P. R. Legg will open a supply warehouse next the Gem Theatre in a few days; to be used to store feed for prompt delivery to merchants between cars. He will partition off an office in front for use in his school work.

Swan Kjellander has added to his shop two pieces of equipment; one a special vise for holding horseshoes to be sharpened, and the other an arrangement for making bolthead of any size.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Anderson and Dr. George Bjorkman went in to St Paul Sunday night with Miss Gertrude Anderson, who underwent an operation for appendicitis the following day.

P. W. Peterson, R. J. Hammel and Frank Miller made a special excursion to Chicago Sunday to see the decisive game of the world's championship series.

JEANNETTE JEWELL KELLOGG, A READER OF UNQUESTIONED ABILITY, RETURNS TO GLADSTONE.

Will be heard at Alice Memorial M. E. church, Thursday November 3, 8 p. m. Testimonial from Rev. Dr. Thos. P. Byrnes, a noted Lecturer and Platform Man.

To whom it may concern: This is to say that I have heard Mrs. Jeannette Jewell Kellogg, of Buffalo, N. Y., read upon different occasions, one of them being the rendering by her of a full evening's programme in my church, in Erie, Pa., and I do not hesitate to say that I consider her among the first two or three readers the American people today.

In the first place, Mrs. Kellogg is a natural born reader; she was born to the platform, and she loves her work. She has the type of personality that makes her strong, effective and attractive upon the platform, superabundant health, splendid presence, gracious manner, a fresh, tender, loving soul and spirit, a clearstrong magnetic voice, responsive to every emotion of her heart, and to that very delicate shade of literary meaning and character interpretation; and she adds to all this natural endowment the supreme achievement of the artist, the magic power of the skilled player upon the hearts of men and women, the poetic temperament; her voice and body in every move and tone are the plastic instruments of the soul within her, and so the whole effect of an evening under her spell is a charm that melts, a grace that wins, a joy that is so rare and delightful.

THOS. P. BYRNES.

CLEAN UP YOUR CHIMNEYS.

During this season of the year just beginning furnaces, stoves, fire places, etc. are started and in most cases this is done without any cleaning of flues or inspection having been done.

Every property owner should make a careful inspection of all chimneys to see that there has been no settling which caused cracks or other openings and to see that all openings are properly protected by metal caps, as it is a common practice during the summer decorating season to cover these openings with cheese cloth and wall paper. A very small expense at this time of the year for inspection and careful cleaning of chimneys will save a large property loss during the next few months. Examination of the furnace room should be made to see that no wooden partition which is not protected comes close to the sides, back or top of the furnace. Wooden partitions which come closer than eighteen inches should be protected by asbestos board.

Stove pipes which pass through wooden floors or partitions should be protected by thimbles which are at least an inch larger in diameter than the pipes.

Care should be taken to dump ashes in safe places outside and away from any building.

All dried leaves and other rubbish, which is so easily ignited by sparks, should be cleaned out of eave troughs and cornices.

WM. E. GAUFFIN, Fire Warden.

THE GRAND PENINSULAR BASE BURNER

Is the most economical and the easiest controlled stove made, for the following reasons:

The heat is all carried down the back of the stove, and drawn in an unbroken current, clear round the recessed flue bottom, then up the back of the stove again before reaching the stove pipe.

No flue strips are used in the Peninsular construction, but the recessed bottom gives one third more radiating surface at the bottom of stove close to the floor, where heat is most needed. The fire pots are in two sections, with hot blast draft clear round the pot between upper and lower sections.

The duplex grate, complete with the outer shaking ring, is easily removed through the ash pit door.

The draft is controlled by a machine fitted screw draft regulator, which is practically air tight. The check damper is of ample size and controls the desired heat to a nicety. All nickel parts are easily removed and are attached to the stove in such a manner as not to interfere with the direct radiation of heat from the body. The magazines are extra large and equipped with gas flues which prevent fire burning up in magazine, and further, are so shaped that coal will not clog, but will feed down evenly to the fire. Fire pots are easily removed through the front of the stove, making repairs easy when needed. All castings are extra heavy, carefully fitted together by expert union labor, and entire stove is guaranteed against fire cracks, and guaranteed to give entire satisfaction to the purchaser.

A CAREFUL INSPECTION OF OUR LINE OF PENINSULAR STOVES IS REQUESTED OF ALL PROSPECTIVE PURCHASERS. WE CARRY 6 DIFFERENT SIZES IN STOCK.

OFFICIALS BUSY DURING PAST YEAR

Departments Have Made Many Investigations.

136 VIOLATORS CONVICTED

During the Months of July and August, When Infant Mortality is Greatest, Special Attention is Given to City Milk Supply.

Lansing.—The dairy and food department has given out some statistics that will appear in the forthcoming report.

During the year ending July 1, 1910, the department inspectors inspected and reported on 555 creameries, 144 cheese factories, 376 farm dairies and made 431 city milk supply inspections. This does not include the work done by special inspectors during the months of July and August. There were 1,946 samples of food products examined in the department laboratory, 1,285 of which were found to be pure and 661 adulterated. There were 145 prosecutions commenced by the department during the year, resulting in 136 convictions and four acquittals. Under department auspices 51 dairy meetings were held and in their inspection work the inspectors visited 8,435 dealers in food products within the state.

In addition to the above, the service of one chemist was given almost entirely to the analysis of concentrated commercial feeding stuffs, including samples sent to the laboratory by manufacturers and samples taken on the open market. The department conducted a monthly educational scoring contest to which samples of butter and cheese were sent by the various manufacturers in the state. These samples were also analyzed in the laboratory and advice and instructions given to the manufacturer when found necessary.

During the months of July and August, when infant mortality is greatest, special attention and thorough inspection is given to the city milk supply. This work necessitated the employment of extra inspectors during those months.

It should not be inferred from an examination of the figures presented that they represent the actual condition of the food supply of Michigan with reference to adulteration. The experience of the department's inspectors enables them to readily determine as to the purity of many of the different food products suspected by them. Only samples supposed to be adulterated or in which some new form of adulteration is liable to appear are sent to the laboratory for chemical analysis.

In addition to the publication of an annual report, the department publishes a bulletin of which more than 100,000 copies are distributed during the year to the trade, to factories and to others interested.

Loan Associations Enjoy Prosperity.

The annual report of the building and loan associations of Michigan for the year ending June 30, 1910, issued by Secretary of State Marindale, shows an increase in the gross assets of $1,820,348.06, which is the largest gain ever shown in one year in this state.

The number of shares in force at the conclusion of the fiscal year amounted to 485,812, and the capital stock totaled $47,024,293.67. The operating expenses for the year amounted to $204,757.69 or 1.7 per cent. of the gross receipts. The total membership was 14,994. During the past year there was a gain in the gross assets of $1,820,348.06.

Lumbermen's Bureau Incorporated.

The Detroit Lumbermen's Credit Bureau filed articles of incorporation with the secretary of state in the sum of $10,000. The articles of association state that the object of the new firm is collecting, compiling and preserving reports and information concerning the financial standing.

Also the furnishing and selling of such reports to members or subscribers of the corporation and to other persons, firms or corporations if the Lumbermen's Credit Bureau shall so determine.

Favor Study of Nude in Art.

While the W. C. T. U. in district convention at Washington, D. C., was condemning Mrs. Albert C. Barney's nude but famous statue of "Deserted Ariadne" and opposing the modeling of such statues at all, the Michigan Federation of Women's club at Battle Creek was loudly applauding the suggestion of Mrs. John B. Sherwood of Chicago, that the study of the nude human form be encouraged and children taught that the human body is pure and beautiful.

When Mrs. Sherwood held a nude picture (a copy of a William Morris Hunt painting) before the somewhat surprised gathering of club women, there was no expression of horror, on the contrary, when she advocated the nude in art, she was cheered and asked to continue speaking, though she had already exceeded the time limit.

"There is no more noble or pure set of men than the artists as a whole," said Mrs. Sherwood, who, before ending her address, prophesied that the middle west, with Chicago as the center, would soon be the art center of America.

"The art of the twentieth century will be American," she concluded. "Already American landscape artists are the greatest in the world."

Mrs. Minnie Dixon McIntosh of Allegan gave a stirring plea for domestic science in the public schools. "Most girls are entirely unprepared for the duties of housewife," she declared. "Much good food is spoiled by poor cooking. Domestic science is the most important subject that could be taught to school girls."

Mrs. McIntosh expressed keen regret that out of 845 schools in Michigan, only 44 teach domestic science. But in the past year 96 women's clubs have taken up the matter and an improvement may be looked for by 1911.

Mrs. Jordan, dean of the University of Michigan, reporting on the Lucinda Hinsdale Memorial scholarship for girls, said that 17 co-ed students have taken advantage of it and gone through college, while seven have already paid back every cent borrowed from the fund.

Baptists Close State Convention.

The Baptist state convention turned down an invitation from the Fountain Street church, Grand Rapids, and decided to hold next year's gathering at Adrian. It endorsed the Anti-Saloon league and repudiated party prohibition.

Delegates elected to represent the Michigan Baptists at the Northern Baptist convention are:

Dr. M. P. Fikes, Woodward Avenue church; A. S. Slocum, president of Kalamazoo college; F. T. Galpin, First Baptist church, Detroit; F. B. Cutler, Fourteenth Avenue church, Detroit; J. W. Hoyt, pastor of the First Baptist church, Jackson; M. A. Graybill, Bay City; W. R. Shoemaker, Manistiquet; George Laughton, Owosso; B. M. Thomas, Bay City; T. W. Young, North Baptist church, Detroit; Oliver Van Osdel, Wealthy Avenue Baptist church, Grand Rapids; Doctor Wisheart, Fountain Street church, Grand Rapids.

The convention ended with the following sessions: Reading of minutes and business; report of committee on ministerial training, Rev. Frank Barnett; report of committee on obituaries, Rev. G. M. Velocoe; report of Ministers' Aid society, Rev. J. S. Boyden; address on Northern Baptist convention, Shaller Mathews, D. D., Chicago; report of committee on resolutions; report of committee on convention expense; devotional service conducted by Dr. E. B. Bryan, Laymen's business session; closing convention and banquet; toastmaster, Smith G. Young, Lansing; addresses, "Our Boys," Eugene C. Foster, Detroit; "A Thousand Million Men," E. H. Longher, Jackson.

Clubwomen Vote to Favor Ballot.

Without any discussion whatever, the question of whether the Michigan Federation of Woman's Clubs should support woman suffrage was put to the convention and carried, two to one, by a standing vote. This vote was on a resolution favoring "votes for women," introduced a year ago and each delegate came instructed by her club to vote for or against the "suffragette" movement. The president reminding the convention of this fact, there was no open debate as had been anticipated.

Women's clubs are doing a great work as outlined by Miss Clara Bates of Traverse City before the Michigan Federation. Starting out with the "Culture and uplift of the community," as an aim and object, they have developed into a general benefit to the communities in which they exist. Among recent achievements in Michigan they have done away largely with the sling shot in favor of the bird-house, have developed a plan for home and school gardening, have established scholarships and started remedial legislation in industrial and child labor matters, have raised the standard of literary work among women and have taken up other practical work.

D. U. R. Has Big Lead in Accidents.

Of 201 accidents on electric lines in the state in August, 192 occurred on the D. U. R., according to a report just issued by the state railway commission. Seven deaths were reported, of which five were credited to the D. U. R. Reports for the year ending June 30, for three of the largest steam roads show that 148 persons were killed and 715 injured on the three roads in Michigan, divided as follows: Michigan Central, 84 killed and 170 injured; Pere Marquette, 45 killed and 314 injured.

URGES USE OF DISPLAY SPACE

Oklahoma Divine Would Spread Gospel by Advertising in the Daily Papers.

Rev. Albert Edgar Wardner, Jr., of Emond, Okla., in a sermon in the First Presbyterian church at Kansas City recently, declared that the church should apply the principles of modern advertising to the work of religion more than it is doing at present. His subject was "The Lost Art of Advertising for Christ and the Church," and he affirmed that when Christ sent out his twelve disciples, commanding them, "Go ye into all the world and preach the Gospel to every creature," he commissioned them to advertise him and his Gospel to all creation. He said in part: "Every Christian was intended to be an advertiser and a careful study of the early centuries of the church's history shows that the church grew with wonderful rapidity because it advertised Christ and the principles which he taught. The early Christian went everywhere preaching the Gospel, and Edward Giggon, the great historian of the decline and fall of the Roman empire, in seeking to account for the conquest of Christianity over the paganism of Rome, attributes this largely to 'the zeal and enthusiasm of the early Christians.'"

"So long as the church continued to advertise Christ, it grew in numbers and influence and power, but when it ceased to bring him and his teachings to the attention of men, it ceased to prosper. Martin Luther brought back power and prosperity to a decadent church because he advertised anew the sweet and simple principles of the Gospel of Christ, when heretofore men had heard only of scholasticism, monasticism and ecclesiasticism. The great revivals of the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries came to the church because great leaders like Wesley and Edwards and Finney and Moody did not hesitate to advertise Christ, bringing him persistently and insistently to the attention of the non-church going public."

"Because of the prayerfulness and selfishness of a large portion of the church membership of today, the church is not advertising Christ to the world as it ought and is not bringing its founder to the forefront as it ought. The two great methods of modern advertising, advertising by publicity and by personality, are being ignored sadly by the church."

The church is not making enough use of the advertising columns of the daily press. To all intents and purposes the official boards of the churches of this city have relegated Christ and his Gospel to the finest print in a part of the paper where no one sees it unless he is looking for it. The churches of this great city should use a whole page each Saturday in every daily in the city, worthily presenting the claims of religion upon a population three-fourths of whom do not go to church at all.

"But better than display advertising in the columns of the daily press is the daily advertising of a consistent Christian life. This is the unanswerable argument which the men and women of the world cannot meet. And yet notwithstanding this, it is today, as Bishop Satterlee once said: 'Many in America who are being attracted to the church by the teachings of Christ are being repelled from the church by the un-Christian lives of many of its professed followers.'"

- To stop advertising is to let your business run on momentum, and momentum is a gradual move toward a dead stop.

FRAMED UP A GOOD "AD."

How Patient Attention Was Drawn to a Novel That Had Merit, by a Frenchman.

Although the art of advertising is not understood in France as it is understood in England and America, the natural genius of the French for picturesqueness occasionally finds vent in very striking and very telling modes of advertising. Here is an advertisement which I saw a few days ago in several of the Paris papers, the Paris correspondent of the London Express says: "A young man of 27, good looking, and very wealthy, is anxious to marry a young lady whose appearance and character correspond with those of Vera in 'Love's Victim.' I have not given the real name of the novel, which has had advertising enough."

Of course, the novel had a large sale. And as it happens to be quite a clever book the author has reason to be pleased with his advertisement.

It Surely Pays to Advertise.

Under the heading, "Romance of a 10-cent ad.," the Bangor News tells of a Maine man who through the investment of a dime found a woman described as being a fine cook, a neat housekeeper, good looking, affectionate and willing to marry him. He had a lot of answers, but followed up the first letter he opened, and the News says he is glad of it. It pays to advertise.

A Double Cross.

"Poor Bill walked ten miles to propose to his girl, and she turned him down after all."

"What did he say?"
"Well," he said, "to think I've footed it all this way only to have it handed to me!"

If advertising doesn't pay, why is it that the most successful merchants of every town, large and small, are the heaviest advertisers? If it does not pay, why do the largest business firms in the world spend millions in that way? Is it because they want to donate those millions to the newspapers and magazine publishers, or because they don't know as much about business as the six-for-a-dollar merchant who says money spent in advertising is thrown away or donated to the man to whom it is paid? Such talk is simply ridiculous and it requires more than the average patience to discuss the proposition of whether advertising pays or not with that kind of a man.

GET RESULT FROM PUBLICITY

Advertising Should Be Clear and Original and Sufficiently Interesting to Be Read.

Paul C. Gerhardt, advertising manager of the Dallas Dispatch, and secretary of the Southwestern division of Associated Advertising clubs, talked to members of the Topeka Advertising club recently in regard to the results to be obtained through systematic advertising.

Mr. Gerhardt talked of the heart interest in advertising and its results. His chief points were directed to the advertiser himself. In part Mr. Gerhardt said:

"Advertising should be clear, lively and original. It should be appropriate to the size, quality and standing of the house it represents. It must be sufficiently interesting to be read with interest. In fact, the advertiser must be sufficiently posted upon his subject that he can talk interestingly regarding it."

"There are two ends to be accomplished—the future building up of one's business, and immediate results. The former is the more important. What the advertiser must do is place his business before the people in a way to build his reputation. The biggest opportunity is in the future—the further one looks ahead, the greater will be the results obtained."

"It is the man who does not advertise, or who does not do so persistently, who will be the first to feel the depression in times of business adversity."

Mr. Gerhardt referred to the writing of advertising, saying:

"Begin spontaneously at the vital point. An advertisement should not be written to be admired for literary show. Results are what is wanted. They must be written to sell the goods. Many advertisements do not contain enough salesmanship. They should contain that which the business man would tell the customer were he talking to him face to face. Hackneyed terms should be avoided. They weaken the appeal. Some merchants are too general, others use technical terms which the customer does not understand. This is harmful in that the outlay is an expense which cannot draw the same results as a well written, clear, concise and original advertisement."

"Every advertisement should have enough originality to be recognized, even should the name of the business man be displaced and that of a competitor substituted."

An Advertising Pastor. In the catalogue for the Lafayette County (Mo.) fair, appeared the following unique advertisement:

AFTER THE RACES DON'T FORGET THAT THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH HIGGINSVILLE, MO., has a wide-awake Sunday school, to which the whole country is invited. Classes for everybody. The preaching services are not so bad. H. W. HUNTER, Minister. P. L. McCORD, Superintendent.

When asked what he thought of advertising as an aid to Christianity, Rev. Mr. Hunter said: "I am a firm believer in it. I have done a good deal of it and am sure it does good."

- Free advertising don't pay.
- You usually have to make a fool of yourself in order to get it.

Zone of Safety.

"I don't see how I could insure your life. Aviation is a dangerous calling."

"But, by dear friend, don't you see, it puts us out of reach of the automobile."

Naturally the policy was won.

A Logical Landlord.

Many a tenant will sympathize with the man in this story, from the Philadelphia Record. He was renting a small house which the landlord had refused to repair. One day the owner came to see him.

"Jones," he said, "I shall have to raise your rent."

"What for?" asked Jones, anxiously. "Have taxes gone up?"

"No," the landlord answered, "but I see you've painted the house and put in a new range and bathtub. That, of course, makes it worth more rent."

$100 Reward, $100.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and restoring nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials. Address P. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O. ## NEW HAT SHAPES

WOMEN GROW MORE EXACTING AS SEASONS PASS.

Many Demand Millinery That Follows Style Features of Season, but Embodies Original and Unusual Ideas.

So many hats must be made for so many women, who grow more and more exacting as the seasons pass! The majority of them want something which is popular, something to which they have become accustomed. Others demand millinery that follows the style features of the season, but embodies original and unusual ideas; and a small coterie wants the entirely new things, wishing to be the first to exploit them.

The charming model, covered with velvet and trimmed with a pair of glorious wings, is not difficult to make—quite within range of the average

Milliner. But, when one considers that such wings bring $12 to $15 a pair and soar to $25 when made of rare feathers, it will be conceded that distinction is expensive again. This model may be copied with good effect using less expensive wings. The crown is large and round and the drooping brim bends out to a blunt point at the front.

THE NEWEST IN HOSIERY

Stockings Beaded Across the Instep and Up the Ankles are Most Novel.

The newest hosiery shows many charming effects. Stockings beaded across the instep and up the ankles are perhaps the most novel, while others embroidered in delicate designs appear more graceful than those with the pattern scattered indiscriminately in an all-over or loose pattern.

A design describing a circle just above the instep is new, and there are innumerable drop-stitch weaves. The colors are unusually varied and can be found to match any gown. Some are of a most beautiful changeable effect in silk, while others are so closely embroidered that they have a two-toned effect without being actually woven in that way.

Plain stockings, of lisle, silk or gauze, still hold their popularity with women of conservative taste for all except elaborate occasions or for home use with dainty house gowns or lounging robes.

HOW TO RELINE A JACKET

Simple Process Is Explained So Any Woman, Handy With Needle, Can Do It.

Many women, otherwise clever with the needle, think it difficult to reline a jacket. It is in reality simple. Rip out one-half of the jacket lining for a pattern, cut a complete lining by this, leaving the other half attached to the jacket for a guide. Sew the lining together, leaving the underarm seams open. Now baste in one-half, fitting it smoothly along the fronts and bottom of the jacket; then rip out the other half of the old lining and baste in the same way.

Sew the new lining all around bottom, neck, and fronts. Any fulness will go into the armholes and underarm seams, which should be sewed last of all. Cut the sleeves from the old lining and attach at the top and bottom, finishing the armhole first. Be sure to have the lining larger than the sleeves, so as to allow plenty of room at the elbow.

Wicker Furniture.

Wicker furniture, such as chairs, tables, couches and the like, are to be had now in almost any color of enamel paint. If it is desired to carry out a certain color scheme in bed or sitting-rooms, these painted articles are a very pretty addition. They are to be found in several light shades, of blue, pink, purple and the like, and in the more substantial dark colors, such as green and brown.

REMODELING PRINCESS GOWN

Discarded Frocks Can Be Worked Over into Prevailing Styles Very Easily.

The princess gown is now so largely a thing of the past that women who have frocks of this character on their hands, or, rather, in their wardrobes, are casting about for ways of remodeling them in accordance with the prevailing styles. Here are two good suggestions, each worked out in the case of an actual gown.

In the first case, there was a front skirt panel which extended a little above the fitted waist line. The great object, of course, was to give the appearance of a belt where no belt was; and this was achieved by the introduction of a large ribbon rosette at each side, with a loose fold of ribbon to match, connecting them at the back. The gown then seemed equipped with a girde which was only broken at the front panel.

In the other frock, the situation was complicated by the fact that the princess effect extended upward in bib fashion, and yet was too high to agree with even the present empire styles. The problem was solved by slashing the gown at the belt in a wide oblong, leaving only the front, as if it were a skirt panel, and then introducing a shirred oblong of the same material as the deep yoke on the blouse. Thus the gown seemed transformed to a tunic frock, built over the yoke material. A strap of the skirt fabric, which had been cut out, was applied over the shirred material to complete this effect.

AEROPLANE CURLS LATEST

Hairdressers Are Showing Unusual Novelty—Curls Are Small and Fluffy.

The latest comers in the world of fashion which the hairdressers are showing are the aeroplane curls to tuck beneath the laces of the new breakfast cap or under the frills of the Theatre Bravolet.

The curls are much smaller and fluffier than those which have been worn during the past year, and they are pinned lightly at either side of the face just to show beneath the lace ruffle which edges the cap.

Chanteleur curls they are called in Paris, and are worn not only under the cap, but in a cluster at the back of the neck.

They are, however, the only false hair which seems to be popular, and it is said that even these will be discarded after the feminine world has got used to the idea of going about showing the shape of their heads instead of wearing a haystack.

When you buy the curls be sure that they exactly match your own hair, for if they vary even so little they look false and spoil entirely the effect they are supposed to give.

PRETTY SILK VOILE WAIST

This pretty waist is of nite-green silk voile trimmed with bands of beautiful English embroidery set in by fagoting.

The sleeves are made with fine tucks and trimmed to correspond. The little gumples is of white lace.

The Shallow Yoke. It is not so very long ago that the deep yoke of heavy lace was a feature of many of the most effective costumes. This season it is the shallow yoke, and that alone, which will be modish, and frequently this little yoke, to make it less conspicuous, will be veiled with chiffon. Many collarless waists will be worn all through the winter. Waists finished with a turn-down collar of satin or suede will be very fashionable. It is a great mistake, however, for a woman whose throat is not white and pretty to have the neck of her frock finished in this way. Net yokes and high stock collars are also fashionable and especially when they are cream white, finished with a piping of black or Paisley satin. Sleeves are all more or less simple. The coat sleeves are long and straight, with the exception of the "more dressy" tailor-mades where the three-quarter-length sleeve is seen, finished with a rather elaborate cuff.

A MYSTERIOUS HORN

OCCULT BUGLER HAS THE TOWN OF CADIZ, O., EXCITED.

Reputable People, Hear Notes, But They Cannot Locate Any One in Band Room Where Instruments Are Kept.

Cadiz, O.—The Cadiz band has large quarters in the Bingham block just north of the public square in Cadiz, and on the same floor are the rooms of the Harrison News, one of the weekly county papers, and the offices of Attorney R. H. Minter, and C. M. Osborn, a well-known real estate dealer.

At exactly nine o'clock the other morning C. G. Addleman, editor of the Harrison News, and John T. Timmons, the blind author, were seated in Mr. Addleman's private office, and John Howard, one of the printers, who is a musician of note, having traveled with Buffalo Bill's Wild West shows for a number of years, and who is a member of the Cadiz band, was working in the other rooms, and Mr. Minter and Mr. Osborn were in their rooms, there were a number of loud blasts on a horn in the band room, where the members meet and practise and the instruments are kept. The notes had the sound as if produced by some one unused to blowing a horn.

Mr. Howard having a key to the room, went at once to see if some boy had entered the band room and was meddling with the instruments. He stopped at the door, and looked through the glass, but saw no one. Mr. Minter came and expected to find some one in the band room, but could see no one. Mr. Howard to be satisfied, opened the door, and entering found nothing disturbed, and no one present, as he examined the closets, making sure no one could be hiding there.

All those present declare the notes came directly from the band room. All the doors were open except that leading to the room where the musical instruments are kept.

It was very startling to the men hearing the sounds. All are truthful and trustworthy citizens, and not believers in anything supernatural, but this was unexplainable.

It was learned the notes were heard on the street, and by persons in an adjoining yard, and all declare the sounds came from the band room.

Persons residing in the vicinity declare it is quite common to hear strange sounds coming from this band room late at night, after all musicians have left, and on nights when there is no band meeting and no one practising there. It is also asserted these same sounds have been heard by occupants of the rooms in the building, but not by so many as heard them on this occasion, when there were five good citizens, who are not given to spiritualism, or anything of the sort, heard the sounds, and are willing to swear they came from the room occupied only by the band instruments.

PIES UPSET BY LIGHTNING

Capricious Bolt Plays Many Puzzling Pranks in a Pennsylvania Town.

Lewiston, Pa.—In a brilliant awe-inspiring display of lightning hereabouts there was one bolt that outdid all the others combined. This bolt seemed to like the town, for it stayed for some time, leaping from one place to another for brief visits.

It was at the home of Harry Mitchell, who lives at the western end of the Lutheran cemetery, that it played the most puzzling pranks. The bolt struck the house, shattering it like a stove. Even clothing in the wardrobes was torn to ribbons and scorched at it sprinkled with acid. Running down a rainspout, it next struck a barrel of water in front of the kitchen, where Mrs. Mitchell was baking pies. The pies were all turned upside down in the oven and the crusts and "fill" splattered about.

Striking a stone wall along the turnpike, the bolt followed a creek to the Juniata river, and witnesses say that for several minutes the river was a sheet of flame. Mr. Mitchell was at the chickenhouse and had an ax in his hand when the bolt first appeared and struck him, knocking the ax twenty feet. The lightning played about him until Alfred Allen, a neighbor, believing he was on fire, dashed a bucket of water over him.

Stones weighing 100 pounds were tossed about, and a part of the bolt followed a sheet of rain up the pike to Lake Park and Bratton avenue, where several citizens were stunned.

Hookworm Causes Ossification.

Richmond, Va.—M. L. Peaden, a farmer of Pitt county, N. C., is threatened with entire ossification of the limbs and body at the Retreat for the Sick, where he has been under treatment.

Peaden's condition is regarded by many physicians who have viewed the remarkable case to be due to an attack of hookworm disease which he suffered some two years ago. Six months ago Peaden noticed the hardening of the muscles of his feet, limbs and hands. The hardening process continued to such an alarming degree that they would crack when jarred by walking, and he was prevented from moving about much. The joints of elbows and fingers developed boil-like ulcers, though otherwise he was in little pain from his peculiar condition.

TWINS COURT TWINS

MISSOURI BACHELORS, 62, WOULD WED SISTERS OF 22.

Twin Conquest Result of Twin Contest for Popularity Prize for Twins—Whole County Is Interested.

Plattsburg, Mo.—David and Dallas Pogue of Plattsburg, sixty-two-year-old twins, are laying siege for the hearts and hands of Lula and Lela Brown of Mecca, twenty-two-year-old twins, and all Clinton county is interested in the double-barreled romance.

David and Dallas are bachelors because they agreed, a long time ago, that they would never marry unless they could find twins to marry. They have lived all these years without coming across feminine twins of marriageable age, and now that they have found a pair of twenty-two-year-old twins they are in the midst of a whirlwind courtship and have announced that they are going to fight it out on the twin line if it takes all summer and half of the winter.

Last winter a Plattsburg newspaper started a popularity contest and the Brown twins were entered. That was how the Pogue twins heard of the Brown twins.

The Pogue twins got busy. They made up their minds that the Brown twins should be elected the most popular girls in Clinton county. They boosted hard for the Browns.

Two diamond rings were offered as prizes in a preliminary skirmish. The Pogues saw to it that the Browns won the diamond rings. Then they went in strong on the big contest for the piano. After they had obtained all the subscribers that they could they bought subscriptions outright and gave the paper away, and cast the votes for the twins.

When the contest ended there was no "most popular young woman in Clinton county." There were two and they were the Brown twins. And the Pogue twins had won.

There was a banquet to celebrate the victory. The Brown twins were the guests of honor and the Pogue twins were the hosts. Then the four twins had their pictures taken together and if anybody had doubted before that a twin conquest was going to grow out of the twin contest, that settled it.

Now everybody is waiting for the announcement of the engagement of the twins to the twins. Nobody knows which Pogue twin is most likely to get which Brown twin, but that is not important. The Pogue twins look so much alike and the Brown twins look so much alike that either way will do.

FROG IN GIRL'S BATHING SUIT

Fair Swimming Pupil Loudly Calls Upon a Woman Friend to Fish It Out.

St. Louis, Mo.—It is written in the philosophy of Capt. James Fitzgerald, swimming instructor at Plaza pool, that there is always a way—that is, nearly always. His way of getting a night's sleep in a flooded bedroom is to put on a bathing suit and a way he recommends of getting rid of mosquitoes is to go swimming and smoke cigarettes. But there was no way that he could suggest when a bullfrog jumped inside of a woman's bathing suit.

Captain Fitz was giving a swimming lesson when the jumping bullfrog put him up against a problem which stumped him. He had a woman in the end of a line teaching her how to swim. A bullfrog sat in a crevice at the edge of the pool and watched proceedings with interest. "One, two, three," chanted Captain Fitz, and just as he said "three" a boy, running by on the brink of the pool, started the frog and he leaped wildly into the pool.

Not into the pool, either. The woman wore a low cut bathing suit, a trifle loose at the neck. The frog landed inside. That made two in a bathing suit that was only built for one. It was hard to tell which was most anxious to get out, the woman or the frog. The frog did not know how and the woman could not get out quickly enough. She splashed and shrieked and begged Fitz to rescue her from the frog or rescue the frog from her.

While Fitz hesitated and stammered another woman swam to the one in need of help, reached inside of her bathing suit and caught the frog and withdrew it, and thereby earned the gratitude of the woman—and the frog.

Thought He Had Rheumatism.

Camden, N. J.—Stabbed during a fight last March, Barney Gofney, colored, twenty-six years old, was not aware that about two inches of the blade of a large pocket knife was left in his back until he visited Cooper hospital in Camden. When he called at the institution he complained of a severe pain. He had been using home remedies for rheumatism and as the pain grew worse he decided to go to the hospital for examination. Discovering a scar, the physicians asked if he had been injured.

"No," came the reply. "I was stabbed in a fight about six months ago, but I don't think that could have anything to do with the pain, now that the wound has healed."

Opening the old wound the physicians found the piece of steel and it was removed with difficulty. It was part of the knife with which Gofney was stabbed. Physicians say it is remarkable that tetanus had not developed.

She says Justice Miller presided over the justice court in which she was married and he also sentenced her husband. Justice Miller has long been dead and old citizens here say that he never kept any record of his court proceedings.

Kalamazoo.—Charles Young, a cupola tender in Reed's foundry, lost both feet when the cupola dropped out, letting molten metal in. He is married and has five children. Garrett Smith was found unconscious on his door step and the police believe he was assaulted by thugs. His life is despaired of.

Coldwater.—Miss Clara Brodhead, daughter of Mrs. Howard Brodhead, and Edwin C. Mullen of New London, Ia., were married at the home of the bride's parents, Rev. George E. Barnes of the Presbyterian church officiating.

NATURAL ACT FOR MOTHER

Women Understand That Not Heroism but Simply Love Prompted Self Sacrifice.

A few days ago, in a somewhat squallid neighborhood, a house caught fire. The flames shot quickly through the litter on the floor and the untidy array of clothing on the walls. A woman talking with a neighbor ran screaming to the house and without an instant's hesitation sprang through the smoking doorway into what already seemed an inferno. A moment later she staggered out, her hands and face blackened and blistered and her clothing on fire. In her arms she bore her baby, safe from harm.

The afternoon papers came out with the story, printed under headlines extolling this mother's heroism. Men read it on street cars, and as their eyes gleamed with the stirring of the spirit which leaps to great noble deeds they said: "That woman dared to do what most men would be afraid to do." But the mothers who read it at home did not think that way. Perhaps the danger to the baby, the wracking of the home and the burns the woman suffered brought moisture to their eyes, but to them the act was not one of heroism—it was simply what any natural mother, no matter how timid, would do under the same circumstances.—Cleveland Leader.

Completely Pauperized.

Albert W. Hebbard, New York's charity expert, said at a recent dinner:

"The great danger of charity is its pauperizing effect. This effect must be avoided, or the recipients will all become Jack Hanches.

"Jack Hanch, on the score of bad health never worked, and the pastor of the Methodist church, a man whose heart sometimes outran his head, sent the idler and his family weekly gifts of food and clothing—supported the whole crew, in fact.

"A church visitor, after listening to Jack's complaints one day, said:

"Yes, of course, you have had bad health, we know that; but one thing at least you ought to be thankful for, and that is our pastor's kindness in sending you all this bread and meat and jelly and blankets and so on. Don't you think it is good of him to look after you so well?"

"Good of him?" said Jack, impatiently. "Why, what's he for?"

Fable of Pan of Biscuits.

A Vassar girl married a Kansas farmer.

Two weeks later a cyclone made the happy pair a friendly call.

It cavorted around the premises, ripping up the fences, scattering the haystacks and playing horse with the barn, but when it looked through the open window it drew back in alarm.

There lay the bride's first pan of biscuits.

"I ain't feelin' very strong this morning," murmured the cyclone.

And with another glance at the terrible pan it blew itself away.

WISE WORDS.

A Physician on Food.

A physician, of Portland, Oregon, has views about food. He says:

"I have always believed that the duty of the physician does not cease with treating the sick, but that we owe it to humanity to teach them how to protect their health, especially by hygienic and dietetic laws.

"With such a feeling as to my duty I take great pleasure in saying to the public that in my own experience and also from personal observation I have found no food equal to Grape-Nuts, and that I find there is almost no limit to the great benefits this food will bring when used in all cases of sickness and convalescence.

"It is my experience that no physical condition forbids the use of Grape-Nuts. To persons in health there is nothing so nourishing and acceptable to the stomach, especially at breakfast, to start the machinery of the human system on the day's work.

"In cases of indigestion I know that a complete breakfast can be made of Grape-Nuts and cream and I think it is not advisable to overload the stomach at the morning meal. I also know the great value of Grape-Nuts when the stomach is too weak to digest other food.

"This is written after an experience of more than 20 years, treating all manner of chronic and acute diseases, and the letter is written voluntarily on my part without any request for it." Read the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in plgs. "There's a Reason."

Us & Neighbors

General Apathy is working hard above the straits for the Democratic ticket, and expects to cut down the Republican vote immensely on November 3. The situation in Delta county is more one-sided than it has ever been before, so that the popular interest flags heavily when it comes to attending political rallies. A meeting was held Thursday evening in the Gladstone theatre, at which the importance of a full vote in this neighborhood was strongly urged. The speakers of the evening were introduced by G. R. Empson, Hon. William M. Smith, of St. Johns, one of the prominent young Republicans of the state, spoke at length on national affairs, clearly showing that the position of the Republican party is one of protection and construction; that of the Democratic administrations, which demonstrate the effect of a campaign of tariff-ripping on national prosperity. Mr. Smith then came nearer home and warned his hearers, that while they are sitting at ease in a safely Republican peninsula, one of the fiercest fights ever known is being waged below the straits that the Democrats count on electing a governor, congressmen, and perhaps a Democratic legislature to send their candidate to the senate. He urged upon them to remember that every vote is of importance in the struggle. Hon. William R. Oates, of Laurium, followed him with a brief account of the campaign arguments being used and the sectional prejudice which is being engendered against the upper peninsula by the opponents of its candidates. Chairman Yelland, of the county committee, and Mr. Empson also spoke on the paramount question "shall the Republican vote be polled?" urging their hearers to use every effort with friends and neighbors to have them vote, at whatever slight sacrifice of personal convenience may be needed for the good of Michigan.

The democrats could have reduced the duty on more than one schedule with the aid of the insurgents if their ranks had remained unbroken. As a matter of fact they were just as much divided over the tariff as the republicans. The House contains scores of democratic high protectionists, and the majority of them, moreover, come from the South.

They say a play without a love story is uninteresting. "The Fighting Parson" has not broken the rule for through the entire production a beautiful love story is told. Good substantial love of the lasting kind. This with its pathos and comedy has made "The Fighting Parson" one of the season's successes and everywhere it has been produced it has met with instantaneous success from both an artistic as well as financial standpoint. The ministry recommend it because it teaches a moral lesson of right and wrong, yet does not offend the sensitive but sends one home with a feeling of contentment for having seen it. Manager Bart offers it to his patrons for their approval Saturday night.

Hides were put on on the free list and the duty on shoes reduced two-thirds, but still the Insurgents have put up the price on shoes.

During the past week or so the influences which hold the kine of Gladstone in their accustomed orbits have apparently been relaxed, and several householders have been amazed to see a cometary cow looming up large in their gardens. Such a one, whose western training had not skilled him in the use of the riata, was unable to tie up the intruder, and closing the gates, set off down town inquiring of every citizen and official he met where the pound-keeper may be found. His search was no better requited than the expedition of old Diogenes in quest of a man, and he returned sadly home at a late hour, blessing a parental government.

Let the children hear Mrs. Kellogg at the M. E. church Thursday November 3, 8 p.m. You will enjoy her readings no less than they. She has an attractive personality, pleasing voice and artistic expression, uplifting purpose and time interpretation.

Gladstone lost to St. Joseph's at Escanaba last week by a score of either 9 or 3 to 0. Gladstone claims that under the rules St. Joseph's made only a touchback, which should not have been counted. The Ishpeming team, which defeated Marquette and Negaunee most signally, has been brought here this afternoon at big expense, and an attendance of over three hundred will be needed to keep from running behind.

The labor situation in England is becoming serious. With a lockout of 150,000 operatives of cotton mills in prospect and demands from other quarters the prospects are anything but bright. The trouble arises from the desire of the workers for more pay owing to the increased cost of living. And that in a Free-Trade country! How can such things be?

The great Eagles' hunting contest has again been held, and Capt. Fisher's party were again successful, holding 690 points as against 570 for Call's nimrods. The winners are Earl G. Fisher, August Lillquist, Chas. Walz, W. E. Garfin, Robert Cavill, James Laycock, Oscar Anderson, John Latimer, Hayden Blair, Sam Tang. Under the score of 10 for a rabbit, 15 for a partridge, and 20 for a duck, the winning side by their preponderance of ducks were victorious with a smaller weight of game. Three hundred pounds weight was dressed down to one hundred and forty. An immense attendance of Eagles met this Friday night at Wasn Hall, with visitors from Escanaba, Rapid River and Perkins, and got away with the feast. The losers of last year gained experience which will be valuable to them in serving the spread again; the party this time were Dan Call, Albert Garfin, Philip Louis, Charles Mattson, Floyd Duchesne, Reuben Latimer, John Ekeblad, John Nelson and George Lemoine.

W. Mann's Pastoral comedy drama, "The Fighting Parson" will be presented at the theatre Saturday for your approval. It's a well written story far above the ordinary plays of this sort. The lines are bright, the situations intense with a strong heart interest all through the production. It's very interesting. The struggle of the young minister; his hidden love for the girl who has married his wayward brother, all goes to make up a strong realistic production with the stamp of success from all newspaper critics in the cities it has visited.

The electric lights in our alley have been brighter and better since the last issue of The Delta. A judicious kick sometimes causes a great physical uplift.

Within a half mile of the west limits of the city of Escanaba and along the old Schlosinger road right-of-way, a big timber wolf was shot and killed this week by George Kjellberg and Lars Vanderberg. The wolf was in full chase after a deer when he suddenly broke from the woods after his quarry but a few paces from the young men. Both fired at the animal at close range and he fell dead. The young men were out with hounds hunting for rabbits and had no thought for large game until suddenly one of them recognized the yelping of a wolf coming toward them. Almost immediately the animal came into view. Bears have frequently been killed close to the limits of Escanaba and deer have been seen running the full length of Lindington street, but the present is the first instance known of a big timber wolf venturing so close to the city.

Monday night is Halloween, and the spirit of mischief will undoubtedly be abroad, as well as several barbaric young Americans, under his special guidance. The descendant of the Puritans will doubtless load his blunderbuss and sit through the early hours of the evening in prayerful expectation of an attack from the hostile aborigines.

A meeting will be held at Escanaba next Tuesday to organize a Methodist Laymen's Union for this county. About a dozen members of the Gladstone church will attend, I. N. Bushong and E. J. Willman being scheduled for addresses. The next meeting, it is understood, will be held in Gladstone.

As the Gods Directed

By
J. RAYMOND ELDERDICE

"No, Frank, I cannot marry you. We have known each other for years, that is true, but I can never think of you otherwise than as a very dear friend. I did think once that there might be something besides comradeship between us, but that has passed. I know now that can never be."

"But, Margaret, this is far different from what you gave me reason to expect the last time I saw you. While I was away Harold Wain has come with his money and fine clothes. Can it be that you love him? I believe you have been led from yourself by the glitter of gold."

"Don't say that, John. It is not that, not altogether, at least. But I have been your chum too long to think I marrying you now. So why should I not make as good a match as I can with some one else? I confess that I do not care for Harold Wain, but he has plenty of money and loves me. If I do not love anybody I may as well marry him and have the fine things I have always wished for."

"And you will sacrifice my love and yours just for money. Madge, your eyes are blinded to the truth by the glitter of his gold. You do love me, you know it, but you crave wealth and position. I have nothing to offer now, but my practice is increasing all the time and I have several fine cases offered me. There will be no happiness where true love is trampled on. I am not going to ask you again, but think it over, Madge, and do not let money win over honest love." He strode sadly down the path from the summer house.

Margaret sat gazing after him, her pretty eyes full of tears. She did love him; her heart would not let her forget that, but she wanted the pleasures that money could procure. Harold Wain, millionaire and clubman, had fallen in love with her. She did not care for him.

Frank Howard walked quickly down the path to the road. He was thinking what an empty existence life would be if without Margaret. From his earliest childhood he had known her, little Margaret Allen. They had read of late from their favorite authors in the evenings and had spent much time together. Now it was all to end. She had given him every reason to hope until Wain had appeared.

There was a whirl of dust, the discordant honk of a horn, as Harold Wain passed him in his huge touring car. He waved patronizingly as he passed and was soon lost to sight. He was going to see Margaret, to take her for a spin. What chance did a young lawyer have with a man worth millions? Frank cut the heads from the daisies with his cane as he thought.

Soon he reached Uniontown, the little village near which Margaret lived. As he walked slowly down the street he saw a book in the window of a store and stopped to look at it. He read the title, "Loves of the Ancient Gods," and stepped inside. It was just the thing. He and Margaret had been reading mythology together when he had asked her to be his. This would be a fitting reminder of their happy hours. He would send it to her with a letter of farewell.

He hastened home to write her a letter to accompany the book. When he had finished it he read what he had written:

"Dear little girl, I am sending you this little volume as a sort of farewell memento. It will recall all those days we loved so well, but in particular the one in which you decided that life with money and without love is preferable to life with me where love, at least, is abundant. I am not complaining at your choice. You are making a sacrifice of yourself as well as of me."

"I leave for New York tonight. You know I have been offered a position with the law firm of Herndon & Hastings. All I have held them off for is because I did not want to leave you. But that is all over! If you decide that love is best, send for me. Frank."

That night Frank Howard took the train for New York, and after reading the letter over and over Margaret Allen cried herself to sleep.

Two weeks had passed since Frank had gone. During that time Margaret had been alternately happy in her dreams of pleasure when she should have married Harold, and miserable when she thought of the man she loved. It was as Frank had said, she was sacrificing his love because she was blinded by Wain's gold. Yet she could not resist.

She had received the book with the letter, but had not yet brought herself to read it. The title called back old memories too sweet for her present sorrow. One day she cut the leaves and idly turned them as she sat alone in the summer house where she and Frank had parted not long before. She was not reading, but suddenly her eyes were attracted by a certain passage, and she read. Not until the end of the chapter was reached did she stop. Then the book fell to the floor unnoticed.

For a long time she sat thinking. Wain was to come that night for his answer. It was not too late yet. She would not sacrifice her happiness and Frank's for money. The little book had opened her eyes to what she was doing in her desire for wealth. She would send word to Wain not to call that night. Half an hour later she was in the little telegraph office and a message was flashing along the wire to New York.

Frank Howard had spent a miserable two weeks after his sudden departure from Uniontown. He had entered on his duties like a man and had not for a moment allowed his disappointment to interfere with the faithful performance of work, but there were times when he was alone and the sense of his loss came to him bitterly. He was too proud to ask Margaret again, so he fought it out with himself. Each morning he would drag wearily to the office and in the evening walk as wearily home.

Occasionally there would be a knotty case to argue and the spirit of battle would grip him. Then he would forget all but that the fight must be won and throw himself earnestly into the conflict of brains and wit. By this he was fast winning the confidence and respect of the firm and no little fame for himself. But nothing was sweet to him without Margaret to share it.

One day after a valuable case had been won by his brilliance and masterly argument he was sent for by Mr. Herndon, the senior member of the firm. He found the old gentleman waiting for him in the private sanctum. Mr. Herndon smiled at him kindly and waved him to a seat.

"Mr. Howard, I haven't much to say to you about the case you have just won. You know of what interest it was to us. I do not believe in praising a man too much, but you have done well. Keep on as you have started and be prepared to take my place at any time. I am getting old and would have retired a year ago had there been anyone to step into my place. You are fully capable of filling it. That is all."

Frank thanked him and assured him of his intention to strive to bring honor and renown to the firm. Then he went from the office with mingled emotions. If only he had Margaret to tell of his success and share it with. There was no one else who was interested in him as she had been. He would devote his time to perfecting himself in the interests of the firm and put her from his heart forever. There would never be anyone as dear to him as she. Sinking into a chair he covered his face with his hands and thought of the happy days. From this reverie he was disturbed by a shrill voice.

"Mr. Frank Howard? Telegram for you, sir. Sign here. No answer? All right, boss. That's all."

Frank tore open the yellow envelope. It was from Uniontown, the village where Margaret lived. He felt instinctively that it was from her. Suppose something was wrong. Then he unfolded the slip and read with amazed eyes:

"Frank, Jupiter lost this time. Come at once. Your Danae."

The young man stared at the message in astonishment. Who was Jupiter and what had he lost? And why under the sun had Margaret signed herself that outlandish name? It was not a pet name that he had ever called her. But he did understand that she had sent for him to come at once and he sprang from the chair and went to see Mr. Hastings.

He easily obtained a few days off and was soon at his boarding house packing a few things hastily to catch the next train to Uniontown. On his way to the station he saw the messenger boy who had brought him the telegram and gladdened that urchin's heart by calling to him and tossing him a bright silver dollar.

He was soon on the train and speeding to Margaret. He was wondering as the train glided along if after all he would be able to tell her of his good fortune and ask her to share it with him. He did not dare allow himself to hope. But above all there ran in his mind profound astonishment at her message. He could not conjecture why she had signed it Danae. Then the train pulled into a familiar station and he was again in Uniontown.

Jumping to the platform almost before the train had stopped, Frank started for Margaret's home, which lay about a quarter of a mile from the village. The friends he knew must have been surprised at the undignified haste he betrayed in getting away from their heartfelt joy at seeing him again, but he did not care for that. He was going to Margaret, that was all he knew.

When he reached the house he was met at the door by Margaret's mother, a kindly woman who had always cherished a secret desire to see the young lawyer win her daughter and had felt a corresponding sorrow when the millionaire had estranged the two. Now she smiled at Frank as he spoke to her and told him that he could find Margaret waiting for him in their favorite haunt, the summer house. He hastened to her and soon had the girl in his arms.

When Margaret had told him between tears and sobs that Wain had been refused and had gone away Frank asked:

"But, Madge, what did you mean by the puzzling message you sent me? Who was this Jupiter? And why did you choose such a name to sign? I was never so mystified in all my life as when I read that telegram in the office."

For answer she handed him the little book he had sent her when he had left several weeks before. She pointed to a paragraph and he read:

"But Jupiter, distilling himself into a shower of gold, entered the apartment of Danae and won her." Margaret looked up at him when he had read it and was regarding her questioningly.

"My case was not exactly like that of Danae, for she had no other sutor and Jupiter had it all his way. But when I read, 'Distilled himself into a shower of gold and won her,' I knew that Wain was winning me as Jupiter had won his earthly love. My eyes were opened and as there was no oracle to be fulfilled as in his case I sent for you."

"The prosaic law must have driven all that pretty mythology from my mind," replied Frank, "for I could not think who Danae could be. Had I remembered the myth I would have understood at once."

"The little book told me my duty just in time," answered Margaret. "And Jupiter the second was forced to take his golden shower away in defeat."

"Madge, old Jupiter did not want any mortal to counterfeit his performance, so when he saw how near Wain was to doing it he took a hand and straightened the matter to suit his celestial will."

"And in so doing he succeeded in making everything come out to suit us, didn't he, Frank?" asked the girl softly.

The young lawyer agreed that he had.

CANADIAN GAME OF NOBBIE

Description of the Novel Sport Which Is Heartily Engaged in by Boys of the Dominion.

The game of nobbie, as described by a Manitoba correspondent of the Circle, requires two teams of five each: Goal keeper, back, right wing, left wing and forward (or center). A goal, made of two posts five feet high set six feet apart and connected by a bar at the tops, is stationed at each end of an oblong field, say 50x30 yards, or smaller even.

The players are armed with nobbie sticks, which are of oak the size of broom handles and a yard long. The playing end is nearly pointed and in it is driven a nail, the head being filed off, leaving only half of the nail protruding. The nobbies are made of two pieces of one-inch rubber hose 1 1/2 inches long, tied to the ends of a string that measures six inches between the rings.

The game consists in keeping the nobbies off the ground and carrying or throwing them through the goal. Each half is thirty minutes and the total goals make the score.

The teams line up with goal keeper at goal; the forward about twenty feet in front, the back about half way between and the wings about ten feet to left and right of the forward. The referee throws the nobbie in the air midway of the field and the game is on.

Forwards play anywhere, wings also, excepting that they must keep on the left and right of the forward, according to their points. The back helps check assaults on the goal and attacks only when the whole team, except goal keeper, makes a rush attack. The goal keeper stays in goal except when he must advance to stop the nobbie.

Rough play and all striking or tripping with the sticks are absolutely forbidden. The referee has complete control of the game. A scorer judges goals. The stick must not be pushed through the rings and the string must not be twisted onto the stick. The stick is held in one hand only. It is allowable to wrap the handle end so as to get a better grip.

The Credulous Mr. Bucktoss.

Wilbur Wright, of the Ashbury Park aviation meeting, said of dare-devil aviators:

"These dare-devils ought to be hurt a little now and then. It teaches them a lesson. Otherwise they have too much faith in their luck. That faith becomes as ridiculous as that of Hiram Bucktoss, of West Carrollton."

"Hiram Bucktoss, a West Carrollton farmer, used to come into Dayton every Saturday afternoon to shop, and the boys at the feed store would take many a rise out of him on account of his faith. He'd believe anything—accede to the tallest propositions."

"One Saturday, to see if he couldn't shatter Hiram's faith, a Dayton wit said:

"'Speakin' of buffaloes, Mr. Bucktoss, did I ever tell you that when I was out west I seen a buffalo up a tree eatin' grapes.'"

"'Indeed!' said Hiram. He didn't even look a bit startled, but only interested and pleased. 'Indeed!'"

"'That's what I said,' repeated the wit. 'Why, Mr. Bucktoss, didn't you never see no buffaloes up trees.'"

"'No,' faltered Hiram. 'No, I can't say I ever did.' Then he brightened up. 'But I've often heard,' he added, 'how very fond they are of grapes.'"

Failed When Put to the Test. "Do you love me?" asked the woman anxiously.

"Infinitely!" vowed the lover. "More than you did at first?"

"Much more!"

"And you will love me more all the time? Tomorrow more than today? Next year more than this?"

"Impossible!" he exclaimed. "I love you now as much as is possible for man to love woman!"

The woman was silent.

The next day when he called no one answered his knock.—Smart Set.

PROGRESS of the WORLD

SOME THINGS THE BUSY WORKER IS DOING FOR THE ADVANCEMENT OF CIVILIZATION

AID GIRL WORKERS

EDUCATIONAL LEAGUE OF BOSTON PLANS TO DO EDUCATIONAL WORK.

NEED HAS LONG BEEN FELT

Miss Florence Marshall at the Head of Movement Which Promises Much—Idea Is to Guide Girls to Find Their Proper Vocations.

An experiment known as the Girls' Trade Educational League, which bids fair to fill an international need in the industrial world, is now under way in Boston, backed by Miss Florence Marshall, head of the Girls' Trade Industrial League.

The league experiment began active work after school opened this fall. During the last four months Miss Marshall has been traveling abroad, investigating industrial conditions there with a view to understanding the international conditions before starting the work here.

"I find," says Miss Marshall, "that the need is the same everywhere, and that is to guide the girls between the ages of fourteen and eighteen into the industries for which they are fitted. There are labor exchanges in England which do it to some extent, but the work is not broad nor comprehensive enough."

"What we need is some body of competent workers which understands the ability needed for the various trades and industries to come directly in contact with the girls at this period, to study them, to see that they are fitted for, and to see what they have the opportunity for the work they can do."

"That is what we intend to do in the Girls' Trade Educational League."

"Six years ago the same committee which is starting this work began the Boston Trade School for Girls. It proved its value and practicability and then the city took over the school and the work. This is our aim in this new work: To prove in two or three years the necessity for it and its efficacy and then let the city carry it on. All work of this kind should be a civic affair rather than a private charitable enterprise."

"The purpose of the Girls' Trade Educational League is to study the needs of all girls as they leave the public schools. We have already made a study of all occupations into which girls go—the conditions, wages, ability needed and opportunities."

"These data may be given girls in various ways. It may be possible to give a series of lectures before the school girls of these ages, or perhaps have printed leaflets distributed, giving the girls an idea of the possibilities before them. This is for the general work."

"Then for the individual girl we will have the vocation office to advise and direct her into the industry in which she is qualified to succeed."

"The idea is to lessen the number of useless people and misfits in the world. The average girl has no way of knowing what she is fitted for and she drifts into any employment she sees advertised or that her neighbor is employed at.

"She may make cigars, for instance, and perhaps she is not physically adapted to that and is too slow. That same girl may have a genius for dress-making."

"Much good, serviceable material is thus entirely wasted."

"What we want is to have every girl who leaves school directed to us. We can make a study of the individual girl and do our best with the comprehensive material we have collected to guide that girl into the work she is fitted for. Perhaps she is not strong enough to stand all day at a loom and yet she may be able to sew on buttons very nicely. Many dressmakers start to learn the trade by the humble beginning of sewing buttons."

"We do not expect to succeed with all. If we succeed in making 50 or 60 per cent, successful and useful we shall feel that the work has been very much worth while."

"We don't expect to succeed the first time always with the girls, either. It may be that some of them will have to be tried in five or six of the industries before the right one is found, but when we have made that girl a successful worker, the patience will have been well spent."

"Nothing is so good for self-respect and the moral fiber as success in some trade or industry."

"One girl out of a hundred may step naturally into her vocation in life, and the other ninety-nine are in wrong. This work is for the other ninety-nine."

"It will also help the employers obviously, for if they have girls fitted and equipped to do the work they will not have to waste time trying them or carrying them along."

"We hope to make this work so valuable that the city will see the need of it and eventually carry it on."

Hold the Right Ideals.

We not only can strengthen mental weaknesses and deficiencies, but it is perfectly possible to increase the general ability through the power of suggestion, says Orison Swett Marden in Success Magazine. Indeed, the susceptibility of all the mental faculties to improvement, to enlargement, is something remarkable.

Sometimes very strong faculties are latent until especially aroused. There are many people who pass for cowards; who are humiliated because they have so little courage, when, if they only knew how, they could strengthen this deficient faculty wonderfully by holding the courageous ideal; by thinking and doing the courageous deed; by carrying the thought of fearlessness; by reading about heroic lives; by constantly thinking the heroic thought and trying to live it. The courage may be small in a person because it has never been called into sufficient exercise. It may need only to be aroused. There are many people living lives of mediocrity who might do great things; might become mental giants if their dormant faculties were aroused, their general ability improved and enlarged.

WILL AIM TO SAVE LIVES

GREAT BRITAIN WOULD ELIMINATE DEADLY AILMENTS OF POTTERY WORKERS.

TASK WILL BE HARD ONE

Experts Are Skeptical of Good Results Unless an Army of Inspectors Is Kept on Duty—Greed of Employers Is the Chief Obstacle.

Great Britain, with an army of 7,000 pottery workers, has been studying the evils of the trade through a commission which has reported optimistically in a big volume to the effect that poisonous lead glazes are to be eliminated by more laws and closer inspections.

"Potters' rot" is the old, deadly ailment of the pottery worker. The name is colloquial, indicating the deterioration of the lungs and the respiratory organs through inhalation of the fine, flinty particles which come of the shaping and finishing of the pottery piece. These particles, floating dry in the atmosphere, are drawn into the lungs and set up irritations, which are the beginning of the general breakdown of the system, especially as the worker approaches middle life.

Plumbism is that other attendant evil, brought about through the lead glazes which continue so largely in use in the British potteries. Plumbism attacks the young worker, and the young woman is its special mark. Sufficiently poisoned, the young person may become totally blind, an arm may drop paralyzed and helpless, the face may become drawn and withered, and the whole body virtually helpless from the encroachment of the poison. Or, if the woman worker escape all these, the influences of the poison may render her incapable of motherhood should she later become a wife.

In the judgment of those who face real conditions among the British pottery workers the recent report of the departmental commission upon the evils of the shop is looked upon as academic and impossible of results. The government inspectors are too few in number to bring about radical reforms, and the commission recommends an inside inspector in each shop who will act as foreman perhaps and incidentally report the nonobservance of the laws, new and old.

"All splashes of glaze falling upon the benches or surrounding objects shall be immediately removed," is one of the suggestions of the report, to which the British critics are asking, "Who will remove them?" Shall his employer, paying him a foreman's wage for net results, allow of his squandering time in seeing to the removal of mere glaze splashes upon bench or other object? And unless some one inside shall have the liberty of the action an army of government officials will be necessary for the inspections.

Just one woman commissioner has made a stroke at reducing the evil. Gertrude Tuckwell, who worked among the potters and knows their lives, declares that the time is past when lead is necessary in glazing processes. In view of this she is demanding a schedule of pottery products which shall hereafter be glazed with something other than lead. To this list the home office would have power to make additions, while on the part of the consuming public gradually it would learn to discern between the poisonous and non-poisonous products and cut the lead glazed pottery from the markets.

Phosphate Deposits of America.

A recent report of the geological survey shows that in the northwest country of Idaho, Wyoming, and Utah the United States possesses probably the largest and richest phosphate deposits in the world. From surveys recently cast up in totals these deposits show evidences of 267,000,000 tons of high grade phosphate rock, while the chances are that millions more tons may be added to this total before the pay rock is exhausted.

These deposits show the rock in pebble formation, closely cemented in masses and containing some calcite. These round particles vary from a microscopic size to pebbles half an inch in diameter. In color the phosphate rock ranges from a gray to a jet black, the black probably due to carboniferous matter. All public lands suspected of containing valuable deposits of phosphate now are withdrawn from public entry until such time as the value of the deposits is tested, preserving the status of the land until congress shall take action.

CITY'S CALL FOR WORKERS

DETROIT BUSINESS MEN IN SOMETHING OF A QUANDARY.

Municipal Board of Trade Compelled to Take Steps to Supply Needed Labor for Industries.

It is seldom that a municipal board of trade has to cease its efforts to get new industries and bend its chief energies toward securing men to operate the industries it already has; yet this is the peculiar situation in which Detroit finds itself today. Its established industries have grown so rapidly that they have absorbed all the available supply of labor, and the frantic appeals to the board of commerce made by its members has resulted in an advertising campaign which is going far toward drawing a large number of skilled mechanics and artisans to Detroit.

"The labor condition," says Secretary Norman Flowers of the board of commerce, "is one which no other city in the country is experiencing, so far as I know. We need labor of all kinds, and a few weeks ago we inserted small classified advertisements a single time in six papers in New England and central New York. We received over 1,000 replies, each of which was turned over to the employer to whom the applicant seemed best suited. The city's population has increased 20,000 a year in the last five years, and has practically doubled in the last ten, yet the progressive manufacturers are still securing orders in excess of their capacity. We seriously considered carrying our campaign for new men into England, and have already printed some circular matter for this purpose. It seems best, however, to confine our efforts for the present to American cities, and we have gone into the old line manufacturing centers and secured a great many good men."

The rise of Detroit as an industrial center is attributed to two causes—transportation and power. Most all lake traffic enters Detroit, and the important railroads in Canada and the northern states reach the city. There is a project to bring Niagara power to Detroit, subject to the approval of the Canadian authorities, but even now the consumption of electricity for power alone is nearly 50,000 horse power. The Niagara project, if carried through, will add 15,000 horse power, increasing the available supply by about one-fourth. Most of the power is produced by huge steam turbines.

It is a peculiar fact that the bolt and nut business of Detroit, with its ramifications into steel screws and small forgings, has been responsible for the growth of the automobile business there.

The automobile business, while it is only a part of Detroit's industrial development, has created a myriad of small contributory industries, devoted to all kinds of parts and appliances. It is this situation which has brought about the dearth of skilled labor and which is causing Detroit to lie awake nights to find enough men to keep the wheels going.—Chicago Tribune.

ETHEL LENEVE FREED

COMPANION OF DR. CRIPPEN, SENTENCED TO DEATH, ACQUITTED OF CHARGE.

PATHETIC FIGURE AT BAR

Hearing of Only a Few Hours Results in a Verdict of Not Guilty—No Witnesses Are Called by the Defense.

London.—Ethel Clare Leneve was acquitted Tuesday as an accessory after the fact in the murder of Belle Elmore by Dr. Hawley H. Crippen. The trial lasted but three hours. It was for love of Miss Leneve that Dr. H. H. Crippen, now under death sentence, murdered his wife. The crown counsel, Richard Muir, failed to show that Miss Leneve had knowledge of either the American's intention or of the crime itself.

No witnesses were called by the defense. Immediately upon the conclusion of the speech of Miss Leneve's attorney, F. E. Smith, Justice Alverstone delivered his charge to the jury and they retired, returning in twenty-two minutes with a verdict of acquittal.

Miss Leneve's slim, girlish figure was the center of interest as she stood before the bar and, in a sweet, low voice, replied to the court's interrogation as to how she would plead: "Not guilty, my lord!"

Barrister Arthur Newton appeared as chief counsel for the girl. After Ethel left the prison van which had brought her from Brixton jail, policemen had to use force to make a path for her through the mob of curious women.

In the court room the spectators' seats were filled with brilliantly gowned women spectators.

News Editor Parris of the London Chronicle was fined $1,000 and costs for publishing an alleged confession of Dr. H. H. Crippen shortly after Crippen's arrest by Inspector Dew in Canada. Parris was committed to jail pending the payment of the fine.

RUIN WROUGHT BY CYCLONE

Believed 100 Lives Lost in Storm, Tidal Wave and Volcanic Eruption in Southern Italy.

Rome.—The extent of the havoc wrought Monday by the strange elemental combination of cyclone, tidal wave and volcanic eruption on the slopes of Vesuvius and on the island of Ischia, has not yet been definitely determined, owing to the interruption of communications.

One hundred persons are said to have been killed. The monetary loss will probably be great.

The disaster appears to have come in the form of a cyclone, having three centers, the first over the island of Ischia, the second over the town of Torre del Greco on the east coast of the Bay of Naples, and the third sweeping the gulf of Salerno.

Accompanying the cyclone were a cloudburst, a tidal wave and violent eruptions from Mount Vesuvius and from a crater suddenly opened on the summit of the long extinct Mount Epomeo on the island of Ischia.

Many houses collapsed in this city, due to the subsidence of the surface of the earth during the recent volcanic eruptions, and thirty feet of mud covers many of the roads in the outlying districts.

The inhabitants fled to the higher parts of the island, and those who escaped the rush of water are reported to be suffering from hunger and exposure. The Italian minister of the interior has been appealed to for relief measures.

Ischia is an island almost directly west of the city of Naples in the Mediterranean sea. The storm which caused the wave has broken communication and details are lacking.

It is reported that shipping was damaged and many boats lost. Property damage in Casamicciola was heavy.

The minister of the interior has ordered four men-of-war to hurry to the scene with men and supplies.

Casamicciola was nearly destroyed by an earthquake in July, 1883, when about 1,700 lives were lost. It has since been rebuilt and has a population of about 4,000.

Naples.—An eruption of Vesuvius, accompanied by a cloudburst, Monday wrought considerable damage in the bay and on the slopes of the mountain.

Mud from the crater destroyed a whole street in Torre del Greco at the foot of the mountain, engulfing two families. Five bodies have been recovered.

Loss of life is also reported from Cetara on the bay of Salerno and at Rosina, which was built on the ruins of Herculaneum. The authorities and troops are working heroically to rescue the injured.

Steamer Lanham Burns. Houghton, Mich.—The steamer Lanham, owned by James R. Adams of Detroit, burned Sunday to the water's edge and was beached off Bete Gris, Keweenaw Point. The crew came ashore in safety. Loss, $150,000.

Pleads Guilty to Murder Charge. Marion, Ill.—Robert Miller three weeks ago shot to death Charles Williams in this city. Monday Miller pleaded guilty to the indictment and received a life sentence. The trouble grew out of a card game.

STRAUSS WISHES TO RETIRE

AMBASSADOR TO TURKEY ANXIOUS TO LEAVE SERVICE.

United States and Ottoman Governments Are Without Single Diplomatic Hitch.

Washington.—Believing he has accomplished his mission, Oscar S. Strauss, the American ambassador to Turkey, is desirous of retiring from the diplomatic field and return to the United States permanently.

posed of, leaving the two nations for the first time in many years without a single diplomatic hitch between them.

Because of this state of affairs and for the reason that his acceptance of the Turkish ambassadorship was based on the representation that his services were needed to restore harmony between the two governments, Mr. Strauss feels that his mission has been accomplished and there is no further reason for him to expatriate himself. He has not resigned his post and if the president insists upon it Mr. Strauss will return to Constantinople at the end of his sixty days' leave of absence.

TWO INDIANA BANKS CLOSED

Lebanon National Goes Into Liquidation, American Trust Company in Hands of State Officials.

Lebanon, Ind.—The Lebanon National bank, capital $80,000, has gone into voluntary liquidation by resolution of the board of directors.

Pending the payment of depositors the institution was Monday placed in the hands of the controller of the currency with Oscar L. Keller, a bank examiner from Washington, in charge.

The bank's cash and securities have been transferred to the First National bank, and it is given out that arrangements are being made for the immediate settlement with all depositors in full. The first intimation the public had of the action of the bank was a notice posted on the door by the bank examiner in charge.

The American Trust company, an auxiliary organization of the Lebanon National, is temporarily closed and in charge of N. H. Oglesbee, of the bank department of the state auditor's office.

$10,000 IN GEMS STOLEN

Hotel Thieves Steal Handbag Containing Jewels From Salesman While He Is Registering.

Chicago.—Police of the entire city are searching for sneak thieves who Monday robbed J. C. Foster, traveling agent for D. L. Auld & Co., manufacturing jewelers, Columbus, O., of $10,000 worth of gems. Foster placed his suit case beside a chair in the Great Northern hotel and stepped up to the desk to register. When he turned around to pick up the suit case it was missing.

Foster, who is a graduate of the Ohio State university and a resident of Higby, O., was dumfounded when he discovered the loss.

His case contained a full line of fraternal pins and diamond, ruby and sapphire stickpins, he told the police.

Chicago.—The 1910 baseball pennant was won by the Philadelphia American league team, the men from the Quaker city defeating the Chicago Nationals four out of five games.

At the deciding contest on Sunday one of the largest crowds that ever attended a ball game in Chicago—27,374—was present, and up to the eighth gave one of the rarest exhibitions of "rooting" ever witnessed in this city. When Chicago scored in the second inning the "fans" went wild and when the Quaker City men took the lead in the fifth the crowd begged and pleaded with their favorites to "come back" and win out. But, after the fatal eighth, when Philadelphia scored five runs, they sat back in their seats and watched silently the work of the youthful machine triumph over the veterans whom they had regarded as unbeatable.

Brown and Coombs, the latter the iron man of the series, fought a great pitchers' battle for seven innings and Brown then blew. In the eighth the entire Athletic team went to bat and hammered Brown hard. Four hits, two of them doubles, a wild throw by Zimmerman and a wild pitch by the three-fingered twirler, sent five Athletic players over the plate and blasted the hopes of the Cub followers.

Collins, the second baseman of the Philadelphia, was the star of the game. He drove out two doubles and a single, and when the battle was won, stole third, that he might display his speed. In fact, Collins was a large factor in every contest between the two teams.

AIRMEN ARE ALIVE

MISSING BALLOON AMERICA II. LANDS SAFELY IN NORTHERN CANADA WILDS.

PROBABLY WIN $5,000 PRIZE

Hawley and Post Are Making Their Way Back to Civilization—They Are Expected at Quebec Friday.

Toronto, Ont.—The happiest man in Toronto is Louis Spindler of the St. Louis Aero club, who Wednesday received the following telegram from Quebec, the message coming from the Great Northwestern Telegraph company's manager there to Manager Horgarth of this city:

"Hawley is at present at St. Ambrose, county of Chicoutimi. Chicoutimi town is 227 miles north of Quebec and St. Ambrose is 40 miles from Chicoutimi; train leaves Quebec every morning."

Another message says: "The America II. landed at Lake Chilogoma, Peribonka river, Saguenay district, Quebec, October 19, all well."

A later message says that the two men, Hawley and Post, are on their way to Chicoutimi from St. Ambrose, though details of their tramp out of the wilds are not forthcoming, they have beyond doubt had a terrible time of it digging their way to civilization for a week.

Lake Chilogoma is far to the northwest of Lake St. John, being one of a group of lakes in which the River Peribonka and other tributaries of the Saguenay empties into. The balloonists were far beyond the remotest point of civilization and without doubt won the Gordon Bennett prize of $5,000.

America II. was seen last Wednesday afternoon at three o'clock passing over St. Felicien, which is almost on the border of Lake St. John, where the Dusseldorf, until now hailed as victor, landed. The balloon was traveling northeast towards Mistassiu north of Lake St. John, which is the farthest hamlet out in that direction, beyond that are nothing but impenetrable and inhospitable wilds, enough to daunt the heart of any man. The balloon was very high, and was watched for fully ten minutes before it disappeared in the distance. It is therefore believed that Hawley and Post exceeded the distance traveled by the Dusseldorf. Mr. Spindler left for Quebec and expects to meet the balloonists there Friday.

SOLONS DENY BRIBE CHARGE

Pemberton and Clark Assert No Money Was Offered Them for Their Votes in Desk Contracts.

Springfield, Ill.—State Senator Stanton C. Pemberton, co-defendant with Representative Joseph S. Clark in the legislative furniture graft case, took the witness stand in the Sangamon circuit court and stated emphatically that he never had any conversation with A. B. Johnston or anyone else regarding getting money or other valuable consideration in letting the furniture contract.

He declared he had never even talked with Holstlaw or Clark regarding the awarding of the contract and did not know how they would vote on the question previous to the session of the committee at which the contract was awarded.

"I never talked with J. W. Knox regarding Holstlaw, Clark and myself voting together or said that we wanted to get anything out of the contract. Knox met me the morning the contract was let and said: 'The contract for the furniture will be let today. Will you speak a good word for me?' I told him I would. That was all of that conversation."

Representative J. S. Clark testified that he met A. B. Johnston and Otto M. Frier, representing the Ford & Johnson company, one year before the contract was awarded. He also said he talked with Johnston next day after the contract was awarded. He denied having been offered money. A number of character witnesses testified and the defense closed.

Was Getting Monotonous.

A handsome woman who had been so unfortunate as to find occasion to divorce not one but several husbands was returning from Nevada. In Chicago she happened to meet her first husband, for whom, by the way, she always has entertained a real affection.

"Upon my soul, if it isn't Charlie!" exclaimed the ex-wife, cordially shaking hands with the gentleman whose name she had formerly borne. "I'm awfully glad to see you, Charlie!" Then, after a wistful expression had come to and been banished from her countenance, she added:

"Old chap, I've often wondered where you were and what you were doing. It was too bad we didn't get on better together. I hope your experience hasn't been as unpleasant as mine. I'm sick and tired of marrying strangers!"

ANOTHER WOMAN CURED

By Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Black Duck, Minn.—"About a year ago I wrote you that I was sick and could not do any of my housework. My sickness was called Retroflexion. When I would sit down I felt as if I could not get up. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and did just as you told me and now I am perfectly cured, and have a big baby boy." — Mrs. ANNA ANDERSON, Box 19, Black Duck, Minn.

Consider This Advice.
No woman should submit to a surgical operation, which may mean death, until she has given Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made exclusively from roots and herbs, a fair trial. This famous medicine for women has for thirty years proved to be the most valuable tonic and invigorator of the female organism. Women residing in almost every city and town in the United States bear willing testimony to the wonderful virtue of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It cures female ills, and creates radiant, buoyant female health. If you are ill, for your own sake as well as those you love, give it a trial.

Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass., invites all sick women to write her for advice. Her advice is free, and always helpful.

The Most Noticeable Change.
"So you have lived in Europe for 25 years? That's a long time for a man to be away from his own country."
"Yes, it is, and I'm mighty glad to be home again."
"I suppose you notice a great many changes?"
"Yes, many."
"What, if I may ask, is the greatest change that has come to your notice?"
"The greatest change, it seems to me, is to be found in the fact that the vice-president of the United States succeeds in getting his name in the papers nearly as often as he might if he were a baseball player or a promising lightweight prizefighter."

Now He Knows.
"On what grounds does your father object to me?" he asked.
"On any grounds within a mile of our house," she answered.
It seems as though women's styles change so often merely to keep men's noses down to the grindstone.
A woman hates her enemies longer than she loves her friends.

NEW NEWS OF YESTERDAY

by E. J. Edwards

How Campanini Got a Raise

Musical Critics All Pronounced Ravelli, His Rival Imported by Mapleson, to Be a Very Satisfactory "Second" Tenor.

In the heyday of the period back in the late seventies and early eighties when Italo Campanini, who at 14 became one of Garibaldi's famous one thousand, was being heralded as the greatest living tenor and had the music lovers of two continents at his feet, he went to his English and American manager, the late Col. J. H. Mapleson, and demanded a large increase in salary. The impresario listened to his great star's demand with outward equanimity; he realized that Campanini's voice had done much to make his opera seasons at Covent Garden and in America successful, but he did not propose to grant the Italian the increase in salary demanded if he could help it. So, while promising to give the matter serious consideration, he set about planning in his own way to circumvent "Camp," as he was called by his friends.

In time reports began to reach this country from Europe that Col. Mapleson had engaged the "great tenor" Ravelli, who had gained a wonderful reputation abroad with his voice. Then other reports began to appear that the American public would find in Ravelli another voice as glorious as Campanini's even. These reports were judiciously and widely circulated, so that those who were on the outside eagerly awaited the great Ravelli's arrival. But Campanini's friends were quick to guess the truth—Col. Mapleson was planning to use Ravelli in such a way as to play him off against Campanini, so that he could shrug his shoulders and say, "Oh, well, I have Ravelli," when Campanini inevitably threatened to stop singing unless that extra five hundred dollars a night was forthcoming.

A prince of good fellows—in fact, the most popular operatic tenor that has ever visited the United States—Campanini had many warm friends here, and once they were "on to" Col. Mapleson's little scheme they determined to do all they could to see to it that Ravelli was not allowed thus unjustly to supplant his fellow countryman; that Campanini should stand unapproached as the greatest tenor singer of his time until a really better tenor than he arose.

Logan Feared Vice Presidency

Famous Cavalry Leader Was Reluctant to Accept the Nomination in 1884 Because of the State of His Health.

No man ever accepted a nomination for vice-president of the United States more reluctantly than did General John A. Logan in 1884. He was even more greatly distressed that political exigencies and the imperious command of his party compelled his acceptance of the nomination than was Theodore Roosevelt in a similar position. Roosevelt at last decided to accept the nomination before it was made, but Logan pleaded with his friends at Chicago until he was actually nominated to make some other choice for the honor.

A day or two before the convention's notification committee, headed by ex-Senator John B. Henderson, called on General Logan, in his modest home in Washington, formally to apprise him of his selection as the running mate of Blaine. I was received by the General in his home. I asked him what he intended saying to the committee.

"I shall not say anything much," he said, "just a few words. It is a perfunctory performance. I haven't much heart for it." And then, briefly, he added that one of the reasons he was unwilling to enter the presidential campaign actively as a candidate was the state of his health. "I have never fully recovered from the serious rheumatic trouble that affected me four years ago at the time I made my speech in the Senate in opposition to the restoring of General Fitz-John Porter to the retired list of the army," he explained. "I made a part of that speech while suffering intense pain."

"Yes, General," I replied, "that was apparent to all of us who heard you, and it was the common remark at the time that nothing but your inflexible will carried you through that long speech."

When the committee did call upon General Logan, I was present, at his special invitation, to witness the brief ceremony—he had said when extending the invitation: "It won't be much of a scene." It was clearly apparent that the General was not in the best of health. His complexion, always swarthy when he was in health, had a sort of pasty hue; the contrast between it and the drooping black mustache and coal-black hair was impressively striking.

As he rose to receive the committee he leaned heavily upon a chair. He listened to the remarks of the chairman as though he was either indifferent or to a sort of a dream. And when, after a few perfunctory and formal re-

On the night that Ravelli made his debut in the Academy of Music in New York, General Howard Carroll, so intimate a friend of Campanini's that he had visited the latter at his home in Parma, strolled into the press room of the Academy, where the musical critics—all friends of the Garibaldian patriot—had met to talk over informally Ravelli's debut. He wanted to be fair to Ravelli, who was, in fact, a great singer, but they felt themselves in honor bound to protect Campanini, beyond peradventure of a doubt a still greater singer, against the little trick of his manager.

"I am sure I do not know how to write my criticism of Ravelli's performance except to say that Ravelli is great, but Campanini is greater," confessed one of the critics, famous in his day. Still another said: "Ravelli is a magnificent singer, but Mapleson is not acting fairly toward Campanini in using Ravelli to Camp's disparagement, who is much the greater singer of the two." And so the comment went on for some time, all clearly agreeing that Campanini's voice was by far the better voice.

At last it became apparent to General Carroll, who had been listening to the informal change of views, that the criticisms the following morning would practically all declare that

Hero of the Federal Treasury

L. C. Chittenden Disabled by Signing $5,000,000 in Bonds in 48 Hours to Prevent Sailing of Confederate Privateers.

Thomas C. Acton, who died in 1898 after reaching the age of seventy-five years, gained a great national reputation at the time of the draft riots in New York city, in 1863, by the energy with which he met that critical situation as president of the police board of the metropolis. After his retirement as a police commissioner, in 1869, he became assistant treasurer of the United States in charge of the subtreasury in New York city. Meeting him upon the street one day, I noticed that his right hand was bandaged, and asked him if he had met with an accident.

"Not exactly an accident," was the reply. "And I am much better off than Chittenden was after he had done what I did the other day, but to a much greater extent."

"L. C. Chittenden, you know, was registrar of the treasury department at Washington during the administration of President Lincoln, and a very capable officer he was. We were personally on terms of friendship, and, meeting him one day in the streets of Washington—I should say it was in the last months of President Lincoln's life—I noticed that his right hand and arm below the elbow were powerless. I wondered whether he was in the initial stages of the shaking palsy, and knowing him well enough to do so, asked him if that were the case. Shaking his head slowly and smiling slightly, he told me the following story—and ever since the day I heard it I have held that Mr. Chittenden was as much a hero for his country's sake as any man who went before the cannon's mouth in the Civil war."

"You know," began Mr. Chittenden to me, as we stood on the edge of the Washington sidewalk, "when Charles Francis Adams, our minister to Great Britain, protested against the British government permitting those English built Confederate privateers to sail from the ports of their construction, he was told that the ships would be kept from weighing anchor provided he deposited with the British government within 24 hours $5,000,000 in gold, so that Great Britain might be protected in case any damage suits were brought against her for holding back the privateers. Mr. Adams, as you probably know, had no idea where he could get the necessary gold, but that afternoon it was unexpectedly offered to him by a man whose name has been kept a secret to this day, that being the sole string of the loan. To this good friend of America in need Mr. Adams offered as security United States government bonds, telling him, however, that he would be obliged to wait for the bonds until word of his deed could be sent by mail to Washington—there was no cable working then—and the bonds sent over."

"Well, by the next steamer President Lincoln and Secretary of State Seward received Mr. Adams' communication, and it at once became necessary to send five millions in government bonds to Mr. Adams by the first steamer to Europe, if possible. It would sail in just 48 hours. We had the bonds, but they were unsigned. "Mr. Chittenden," Mr. Seward asked me, "do you think you can sign five millions of bonds in less than 48 hours?" I said I would do my best, and a little while thereafter the bonds were brought to me and I began to affix my signature to them, one after another.

"From that time on until the last bond was signed, just in time to catch the steamer, I did not leave my office except momentarily. I ate in the office. For hours I could scarcely see the bonds as they lay before me and appended my signature by instinct, as a blind man would. The task involved the greatest exercise of will power I was ever called upon to exert. My head almost swam with bonds the last hours of the 48, and the last of the signatures must have had only a fancied resemblance to my regular one. But I did the work in time, and the bonds were sent by special messenger to Mr. Adams, who, in turn, delivered them promptly to the good friend of the Union who had advanced the five millions in gold. And this—Mr. Chittenden glanced half smilingly and half ruefully at his powerless right hand and arm—this is my scar and wound, a permanent injury, received while doing my duty as a government officer."

Take Your Choice.
A young lady of the know-it-all variety was corrected by a friend for pronouncing Psyche "per-shih," and was told that "si-ke" was the proper way.
"Oh, yes, I know," said the girl, tossing her head. "Some people call it 'si-ke,' others say 'plish-ky,' but I prefer 'per-shih!'" —Exchange.

Ravelli was great, but Campanini greater, so he volunteered a bit of advice.

"The better plan, gentlemen," he said, "is not to mention Campanini's name at all. He didn't sing in this opera. If you make comparisons, the public will take them up. I would suggest that we agree upon this point: That Ravelli is a very great second tenor. We will congratulate Col. Mapleson on having secured so perfect an artist, so as to make his performance the nights 'Camp' does not sing satisfactory. We will speak of Ravelli as the most perfectly equipped second tenor who has ever come to the United States."

The idea took instantly—it was in fact a fair statement of the situation—and the next day the notices of Ravelli's debut spoke in high praise of him as a very great second tenor, the word "second" being emphasized in practically every case. The public, after listening to Ravelli for several performances, concurred in the view of the critics; Campanini remained unsurpassed; there were tears in his eyes when he embraced General Carroll for his timely act of friendship; and, soon after there was great joy in his heart when Col. Mapleson recognized the inevitable, paid Campanini the increased salary which he demanded and was well worth to that remarkable impresario.

It was exhibition day at No. 3, and as the parents of Jack Grady, the dullest pupil, were listening hopefully, the teacher tried her best to help the boy. "How did Charles I. of England die?" she asked, assigning the easiest question on her list to Jack. As he looked at her, with no indication of a coming answer, the teacher put her hand up to her neck. Jack saw the movement and understood its meaning, as he thought, "Charles I. of England died of cholera," he announced briskly.—Youth's Companion.

From the Press

Former Supervisor Dikes, who has a large ranch in the Fence river district west of Witch Lake, is preparing to exterminate all the bears and skunks in that district regardless of the state law affording them protection. Mr. Dikes is much "red-headed" and not without reason. During the past few weeks bears have carried off four or five of his most valuable sheep and his chicken house is raided almost nightly by skunks. He says that bears and skunks were never so numerous as now and he declares he will issue an order to his men to shoot the animals on sight. The bear and skunk protection laws have no friends. The provision should be repealed in the early days of the legislature sessions. Instead of protecting the animals, we should offer a reward for their extermination.

"The Fighting Parson" is just what the name implies for the leading character, a young minister, is compelled to fight (both physically and morally) his way to success. It's a big hearted character who believes there is good in all of us. His intense love for his mother and the wronged girl makes him a character loved by all, even the direct wrong doings of his brother to himself and the girl he loves does not change his belief of good in all of us. His struggle for his church against so many odds only holds him in higher esteem with the audience. It contains so many strong lines and situations and he is often compelled say "Do Not Make Me Forget The Cloth I Wear And Say Something That I Shall Be Sorry Afterwards."

It's a great big pastoral comedy drama with enough comedy between the pathetic lines to wipe away a tear. It teaches a lesson to young and old. Instances of the remarkable duration of the summer season in the copper country are being noticed constantly. Conditions that are almost spring-like are still being observed with October more than half gone by. On the hills south of Houghton wild flowers still may be picked as on Sunday afternoon ramblers in the woods reported the picking of daisies, buttercups and the golden rod. It is believed that this is the latest these flowers have bloomed in the copper country.

James R. Dee reports that he is now harvesting cantaloupes at his summer place on the lake shore east of Houghton. A BARGAIN.
Old Bill Sackett Paid the Exact Price He Offered.

Smith & Jones pride themselves on being sharp dealers in wares. Having no competition in their little country town, they sometimes tack on a little more profit than the conditions justify. The farmers know this, and they have given the firm a reputation that is one of the jokes of the county.

The other day old Bill Sackett came to town to get four or five axes, having decided to hurry up and cut a lot of cordwood to haul to pay taxes.

"Them's purty fair axes," said Bill after half a dozen different kinds of axes had been unwrapped and submitted to his critical examination.

"The best there is," said Smith & Jones in concert.

A dozen men sitting on soap and cracker boxes halted a debate on the financial question to watch the bargain.

"What's the price?" asked Bill.

"Sixty cents," replied Smith & Jones together.

"I'll tell you what I'll do," said Bill reflectively. "I'll give you fellers 50 cents apiece for five of 'em."

To sell five at one sale seemed a good thing, and Smith & Jones nodded to each other, and in a moment the axes were tied up and pushed over the counter to Bill, who took the bundle and laid down a dollar bill.

"Ye kin divide it between you, 50 cents apiece," advised Bill as he turned and walked off, and the cracker box audience shouted tumultuously as twelve brawny paws slapped twelve legs with a resounding whack.—Philadelphia Ledger.

A Good Trap.
The members of the Cumberland club in Portland tell this story about Tom Reed.

Reed and a companion went to the club one evening, hung their coats in the cloakroom and spent the evening talking politics. When they went to get their overcoats on leaving, Reed's friend thrust his hand in the pocket for his gloves and pulled out a pocketbook that was not his and that some one had put in there by mistake.

"What shall I do?" he asked Reed. "If I go around the club with a pocketbook in my hand it will look strange."

"That's all right," said Reed. "Keep the pocketbook and set the coat again. We'll go back in the smoking room."

Why Ade Smiled.
George Ade in the early days of his career, before the "Fables in Slang" had brought him fame, called one morning in Chicago upon a Sunday editor on a mission from a theatrical manager.

"I have brought you this manuscript," he began, but the editor, looking up at the tall, timid youth, interrupted:

"IN THE WASTERBASKET, PLEASE."

"Just throw the manuscript in the wastebasket, please," he said. "I'm very busy just now and haven't time to do it myself."

Mr. Ade obeyed calmly. He resumed:

"I have come from the — theater, and the manuscript I have just thrown in the wastebasket is your comic farce of 'The Erring Son,' which the manager asks me to return to you with thanks. He suggests that you sell it to an undertaker, to be read at funerals."

Then Mr. Ade smiled gently and withdrew.

The Duty of a Wife.

The family was divided upon only one subject—the revised version of the Bible. The husband preferred the new version and his wife the old. As a rule however, family prayers were read from the old version. One day, says a writer in the New York Evening Post, the head of the house read the chapter which concludes with "and the wife see that she reverence her husband." After the exercise had closed and the children had gone to bed the husband quoted it, looking meaningly at his wife.

"Let us see what the revised version says on that subject," said she. "I will follow the new teaching, to please you."

The revised version was produced, and her chin may be imagined as the man impressively read "and let the wife see that she fear her husband."
