> In an exciting and spectacular game Gladstone defeated Escanaba on their home grounds yesterday by a score of Bilger _____ 20 1 5 .250 to 5. The game opened for Escanaba. Neither side scored until the third when Escanaba got one run across the plate on a single and a double. They got another run in the fifth -Monte Olmstead hitting the ball over the left field fence for a home run. They scored again in the sixth on a base on balls a stolen base and 15c a single. Escanaba made a game effort to make up the lead in their half of the ninth due largely to the umpiring ability (?) of one-Billy Mattwho apparently couldn't see where the plate was. The scores were made on a base on balls to Connors, a two-bagger for M. Olmstead (the second during the day) and a fielder's choice. The scoring was ended by one of the fastest double plays ever pulled off on the Escanaba grounds-Bent to Boyer to Loell.

Gladstone did not get a hit until the fifth. Richards started off with a clean single. Boyer sacrificed and Aronson did not cover up third until Richards was safe. Bendt was safe at first on an error by M. Walch, Richards scoring. In the sixth Loell was safe on an error by M. Walch, Pease sacrificed. Bilger was safe on a fielders' choice as was Frendenberg, Loell scoring. On Boyer's single both Bilger and Frendenberg scored. In the seventh, Miller went out M. Olmstead to M. Walch, McNally got a base on balls and stole second and took third on Loell's sacrifice fly to J. Walch. He scored on Pease's single. Pease stole second and third in quick succession. Bilger got a base on balls and promptly stole second. Both scorended the scoring for Gladstone.

GLADSTONE AT THE SOO.

The management of the Soo baseball team has scheduled Gladstone to play here during the firemen's tournament, August 10, 11 and 12. Everyone knows what kind of ball "Jack" Loell's team plays as it has been here before. The Soo has had no team here this year so far that plays as fast ball as does the Gladstone bunch. They are always in the game, not giving up as some teams do, but playing right ot the end, win or lose. There is also no team in the upper peninsula that the Soo would rather beat, and it is believed, would rather beat the Soo. It can not be said that the teams are at "outs,' but the two ball combinations are both dissatisfied with the outed on Frendenberg's single. Thus come of the previous games of which each team has won a share. The Gladstone team has two new players for the season, both said to stant umpire baiting by Capt. SURPRISING STATEMENT

Last Friday evening a number of prominent citizens were discussing the political situation at the Mead Drug Store in this city. County Clerk John A Semer expressed the opinion that Osborn would get 60 per cent of the vote in Delta county, and that would be the proportion throughout the peninsula. Others declared that his figures Musselman would receive substantially all of it. Mr. Crain, the salesman mentioned above, had been listening to the conversation with some interest, and he surprised the crowd by declar-

Russia has not figured extensively as a cotton-producing country. But it seems to have ambitions in that direction. Reports from Tiflis are to the effect that the area sown to cotton this year is double that of 1909. In one district 400 acres are devoted to the stape. That is a tiny fraction of the total in the United States, but high prices have stimulated cotton growing wherever practicable, and the aggregate result may be a substantial gain in the foreign output.

The latest government report is additionally favorable to a big wheat crop. The returns, as interpreted by the skilled statistician of the New caped in the jungle, but a detail of York produce exchange, indicate a total harvest of 702,404,000 bushels. against an indication for the same time last year of 652,351,000 bushels. The estimate for 1909 fell below the actual result, for the total yield last year was 737,159,000 bushels. Should there be similar excess this year there will be a good chance for a recordbreaking output.

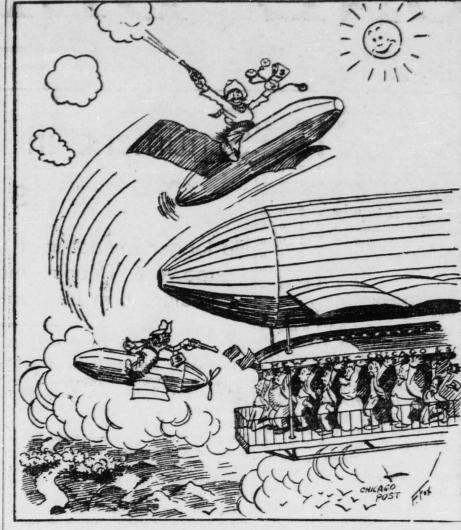

It is stated that the recent missile test against the ram Katahdin has demonstrated that the theory as to the piercing power of big projectiles fired a modern battleships' range is wrongthat the missile really drops from the trajectory at so sharp an angle that it delivers a glancing blow and therefore does not penetrate armor plate of only moderate thickness. If this is true, the fighting will have to be at closer range, and the guns of smaller caliber than the big 13-inch rifles will come into greater favor.

ROYAL ARCANUM HARD HIT

New York Court Decides Order Cannot Raise Its Assessment Rates Without Members' Consent.

New York .- Supreme Court Justice William J. Kelly of Brooklyn handed down a decision in which he holds that the supreme council of the Royal Arcanum cannot raise its assessment rates without permission from the members of the organization.

It is believed that the decision deals a hard blow to the order. The case was brought to the attention of the court by Samuel Green of Brooklyn, who is a member of the DeWitt Clinton council R. A., and who at one time held one of the highest positions in the council.

In deciding in favor of the plaintiff Justice Kelly declares that the society cannot assume an unlimited reserved power to increase the amount of assessment to an extent which might be prohibitive and could only result in depriving the individual of his membership.

16,000 RAILROAD MEN GO OUT

STRIKE ON GRAND TRUNK SYS-TEM TIES UP FREIGHT.

Passenger Service Is Congested-Milk Famine Threatens Montreal-Strikers Are Orderly.

Montreal.-It was estimated Tuesday that 16,000 men were out of employment as a result of the strike of employes of the Grand Trunk railroad system which went into effect Monday night. The strike order was obeyed by 6,000 conductors and trainmen and the company Tuesday locked out 10,000 men in the shops in the hope that they would accept the positions deserted by the conductors and trainmen. The coup has not been successful.

Freight and passenger traffic on the entire Grand Trunk system is congested. Freight is giling up in immense quantities at the various transfer points, with no likelihood of being moved for a long time.

All sorts and conditions of men, women and children-for some have been the merest boys-make their way to the White House, some of them to warn the president of impending danger to himself or the country. some to reveal to him the will of heaven, some to implore his aid or protection, many to offer him groundfloor business chances which ought to make him many times a million-

Gravity, not steam or electricity, was the coming power. It was to run the world-railways, mills, foundries, all the great industries were to be revolutionized by it. Of course, he wanted the president to help him in such trifling matters as the forming of his corporation and the securing of his patents. Particularly he was to compel the commissioner of patents to issue to him the necessary patents on his invention.

Yet another, a New Yorker, had a novel scheme to frustrate the ice trust. in which he wanted the president's help. He wanted the president to make congress appropriate enough money to cut the ice from around the pole, and to bring it to the United States on war vessels, for distribution in the various cities where the ice trust was operating. This, he thought, would lower the price of ice during the summer, when prohibitive prices were charged.

the east end, to wait, presumably, for the president. A cab was called from a nearby stand, and the man persuaded to enter it. The driver had his orders to drive to the first precinct police station about half a mile away. Just as the cab started the Swede drew a heavy revolver and fired pointblank at the officer who had him in charge. Fortunately his aim was as bad as his intention. The wound he inflicted was, of itself, slight. But subsequent developments led the doctors to believe that it was coated with poison, and that had this particular crank gained access to the president, Mr. Roosevelt might have shared the fate of his predecessor. An elderly woman once called at the White House to ask the president to drain the sea off Old Point Comfort for her. She told those who questioned her that she was of a prominent Virginia family and had lost large sums of money through ill-advised land speculation. She was, however, entitled to a share in an estate amounting to $600,000, but conspirators were keeping the money from her. She had learned through a medium that it was buried in the sea off Old Point. And as the president owned the sea, would he kindly remove it while she secured her fortune?

Of course the overwrought suffragist has not been lacking in the White House collection of cranks. It includes several choice specimens of her. Two of them one from New England and one from Pennsylvania have made demands that the chief executive surrender his job to them. Both of these were accompanied by young sons, and expected when they had got things running properly that their children and their children's children would succeed them in the position.

The Pennsylvanian had her cabinet all selected, and was particularly virulent in her objection to Admiral Dewey. She was going to remove him first thing for she felt sure that with a woman in his place there would be no need of any Hague conference to keep the United States at least from

Very Moment He Thought He Was Assured of Complete Victory.

"The master of a vessel in a port in money borrowed it and to secure its bottomry bond," writes a correspondent of the National Magazine. "By this bond it was agreed that if the money was not paid within so many have the vessel sold and the debt paid out of the proceeds.

"The money was not paid and I was retained to enforce the bond and began a suit. Someone interested in the vessel appeared in the suit and denied that the bond had been executed by the master, as had been alleged.

"It became necessary to take the testimony on this point of a sailor whose name was subscribed to the bond as having witnessed its execution. In answer to my questions the sailor said that the cantain called him into the vessel's cabin and asked him to be a witness to the bond, and he signed his name to it as a witness, and he spoke of the paper as the bottomry bond.

"The opposing counsel in a sharp cross-examination asked him how he knew it was a bottomry bond, and the witness answered that he read enough of it to know what it was. Some other skilful questions brought out the fact that when the sailor came into the cabin the captain was sitting on the other side of a table with the paat the side of the table facing the captain, so that the paper was between them; that the paper was not read to him, that the captain turned over the first leaf of the paper and signed his name at the end of it and told the sailor where to sign his name, which he did, and then left the cabin. "My heart sank, for I saw that it was open to the other side to say that the document lay on the table upside down to the sailor, and that his statement that he read enough of the document to know it was a bottomry bond was false, because, of course, he could not read writing which was upside down, and, therefore, his whole evidence should be disbelieved.

"The lawyer opposed to me saw the point also, but instead of leaving the matter where it was he concluded to clinch it, and, taking the document, he laid it down on the table before the witness upside down and said to him, 'Let us see you read the paper now.'

"To my great surprise and relief the richer than Rockefeller and the Roths- from 54 cents and $1.08 to one rate of | witness read the writing, upside down childs rolled into one, it is entirely his $1.25 per 1,000. "That ended the contest over the execution of the bond. This sailor's ability to read writing when it was upside down was a curious instance of the many curious things which sailors do to occupy their time during idle watches on long voyages."

To Nervous Women. Avoid haste and hurry; these are the things that confuse the brain and make clear judgment impossible. The besetting temptation of the nervous woman is to hurry from one duty to another in breathless haste, attempting many tasks, yet achieving none of them with dignity or freedom. When such a temptation arises, call a halt. Remain quiet for a few minutes; summon back your self-possession, and refuse to do in one hour work that should be spread over two.

Habituate yourself to the control of the emotions. Nothing makes such havoc of the nervous system, nothing disorganizes the inner life like anger. fear, worry. These forces must be quelled if the soul is to maintain its supremacy and nervous peace is to be enjoyed; and this is done, not, indeed. by a fiat of the will, but by substituting for these destructive emotions such constructive ones as love, aspiration after some ideal, faith in God, and reverence for the divine order of life. -Dr. S. A Convenient Rule.

The editor of a newspaper published in a small town in New Jersey frequently received from one of its citizens letters on municipal affairs that were always pertinent and worthy of publication, but which were punctuated in a way that was most peculiar.

Meeting his correspondent on the street one day, he said, "That was an excellent letter I received from you this morning, Uncle Hugh, and I'm going to print it in this week's paper. But tell me, what rule do you follow for punctuation?"

"Why," replied Uncle Hugh, "the same rule as I was taught when I was a boy. I nut a semicolon every twelve words and two commas between each pair of semicolons."-Youth's Companion.

Some of you cause they overlook one or more of dollars, or the patient widow's mite of a hundred, or the little child's handful of pennies, ten or fifteen dollars, says Rev. Emory J. Haynes. These are the soul of the million. They stand for prayers and tears, for sacrifice and trembling hope, for the shield of age and the child's schooling.

As old Sodom was to have been saved for even the sake of five righteous men if found there, so the million dollars is safe-guarded by a just ruler of all the earth for the sake of the good dollars that make its soul. Perhaps the fact cannot be always proved. But it would be easy to prove that conscience should have something to say about where to invest our money. Nor is the smart investor responsible for the wickedness of the great corporation which he cannot prevent. Nor is the honest small investor excused from all thought about his invested dollar's morals.

In a life-plan of the highest order the purpose that an investment is to serve surely has its place, to serve and not to injure mankind. It is possible to choose. Certainly it is possible to judge the characters of the men who are managing the great corporation.

Surely Helen Rowland's epigram about marriage nowadays getting to be a "deal" rather than an ideal cannot fairly apply to the business girl.

The girl most apt to attach undue importance to this factor of married life is the girl who boards. An Indiana beauty-shop worker wistfully tells of one of the girl boarder's chief

Not long ago I was telling a friend of this and he raised the question whether she doted on this type because McCutcheon had brought him to her attention, or whether Mr. McCutcheon, with his ear to the ground, had manufactured this particular hero because he was just the kind his readers doted on.

Advertising Talks

BY GEORGE S. BANTA

How to Judge Results

If it were possible to tell the exact results of a given advertisement many mooted questions about advertising could be settled. An impression may last for months and finally bear results for the advertiser. Many readers of newspapers and magazines have a definite idea about an article or store with which they are acquainted only through the advertisements they have seen.

While it is true it is hard to be exact as to results, it is possible to learn more than many suppose. The average merchant sees results only when he makes a big cut in prices and by advertising the fact fills his store with people on the date of the sale. If advertising gets results of this kind, is it not plausible to presume that the daily business may be toned up in the same way?

Now suppose the merchant is a grocer. He has a small trade in a very high grade (and also high priced) brand of coffee which he has handled for years. He decides to advertise it. Let him keep account of his sales in this coffee for a given period and then suppose he run in one newspaper a suitable ad. After this ad has been used for a time, compare the sales with the number made in the original period. Then try the ad in another paper, and again make comparisons. In other words, let him experiment for his own satisfaction as to methods and mediums. A man judges a pair of shoes by the way they wear, but he knows how they wear by observing the service they give. No merchant will know anything about the results of advertising unless he makes observations upon what he spends for it as he does on what he spends for shoes.

The editors of these papers know very well that the prosperity of the town depends in a great degree upon the publicity given by the different merchants to their goods. The merchants, by liberal and judiclous advertising, would not only increase his own business, but would also materially assist the prosperity of the town. By advertising in his local paper, the merchant would eliminate to a great extent the outside competition of which he now complains. The people have to be shown that they can obtain as good merchandise in their and the way to do this is by advertis-

Object is to Reach the People. A merchant in this town a few days ago said, in speaking of the local paper as an advertising medium: "You send so many papers away off where they don't do us any good." The reply to this was: "Well, if we cover this territory better than any other medium, what matters it how many people far away take The Stanal? You get the beneat of the home circulation, and this field is well covered, and the class of trade you wish to reach is reached through these columns." The object in advertising any business is to reach the people, and that is: all! there is to it.

The "Slient Drummer."

Did you ever think what you ad. is the newspaper is doing for you? When you close your store in the evening and go home to your family and fireside, not thinking about your business at all, then it is that the paper is being pored over in hundreds of hornes-the homes from which your trade is drawn. And there is your ack doing its work silently, and if you have taken the pains to make it attractive, its work will be all the more effective. This is repeated over and over again, and is no doubt what inspired some writer to call newspaper advertising a "silent drummer."

Strong Healthy Women If a woman is strong and healthy in a womanly way, motherhood means to her but little suffering. The trouble lies in the fact that the many women suffer from weakness and disease of the distinctly feminine organism and are unfitted for motherhood. This can be remedied.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription

Cures the weaknesses and disorders of women. It acts directly on the delicate and important organs concerned in motherhood, making them healthy, strong, vigorous, virile and elastic.

"Favorite Prescription" banishes the indispositions of the period of expectancy and makes baby's advent easy and almost painless. It quickens and vitalizes the feminine organs, and insures a healthy and robust baby. Thousands of women have testified to its marvelous merits.

It Makes Weak Women Strong. It Makes Sick Women Well. Honest druggists do not offer substitutes, and urge them upon you as "just as good." Accept no secret nostrum in place of this non-secret remedy. It contains not a drop of alcohol and not a grain of habit-forming or injurious drugs. Is a pure glyceric extract of healing, native American roots.

HER CHOICE.

When the Time Came Her Decision Was Quickly Made.

By SARAH BRYCE VAUGHAN. [Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.]

"Why it is," said the ranchman, "that some wimmen can't make a straight deal with a lover. "We had a case out here onct where a gal kep' two fellers danglin' after her till she pretty nigh set both on 'em crazy. At last she had to decide all on a sudden, and it didn't take her a second to show which one on 'em had her heart. Mebbe she didn't know herself before that which did have it, and mebbe she did know. Leastaways there wasn't no hesitation when the time come to make a show down.

"She was a little Mexican gal. Her father had belonged to a big family in Spain, and sence most o' the big families there are down at the heel and Herrara bein' the youngest o' twelve children he went to Mexico, married and come up to this here territory to raise sheep. He had a daughter, Pacquita, born on his ranch. From the time she was able to walk she was out o' doors all the while, climbin' fences and trees, and when she was four was ridin' the horses to water.

"When Pacquita was sixteen she was a terror to her father and mother. She could shoot, ride, swing a lariat, do anything a cowboy could do. I've seen her toss her handkerchief on the ground, ride by it at full speed and with one spur hooked to her saddle reach down and pick it up. At that time she used to wear her hair flowin' out like a comet's tail-same as little gals do-and it was topped by a sombrero. Her jacket and skirt were Mexican, with lots o' gold braid. Her eyes were black and her complexion almost as dark as a quadroon's. She got that from her mother, who had Aztec blood in her.

"There was a Mexican boy whose father owned a ranch near the Herrara property that was brought up with Pacquita. He was just the same age, and they were just like brothers. Leastaways it seemed to me that Pacquita was more like a brother to

THE TWO MEN WERE SINKING LOWER. Jose Serrano than a sister. But I reckon they was more like lovers from the very first.

"They was always together till one day a young Englishman come out here to be a rancher. He was the sleekest looking feller I ever see. Edward Allston was his name, and he was a thoroughbred and no mistake. I didn't see him ridin' about with Pacquita till some time after his comin' here: then I used to see 'em together often. It didn't seem to me that if the Englishman wanted her the little Mexican would stand a ghost of a chanct. But, while she was with the Britisher a good deal, she didn't drop the Mexican. She appeared to be just as fond of him as ever. But what kind of fondness it was, now that Allston had come along, I didn't know. It seemed to me that sooner or later the little chap would find out that he was nowhere and the Britisher had the right

"I used to meet Pacquita ridin' fust with one and then with the other of these men. When she was with Jose he looked sullen, and I reckoned she war trying to make him believe she didn't care nothin' at all about Allston. When she was with Allston I reckoned she was tryin' to bring him under her spell. They was a fine contrast, them two, she a dark Spanish beauty, he a fair haired, blue eyed Britisher. It didn't appear to me that he was more interested in her than if she'd been any other gal. It war the way she slung them big black eyes about that made me think she was trying to lasso him. "The reason I took all this interest in the matter was that I was as fond o' Pacquita as if she'd been my own little gal. One day I overtook her ridin' along the road alone. After awhile I said somethin' against the Englishman just to see how she'd take it. She fired up, you bet. Then I told her I daughter of a lord. Serrano married thought Jose Herrara was worth three | Pacquita. All of which goes to show | of Edward Allston. She looked kind o' funny, but didu't say nothin'.

would be cruel to keep 'em on the anxious seat always.'

"'I don't know,' she said, 'that I have the privilege of decidin' between

"With that she cantered away, kind of glum.

"I knew well enough that so far as Jose Herrara was concerned she could have him whenever she wanted him. But I didn't know anything about her havin' the Englishman.

"But as time wore on I saw Pacquita and Allston more and more together, while Serrano seemed to be dropped out o' the race. It was perfectly natural that a fine lookin' man with swell manners should supplant a boy who didn't show up for much except that he was a very good kind of a feller. He'd been about the only person Pacquita had ever come across for a lover. and when somethin' better turned up it was natural she should gradually let go her hold on the first and get a grip on the second.

"But the time come when it was plain enough that the Englishman had been landed and was layin' on his side gaspin'. What I mean by that is that the gal had woven a spell about him he couldn't resist, and he was dead gone on her. From that time she did not seem so stuck on him as she was before. That's the way with all of uswhen we once git a thing we don't care so much about it as we thought we did. That's what I thought was the case with Pacquita, but them as knew told me I was wrong. They said she was in love with Allston and was goin'

"The race was comin' to a finish, with big odds on Allston. Leastaways, it would 'a' been ridiculous for Pacquita to stick to a boy lover when she could git a man and a fine man at that. But she didn't seem to want to decide.

"One day Pacquita was out on her horse, got up, as usual, in her Mexican toggery, a revolver at her side and a lariat at the pommel of her saddle, when she saw the two men who was courtin' her ridin' toward each other. She wondered what they was goin' to do. She didn't want 'em to fight-fact is, all along she had been keepin' Serrano from pickin' a quarrel with Allston. Then she remembered that there was a quicksand between 'em, an' she began to worry lest one on 'em would git into it. She reckoned Jose Serrano knew all about it, but she wasn't sure Allston did. They was a ridin' kind o' reckless, especially Serrano, and she made up her mind there war goin' to be a fracas. She war bound to stop it, so she started for 'em.

"Well, before she reached 'em they met. She saw that Serrano was talkin' mighty savage to Allston, while Allston was a-keepin' his temper and pattin' his horse, which seemed restive, to keep him quiet. Pacquita rode on as fast as she could make her beast go, dreadin' every minute to see the two men come to blows. Then she noticed that there seemed to be somethin' the matter with both their horses. Serrano went on talkin' excitedly, but Allston stopped payin' any attention to him and was lashin' his horse. The horse seemed to be makin' a great effort to do somethin', but didn't do nothin'. Then Serrano's horse was a-makin' the same efforts.

"Pacquita turned pale, for she knew that both her lovers had struck the quicksand, and once in it there was no chanct for either of 'em to get out. She made her horse do her best, usin' whip and spur, but she was ridin' across country, with no road, and the goin' was bad. The two men were sinkin' lower and lower and shoutin' like mad for help. Pacquita was the only person to hear 'em, and there was little prospect she'd reach 'em before they sunk out o' sight. She was only a gal anyway.

"When she rode up to 'em their horses' heads was the only part of elther critter above the sand and both men had sunk to the waist. Allston, bein' the heaviest, had sunk a little lower than Serrano. Pacquita wrung her hands for a moment, wild at not bein' able to help 'em, each of 'em lookin' at her pitifully. Then she remembered her lariat. Quick as a flash she unwound and poised it ready to throw. Each man was up to his armpits. Even if she had time to save one on 'em she wouldn't have time to save the other. "This is where the time come I was tellin' you about at the beginnin' o' this yarn, where the gal had to decide which one of the two men she loved, or, rather, the love for one o' 'em that was in her decided the matter for her. Swingin' the loop around three or four times, she let it go and it shot out over the quicksand. "Which o' them two fellers do you suppose the loop fell on? Why, the little Mexican. When it come to the pint the child love that had growed like a young twig was stronger than the new thing that had come when Pacquita was growed. "The rope fell true and in a moment was around Jose's shoulders under his arms. Pacquita had the other end fastened to the pommel of her saddle, and, startin' her horse gently, so as not to break the rope, he pulled the Mexican out. Then she fell in a faint, but Serrano didn't waste no time on her. He threw the lasso to Allston, who caught it in his hands. Serrano was tuggin' away, tryin' to pull the Britisher out, when a horseman appeared and, coming up, lent a hand. Together they hauled Allston on to firm ground. "That was the end o' the rivalry between these two men. Allston went back to England and married the that if a gal is in doubt between two lovers she kin find out which one she "'Well, little gal,' I said when I left wants by havin' a chanct to save the
