COST OF LIVING IN 1853.

Life at the University of Michigan fifty-five years ago was upon a somewhat simpler plane than at present, according to a letter written by a student in the Medical School in 1853; yet there was evident the same willingness to work and to suffer privation for an opportunity to learn, which is not unfamiliar to many at the present time.

In speaking of the cost of living, the writer of the letter, which was published in The Michigan Alumnus, says: "It will cost me much more to live in *Ann Arbor than I anticipated, owing chiefly to the high price of provisions. I cannot yet tell what it will cost to board my-

On the morning of the announcement of the new venture the new incumbent came into town on his usual train from Surbiton, his head swimming with delight. At the foot of Ludgate hill he met an old friend, whom he forthwith led into the Green Dragon bar.

"Arthur," said he, "we really must celebrate. What d' you suppose has happened? Oh, you'd never, never dream it! Look! What d' you say to that, old boy?"

"That" was a newly engraved card on which appeared this announcement: MR. CECIL APPLEBY BOTSFORD-

Before he reached Temple Bar the ecclesiastical editor had met five other friends. To the fifth he observed:

"D' ye know, Ned, with that card I could call on the ar-archbish'p 'f Canterbury. Yes. He'd see me immediate ly. Won'erf'l card this. Indicates position 'f strordinary responsibility 'n dignity."

Halfway to the office of the Thunderer Mr. Botsford-Hetherington hailed a hansom.

"Have you," he inquired, with much gravity-"have you a fast and well appointed cab? Yes? Very well, then. You may drive me to Lambeth palace.' At the palace a footman took one of the new cards and conducted the owner of it to a pleasant reception room, where he snuggled in a vast chair and instantly went to sleep.

The archbishop of Canterbury happened to be very busy with his chaplain, but at the sight of the card he felt sure that something of importance was at hand and sent his chaplain to inquire. That tall, slender, dark, ascetic gentleman strode slowly to the reception room and after a slight but decorous struggle succeeded in waking the caller.

at a Critical Moment. Daniel O'Connell, the famous Irish agitator, had a contempt for physical danger. On a certain occasion a meeting had been convened, and a large crowd assembled in a room on the first floor of a building in a small city in Ireland.

O'Connell was about to address the people when a gentleman, pale with fear, made his way to the platform and hoarsely whispered: "Liberator, the floor is giving way!

The beams that shore it up are cracking, and we shall fall through in a few minutes!"

"Keep silent," said O'Connell. Then, raising his voice, he addressed the assembly

"I find that the room is too small to contain the number who desire to come in, so we must leave it and hold the meeting outside the building." At this a few rose and went out, but the majority retained their seats. Then

O'Connell said: "I will tell you the truth. You are Irishmen, therefore brave men. The floor is giving way, and we must leave this room at once. If there is a panic and a rush to the door we shall all be precipitated into the room below, but if you obey my orders we shall be saved. Let the twelve men nearest the

An additional information against United States Boat Will Proceed from Brand, Wasson and Klein charges them with bribery and corrupt solicitation. From Brand, Wasson and Klein bail in the sum of $30,000 each was demanded. The bail of the other four members of the council was fixed at $15,000 each. The nformation against Ramsey and Vilsack charges them with giving Klein $17,000 as a bribe. Bail demanded from each is $14,000.

Are Taken by Surprise.

While all the defendants were taken by surprise when arrested last evening, each secured the necessary bail which In the aggregate amounted to $178.000. All the informations were sworn to by Tensard de Wolf, secretary of the Vot-EXPECT SANTA CLAUS, ers' league, and formerly a political writer on a local paper.

Robert Wilson, superintendent of the Municipal league of Scranton, Pa., is described as "The Man Behind the Gun." Mr. Wilson, assisted by a corps of private detectives, brought to this city from Scranton, gathered the evidence from the defendants.

Mr. Wilson says the Voters' league is back of the prosecutions and it is the intention to make Pittsburg as clean as Scranton. In making Scranton so, Mr. Wilson said prominent men committed suicide or were sent to the penitentiary. Concerning the case against Ramsey and Vilsack of the German National bank, Attorney Charles A. Fagan, vice president of the bank, issued the following statement:

On last Saturday, after banking hours, the attention of the board of directors was directed by the national bank examiner to the fact that a charge had been made of the improper use of money to secure the selection of the German National bank as pne of the city depositaries. This informa-tion came as a creat surprise to the moment one of the city depositaties. This informa-tion came as a great surprise to the mem-bers of the board. Racing and Gambling.

August Belmont now declares that horse racing may survive without race-track gambling. The voice of the people in the nomination and re-election of Gov. Hughes seems to have been quite persuasive. The governor has contended from the first that gambling was merely a parasite and not an essential feature of tests of speed for horses. If it is clean, honest sport horsemen want, they are welcome to it and it will do them and the public good; but if it is gambling with all the losses, demoralization of character and suffering of both the guilty and the unocent inevitably flowing from it, as death follows the use of a polluted stream, then the predominating decent sentiment of the state will see to it that the demand is not granted. Fortunately, the constitution and the laws of this state are on the right side of that ques-tion.—Rochester Democrat and Chron-

McAlees Makes Confession.

According to the police, McAlees admits the whole robbery, his carefully laid plans, and the deliberate attack. According to the alleged confession, McAlees planned the hold-up, knowing Orloff car-ried a large sum of money, as a result of his collections. McAlees also is said to have admitted knowing Orloff would stop near Kinnickinnic and Northwestern avenues, and jumped into the rig when Orloff made his way into the house to deliver goods. McAlees hid in the rear of the covered van, and began his attack after Orloff had started the team. Orloff was taken to the Emergency hospital in a critical condition. When his condition grew worse, the physicians de-cided on an operation for a ruptured intestine. The operation was unsuccess-ful, due to the excessive loss of blood by Orloff in the attack. He also suf-fered a broken leg, several broken ribs, and minor bruises on the face and head.

Comes from Good Home.

McAlees is 26 years of age, and bears a poor reputation in the southern section of the city, although he has never been arrested. He is said to be the "black sheep" of his family, having had a good home when a youth, but preferring a shiftless life to the refining influences of a Christian home and education. The mother of McAlees is in an intensely nervous condition, while a sister, Miss Anna McAlees, a teacher in the Seven-teenth district school, can hardly believe her brother to be the offender in a fatal assault.

to prepare scouring balls. The following is a good method: Mix fuller's earth and strong suds of white castile soap to a stiff paste, then work this into balls about the size of hens' eggs and allow them to dry.

To use, first remove all surface dirt with a brush after shaking and sponge the soiled places lightly with tepid water.

Then rub gently, but very thoroughly, with one of these balls. The garment should be hung in a dry place for a day or so, then the dry earth brushed off. After this it is ready for pressing.

Another way of making these balls is to use five ounces of pipeclay, three ounces of powdered French chalk and three ounces of alcohol. This paste should be molded into small balls and set aside to dry.

KILLED WITH PROFUSE APOLOGIES.

If Mr. Roosevelt has any ambition to find bears when he is on his African expedition he will have to make some change in his plans. In the parts of the dark continent which he contemplates visiting the bear is altogether unknown. The single representative of the Ursus family found in Africa occurs in the northwest corner of the continent, among the Atlas mountains. But wild and undiscovered as the region is and ideal as it must be for a hunt the President's ambition would have to stop short of shooting. The bear of Morocco is not by any means of such a no-ble character as to tempt the hunter, and in a catalogue of typical bruits or ted-dies he would not count. But among mountain people, known commonly the as the Berbers but ethnographically as the Shelluhs, that dirty yellowish vegetarian is an object of superstitious reverence and it is never killed without an apology to the animal for the necessity which led to its death.

Is Addressed As "Sir."

In the Shelluh language it is addressed as "sir," and "nothing more respectful can be imagined than the terms in which the savage of "the China of the West" addresses the dead beast after a change in its dietary from vegetables and honey sheep or a child has made it desirable to pronounce its doom. In the most abject manner the death is deplored, and it is only when the offense is of a very serious character that such an execution takes place among the tribesmen. After having committed that which is reckoned as little less than a heinous crime the offender is known for the rest of his life by a name which is singular-ly opprobrious and means not "the man who killed a bear," but "the wretch who 'sir' to the dead.'

Manifestly the Shelluhs, with this peculiar respect for the animal among hemselves, entertain the most uncompromising resentment against any out-siders who kill bears. Although there is nothing that would go to show that they regarded the bear as sacred in any such sense as the bull, alligator or snakes have been or are regarded by heathen people, the superstition is indelible.

After studying at the Lawrence Scientific school and Harvard university he went abroad and spent sev-eral years at German universities. In 1864 he joined the facalty of Columbia university. He was one of the three founders of the university's famous school of mines, and at his suggestion the Havemeyers gave the school the nificent building it now occupies. Many times Dr. Chandler has been called upon by his city, state, and nation for the sort of assistance which only an expert chemist can give, and several years ago his services to chemical science were generasly recognized across the water when he was made president of the British Society of Chemical Industry. For a num-ber of years Dr. Chandler was chief chemist and president of the health de-partment of New York city.

SIR FREDERICK BRIDGE, the celebrated organist and master of the choristers of Westminster Abbey, was born in Worcestershire, December 5, 4844. At the age of 6 he entered the choir of Rochester cathedral and remained there until he was 14. in 1867 he qualified for the Fellowship of the Royal College of Organists and took the degree of Musical Bachelor at Oxford in 1869. After several years at Manchester cathedral Dr. Bridge in 1875 was appointed deputy organist of Westminster cathedral and in 1882 he succeeded to the full title. He presided at the memorable service held in the abbey in connection with Queen Victoria's jubilee in 1887, and at the coronation of King Edward in 1902, for each of which Ignorance of Domestic Finance. Miss Grace Pitman of Passaic, N. J. who lectures on domestic finance before schools and colleges, had an interesting experience the other day when she lec tured before a fashionable school for young women. She happened to have just been reading something about the just been reading something about the army, and noticed that the salary of lieutenants is $1500. So when she stood up before her audience she announced that she would explain to them her sys-tem of administration of the store tem of administering an income of $1500, which was the salary of a lieutenant in United States army. A smile ran round the room, which became almost a titter. One girl right down in front of the lec turer had a very rosy face, but did not look at all happy. Miss Pitman divided up the income, showed what such a fam-ily would have to have, and what the things would cost. She could allow only $10 a month for service, and that, she showed, would secure only one pitiful greenhorn in the kitchen. The lecturer's scheme allowed only $7.88 a week for food, and she showed what could be got for that amount. A young housekeeper, she said, could hardly be expected to house, thereby feed her family for less than $10 a week, you really need.

but an experienced housekeeper could do it for $6. As the lecturer continued the girl down in front looked more and more so-ber. That evening she called upon the lecturer and explained the cause of the cheerful smiles of that afternoon. She was engaged-as all her schoolmates were aware-to a lieutenant, and expected to marry him as soon as she was graduated in the following June. But now she was frightened. She did not know whether she would marry him or

"She had actually," said Miss Pittman, "had no idea of what it meant to live on $1500 a year. She was planning to keep three servants. She had no idea that three servants could not be kept on this sum, and her mother was allowing her to marry this man with no conception of what it meant to live on his salary. Talk about $6 a week for food! Twenty dollars a week would not have suf-ficed for that girl. She would not have known a rib roast from a fresh ham. It was not the girl's fault. It was the way she had been brought up. As soon as she heard my lecture she understood the state of the case, and she came to ask me if there was no school where she could learn these things. "It has been shown by investigators that the money sense develops in chil-dren, especially in boys, at 15. It is then they begin to want to go to work, to want money of their own, and to think about saving. the pieces into smaller particles. By doing this a barrel will hold all the clean house this fall, do not throw bundles of old papers, carpets and the like in the basement to accumulate damp, dirt and be a thing to breed germs. # Women Who Speak Poorly.

"What's the matter with club women's voices that they can't be heard from a public platform?" was the question asked by a man at a recent Bryan reception given by a woman's Democratic club at the Waldorf-Astoria. The question was repeated to Grenville Kleiser, who is training 200 members of New York same place.

women's clubs in the art of speechmak ing. Mr. Kleiser ought to know, for has he not written shoals of books on voice ulture, speaking in public and the like? Moreover he has every opportunity to find out on Friday evenings, when groups of twenty-five clubwomen at a time mount the rostrum at the West Side Auditorium and say this in chorus: "Ba pa. be-pe. bi-pi, bu-pu, boo-peo, boi-poi," and some more. To the uninitiated it sounds like the

Dr. Gibbons had declared that the criminals die under the surgeon's knife in the autopsy or in the quick lime in which they are buried. Dr. Scannell will be assisted by Dr. Thomas H. Mackenzie of Trenton, the consulting physician at the state prison. The next murderer to be electrocuted, according to the sched-ule, is John Mantasanna, sentenced to die during the week of December 21.

Deserted at last, even by the dead, and on a lonely, but commanding hill along the Missouri river near Fort Yates, N. Only a wooden slab as a headboard is there with the name of Sitting Bull. The removal of the military and private ceme teries at Fort Yates or Standing Rock agency, as it is better known, which is esponsible now for the solitude of the once Indian warrior, is completed.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 21 .-Practically the first step toward a more judicious use of the water powers of the country, in line with the policy of President Roosevelt to conserve the natural resources of the United States, are now being taken by the House committee on interstate and foreign commerce in the preparation of a bill to regulate the construction of dams across navigable waters.

Preliminary consideration of the sub-ject has developed the fact that there is a strong opposition in Congress to the government levying a tax on the use of the water powers of the navigable waters in spite of the suggestions of the President that such a tax be required.

Sierra Leone Looks Attractive in Spite of Its Bad Name.

Sierra Leone-known to fame as "The White Man's Grave"-viewed from the deck of an incoming steamer presents an appearance distinctly attractive.

As to climate, the soubriquet "White Man's Grave" is sufficiently instructive. Suffice it to say that the first of the daily regimental orders ran thus: "Funeral parade at 6:30 a. m. tomorrow," and it was seldom indeed that the parade was dismissed for lack of a victim to the pestiferous climatic conditions. Indeed, arduous became the duties of sepulchre that whereas it was customary in the beginning for the entire regiment and band to attend, only the company of the Blind Joe, sat in the ante-room off Wardeceased and the firing party did so later den fox's office in the workhouse on on.

'So it has come to pass that today three railways bring their traffic and broadening influences to the very gate of the city. The tinkling camel bells are gone, their Old World music replaced by the indefatigable bugling from school parade grounds and camps. No longer does the mediaeval watch patrol the mid night streets with noise of rattle and drum; the new police, with their foreign uniforms, rifles and sentry boxes in every quarter, have consigned it to oblivion. Well paved streets, flanked by brick drains, now connect all of the principal ated the darkness of former days have been replaced by electric light; scaveng-ing is no longer left to the unaided efforts of pariah dogs and pigs; brough-ams and jinrikishas ply in the place of sedan chairs and springless carts, and public buildings of suitable size and design are being provided for the various government offices. Most remarkable of all-as indicating the change in social and educational standards—is the new zoological and botanical garden, whither large crowds of both sexes resort daily, a purely Chinese enterprise, of which the citizens are justly proud. A foreign adviser to the Chinese government is now driven in an automobile, in company with a member of the grand council, from the city to the summer palace, and Chinese newspapers, printed in the capital, freely discuss the necessity for constitutional government. These things, and others equally remarkable, have come to pass." —Delly Consular Borets -Daily Consular Reports.

they have been of late. Many old residents of Wisconsin re-member the Fox and Wisconsin Im-provement, which afforded an illustra-tion of the principle here referred to. The Fox and Wisconsin route from Lake Michigan to the Mississippi was a "historic highway." It had been used by the Indians prior to the arrival of "Let me have your hand, Joe, so that I can know you approve of what I say," Father Marquette and by the French voyageurs. All that was required and his companion of twenty years, Old make it as available for the steamboat as it has been for the bark canoe, the theory ran, was to spend money in deepening the channel here and there and constructing a canal from the Fox river to the Wisconsin on the site of the old portage. The project was fa-vored by Congress, and went forward year after year. Millions were freely year after year. Millions were freely expended. In 1880 Gen. Grant visited Portage and was taken to see the ludic rous little canal, which has never developed commerce, though it is a conven-ient place in which to fish for bullheads. There were those who apprehended that the ex-President, knowing how much th improvement had cost, might not greatly impressed. But he was in an appreciative mood that day. Here was his comment to those who took the trou-ble to show him what use had been made of Uncle Sam's money: "Why, boys, you've really got a little water here! Well, I know a good many that haven't. Congratulations.

A HOLE IN HIS COFFIN.

Through It Col. Butler's Triumphant Pigtail Should Protrude.

Thomas Butler, a colonel in the army of the United States early in the Nineteenth century, died in New Orleans in 1805, in the midst of his celebrated controversy with Gen. Wilkinson regarding the wearing of his queue.

Col. Butler insisted on wearing his hair in the old fashioned style in disobedience to Wilkinson's orders. Accord ing to Pierce Butler in his recently published biography of Judah P. Benjamin while the dispute was still raging Butler died and left directions that a hole should be bored in the head of his cof-fin and that he should be borne to the grave with his triumphant pigtail pro-truding in defiance. The family tradition is that these directions were carried out.

ECZEMA ALL OVER HIM.

No Night's Rest for a Year and Limit of His Endurance Seemed Near-Owes Recovery to Cuticura. "My son Clyde was almost completely covered with eczema. Physicians treated him for nearly a year without helping him any. His head, face and neck were covered with large scabs which he would rub until they fell off. Then blood and matter would run out and that would be worse. Friends coming to see him said that if he got well he would be disfigured for life. When it seemed as if he could possibly stand it no longer, I used some Cuticura Soap, Cuticura Ointment, and Cuticura Resolvent. That was the first night for nearly a year that he slept. In the morning there was a great change for the better. In about six weeks he was perfectly well. Our leading physician recommends Cuticura for eczema. #### Rats' Cold Weather Retreat.

Many animals snuggle together for warmth in bitter weather--as the squirrels and the rats. Those who go ratting in hedges and dells in the winter know they may try a dozen freshly used burrows without finding a rat-when suddenly from a single hole the rats will come pouring out in a stream of frenzied fury. Twenty or more rats will lie to-gether in one hole. They are clever enough to block up a hole on the windward side-to keep out the draught-so that when a rat hole is noted newly stopped with soil, turnip leaves or grass there is almost certain indication rats are within. Like the squirrels they store food for winter-and the keeper may find it more difficult to secure his potatoes from frost than from the attack of the most numerous of his furred Jack London, the writer, was talking foes.-London Standard.

The train screamed its way through the valley, grunted up the steep incline and came to a standstill before the ramshackle little station. It paused while two passengers alighted, and then it hurried off, as if it was glad to get away from such an insignificant stopping place.

Elsie Lansing accepted her leather bag from the taciturn station agent. who at the same time pushed a suit case toward the other traveler, a tall ster. "Stage here for Greentop?" queried the latter, picking up his grip.

"Not this day!" returned the agent grimly. "Jim Laidlaw, he seems to think Saturday's made special so's he can git a little drunker'n usual! If you ain't expected, you'll have to walk!" With which remark he slammed the station door and turned the key

"Let me see-it's twelve miles to Greentop, isn't it?" asked the stranger thoughtfully.

"Twelve and a half. Straight road ahead." The agent tramped away across the platform and disappeared inside a small cottage perched on the high bank above the tracks.

Elsie Lansing looked dubiously at the frozen road stretching away between pine clad heights, faintly touched with the early morning sun. She had traveled all night and had telegraphed for her newly acquired brother-in-law to meet her.

There was no sign of the white motor car which had been a part of the bridal equipment and which was to speed her to the Eyrie, in the Green mountains, away from civilization and its attendant comforts.

"If you are going to Greentop, permit me to carry your bag," said the young man, lifting his hat. "It is a stiff walk, but perhaps it will stimulate an appetite for dinner."

"You are very good," replied Elsie pleasantly, "but my bag is not heavy, and I can easily carry it myself."

Without further conversation they left the station and made their way along the road in the shadow of the pines

It was a crisp day, with a tang of early winter in the breath of the north wind. It was an invigorating day, with its strong scent of pine and balsom, the rattle of crisp, dry cones and the sweet purity of mountain air. The stranger walked on ahead-with he added mendaciously long, swinging strides. . A long, white motor car crawled speed levers.

"Four hours from the Evrie, darling," murmured a white veiled vision from the tonneau.

"I can't help it, Lettie! I don't know what's got into the machine! Elsie will be starved to death after this long wait. If Laidlaw isn't there she may try to walk," groaned Bob Ray dismally.

"If Peter was only here!" said Lettie gently.

> "I hope it isn't much farther," she admitted ruefully. "I have been ill, and my strength is fickle."

He stopped and looked about him. They had come to a slight opening in the forest, where the sun streamed over fallen tree trunks and glinted on the surface of a tiny brook that wound its way across the road.

"We will rest here," he said, with a note of authority in his voice. "It is a good deal farther. We have come perhaps three miles. If you will let me take you back to the station I will return to Greentop and procure a conveyance of some sort"-

"No," she objected, sinking wearily on to a fallen log. "I will be rested presently. You see, I didn't eat any breakfast, and"-"No breakfast!" he echoed blankly. "I don't wonder you are tired. Wait a minute, please!" He knelt down before his suit case and unlocked it. From its depths of masculine apparel he brought forth a small alcohol stove, a bottle of the necessary liquid and a small tin of beef extract.

Elsie watched him with amused interest. With deft fingers he filled and lighted the lamp and opened the tin of extract. "I wonder if he is a drummer and is demonstrating some of his wares!"

But there was something in the man's thin, intellectual face, with its nearsighted blue eyes behind thick glasses, that belied her estimate. There was a vague familiarity about his movements that puzzled her.

"Here," he said, approaching her with a small silver drinking cup. "drink this, please."

"You are very kind indeed," she said gratefully, sipping the hot liquid. "I am afraid I am depriving you of your luncheon.'

He threw back his head and laughed heartily. Elsie liked the laugh and decided that she liked the man. "Excuse me, but you must think I'm an old maid-to be traveling about with that equipment," he said. "You see, I have an invalid aunt in Greentop. These are to rejoice her

"I have bonbons in my bag," confessed Elsie. "Shall we eat them?" "Let's," he assented gayly.

Bread and Microbes.

From experiments made by M. Roussel in Paris it appears that only the crust of bread is submitted to a sufficiently high temperature to kill all the bacteria which the loaf may contain. The inside of the loaf may therefore be contaminated by the microbes from a consumptive baker or conveyed in the water, as is the case with typhoid fever and cholera. Professor Metchnikoff was asked his opinion whether bread could not be a source of danger, and his answer was as follows: "I don't think so. The temperature to which the inside of a loaf is submitted generally exceeds 140 de- Baird. grees F. At this temperature many microbes are killed-those of tuberculosis, for instance-but there are much hardier germs, such as those of anthrax, the germs of which are only killed at over 224 degrees F. But anthrax is rare, and it is hardly likely that a baker attacked by this terrible malady would continue to work once the disease had declared itself." Professor Metchnikoff advises, however, that only bread which is well baked, and therefore not crumbly, should be eaten.

What She Was Thinking Of.

The young poet had just finished what he considered to be a work of real inspiration, and, rising from his table, he hastened upstairs to where his little wife, a bride of six weeks, was sitting darning his socks.

"Listen, sweetheart," he whispered tenderly. "I have just written this." And he began to read. He put his whole soul into the reading. His gestures were graceful; his intonation perfect. The whole spirit of his beautiful poem breathed forth as he threaded his way form the beginning to the end of his theme, and when he had finished he looked at her, awaiting her verdict.

For a time she was silent.
