-cian. "Not for the world," exclaimed Beethoven. "Let him be a painter like his father; then he can live by his art; while music would make him die of hunger. The musician went often to the chateau of Prince Lichtenstein, and took with him the young Cramolini, but the promenaders seldom spoke. One day that the child had asked his companion the name of a pretty butterfly he had caught, Beethoven had answered, "Let me alone, little murderer," and the young Louis had understood that he was not to be troubled in his reveries. Again, when the musician forgot on the grass the memorandum book in which he scratched his notes-and that hap-Many a man repents at leisure who pened often-young Cramolini waited to return it to him until he had reached It would have made a precious collection of autographs, but he was honest, and he did not suspect that this deaf man was a master. The first time the composer, to show his gratitude, offered him money the boy refused it. Then Beethoven, giving him a hug, exclaimed: "Proud little thing, I love you for your independence. All the Louis are like that." A certain Count Montecuccoli suddenly appeared at the Lederer house, a great amateur of music and an oboe player. He wished, at all hazards, to see Beethoven, who kept his door shut. The count, in spite of the servant, made his way into the garden, where he found the artist, and began to explain to him that he had written a passage impossible for the oboe. "Monsieur le Comte," said Beethoven, furious, "any beginner will show you how to play that; besides, I have no time to talk to you," and turned him out. When Mme. Cramolini showed her surprise at seeing a grand seigneur treated in this fashion: "Have I really been so rude to the fool?" said Beethoven. "All the better. Now he will leave me alone." And the good woman, still scandalized, said to her son: "He will always be a bear. You cannot blame him. It comes of

THE REAL COWBOY.

No Longer an Animated Battery, but Bronco Buster Still.

It is quite true that the cowboy of to day is not a college man, nor one at all familiar with the manners and customs of polite society. Neither does he go about his daily task with a brace of sixshooters slung at his hips and a repeat-

Barbed wire fences, steam railroads, police courts and penitentiaries have rendered such appurtenances superfluous. And immediately after pay day he does not swoop down upon the nearest town, shoot out the light and take part in a gun fight or two.

For the $30 or $40 a month which he receives a strict attention to the duties of his job is expected, and in these days of strenuous competition a job is a pre-carious thing. The life of the modern cowboy is as full of hard and monotonous work as that of an eastern farm-hand, and there is very little difference in the intellectual and social standing of the two.

Though thousands of cattle are grazed on the plains of the southwest, very icw are shipped direct from the range to the market. The places of individual cattle kings have been taken by great stock companies which own numerous tracts of range land in various parts of the

A few years ago a dry season in southern Arizona meant the death of many cattle and very frequently the financial ruin of their owners. The oldtimers still tell stories of having walked for incredable distances on the carcasses of dead steers.

But all that is past; they do things differently now. Let a dry year come upon the southwestern ranges and the cattle are hustled on board a train and transported to the cattle companies' ranges in Colorado or Montana or Dakota, where the season is good and the feed abundant.

No long drives of hundreds of miles in search of new range, as in the old days. Simply a day or two of rounding up, then a few hours' drive to the nearest shipping point on the railroad. Then perhaps a day in town for the cowboys and back again to the home ranch and

Though the cowboy is not a college graduate he is by no means an ignoramus. Usually he is American born and fairly well read, taking the same active interest in current topics and politics that other American citizens do. As a general rule he has been reared in the section in which he is employed and is of youthful appearance. He differs very little from the average American working youth, western dialect stories to the contrary notwithstanding.

In all cowboy bunkhouses there is a pile of current magazines, the contents of which are devoured with avidity. And one is not infrequently treated to the amusing spectacle of a youthful cowboy becoming so enamored of the kind of punchers pictured in modern fiction that he purchases a pair of utterly useless six-shooters, commences to walk with a swagger and to imitate the dialect of Red Saunders. But if marksmanship is no longer a manship is. The modern cattleman is as proud of his ability to ride anything on four legs as was ever the bronco buster of bygone days, and this is the fact impressed upon a tenderfoot .-

RECENT STREET CAR DECISIONS.

One who in good faith, and for the purpose of taking passage, signals an approaching electric car in the manner prescribed by the carrier, the motorman responding to that signal by sounding the whistle or setting the brakes, is held in Karr vs. Milwaukee Heat, Light & Traction Co. Camphor to Break Up a Cold. One of the most efficient remedies for breaking up a cold during its earliest stage is camphor. When the eyes begin to water and there is the accompanying tingling of the nose and feeling of chilliness, place three drops of camphor on a lump of loaf sugar and place the sugar in the mouth.

Repeat this every fifteen minutes till four or five doses have been taken. At the same time place the feet where they will become thoroughly warm. This will usually prove effectual in breaking up a cold if the cold is taken at the very beginning. For a child but one drop should be placed upon the sugar, and five or six doses administered.—Health.

Nothing in all the realm of political economy is more extraordinary and in Its way more perplexing to the theor-Ists than what we call the perodicity of commercial panies. The fact of that periodicity is quite incontestable. A hotel has been built at Addis Abehimself presided at a banquet given to the diplomatic body, sitting for the first time as a European at a European meal. This is perhaps one of the most astonishing things in an astonishing world and shows how things of Magdala went up to the town from which he took his title just forty years ago. Not so very long ago we used morning to Manistique after a month's to hear of the banquets which the Abyssinians made of raw flesh, and Miss Margaret Anderson returned there was a woodcut in an old book which represented the chiefs sitting around a cow and carving steaks on the placid animal, which apparently The copper country butchers will walked about from table to table for Hickory Wood. "No wood will be more difficult to replace when the approaching shortage in the supply of hardwoods overtakes us than the hickory," one of the foresters in the employ of the government Thirty of the Escanaba naval reserve recently said. Peculiar interest is given to the situation by the fact that hickory is distinctively an American genus. It occurs only in the eastern part of the United States, and large quantities of hickory handles, spokes, wheels and other parts of vehicles and Lots owned by C. A Grand Evening.

The old Scotch keeper of the Carlyle House on the Chelsea embankment still rehearses punctiliously the story of Tennyson's visit to the sage: "In this room it was, sir, that Mr. Carlyle and Mr. Tennyson spent a long evening, each smokin' his pipe and neither of them speakin' a word. And after three hours, when Mr. Tennyson rose to go, Mr. Carlyle said to him, 'It's a grand evenin' we've spent, Alfred, a grand evenin'.' And Mr. Tennyson, he just said, too, 'A grand evenin',' and went out."

The Mexican Sombrero.

In various Mexican states the sombrero, that picturesque adjunct of the Mexican, is to be placed under a heavy tax, in hope, it is said, to abolish it entirely. It is said that this hat, often six feet wide from brim to brim, often costs so much that the average workingman spends a year's wages for it. The tax takes the form of a license, with a number affixed, and there will be thus induced an aristocracy of the peon who wears the sombrero as compared with the peon who gives it up .-Argonaut.

Even Slight Catarrhal Derangements of the Stomach Produce Acid Fermentation of the Food. It's Stomach Catarrh

Some people are thin and always remain thin, from temperamental reasons. Probably in such cases nothing can be done to change this personal peculiarity.

But there are a large number of people who get thin, or remain thin, who naturally would be plump and fleshy but for some digestive derangement.

Thin people lack in adipose tissue. Adipose tissue is chiefly composed of fat.

Fat is derived from the oily constitnents of food.

The fat-making foods are called by the physiologist, hydrocarbons. This class of foods are not digested in the stomach at all. They are digested in the duodenum, the division of the alimentary canal just below the stomach.

The digestion of fat is mainly, if not wholly, the work of the pancreatic juice. This juice is of alkaline reaction, and is rendered inert by the addition of acid. A hyperacidity of the digestive fluids of the stomach passing down into the duodenum, destroys the pancreatic fluid for digestive purposes. Therefore, the fats are not digested or emulsified, and the system is deprived of its due proportion of oily constituents. Hence, the patient grows

The beginning of the trouble is a catarrhal condition of the stomach which causes hyperacidity of the gastric juices. This hyperacidity is caused by fermentation of food in the stomach. When the food is taken into the stomach, if the process of digestion does not begin immediately, acid fermentation will take place. This creates a hyperacidity of the stomach juices which in their turn prevent the pancreatic digestion of the oils, and the emactation results.

A dose of Peruna before each meal hastens the stomach digestion. By hurrying digestion, Peruna prevents fermentation of the contents of the stomach, and the pancreatic juice is thus preserved in its normal state. It then only remains for the patient to eat a sufficient amount of fat-forming foods, and the thinness disappears and plumpness takes its place.

tional committee. Senator Burrows was warmly received as he stepped to the front of the platform extension arranged for the use of the speakers. He bowed his acknowledgments and began his "keynote" address at 12:34 p. m.

Senator Burrows covered the last half of his address in much less time than he did the first, and at times his voice could not be heard two feet away.

After the address was concluded, the convention began perfecting the temporary organization by calling delegations to name the members of the various committees.

The convention adjourned shortly after 2 o'clock until 12 o'clock noon

SECOND DAY.

CHICAGO, Ill., June 17 .- A demonstration for President Roosevelt, lasting forty-five minutes, fairly swept the Republican national convention off its feet this afternoon.

This uproar was all caused by the mention of the President's name in the address of the permanent chairman. Sepator Lodge, and despite his appeals to the delegates for quiet and the attempt of the band to still the crowd, the pan-demonium continued unabated.

Then someone threw a large Teddy bear among the press seats and the scene became wild in its enthusiasm. The bear was tossed about among the delegates, causing increase ardor to the cries. Senator Lodge made several attempts to continue his speech, but at every effort the cheering would break out and he finally gave up the idea.

The cry so familiar in the Cleveland-Harrison campaign of "four, four, four years more" broke out in the gallery and accompanied as it was by a stamping of feet in unison with the chanted words, produced a terrific uproar. The Texas men caught it up on the floor and it was roared back and forth between them and the Colorado delegates.

When Senator Lodge said that anyone who attempted to use the President's name as a candidate was no friend to the President, the cheering again broke out. But the seriousness of the statements being made brought the hall to quietness. The convention today was called to order at 12:20 by Temporary Chairman Burrows. The opening prayer was said by Rev. William O. Waters of Chicago and the report of the committee on cre-dentials was then called for.

The committee report simply seats all the present delegates, except adding six Before the committee reported, there was a parade of the different marching clubs through the Coliseum.

There were two other candidates, Gov. Curtis Guild of Massachusetts and Erzenklin Mumber formers.

Chairman Burrows interrupted the regular order of business long enough to introduce to the convention Henry Baker of Minnesota, and James D. Con. nor of Indiana, two gray-bearded vet-erans of the party who were delegates to the first Republican convention in

The committee was slow in assembling and it was nearly 12:30 o'clock before sufficient members had arrived to begin work. Over two hundred persons, mostly delegates, crowded the assembly room, caucusing in small groups and dis-cussing the result of the convention and the probable action of the meeting of the national committee.

King Edward as a Farmer.

The rich crop of prizes which the king's cattle and sheep have won at the Bingley Hall show, Birmingham, is the latest demonstration of his majesty's success as a farmer, of which he is so deservedly proud. When the king began breeding nearly forty years ago the Sandringham farm lands were in an al most hopeless condition, barren and barely capable of cultivation. Today, according to Rider Haggard, "it is a wonderful farm, for nowhere is so much high-bred stock to be seen on the same area." But probably nowhere will you find such an array of plates and cups won at shows as that which Sandring ham boasts. At a single exhibition his majesty once won no fewer than four-teen first prizes. In 1903 he captured five first prizes and cups, in addition to numerous seconds and thirds; in 1904 his prizes numbered twenty, in 1905 he won a champion plate, a challenge cup and eighteen other prizes, including four firsts, while last year he took at the Smithfield show ten firsts, nine "breed" cups and plates, six other prizes and several "highly commendeds," and every prize winner he has bred himself.—Westminster Gazette.

Height of Land, Depth of Sea. The mean height of all the land now above the sea is referred to by Lyell as being 1000 feet. The mean depth of the ocean is at least 12,000 feet, that is, it exceeds the height of the land twelve times. This is because the extreme heights of the land, although probably no less than the extreme depths of the sea, yet are exceptional heights, while the ocean meintains its dapth over enormous areas. Owing to the fact that the surface of the ocean to that of the land is as two and a half to one, the ocean would accommodate the whole of land thirty times over were it all pitched into the ocean areas.—Knowledge and Scientific News

Grape-Nuts a Perfectly Balanced

No chemist's analysis of Grape-Nuts can begin to show the real value of the food—the practical value as shown by personal experience.

It is a food that is perfectly balanced, supplies the needed elements of brain and nerves in all stages of life from the infant, through the strenuous times of active middle life, and is a comfort and support in old age.

The cabochon cutting has a rounded front and a flat back. This is the form for turquoises, catseyes, opals and other opaque stones, but it is sometimes used also for the transparent gems. A carry of the cutting has a rounded gers of half a dozen or more counters, not to mention the perforators and the rest.

Why Always a Black Bound Bible? supplies the needed elements of brain and support in old age.

"For two years I have used Grape-Nuts with milk and a little cream, for breakfast. I am comfortably hungry for my dinner at noon.

"I use little meat, plenty of vegetables and fruit, in season, for the noon meal, and if tired at tea time, take Grape-Nuts alone and feel perfectly nourished.

Know Little of Cutting.

He declared that most persons do not really know one style of cutting from another. They have a vague idea that rose diamonds are thin, but that's about as far as their technical knowledge goes

The brilliant is the finest form of cut-

The front or top of a brilliant consists of an eight-sided facet, called the table, which is surrounded by thirty-two smaller facets. or pavilion. The pavilion has twenty-four facets terminating in a small flat facet called the culet. This makes fifty-eight facets, counting the table and the culet. Sometimes there are added eight extra facets around the culet.

Of late years it has been discovered that a stone should be cut with a good deal of what is termed spread. It used to be thought that a stone should have one-third above the girdle and two-thirds below. Now the best are cut with less than a third above and the change makes for greater brilliancy.

Oriental Means High Quality. Two of the most common expressions in the trade are interesting in the light they throw on the history of precious stones. The word oriental has come to be applied to all gems of the finest qual ity, no matter where they come from. Less frequently the word occidental is used to designate inferior stones.

This is due of course to the fact that for centuries the supply of precious stones came from the east, and also to the fact that even when new mines were later discovered in western countries the ems were at first thought to be inferior

In some cases they really were. Sometimes the word oriental is used in another way. For instance, the oriental topaz, the oriental emerald and the oriental amethyst are in reality all sap-

Biahop's Tale About Nurses.

"The late Bishop Fitzgerald," said a St. Louis man, "once presided at the graduation exercises of a class of nurses. He told the young women a story that

"But it was whispered that these fair nurses were inclined to a little frivolity. inclined a little to flirt with the ailing young soldiers in their charge.

"Now, when a soldier felt that he was on the mend a flirtation with a pretty nurse was delightful, but when his wounds were troublesome, then gallantry was a thing that he was hardly up to.

A Competent Witness.

Justice Maule is regarded as the leading judicial wit in England. He had doubts as to the credibility of a witness on one occasion, and the man declared that he had been "wedded to the truth" from infancy, says the London Tatler.
"That may be," said Judge Maule,

"but the question is, how long have you been divorced?" A little girl was a witness before him, and he proceeded to ascertain whether she knew the nature of an oath. The child, in answer to questions, said she would go to heaven if she told the truth, but would go to the other place if she told lies.

"Are you sure of that, my dear?" Justice Maule asked.

"Yes, sir; quite sure."

The Best Man

By EMELINE BARR.

Copyright, 1908, by Associated Literary Press.

For the first time in his life John Amidon found himself in New York. It was a warm spring day-much too warm and too glorious to spend in visiting a round of stuffy offices. He would make a holiday of it and let business wait until tomorrow.

An inspiration seized him, and after Dick. Are you a Harvard man?" some search through the various compartments of his leather wallet he drew out a dingy visiting card.

"H'm," he mused. "That's funny. I was sure I had his address. 'Richard Malloney,' that's all it says, though, that's sure."

He put the card back thoughtfully. "It was something about Washington," he reflected.

But the "something" had eluded him impishly. He drew a map out of his pocket and studied it carefully. With an air of triumph he at length pounced upon the words "Mount Vernon." He had it!

Should he consult a telephone directory? What was the use? It would be more fun to give Dick a surprise. Dick was just the kind of fellow to enjoy the unexpected. On the way out on the train Amidon indulged in pleasant reminiscences of college days when he and Dick had been such jolly good chums. Was it possible a whole ten years had gone since they had seen each other?

"But Dick's all right," he soliloquized. "It's a great thing to be sure of a welcome. He'll be just as glad to see me as I will"-

"Mount Vernon!" shouted the conductor, and Amidon got off hurriedly. "Can you tell me where Mr. Richard Malloney lives?" he asked the first person he happened to run into at the station. Before the person addressed had time to reply a six-year-old boy piped up:

"Is that so?" returned Amidon genially. "Well, suppose you show me then. Will you?" For answer the knowing one turned to lead the way importantly. When he came to the end of the station platform he stopped beside a shining automobile.

"Get in," he said to Amidon hospitably.

Amidon hesitated.

"Why, thank you, young man," he "You are very kind, but if you'll just be good enough to tell me where Mr. Malloney lives I'll walk there.'

sisted Amidon's personal conductor. "Mr. Richard Malloney is my father. I'm Richard Malloney, Jr., you know." In spite of his amazement Amidon was alert enough to be conscious of the chauffeur's silent chuckling. Richard Malloney, Jr., was proving a most unexpectedly sprightly pilot. It might be well before committing oneself irrevocably to his management to ask a few definite questions. So Amidon addressed the amused chauffeur.

"I arrived from town on this last train," he stated. "Can you tell me if Mr. Malloney is at home?"

"Very sorry, sir," returned the chauffeur civilly. "He's just started for town himself." "And-Mrs. Mallonev?"

"She went with him, sir." Amidon reflected a moment. "Barbara's home," volunteered Mal-loney junior. Amidon's face lighted instantly. Barbara—that was Dick's sister, of course. He remembered, but this was no time for reminiscences. "Is she, indeed?" he exclaimed jovialty. "Then I will run out." And he jumped in beside Richard.

"Let's see," he mused, hardly conscious that he spoke, "how old must Barbara be now?"

"About thirty," Richard suggested. Amidon glanced at the chauffeur. He was quite sure he was chuckling

"About thirty?" repeated Amidon. "It doesn't seem possible." "She's grown up awful fast," Richard commented. "She was only just a girl when she went away to school, but now she does her hair up and stays up evenings. I wish I was thirty."

This yearning was accompanied by a very genuine sigh, but Amidon had quite forgotten to listen to the child's prattle. His own thoughts were more absorbing.

Had he or had he not met Dick's sister? So many fellows at college had sisters! If so, what had she looked proposition which demanded an inlike? She must have been very young -and to think of Dick's being married and never letting him know-more than that, to think of there being a Richard Malloney, Jr.!

"Here we are," exclaimed the boy, "and there's Barbara on the porch. Hoo-oo!"

Barbara came to the top of the steps, looking at Amidon curiously.

As for Amidon, he was seized with a panic of misgivings. Surely, if he had ever in his life seen that girl, no matter how many years ago, he would never have forgotten her.

But he must say something, for young Richard had already climbed ago," he replied, "and I can't find it. out of the machine and announced, "Here's a man to see you, Barbara." an introduction that certainly needed man who deliberately throws away 10 8th day of July, 1908. elucidating.

To his astonishment Barbara burst out laughing, revealing two very beautiful dimples in her glowing cheeks. She recovered herself with evident ef-

"I beg your pardon, Mr. Amidon. There must be some mistake. You see, this is my only brother," she said as she lifted Richard junior off his feet and then let him down again with a young man's fancy.

"Well, it couldn't have been your father!" ventured Amidon.

At the absurdity of this suggestion Barbara and John both laughed heartily. Then Barbara had an idea.

John nodded. "Ninety-eight," he informed her.

"How stupid of me not to have thought of that at once!" Barbara accused herself. "But, you see, '98 is a pretty long time ago, and Dick has been abroad nearly ever since he left col-

It was all such a ridiculously mixed up state of affairs—the idea that Cousin Dick was married and that Richard junior was his son; that Barbara was Dick's sister-when in reality, as it turned out, Dick had no sister; that, most comical of all, Barbara was to do but to laugh and laugh about it?

A Lost Dime.

A man one day called upon the first John Jacob Astor with a business vestment of $100,000 on his part. While listening to the plan he kept groping and feeling about on the floor for something he seemed to have dropped. When the plan had been explained he said readily: "All right. I'll furnish the money." At that instant a man entered to tell him that one of his buildings had burned down. "That happens nearly every day," he said, with the utmost unconcern, and went on feeling about with great care for that something on the carpet. Finally the visitor was curious enough to inquire what he had dropped. Summer Goods

The hot wave is fairly upon us. Let us show you commodious, sanitary metal lined refrigerators; that save ice and preserve the flavor of the food. You will want one.

Isn't your grass high. Buy a good, effective lawn mower and keep your place looking neat.
