BILL TO PROTECT CALVES

Chicagoan Introduces Measure in House Prohibiting Slaughter of Cattle Under Two Years.

Washington, Sept. 8 .-- Representative Fred A. Britten of Chicago introduce a bill prohibiting the killing of beef cattle under two years of age, with a view of increasing the supply and cheapening beef.

"The number of calves slaughtered has increased 10 per cent. in the last ten years," says Mr. Britten. "During 1911 eight million calves, weighing 560.000.000 pounds, were slaughtered. Had these calves been allowed to live for two years, averaging 1,400 pounds weight, they would have produced over 11,000,000,000 pounds of beef to supply the scarcity now felt."

The Northeastern Michigan Development bureau has adopted a unique traveling exhibit.

It is an automobile, completely equipped to show the advantages of northeastern Michigan. The beginning of its itinerary is the Northeast ern Michigan fair. From here it will go to the Thumb fair in Port Huron. and then to the state fair in Detroit Later it is to be used in a tour of Ohio, Indiana, Illinois and Iowa.

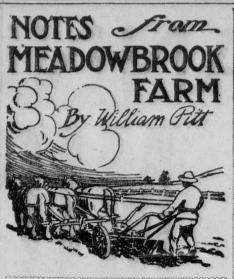

The car was donated to the bureau by Hon. W. A. Comstock of Alpena. and its cabinet body was designed and built under the direction of T. F. Marston. TRANCE LASTED LONG

SWEDISH WOMAN SPENT THIRTY-TWO YEARS IN BED.

Awakened in Perfect Health and With Complete Possession of Her Faculties, With No Memory of Her Sleep.

There are many cases on record of people remaining in a sleep-like trance for several years, these trances being often caused from injuries to the head, but no one has had so long a sleep as a woman named Caroline Allson, who lives in the little island of Okuo, off the coast of Sweden.

The sleeper of Okuo was born in 1861; she was a perfectly normal child, and for the first 14 years of her life she was strong and healthy. She did not go to work till just before her fourteenth birthday. One day she came home complaining of toothache and went to bed. Soon afterward she fell into a deep trance, which lasted from 1875 until 1907, a period of 32 years.

While in this state she did not seem to see or hear, nor did she show any trace of feeling, for though her arms were pricked with pins, needles and other sharp instruments she was not once observed to wince. Only once or twice did she seem to wake from her lethargy. On one occasion, in response to a cry from her mother, she moved her lips as if to try and speak. When her mother died Caroline must have been conscious of the fact. for she burst into tears, though there was no other change in her condition. Two years later, when her brother was drowned, she also had a fit of weeping. For 30 years and more her only nourishment consisted of two cupfuls of milk a day.

After the death of her brother she and then gradual signs of awakening intelligence began to dawn. Once she was left alone for several hours with was no doubt that her trance had been broken. A few months later she regained consciousness, asking for her

PRINTER'S INK

Is a most peculiar substance. It dries about as fast as paint or varnish, which is quite similar in body. A man who would not expect his painter to give him his buggy for use the afternoon it was painted, will take a couple of weeks to figure how he wants a piece of printing done and then expect the printer to finish it up the same day. This is not conducive to satisfaction on the part of printer or customer.

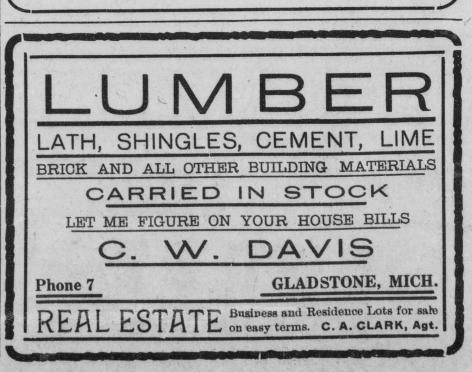

If you need your stationery replenished, a week is little enough notice to give the printer. A job which is padded or bound requires time for the ink to dry before it is handled, and additional time for the binding.

Look over your supply of printing today. Do not wait to order until you have not even a clean sheet for copy. Give the workman time and his work will suit you better.

G.RCE

ON MISSIONARY RIDGE

ATE seems to have decreed that, in 1863, two great battles were to be fought on the American continent, one in the east and the other in the southeast.

Whether or not Fate decreed thus, chance, accident and necessity, three elements that are present in all great military operations, combined to produce the conflicts of Gettysburg and Chickamauga.

It is a part of the military history of the United States that neither Meade nor Lee intended that the battle that was to decide the issues between the opposing forces of the Union and the Confederacy in the east would be fought at Gettysburg; but chance and accident, otherwise Fate, decreed that it should be decided there, and Gettysburg is a glorious heritage in which all Americans are common heirs

Seventy-five days after the flames of Gettysburg, two great armies of Americans threw themselves against each other like thunderbolts of death on the banks of Chickamauga creek, in the northwest corner of the state of Georgia, ten miles south of the city of Chattanooga, Tenn., and the battlefield of Chickamauga is a mournful but glorious testimonial to American valor for all time to come

Like the conflict of Gettysburg, the slaughter of Chickamauga was due largely, if not wholly, to chance and accident. Neither General Rosecrans nor General Bragg, commanding the Union and Confederate forces, respectively, understood or expected that a battle would be fought on that wooded plain.

After the Tullahoma campaign of the Union army in middle Tennessee, which ended July 4, 1863, General Bragg moved the army of Tennessee to Chattaneoga. General Rosecrans, about the first of August, began moving the army of the Cumberland to the western slopes of the Cumberland mountains with the intention of throwing his forces across the Lookout range into the Chattanooga territory. General Rosecrans had established headquar-' ters at Winchester, Tenn., for the purpose of directing these military operations against Chattanooga. His left corps, under Crittenden, was at McMinnville, about fifty miles north of Winchester, but the same distance from the western base of the Cumberlands. The center of his line was at Decherd, under Gen. George H. Thomas, who was destined to glorify his name at Snodgrass Hill. McCook, commanding the 20th corps, was at Winchester with Rosecrans. Minty's cavalry was to the left of Crittenden. E. M. Mc-Cook's division of Mitchell's cavalry corps was on the right of the 20th corps. General Sheridan's division early in the month of August was advanced to Bridgeport and Stevenson, Ala., on the Tennessee river. Thomas and McCook were sent through the mountains many miles south of Chattanooga, striking the valley about forty miles south of that city. Crittenden was dispatched to the vicinity of Chattarooga, the purpose being to engage the attention of Bragg until Thomas and McCook could cross the mountains and place their corps between Chattanooga and the Confederate base of supplies to the south. General Bragg, however, was not to be caught in such a trap. On the night of September 7 and morning of September 8 he quietly evacuated Chattanooga, marching south to intercept Thomas and McCook, as they came down from the mountains into the valley south of Chickamauga. The Confederate plan of campaign is clearly revealed in this movement. General Bragg saw an opportunity to engage the Union corps in detail and destroy them. Longstreet was coming over from Ringgold, Ga., with heavy reinforcements, having just reached that point from Gettysburg. It was the golden opportunity for the Confederates, but slipped through Bragg's hands by failure on the part of corps commanders to carry out his orders. General Crittenden discovered that Bragg had evacuated Chattanooga on the morning of September 9, and immediately occupied the city. Through the most unreliable information. General Rosecrans believed that Bragg was in full retreat on Rome, Ga. Acting upon this information he ordered pursuit through the Pigeon mountains Crittenden's corps, with the exception of a garrison force, was sent after Bragg. They found him at Lee & Gordon's mill, on Chickamauga creek, preparing for battle, with the forces of Thomas and McCook. There was now no lingering doubt that a great battle was to be fought on the banks of the Chickamauga on the morrow. On September 18, which was Friday, General Braxton Bragg, realizing that his plan to engage his antagonists in detail had miscarried, ordered a movement of his army down the Chickamauga to effect crossings at a number of bridges and fords. Late on the evening of the 18th a sharp engagement occurred at Alexander's bridge.

of north Georgia. This road was the "dead line" in the battle of Chickamauga. If its dust, its rock's and its trees could be animated and endowed with the power of speech, the story they could tell would turn into sickly romance the best pages of heroic history. The struggle for possession of this now historic highway was no less heroic and deadly than the numerous assaults and repulses at Snodgrass Hill. The flame of battle swept the forest on each side of the road with a fury that no pen can describe.

of battle swept through Kelley field. Then there came one of those mysterious and unexpected lulls in the storm, but it was merely gathering force for the climax of a hurricane that had raged in the forest along Chickamauga creek for two days. It was soon to break again, and its lightnings were next to flash around horseshoe summit, where I was standing. I saw the advancing Confederate legions sweeping all before them across the open plain in my front. Longstreet had driven his brigades through the Union lines and swept the right wing of Rosecrans' army from the field in wild disorder. Wheeling his forces he started for Thomas in command of the left wing. If Thomas could be routed, a victory for Confederate arms was assured that would shake the nation to its foundations. Next Blanch and chop the almonds, beat the eggs, then add the sugar gently and the chopped almonds; add the orange flower water and beat for a full hour. Bake in small round dishes, cover with buttered paper to keep them from getting too brown at the ast.

Raspberries a la Astor .- Take two cups of raspberries, add a little lemon juice and powdered sugar in small proportions and a pinch of nutmeg. Mix thoroughly with whipped cream, flavor with maraschino. Sprinkle with pistachio nuts and place on ice for two hours before serving.

Squabs Mirabeau.-Prepare squabs as for roasting; boil five minutes in boiling broth and then remove them. Split down the back without breaking the breast bone. SALADS AND SANDWICHES.

The unusual always appeals to most people, and when a combination never before heard of is mentioned, we are all anxious to try it. Here is one which will at least excite remark:

Poppy Seed Salad .- Grate , little sage cheese over some treshly washed and well dried lettuce; add the finishing touch by sprinkling over it some freshly roasted poppy seed. which adds an unusual flavor. Serve with French dressing.

Olive and Celery Sandwiches .-Chop in a bowl equal quantities of tender heart celery and stuffed olives; moisten with salad dressing to spread easily, and spread on well buttered bread.

Mint Cucumber Sandwiches .-- Place thinly sliced crisp cucumber dipped in French dressing, and sprinkle with mint finely chopped. Put together just before serving.

Salad of Nuts and Green Peas .--A delicious salad may be made by combining green peas with English walnuts in the proporotion of a third of nuts to two-thirds of peas, with any desired salad dressing. Serve on lettuce leaves with a slice or two of tomato for a garnish.

Summer Salad .- Cook a quart of shelled Lima beans in salted water. When done, drain the beans and chill them. Peel and cut into very small dice two crisp tart apples and chop fine two sweet green peppers, from which the seeds and ribs have been removed. Mix all together with mayonnaise flavored with onion juice.

Chestnuts and apples are a good combination, as are any nuts with good flavored apple.

The battlefield of Chickamauga was a densely wooded plain with an occasional elevation from which the thunderbolts of war could be hurled from heavy artillery.

The visitor today to the field of Chickamauga is wheeled along the Lafayette road, an old highway, now well improved by the government, that id service before the war for the country folk

Practically all of the first day of the battle of Chickamauga was a contest for the possession of Lafayette road. The sun went down and darkness enveloped the field, leaving the mighty hosts still contending for the highway. The Confederates had been driving west all day in an effort to break the Union lines and Lafayette road became the "bloody lane" of Chickamauga.

The blood of the two armies still flowed when night threw its shadows over the field. Neither had been victorious. No more indescribably oppressive spectacle can well be imagined than night brought to the two armies. They were so close together than the groans of the wounded and dying of both armies could be plainly heard. The field was strewn with the unburied dead.

By the close of the first day's fighting the Confederates had become the aggressors. Their purpose was plainly apparent, to break across Lafayette road and pierce the Union lines, cutting the army in two sections, hopelessly dividing it, and annihilating each section in detail.

Not until church bells in Chattanooga were calling the people to divine worship did the roar of battle again resound throughout the plain But it came with a more deadly roar than any which had swept through the forest on Saturday. The Union forces were steadily driven back from Lafayette road, but doggedly held their position in Dyer and Kelley fields against every assault, inflicting heavy damage on the Confederate columns. Through a jumbling of field orders, the Kelley field line of the Union forces was weakened, and Longstreet drove three divisions against the weakened point. It was the opportunity that had been the hope of the Confederates all day. Rosecrans, Crittenden and McCook were caught in the break, separated from Thomas' wing and retired to Chattanooga.

It is not surprising that the break in the lines and departure of Rosecrans for Chattanooga disheartened the Union forces and inspirted the Confederates. However, the Confederates had a great commander to contend with in the person of Gen. George H. Thomas, now the "Rock of Chickamauga." As the roar of battle swept through Kelley field, it seemed that the Union forces were doomed. Snodgrass Hill rises some three hundred feet high immediately west of Kelley field. Its eastern side is precipitous and in some places rough.

General Thomas rallied his men on Snodgrass Hill, and here occurred the heaviest fighting of the entire engagement.

The best regiments of the southern armies were sent against Thomas at Snodgrass Hill, to be shot to pieces on the very breastworks of the enemy. Some of the Confederate regiments lost as high as 70 per cent. of their men in their attempts to dislodge Thomas, while the Union regiments suffered almost as heavily. The shouts of the living, mingled with the groans of the dying and walls of the wounded, made Snodgrass Hill a veritable inferno of death.

Not long ago I stood on horseshoe summit, the crater of Snodgrass Hill. As far as the eye could reach along the crest of the ridge I saw handsome monuments of marble and bronze. tributes of a grateful people to the valor of their sons. But these memorials, emblazoned with the deeds of the living and the dead, carved into them by the chisel of an artist, did not impress me so profoundly as what I saw through the gray mists of fifty years. I allowed my mind to go back, and I saw as boroic a display of human courage as the world ever witnessed. The roar I beheld the brave General Brannan rallying the remnants of a half dozen brigades on Snodgrass Hill. General Thomas was marshalling his shattered forces for a resistance that placed his name high in the esteem of the nation.

Before I could grasp the meaning of the whirl and the rush of the regiments, Snodgrass Hill had been converted into a citadel of defense from which the thunderbolts of iron could be hurled it can.

Then I saw a sheet of flame burst from the Union lines on the crest of the hill, full in the faces of the advancing egg, a stalk of celery finely minced, Confederates. No troops could stand in that and seasonings of salt, pepper, a bit storm of lead. They halted, dazed and deadened of nutmeg and allspice, a teaspoon of by the awful carnage. Much controversy has from time to time arisen over Chickamauga statistics, but from the best obtainable information the total strength of each army was a little to the rise of 50,000 men, making the number actually engaged some thing more than 100,000. The casualties were about as follows:

Confederate: Killed, 2,268; wounded, 13,613; missing, 1,090; aggregate, 16,971. Union: Killed, 1,656; wounded, 9,749; missing 4,774; aggregate, 16,179.

These deadly figures show that the agrgegate slaughter at Chickamauga was $3,150, including dead, wounded and missing in both armies.

WATERY BLISTERS ON FACE

Smithville, Ind .- "Six months ago our baby girl, one year old, had a few red pimples come on her face which gradually spread causing her face to become very irritated and a fiery red color. The pimples on the child's face were at first small watery blisters, just a small blotch on the skin. She kept scratching at this until in a few days her whole cheeks were fiery red color and instead of the little blisters the skin was cracked and scaly looking and seemed to itch and burn very much

"We used a number of remedies which seemed to give relief for a short time then leave her face worse than ever. Finally we got a cake of Cuticura Soap and a box of Cuticura Ointment. I washed the child's face with very warm water and Cuticura Soap, then applied the Cuticura Ointment very lightly. After doing this about three times a day the itching and burning seemed entirely gone in two days' time. Inside of two weeks' time her face seemed well. That was eight months ago and there has been no return of the trouble." (Signed) Mrs. A. K. Wooden, Nov. 4, 1912.

THE DOCTOR'S GIFT Food Worth Its Weight in Gold.

We usually expect the doctor to put us on some kind of penance and give us bitter medicines.

A Penn. doctor brought a patient something entirely different and the results are truly interesting.

"Two years ago," writes this patient, "I was a frequent victim of acute indigestion and biliousness, being allowed to eat very few things. One day our family doctor brought me a small package, saying he had found something for me to eat.

'He said it was a food called Grape-Nuts and even as its golden color might suggest it was worth its weight in gold. I was sick and tired, trying one thing after another to no avail, but consented to try this new food.

Well! It surpassed my down's fondest anticipation and every day since then I have blessed the good doctor and the inventor of Grape-Nuts.

"I noticed improvement at once and in a month's time my former spells of indigestion had disappeared. In two months I felt like a new man. My mind was much clearer and keener, my body took on the vitality of youth, and this condition has continued.'

BACK TO EARTH

After remarking that a 15 foot water bound macadam road costs about $500 a year to keep in condition, and bituminous macadam even more under automobile traffic, the Scientific American observes:

Curiously enough we are forced to admit there is a possibility that the natural soil road will play an important part in the future. The natural soil road well drained and crowned is a most comfortable road during a large part of the year. Will it not be economical to give the earth and gravel road a thorough trial? In the past gravel and earth roads have not been scientically cared for. It is now known that, with persistent dragging, natural soil roads may be kept in splendid condition except in the very worst weather. It has not yet been demonstrated that an earth road built with the same care for grading, alignment and drainage structures that would be given to a bituminous macadam road, or a brick road, may not, after all, be a very economical type of road if properly maintained.

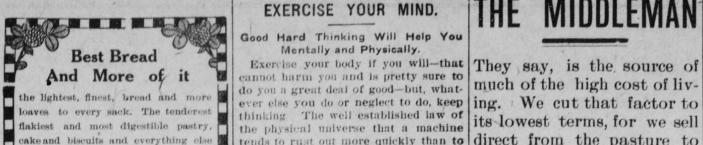

If traffic on such a road develops in the future, there will be an excellent foundation for a superior surface. One reason that natural soil roads have not been considered by modern highway engineers is because such roads have never been maintained with such continuity and care to demonstrate what they can do. There is no doubt that a well-built sand-clay road, where the materials are carefully selected, is a most excellent highway. It will stand up under considerable traffic, and is very comfortable for automobiling. Of course, such a road must be maintained by skilled labor continuously.

FEDERAL LAWS EFFECTIVE

Frederick C. Martindale, secretary of state, calls attention to the fact that the state and federal laws relative to the killing of migratory birds conflict. In all cases of conflict however, the federal law takes precedence over the Michigan game law.

The Michigan law provides an open season on duck, geese, plover, brant and jacksnipe from Sept. 1 to Dec. 31. The federal law, which will govern and which becomes effective October 1, 1918 provides that wood duck shall not be killed after Sept. 30, until 1918.
