A Proxy Father-in-law

Copyright, 1908, by Associated Lit-

It was reported of the Hon. John Sharpe that he had but two fads where other schemers and speculators and owners of railroad lines had a dozen. One of his fads was the P. and G. railroad, in which he owned a controlling interest. He knew every foot of its roadbed and kept himself posted on all details.

erary Press

His other fad was that his daughter Edith, having finished her school days, should interest herself in the P. and G. even as he had. If she had been cut out for an old maid or a business woman she might have obeyed orders literally, but as it was she had to assume an interest she did not feel.

The Hon. John lived in Chicago, and his pet line was farther west. When tired of making money and fighting other lines on the Stock Exchange or by some sly coup, he would order the general superintendent or other official into Chicago to report details and plan improvements.

If it wasn't the general superintendent, then it was one off a division or a civil engineer and bridge builder. He had them at his house that his daughter might hear and secure experience. and when they had departed he would go over the matter again with her to make sure that she understood. When the civil engineer engaged in building the bridge over Centiped creek was called in he and Miss Edith met. The Hon, John was in high feather that day. He had secured a mail contract over a rival line and had been told that the bridge could be built for $25,000 less than the estimated expense. He stretched his courtesy to invite the engineer to dinner and to ask Miss Edith to play the piano afterward.

Then two or three things happened that he didn't take cognizance of, although he was rated a keen and observant man.

From that night Miss Edith began to take more interest in railroad matters, especially in the department of bridge building, and Mr. Havens, the engineer, sent in reports that seemed to necessithan before.

As punctually as the clock the Hon. John Sharpe took a trip over his line in his own private car every three months. Miss Edith had accompanied him twice before her sudden great interest had come to the surface, and her enthusiasm over the third approaching trip so pleased him that he patted her golden hair and feelingly observed:

"You are your own father's daughter, after all. You will come back better posted on the railroad business than any other girl in America."

"It must take a very brainy man to construct such a bridge as I have heard you and Mr. Havens talking about," she demurely suggested.

"It does, my dear-a very brainy man." "And one pretty certain to rise in the world?"

"Um-y-e-s." The Hon, John had risen in the world, and he took care to let the world know it. But he was rather opposed to any one else rising, especially anybody employed on the P. and G. road. "Yes, Mr. Havens may rise in his profession," he reluctantly admitted. "but you must remember the social gulf now existing between us. I or you and I are the owners of the P. and G. road. Mr. Havens is an employee."

Ten days previous to the start on the third trip the Hon. John discovered something that threw him into a fervid flutter. It was not that his daughter in her enthusiasm to learn more about railroad bridge building was writing to the engineer for further information about the cantalever principle or that he in reply was telling about the tensile strength of steel and the strain put upon it under certain conditions.

It was that a feeder to his line was about to pass into other hands unless he could secure enough proxies to prevent this at the election to be held in Denver. He took off his coat and started in, and he came home one night with beaming face to say to the daughter: "My dear girl, always remember that the first principle of railroading is to get possession of the road." "But if you can't get enough of the stock?" she asked. "Then get the proxies. Buy, borrow or beg, but get them. It is with proxies that I shall get control of the M. and W. I need only a thousand more votes, and they are in Denver waiting for me."

The Hon. John was rubbing his hands when his car left Chicago. He enjoyed coups, and he was on his way to make one. He felt just a little sympathy for the already routed enemy. Defeat would come with a dull thud, to desolate the ranks of the enemy. Outlook.

Blessed be proxies!"

At Santa Fe business detained him half a day. He had scarcely left the car when Mr. Havens made his appearance and was received with smile and a blush.

The talk between him and Miss Edith began about the bridge over the Centiped, but gradually came down to less scientific and more interesting

He referred to a hint she had given him in her last letter and assured her that he had acted on it, and he solicited her permission to ask her father a day had expired. That afternoon when the train had pulled out Miss Edith fluttered around for a bit and then timidly asked:

"Girl, you know something," he said after a long look into her face. "Well, suppose the M. and W. gang didn't get that stock?"

He gasped for breath and turned "Suppose that a gentleman interested later there was a knock on her door. "Say, young lady, you think you're smart, don't you?" said the father as she appeared. "I'm your daughter, you know."

"Um-y-e-s! Well, I've told Havens that that bridge over the Centiped has got to be finished before there is any further nonsense. After that he will be superintendent of the P. and G., and if you learn any more about the railroad business it will be from him. You are a little too apt for me."

POWER!

The City's Need .-- How Can It be Supplied?

Much interest has been aroused in the city during the last few days by the question of alterations at the pumping station and power plant. There are now two propositions before the water board from which a choice will doubtless be made. The plant, as it now stands, is loaded to its capacity, which certain momentous question before the is not enducive to good service, or economy of running.

My dear father, remember that as the size of the equipment is based, not upon average, but on emergency requirements.

Farthermore, whichever system is adopted, it will be necessary to change the wiring, arc lamps, meters, and transformers throughout the city to handle a 60-cycle alternating current; the cost of wiring will be somewhat larger for the water-power current. About four thousand dollars will be needed for this. A question then, which comes next, nice gentleman, a gentleman interested is: Can the Escanaba company furnish cient quantity, without grave danger of interruption, for a term of many years?

stream, and this summer it was found necessary to operate the steam plant in Pullman ahead. He had to come up to Escanaba, because of the lack of water. Inquiries in Escanaba disclose the fact that the current delivered in that city has not been entirely satisfactory, that the regulation was not good; and it was not thought in that city the company had any surplus of power to sell outside. The city of Escanaba holds a bond of $5000 for performance of the company's contract, which will have established the fact that the phenot, however, repay one-third of its loss in case of failure. Viewing these facts, it seems that the water board of tie up the city. It is necessary that there be a steam plant here, of about four hundred horsepower, with steam pumps and steam generators; it is necessary for economy to remodel the present system and the present distributing lines. The first cost of a good system is very little more than that of a poor one. The city can do a paying business with a steam plant. be heavy. If the city first installs a modern steam system, it will be independent; it can surely make money, and its source of power will be owned in Gladstone, by the people, not by the foreign capitalists. If any farther economy is promised by the use of water power, the city can adopt it at little extra expense. The Escanaba river will be here next year; if there is plenty of dependable power, it can be had. The city of Gladstone cannot afford to speculate with its money. It will be well to see how Escanaba fares; there may be changes in the water situation that will throw more light upon the question. Play safe.

ONE BEHIND SCHEDULE TIME.

NEW ORLEANS, La., Nov. 11.-Eleven persons are known to be dead and a score or more injured as a result of a wreck today on the New Orleans and Northeastern railroad, at Little Woods, twelve miles from New Orleans.

Between Slidell and New Orleans the tracks of the New Orleans & Northeastern railroad are used by the Great Northern railroad and it was a suburban train of this road from Covington that crashed into the rear of a local Northeastern train from Hattiesburg, Miss., telescoping the four rear coaches.

Milton Spitzfaden, Algiers, La., badly

About twelve miles from New Orleans Little Woods, a fishing and hunting camp on Lake Pontchartrain, is so surrounded by swamps that the only approach to the scene of the wreck is by way of the railroad. It was some time before the news of the catastrophe reached the city, but as soon as it was learned the relief train was hastily made up and rushed to the aid of the passen-gers and their dead and dying.

Wreck Catches Fire.

When the rescue party reached Lite Woods, the wreck had caught fire and the first efforts of the passengers and the few fishermen and hunters were directed toward subduing the flames. this they had been partly successful but little succor had been given to the badly injured and several of these died while lying about the smouldering debris. Rude bandages had been bound about their wounds in an effort to stop the flow of blood and in many instances the latter examination of the railroad surgeons showed that more than one life had been saved in this manner.

Only one physician was among the passengers of the trains, Dr. Henry Tartleton of Covington, La., who worked heroically in administering to the most seriously injured and directing the efforts of others in making the wounded as comfortable as possible under the circumstances

Cause Is Unknown.

Exactly why the catastrophe occurred is not yet known. The New Orleans and Great Northern and New Orleans and Northeastern run on the same tracks from Slidell to New Orleans. There is only a slight difference in the schedule of the arrival here of the two trains. From information obtainable, it appears that the Great Northern must have been a few minutes late, as, according to schedule, it would have preceded the Northeastern into the city by about NASHVILLE, Tenn., Nov. 11 .- Although the excitement in this city over the shooting of former United States Senator Carmack has to a certain extent abated, yet the tragedy is still the sole topic of conversation in political circles both here and throughout the state. Col. Cooper, who was with his son when the latter shot Carmack, has been remanded to jail without bond, charged with murder, while young Cooper remains at a local hospital under guard, where his wounded arm is being treated. Both Senator Carmack and the Coopers have many friends here and throughout the state. The friends of Senator Carmack strenuously claim that the killing was the result of a conspiracy, pure and simple, in which men in high authority were connected; that Mr. Carmack was waylaid and assassinated while he was on his way to his boarding house and while he was talking to a lady; that when he left The Tennesseean office for his boarding house her fact was telphoned from a house near The Tennesseean office and house page The Tennesseean office and house her fact was telphoned from a house page The Tennesseean office and house and while he was page to the fact was telphoned from a house page The Tennesseean office and house and while he was page to the fact was telphoned from a house page The Tennesseean office and house and while he was page to the fact was telphoned from a house page The Tennesseean office and house page The Tennesseean office and house page The Tennesseean office for heses daisies, 13%c. # DINNER IS DECLINED.

Labor Leaders Stand by Gompers and Will Not Accept the President's Invitation.

DENVER, Colo., Nov. 11.-Labor leaders who are here attending the convention of the American Federation, have announced that they would not be able to accept the invitation of President Roosevelt to dine with him November 17 and discuss the legislation needed by the union men. They gave as their reason the fact that the convention of the federation will not be over in time, but it was apparent that the omission of the name of President Gompers from the list of invited guests made them glad of an opportunity to get out of an embarrassing situation diplomatically.

Among those who today declared they would be unable to attend are John Mitchell, former president of the United Mine Workers; James Duncan, first vice president of the federation, and Daniel J. Keefe, president of the longshoremen's international organization. The federation has divided into the Roosevelt-dinner and the anti-Rooseveltdinner adherents. That is, the leaders who were not invited to the white house conference at once took their stand by President Gompers, while the invited guests had to flock by themselves and were looked on by the Gompers follow-ing with mild suspicion, until their declaration was made known. The Roosevelt invitation and the leaders who received invitations, were the subject of much discussion. Some leaders declare the scheme to be one of Roosevelt's to di-vide union labor into hostile camps.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Nov. 10 .- Messages from various sections testify to the ing that in future his name not be used tremendous sensation caused throughout the state and the south by the killing of former Senator Edward W. Carmack by young Robin Jones Cooper, in a street duel here late yesterday afternoon. Carmack's brilliant career as a United States senator from Tennessee had made him one of the best known of national figures. Col. Duncan B. Cooper, father of young Robin Cooper, and who was with his son when the duel occurred, has an extensive acquaintance and a legion of friends both in his own and other Carmack's race for the nomination as Democratic senator, in which he was de-feated by Senator Robert T. Taylor, and his more recent race for the governor ship in which he was defeated by Gov. Patterson, have served to draw his following in the state closer to him, and his tragic end has spread distress and bitterness among them. It is feared by some that the end of the trouble has not yet arrived and it is sure to play a part in coming political alignments.

Were Close Friends Once.

In former years the men were dear friends, Carmack having declared in public print that Cooper was his bene-factor. But friendship had been re-placed by enmity which was more noticeable since Carmack became editor of The Tennesseean, following the late pri-Then the editorial attacks began which culminated in yesterday's killing, which sent a thrill through Tennessee. With constantly increasing crowds about it and in the neighborhood the body of Mr. Carmack lay where he fell for half an hour before it was removed to an undertaking establishment. There it was prepared for burial and then removed to the home of Frank Lander, business manager of The Tennesseean.

After the shooting the Coopers repaired to the nearby office of a physician, where young Cooper's wound, which is slight, was dressed, and he and his father were placed under arrest.

It was this editorial, it is reported, which caused the younger Cooper to send his threat of death to Carmack. It failed, however, in stopping the editorials and the only notice Carmack gave it was to arm himself.

Story of Carmack's Life. Former Senator Carmack was born

near Castillan Springs, Summer county, Tenn., November 5, 1858. He had an academic education, studied law, practiced in Columbia, Tenn., and was a member of the Legislature of 1884. He was a delegate to the national Democratic convention of 1896 and a member of Congress-1897-1901-from the Tenth Congressional district of Tennessee. He served with distinction in the United States Senate for six years, being defeated for re-election in the primary a little over a year ago by former Gov. Robert Taylor.

EDWARD M. MORGAN VICTIM OF AT-TEMPTED MURDER BY LUNATIC WHO KILLS HIMSELF.

BULLETS FIRED ON BROADWAY.

Assailant Felt Grieved Because Light Was Turned Out in Postoffice When He Was Reading.

TRAGEDY CAUSES A SENSATION

NEW YORK, Nov. 9.—Postmaster Edward M. Morgan of this city was shot down in the street as he was leaving his house on West 146th street for the postoffice this morning by Eric H. B. Mackey, a stenographer employed by a down town law firm, who then shot and instantly killed himself. The single bullet which struck Mr. Morgan enter the right side of the abdomen and passed out at the left side without penetrating the walls. There was not internal bleeding and there is every likelihood that the wounded man will recover.

MICHIGAN CLAIMS BADGER LAND.

New Boundary Line Declared by Wolverine State. MARQUETTE, Mich., Nov. 7 .- By the adoption of the revised constitution at this week's election, the boundary line between Wisconsin and Michigan is so re-established as to annex some hundreds of thousands of acres now included in Badger territory and it is understood that the authorities of Lansing will at once attempt to take over the lands to which claim is laid.

Section 1 of article 1 of the revised constitution provides, in part, that the boundary line shall run "through the middle of the main channel of the westerly branch of the Montreal river to Island lake, the headwaters thereof; thence in a direct line to the center of the channel between middle and south islands in the Lake of the Desert; thence in a direct line to the southern shore of Lake Brule."

The area claimed by Michigan is that lying between the two forks of the river and of which the city of Hurley is the most populous community. Wisconsin has exercised jurisdiction over this territory ever since the Badger state was admitted to the union in 1846, and it is held by Wisconsin lawyers that because of this Michigan will find it difficult to establish its sovereignty at this late day.

What to Wear and What Not to Wear in Different Climates.

In the course of a recent lecture delivered before the Royal United States Service institution in London a retired Service institution in London a retired English army officer dealt with some interesting facts pertaining to the ques-tion of health in tropical climes. The officer in question, Col. Mande, late of the Royal engineers, in the course of his remarks pointed out the relation be-tween active rays and their effect upon tween active rays and their effect upon the great nerve centers running down the spinal column. If these rays are exessive the disturbance of the nerve center rests upon the stomach, provoking digestive disorders as well as tending to the dangerous malady of sunstroke.

Consequently it is obvious that if a non-actinic material were worn next to the skin the effect of the actinic rays would be nullified. Col. Mande personally tried the experiment some twenty-five years ago, and the relief thus se-cured was remarkable, since he was able to prosecute his duties in the hottest sun without inconvenience of experiencing any ill-effects. The non-actinic material alluded to was simply a red fabric, with which he had lined his fish helmet and service uniform. The same phenomenon has been observed by other soldiers while on active duty in torrid climes, who, by lining their wearing apparel and caps or helmets with red have secured instant relief from the afflictions incidental to working beneath a blazing sun. Col. Mande's experience, though it may not always have been based on his scientific knowledge of the subject, is merely that of evofficer and enlisted man of the United States army who has marched or footed upon the great shadeless plaints of the west. Here the summer temperature is sufficient to raise iron to an heat, yet private soldiers and common laborers who wear red flannel next to the skin suffer no bodily pains, though they pursue their tasks for hours on end

-040-Men and Women Teachers.

Leaving out the abstract principle of policy or justice it will not be possible, more than a woman for the same work. Do what we may, say what we will, it will not be done. The United States is so peopled that a common sense view will be taken, or what the public regards as common sense, and women will be paid as much as men for the same posi-tions. Indeed they are so paid almost everywhere already. The remaining places will fall into line. This intensifies the difficulty of increasing the salaries. Promoting a weman from a salary of $800 into a principalship of $1800 or $2000 looks like a great leap, as, indeed, it is. And when this is done to any extent the salary cannot go above the present figure for many years.

Salaries alone will never be great enough to tempt many great men to elementary school principalships. This will become more and more true as commercialism, industrialism and the professions become more and more attractive financially. The great drawback to the principalship, as regards men, is the fact that it satisfies woman as a goal, and it rarely satisfies a great man. A noble woman accepts it as a mission, a man almost never. Most principals have a side issue that is more attractive than the main business of principalship. They are engaged in intensified farming, developing a land speculation, training themselves for the stock market, have fancy poultry farms, keep hotels, run excursions or are silent partners in some sort of mercantile or manufacturing in-

A 90 per cent, woman is better than a 70 per cent, man as a leader of boys, and when it is between a 90 per cent. woman and a 40 per cent. man, it is a crime to choose the man instead of the woman. Whoever, by public discussion, or otherwise, encourages the selection of a little man in place of a great woman, a narrow-gauge man inof a broad-gauge woman, is a less than criminal. Clara Bus well is worth much more to high school boys than any one of a hundred different men whom I have known at the head of high schools. I know I know many women high school principals of whom this could be said with equal wisdom. In the case of a grammar school it is much more true that a great is above a small man in the leadership of boys. There is no influence on a boy's life more demoralizing than that of a man for whom he has no manly respect. A man weak-ling is of all teachers the worst. Nevertheless, there is need of more great men in the profession, and the problem is to get them. That is really the chief edueasy to get correspondingly able men. Can it be done? How?

It will help materially if we can increase the pay. Without this the case is hopeless. Men who are worthy cannot teach for what is ordinarily paid. There are few cities in the country that pay grammar school principals enough attract and retain men of adequate talent, training and personality. Only good luck, and because of some local advantages to some men, are they able to put good men in these positions. Principals, as such, must have their salaries raised, or there is no possibility of man-ning these positions permanently.—Dr. Winship in Journal of Education.

It should be understood that good resolutions are usually, if not invariably, against bad habits, none of which we will specify, lest our readers accuse us of being personal, and having one or other of them in mind. It is in the nature of good resolutions to require the penitent to be constantly on his guard; and while one may readily remember to do a fine thing or a noble thing, when the chance offers, or the duty thrusts itself upon one (in that offensive way of duties), one is always forgetting not to do the shabby, or low, or disgusting or wicked thing, that one vowed one's self to forbear; and it is there that one hits gravel, as the old moralists say. We note the facts not with the expectation that the reader will be instantly and fully able to profit by them, but partly for the psychological pleasure recognition gives, and partly in the hope suggesting. dimly, remotely, a way out of the vicious circle in which the reason "eddies round and round." It is apparent at this glad hour of the in fant year, that we ought to form good resolutions and not put it off till the Fourth of July, or next Christmas. Yet it is just as apparent that if we resolve not to do this or that, we shall pretty surely do it, because we forget not to. On the other hand, it is again just as apparent that if we resolve to do this or that good thing, we shall now and then do it, because the opportunity offers or insists. The good resolution ought therefore to be positive, and not negative, in its terms. This seems to us the solution, and we commend it to our cational problem of America. We can readers. For ourselves, as we have alget brilliant, noble women, but it is not ready hinted, we do not feel the need of so sharp a spur.—Harper's Weekly.

The National Playground association which met in New York in September for the purpose of arousing cities and towns to their duty in providing accessible playgrounds, marks an epoch in an important field of work for children. It was clearly shown by the experience of many that juvenile crime decreased 50 per cent. where children have playgrounds. It was also argued that playgrounds should be on the pian of every city, and that it is a legitimate expense to be met by the taxpayers. Chicago in the lead as a city in the provision for adults as well as children. Every mothers' circle would do well to appoint a play committee whose duty it would be o see that the children in that vicinity have suitable opportunities for whole some play. How Children May Help at a Fair. From the quotation,

I saw a ship a sailing, a sailing on the sea, And it was deeply laden with pretty things for me, a very pretty money making pastime may be devised for a winter fair, and it is a game in which the children can easily lend a helping hand. There are There are many little ones who want to help, and, at booths and tables, they not only are sure to be in the way, but they soon lose interest and become restless. Ships and cargoes always have a charm for children, and a "magic pond" or "fairy pool" would delight them. The point of the game is to send out tiny boats, each laden with a present, which sail owards different children, and give up heir cargo.

Such a pool, within doors, is a bit difficult to construct, but with the help and ingenuity of some young men and boys it can be achieved, and, in the end. it is well worth the trouble. Get a large, square tub, made of zinc, with curved outward to the depth of several inches, and set it in an attractive rockery with steps leading to it on two sides. The inside should be treated as an aquarium, with a few water plants and grasses on the surface of the water near the shore. The sides or banks should be covered with moss, the decoration being hanging plants and large branches of fir or pine trees. If the pool is large enough, a lighthouse might be erected and tiny fishermen's cottages built about the shore. night, electric lights might be used in such a way as to add greatly to the fairy effect, or variously colored fairy lanterns might be set, lighted, around the edge and strung over the water.

As for the boats, these must be of such a shape and size as will make it possible for them to carry a package, wrapped in stout paper. Quantities of cargo must be prepared beforehand in neat, ship-shape packets and marked with a letter or sign to designate whether the article be for a girl or a boy, and each gift should be as light as possible in order to avoid a shipwreck. The cheap variety of toy yacht is out of the question, but almost every child possesses a good, strong boat for seashore

The grown-ups will of course, be most interested in the money making properties of the play, and the fee must be large enough to have a generous balance after deducting the price of the gifts; for the cost of construction has also to

The pool, being such an attractive center of interest, should be fenced in to keep crowds of spectators from blocking the way. A small fee might admit to the enclosure, and an additional one be charged for the privilege of receiving a cargo. The child pays a fee, selects one of the boats, is allowed to set it adrift and then to welcome it on the opposite bank and take possession of its contents.

Another method of managing a fairy pool is to have only three ships (as in the old carol, "I saw three ships come

-040-How Hats Are Worn.

The latest receipt for properly adjusting the hat, as given by a well known New York milliner to a customer, is to stand before the mirror, suspend the hat straight above the head and then set it squarely and firmly upon the crown, allowing it to go as far over the sides of the head as it will. It matters not if the upper half of the face is entirely concealed or that the wearer has a de-pressed appearance of countenance, but she positively must look rakish, as she inevitably will appear if a shape of mammoth proportions, unsustained by a banleau, is permitted to tilt in the slighest toward one side or the other. In one of the autumn hats are bandeaux to e found, and as the hair is always worn flat and broad, the problem of adjusting the headgear correctly and then keeping t in position is one which a number of women have not as yet solved to their complete satisfaction.

The New York aquarium has acquired a sea monster, a spotted moray, which is a formidable name for a species of eel. It is eight feet long, as large in diameter as a fat cat, and resembles an enormous eel, except that its head, with a mouth like an undershot bulldog, is crowned with a ridge of spikes. It came from Bermuda. Often the moray has been taken for a sea serpent by green fishermen, as it lives near the surface, and often lies with its head on the rocks seeking birds' eggs and crabs. Supt. Morgan says this moray is not extraordinarily large, as they grow to fifteen feet, eeking birds' and often swim with head elevated above the sea.

HUNTING POLAR BEAR GOOD SPORT

GEORGES ZAFIROPULO TELLS OF EXCITING TIMES IN THE FAR NORTH.

ANIMALS NOT AFRAID OF MAN.

No Great Danger Attached to Sport Provided the Hunter Does Not Lose His Head.

ICE AND SNOW ARE TREACHEROUS.

Few people realize, probably that we can find nowadays splendid facilities for hunting, with excellent chance of success, too, the bears and the other animals of the polar regions, says the New York Tribune. Such an enterprise is conditions of security as well. In Germany this sort of sport has been developed for some time, and actually every several Arctic expeditions which have no other object but that of the chase. Of one of these expeditions Georges Za-firopulo gives an account in "L'Illustra-

The party left Drontheim on the morning of July 2 on board the Lofoten, a heavy Norwegian steamboat, about fifty two meters long and pretty well manned. There were ten hunters, each of whom had his own cabin. The numerous company which traveled with them contained even the curers of skins, so that all trophies might be safely preserved. A doctor went with the expedition. On July 8 they reached the polar seas, where they ploughed about till they arrived at, on the 24th, the Isle of

Danger Not Great.

A bear chase is not very dangerous if one has coolness of mind and a good gun. Taking everything into account, it is easier properly to wound a bear than to catch a rabbit between hedges, because, in spite of his ferocity, the bear knows very little about defending him-self against man, armed as man is nowadays. Besides, the Arctic bear does not recognize man as such, and takes him, for the most part, for a seal. among the hunters, perched in his crow's nest on the mast of the vessel, and provided with a huge telescope, can distinguish, in clear weather, a Lear five kilometers off, or further. So the hunter has time to watch his prey and to prepare his plan of attack. One can have splendid hunts on the icebergs as well.

Sometimes the bear takes to the water to escape. In this case he is lost, for he cannot swim as quickly as a boat can follow, and the hunter can kill him almost without running any risks. a fact worthy of remark that one ball will do it if well placed—that is to say, placed in the head. Many bears after being shot in the heart have swam 100 or 200 metres.

Weather a Factor.

The dangers to which one is exposed are less in the actual hunt than in the incidentals. A hunter has always rea-son to fear the sudden breaking of the ice beneath his feet. The thick snow with which it is covered often hides crevices or entire ruptures. Then there is the dense fog, which rises with as-tonishing suddenness; there are storms which may injure the vessel, or at least keep it for a long time imprisoned between ice floes driven by the wind. The state of the weather makes the greatest difference in these expeditions. An intense fog may keep one absolutely motionless for ten days. Without this circumstance, Mr. Zafiropulo says, his hunter's record would have been much more satisfactory. As it was, at the end of fifteen days it shared twenty bears, and the party had captured as well a live cub six months old. there were thirty-one seals, two of them huge, and two bine foxes in the bag. The party collected twenty-one kinds of birds, which swarmed around the islands.

Gull Points Way.

This particular expedition reached the latitude of 80 degrees, at the south of and very near the part of land called Francis Joseph land. Bear island they discovered in an odd fashion. They had left the icebergs and were looking everywhere for the island without success, although they knew that the land was twenty kilometers long and had mountains 650 meters high. After exhausting all the known means used in such cases, they were looking despondently at the seagulls which were always hovering about and following them in whatever direction the boat took. Evidently the land was near, but where? A gulf skimmed by them and, plunging into the sea, picked up a big sardine, with which she started on a direct flight home to give it to her young. This showed them the direction of land, and half an hour later, in a lifting of the fog, they saw Bear island only a little way off. Good Times Aboard.

The time on board ship seems to have passed as pleasantly as it does on any ordinary yachting trip in the Mediterranean. Photography and bridge were the chief amusements. In the remote solitudes of the polar seas other means of killing time were used—means which kept the hunters reminded of the civilized world. Certain ones among them congregated often in the evening, and then the petrels and the white gulls which glided silently through the haze of the midnight sun would hear a deafening noise of songs and clinking glasses. But as soon as the haze dispersed, when the sun appeared, strangely, in the midst of his superb surroundings of fantastic hummocks, immaculate snow and sea the most all the hunters went all together on prizes alone, and the competition will be keen. In the bridge, never tired of admiring the great spectacle.

First Comedy a Failure.

His first comedy, "La Taverne des studiants," was produced in 1854 in the Odeon, then the second state theater, but it proved a failure. He then wrote the comedy, "Scrap of Paper," which was produced with great success in 1860 and subsequently adapted for the English

This play, which has to do with the infamous poisoning camarilla existing under the reign of Louis XIV and which was presented for the XIV. and which was presented for the first time on December 7, 1907, is still running to crowded houses.

In 1857 following many disappointments Sardou fell ill of typhoid fever.

A kindly neighbor, Mile. Brecourt, an actress, nursed him day and night and saved his life. Shortly after his recovery he married her and this was the turning point in his career.

Wife Dies at His Zenith.

Through his wife Sardou became acquainted with the celebrated De Jazet, who commissioned him to write two plays for her, both of which were successes. After nine years of happy married life and when he was at the zenith of his prosperity his wife died. In 1877 he married Mlle. A. Soulier and the same year was elected a member of the French academy.

Sardou's fame is due largely to his thorough knowledge of stage effects and his instincts in gauging the tastes of the playgoing public. His writing is so small that the printers have to place his copy under a magnifying glass to decipher it.

COURT GIVES RATE BODY HARD BLOW

FEDERAL JUDGES ISSUE TEMPOR-ARY INJUNCTION IN MISSOURI RIVER CASE.

STOPS COMMISSION'S PLAN.

Decision, if Sustained, Is Taken to Mean second place. That Government Can Make No Adjustment of Charges.

AFFECTS MIDDLE WEST POINTS.

Grosscup, Seaman and Baker of the federal court rendered a decision yesterday in the now famous Missouri river jobbers' case which is regarded as aiming a severe blow at the work of the interstate commerce commission and as making it impossible for that body, if the court maintains its position and is sustained by the highest tribunal, to carry out a determination to change the plan and theory of rate making throughout the country.

The decision, in fact, is viewed as raising grave question as to the right of the commission to order new rate adjustments where they may be regarded as disturbing commercial relations existing between communities. The specific mandate of the court temporarily restrains the commission from enforcing its order against the Rock Island and other western railroads made in the Missouri river case. The court declares that the commission in that case created a discrimination against the markets of the middle west, including Chicago, St. Paul, St. Louis and other cities as far east as Pittsburg and Buffalo. Whether it is an undue preference remains to be determined.

Haste Urged by Court.

In issuing the temporary order the court states that it has not made up its mind that permanent relief should be granted, but it strongly intimates that it will so decide. The court also recognizes the importance of the case and suggests that the attorneys agree upon a statement of facts so that the matter may speedily get to the supreme court for adjudication.

In the case at bar the commission ordered the railroads to charge less for transporting shipments from the Mississippi river crossings to the Missouri river points, when the shipments originat ed east of Pittsburg and Buffalo, than they charge for the same service when the shipments originated in the territory west of the seaboard territory. The reduction was 9 cents per 100 pounds on first-class shipments and corresponding reductions were ordered in all of the remaining four classes.

Consider Only Discrimination.

This discrimination was the only feature of the case which the court considered and it is declared to be sufficient to warrant the issuance of a temporary restraining order. After calling atten-tion to the fact that the commission frankly admits that the reductions were entitled and that to make the reduction universal in nature instead of in the way of a differential in favor of the it is not concerned with the question of that such is the case.

On the west coast of India is found a species of oyster, Placuna placenta, whose shell consists of a pair of roughly circular plates about six inches in diameter, thin and white. At present these oysters are collected for the pearls which they often contain, although few are fit for the use of the jeweler. But in the early days of English rule in India the shells were employed for window-panes. Cut into little squares, they produced a very pretty effect, admitting light like frosted glass. When the Bombay cathedral was built, at the beginning of the eighteenth century, its windows were paned with these oyster shells. In Goa they are still thus emploved.

The great ancient deposits, he says, are now almost non-existent. Only the lower grades of guano are left. But the birds annually make fresh deposits on their nesting grounds, and if they were properly protected, he believes that the annual supply of fresh deposits would be largely increased. The birds, he says, should no longer be treated as wild animals. They should be regarded as valuable domestic aniin number, but this decrease could be their haunts during the season when they should be allowed to remain there. When driven away by the presence of man during the nesting season, they spend a large part of their time upon the water, or on small islets and cliffs, where the deposits are either lost en-

Gathering Roses. I've gathered roses and the like in many glad and golden Junes, but now, as down the world I hike my weary hands are filled with prunes. I've gathered roses o'er and o'er, and some were white and some were red, but when I took them to the store the grocer wanted eggs instead. I gathered roses long ago, in other days, in other scenes, and people said, "You ought to go and dig the weeds out of your beans." A million roses bloomed and died; a million more will die to-day. Reports from Western Canada Are Very Encouraging. A correspondent writes the Winnipeg (Man.) Free Press: "The Pincher Creek District (Southern Alberta), the original home of fall wheat, where it has been grown without failure, dry seasons and wet, for about 25 years, is excelling itself this year. The yield and quality are both phenomenal, as has been the weather for its harvesting. Forty bushels is a common yield, and many fields go up to 50, 60 and over, and most of it No. 1 Northern. Even last year, which was less favorable, similar yields were in some cases obtained, but owing to the season the quality was not so good. It is probably safe to say that the average yield from the Old Man's River to the boundary will be 47 or 48 bushels per acre, and mostly No. 1 Northern. One man has just made a net profit from his crop of $19.55 per acre, or little less than the selling price of land. Land here is too cheap at present, when a crop or two will pay for it, and a failure almost unknown. Nor is the district dependent on wheat, all other crops do well, also stock and dairying, and there is a large market at the doors in the mining towns up the Crow's Nest Pass, and in British Columbia, for the abundant hay of the district, and poultry, pork and garden truck. Coal is near and cheap. Jim Hill has an eye on its advantages, and has invested here, and is bringing the Great Northern Railroad soon, when other lines will follow."

The wheat, oat and barley crop in other parts of Western Canada show splendid yields and will make the farmers of that country (and many of them are Americans) rich. The Canadian Government Agent for this district advises us that he will be pleased to give information to all who desire it about the new land regulations by which a settler may now secure 160 acres in addition to his 160 homestead acres, at $3.00 an acre, and also how to reach these lands into which railways are being extended. It might be interesting to read what is said of that country by the editor of the Marshall (Minn.) News-Messenger, who made a trip through portions of it in July, 1908. "Passing through more than three thousand miles of Western Canada's agricultural lands, touring the northern and southern farming belts of the Provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, with numerous drives through the great grain fields, we were made to realize not only the magnificence of the crops, but the magnitude, in measures, of the vast territory opening, and to be opened, to farming immigration. There are hundreds of thousands of farmers there. and millions of acres under cultivation, but there is room for millions more, and other millions of acreage available. We could see in Western Canada in soil, product, topography or climate, little that is different from point many business men and farmers who went there from this state, it was difficult to realize one was beyond

DORANDO TELLS OF GREAT RACE

ITALIAN RUNNER WAS CONFIDENT OF WINNING THE MARATHON AT OLYMPIC GAMES.

GRATEFUL FOR SYMPATHY.

Twenty-three-Year-Old Confectioner Says He Would Have Been First but for Aid of Attendants.

DESCRIBES TRAINING FOR EVENT.

I should like to make it clear that my surname is not Dorando. It is the Italian custom to put the surname first and the baptismal name afterward; thus, according to the English fashion, my name is Dorando Pietri.

But I do not mind the mistake which every one has made, for it is pleasant to have every one call you by your Christian me; it makes me feel that you are all ny friends; it makes me feel that I love u all with the warmth of my heart. I was born not in Capri, as so many writers have said, but Carpi, which is ar Modena. I will be 23 years old next October.

At home I am a confectioner, and, as I have to earn my living, I am very devoted to my trade. When I was quite a boy I always had a feeling that I could run faster than most boys, and later I ran in lot of club races and won many prizes I used to train in my spare time when I had done my work for the day, but I have never dieted myself. My meals in he ordinary were the meals of any other Italian—minestra, macaroni in various forms, and plenty of fruit.

There are just two things from which I abstain—smoking and spirits. I am not a teetotaler, however, and always with function or dinner I drink the good vine

A good meal and a glass of wine before long run have never harmed me.

Dream of a Lifetime.

When I came to London it was to realize the dream of my life—I wanted to win the Marathon race. In Italy I reached the summit of my desires I won the Italian championship for longdistance running. I had run a race almost the same distance as the Marathon. That was in 1906, when I did Rome to Monte Rotondo in 2 hours and 41 minutes.

So that when my friends cried, "Adio, Dorando! Don't come back without the trophy." I swore that I would not.

* * * (Ah! but I have something far greater than the trophy; it will open their eyes when they see the gold cup, and when I tell of the gracious and beautiful Queen of England.)

"Well, I came to England feeling fit and strong, because I had just finished my eighteen months' service in the army, and that makes a man as hard as the hills.

'I will win the Marathon race or die.' In the morning I was up early and had a fine breakfast of four fried eggs and coffee. For luncheon I had a steak, slightly underdone I never telt stronger in my life than I did at the start on that glorious day. The sun worried me little: I am used to the hot skies in my own country.

I felt there was only one thing I had to do, and that was to beat Longboat. Every one was talking about Longboat being certain to win, and so I made it I kept up the same pace through the miles an hour-and I neither stopped nor rested. Of what does one think on such a run?

Of nothing except the faraway goal. For the rest, the mind is blank; perhaps little thoughts flit across the mind, but they are wiped out at once by the big outstanding thought of the finish.
Small things are noticed, such as the expression on the face of a woman as one races by, or the cry of a man cheering in an unfamiliar tongue. Once I saw a rabbit scamper across the road. For refreshment on the way I took some sweet coffee and sucked a lemon. Later on I had some beef tea. A man offered me a basket of mixed fruit and jelly, and I took a slice of melon. So the miles passed, and I ran on, cheered by my attendants and by the news that I was running well, and that only Hefferon was leading. I passed him with joy thumping at my heart, and then I went a little stronger, for I knew that I was first-first! Oh! the joy of victory which I thought was to be mine! It was intoxicating. More disastrous than the heat and the run and the long road was the excitement that threatened to choke my heart. My impressions are necessarily hazy, but one will remain forever.

I came to the Stadium.
I shall wear that shilling always on my watch chain, so that when I am old, years hence in Italy, I shall remember those days when I ran and lost the Marathon race.—Dorando Pietri in the London Everes London Express.

Costly Snake Poison.

One of the strangest as well as most costly articles of commerce is snake venom, for which there is a growing demand in medicine and other branches of science. The supply comes from Australia, and a recent Sydney quotation placed the market price at 20s to 25s a grain, or about $30,000 a pound Troy, no attempt seeming to have been made hitherto to distinguish between the poison of snakes whose bite is usually fatal and that from reptiles that seldom kill. Dr. Tidswell of the New South Wales health department, states that the venoms are now being classified. Laboratory experiments place the tiger snake at the state of the venom first, as it is sixteen times as deadly as that of the black snake and four times as powerful as that from the brown snake or the death adder. In average yield at a bite the death adder supplies three times as much as the inventor three times as much as the tiger snake and seventeen times as much as the brown snake. So far the snakes have been mostly captured by hand to avoid loss of poison, and, at even greater per-sonal risk, have been held in the hand while being enraged and made to bite through a rubber band, ejecting upon a glass plate the venom from the two poison fangs in the upper jaw. Each snake has supplied the material from one bite, averaging about a grain.—Dundee Adver-

Stopping the horse in order to kill the snake, they discovered that a pair of mocking birds were flying at and striking the reptile with their beaks, first from one side of the road and then from the other. Ed Neal got out of the buggy and going to the scene of conflict found that the snake's head was almost severed from its body. # Physicians Recommend Castoria

ASTORIA has met with pronounced favor on the part of physicians, pharmaceutical societies and medical authorities. It is used by physicians with results most gratifying. The extended use of Castoria is unquestionably the result of three facts: First-The indisputable evidence that it is harmless: Second—That it not only allays stomach pains and quiets the nerves, but assimilates the food: Third-It is an agreeable and perfect substitute for Castor Oil. It is absolutely safe. It does not contain any Opium, Morphine, or other narcotic and does not stupefy. It is unlike Soothing Syrups, Bateman's Drops, Godfrey's Cordial, etc. This is a good deal for a Medical Journal to say. Our duty, however, is to expose danger and record the means of advancing health. The day for poisoning innocent children through greed or ignorance ought to end. To our knowledge, Castoria is a remedy which produces composure and health, by regulating the system-not by stupefying it-and our readers are entitled to the information. - Hall's Journal of Health.

Dr. William Belmont, of Cleveland, Ohio, says: "Your Castoria stands first in its class. In my thirty years of practice I can say I never have found anything that so filled the place."

Dr. J. H. Taft, of Brooklyn, N. Y., says: "I have used your Castoria and found it an excellent remedy in my household and private practice for many years. The formula is excellent."

Dr. R. J. Hamlen, of Detroit, Mich., says: "I prescribe your Castoria extensively, as I have never found anything to equal it for children's troubles. I am aware that there are imitations in the field, but I always see that my patients get Fletcher's." Dr. Wm. J McCrann, of Omaha, Neb., says: "As the father of thirteen children I certainly know something about your great medicine, and aside from my own family experience I have in my years of practice found Castoria a popular and efficient remedy in almost every home." Dr. J. R. Clausen, of Philadelphia, Pa., says: "The name that your Castoria has made for itself in the tens of thousands of homes blessed by the presence of children, scarcely needs to be supplemented by the endorsement of the medical profession, but I, for one, most heartily endorse it and believe it an excellent remedy."

Dr. R. M. Ward, of Kansas City, Mo., says: "Physicians generally do not prescribe proprietary preparations, but in the case of Castoria my experience, like that of many other physicians, has taught me to make an exception. I prescribe your Castoria in my practice because I have found it to be a thoroughly reliable remedy for children's complaints. Any physician who has raised a family, as I have, will join me in heartlest recommendation of Castoria.'

ARTISTS' BLUNDERS.

A Procession of Monks That Adam and Eve Enjoyed.

Among the most amusing "breaks" by artists is a landscape by Turner in which a rainbow is depicted behind the sun. This occasioned almost as the great French artist, who in his portrait of Queen Victoria painted the ribbon of the Order of the Garter the wrong color.

A picture of Adam and Eve in the garden of Eden hung in the gallery of the Gesu, in Lisbon, represents the first couple as watching a procession of monks In the famous galleries at Antwerp are certain pictures of old masters in which the jumble of ideas is as remarkable as the technique is fine. In are armed with bows and arrows, and in a celebrated painting of "The Murder of the Innocents" the massacre is represented as taking place in a city of Holland. The parents of the children are stout burghers, the Roman soldiers are Dutch policemen armed with muskets, and the innocent infants | school. are transformed into solid schoolboys in bulgy woolen trousers and jackets and hobnailed shoes.

SOMNAMBULISM.

Some of the Curious Things Done by Sleepwalkers.

Many years ago an archbishop of Bordeaux attested the case of a young ecclesiastic who was in the habit of getting up during the night in a state of somnambulism and, taking pen, ink and paper, composing and writing his sermons. When he finished one page he would read and correct it. In order to ascertain whether the somnambulist made use of his eyes the archbishop held a piece of pasteboard under his chin to prevent his seeing the paper upon which he was writing, but he continued to write on without being in the least inconvenienced.

It is related of Negretti, a sleepwalker, that he would sometimes carry a in his employment, but on a bottle being substituted he took it and carried it without apparently noticing the dif-

Another somnambulist would dress in his sleep and go to the cellar, where it was pitch dark, and draw wine from the cask without walking into anything and without spilling a drop of the wine, but if he happened to awake in the cellar he had great difficulty in groping his way out.-Exchange.

When Johnny Hobbs left his home up among the New Hampshire hills to visit his grandmother in Worcester, Mass., he was cautioned by his mother that he would find things in the city strangely different from those at home. Johnny arrived in the early after-
