

Munising C-C Members Hear Pictured Rocks Area Report, Discuss Stamp Plan Losses

MUNISING — A general meeting of the Munising-Alger Chamber of Commerce Monday night, attended by many members and interested persons, produced discussion about the proposed Pictured Rocks Lakeshore Recreation Area and a report by retail merchants present as to their opinions and ideas relative to the trading stamp problem in the community.

Considerable discussion also was held regarding the membership drive for this year. The secretary reported that memberships are starting to come in and urged everyone to contact their neighbors and ask them to get their checks in the mail. A number of new members already have signed up, and all indications are that this could be the year the chamber will be able to do many things that have been previously curtailed because of finances.

Richard McLaughlin, chamber president, gave a report on his trip to Grand Marais to attend the meeting held there with representatives of the National Park Service. At the meeting, they explained the proposed lakeshore park and plans for creating it.

Resolutions were passed regarding the contacting of state and national government representatives to acquaint them with the problems in a community which has no trading stamp redemption store. Conservative estimates by chamber members indicate that $60,000 to $70,000 is being drained out of this community annually through stamp redemptions. In addition, it was stated that Munising residents are driving 50 to 80 miles to communities which have redemption centers and are spending additional money outside Munising.

A request for $1,000 by the American Legion Post to finance a Fourth of July program was turned over to the retail group for consideration.

Storm Keeps Hundreds From Following St. Paul Quintet

NEGAUNEE — Traffic was reduced to a minimum, schools were closed early and municipal snow removal crews worked overtime Tuesday night and yesterday as Negaunee was hit by the second severe storm of the current winter season.

Hundreds of local basketball enthusiasts who had planned to make the trip to Pickford to see Negaunee St. Paul play Brimley in the state Class D quarter-finals last night decided to remain at home.

School officials advanced the departure time of the basketball team from 11:30 to 10:30 a. m., and cancelled arrangements to send a bus carrying students and transportation for cheer leaders.

Acting on information received from the U. S. Weather Bureau, Supt. A. B. Habet decided not to cancel the morning session at the Negaunee public schools, but when heavy snows and high winds made visibility near-zero at about 11 a. m., the schools were closed for the remainder of the day.

Supt. Arthur Anderson of the Negaunee public works department reported that measurements taken shortly before noon Wednesday at the Negaunee Cemetery revealed a snowfall of between 11 and 12 inches.

To keep streets and highways open to traffic, Anderson sent six plows and a grader into action at 3 a. m. Wednesday. Five of the vehicles remained in operation until late yesterday afternoon and one was scheduled to keep going around the clock. Crews on other vehicles were slated to return to work at 2 a. m. today to begin clean-up operations.

St Paul Changes Time Of Awards

NEGAUNEE — Awards for prize-winning exhibits in the St. Paul School Science Fair will be presented in the school office Friday afternoon, instead of at 7:30 a. m. as originally planned. The change is being made to permit stay-at-home fans to listen to the radio broadcast of Negaunee St. Paul-Owosso St. Paul semi-final Class D basketball game in East Lansing.

However, the public may view the exhibits in the school gym until 6:30 tomorrow evening.

Unidentified Driver Saves Two Women

L'ANSE — State police today credited an unidentified motorist with the rescue of two Baraga women injured in an auto accident on U. S. 41, at the "head of the bay" between L'Anse and Baraga, at about 6:30 Wednesday morning.

The mishap took place when the car driven by Ina Witt went out of control, struck a guard rail and bridge, and was left hanging by one cable over the water — the one place along the shoreline where the water is quite deep. The front wheels, state police said, actually were touching the water.

A passing motorist opened the doors of the car and pulled the women from their precarious perch.

The two women, both employees of the institution, were brought to Baraga County Memorial Hospital. Mrs. Witt is suffering from a possible fractured ankle and bruises, while Laila Kangas who was riding with her, received bruises and contusions.

Seven Alger Herds Cited For Output

MUNISING — John P. Campana, Alger County extension director, announced today that the Dairy Herd Improvement Association testing records for February showed seven herds topped the county with 30 or more pounds of milk per day per cow. They were:

John Henning, Traunik, herd production, 1,055 pounds of milk for the month, which was an average of 38 pounds per day per cow; William Debelak, Traunik, 1,031 and 37; Lud Knaus, Traunik, 976 and 35; Urho Pokela, Traunik, 964 and 34; Edgar Williams, Trenary, 888 and 32; Wilho Laurila, Limestone, 856 and 31; and Arnold Hill, Trenary, 848 and 30.

In butterfat production, herds producing one pound of butterfat per cow or better were the following: Urho Pokela, averaged 36 pounds of fat per cow for the month; Lud Knaus and John Henning, 35; William Debelak, 32; Arnold Hill and Thomas Guare, 30; Gunner Benson, Eben, Robert H. Smith, Chatham, and Edgar Williams, 28.

A total of 498 cows were tested by DHIA Supervisor John Matekall during the month and the feed cost per hundred pounds of milk produced was $2 as contrasted with the state average of $1.72.

"Dairy herd production testing doesn't cost — it pays," Campana said. "There are other practices, however, which must go along with testing. Some of these are: Cut cows with quality stored roughages; supplement the roughage ration; determine future of your herd with quality herd replacements; breed cows for 12-month intervals between freshenings; strive for high production per acre, cow and man for lower costs and more profit; manage pastures for greatest returns; produce plenty of quality pasture; produce quality products, and prevent disease from stealing your profits."

Vast Majority Of Teenagers Present Few Problems For Police, PTA Told By Chief

NEGAUNEE — Parental neglect and environment are the major factors resulting in juvenile delinquency, members of a panel discussing the topic, "Community Recreation and Delinquency," at the March meeting of the Lakeview PTA generally agreed.

Panel members included Kenneth Roberts, Negaunee police chief; City Manager Leonard Harris; Thomas Baldini, president of the Negaunee Youth Council; Marshall Phillips, Youth Center director; Leslie Ruohomaki, Marquette County probation officer; Norman Goethe, Ishpeming Township school superintendent; and Arthur Wassberg, Negaunee High School commercial instructor.

No Trouble With Majority

Chief Roberts explained that the major problems involving youth as far as police department experience was concerned were traffic violations and consumption of alcoholic beverages. He noted that the vast majority of local youngsters have presented the department with few problems.

Speaking for youth of the community, Baldini stated that these young people want responsibility, and are willing to prove that they merit the confidence of older citizens.

Supt. Goethe noted that some of the problems of youth stemmed from the fact that they must conform, and at times they feel like "kicking over the traces." Ruohomaki presented figures showing that the rate of increase of delinquency is greater among girls than boys.

Youth Center Rules Told

Phillips explained the operation of the Youth Center according to a set of regulations established by the Youth Council. He emphasized that consistent violation of the rules by a boy or girl may result in the council barring the offender from the center.

City Manager Harris told the group that, because of the decrease in valuation and corre-

Cleanup After Winter's Worst Storm Begun; Balmy Weather Ahead

Some well-deserved nice weather is in store for area residents this weekend.

Warmer temperatures and sunshine are ahead, and the worst storm of the winter is now something to be remembered.

Road crews were completing cleanup work today, after the heaviest March snowfall in 24 years and also the heaviest snowfall since Dec. 11 and 12 of 1961 and the severest blizzard of the winter.

In the 30-hour period which began at 8 Tuesday morning and ended at 1 p.m. Wednesday, 12.7 inches of wet snow was dumped on the area. The water value of the snowfall was 1.15 inches.

Powerful winds didn't even begin to diminish until midnight Wednesday, and they were still going strong on the outskirts of town and in open areas until late yesterday morning.

From Yard To Yard

It seemed that as soon as the heavy white stuff was shoveled out of one driveway, it blew over to a neighbor's yard and filled up his driveway. Road crews said that as soon as plows got through the deep drifts, drifts piled up again.

However, after a few dying spurts yesterday morning, winds dropped to 15 to 20 miles per hour in the afternoon and around 10 miles per hour by evening.

Although the mercury only got up to 23 yesterday, the sun was out 80 per cent of the possible time and ice melted off much of the state trunklines and downtown streets.

The cleanup job on county roads was expected to be completed this morning, John H. Tyni, Ishpeming, county road commission maintenance superintendent, reported.

A few isolated side-roads were still blocked this morning, but were being cleared.

A half-dozen high-banked narrow spots on U. S. 41 between Marquette and Negaunee were being cleared with Sno-Go's this morning. The high banks couldn't be chopped up in the Sno-Go's until this morning, because strong north winds kept blowing snow across the lane of traffic.

Howard L. Coppens, public works superintendent, said crews completed a snow pickup on U. S. 41 through the downtown area this morning. There was not enough time to clean around parking meters, but the street widening done this morning should alleviate Friday night traffic conditions, Coppens said.

Drifting In Outskirts

On the outskirts of town, problem areas for drifting during the storm, a Sno-Go was used all night to widen streets.

Noting that the downtown catch basins were freed of ice during the early March thaw, Coppens said that when all this snow melts, the runoff will find its way into the catch basins and conditions shouldn't be too bad.

There was only a trace of snowfall yesterday, so the total snowfall for the month still stands at 14.9 inches. Normal amount of snowfall for the month, through today, is 11 inches.

For the season, snowfall has amounted to 73.8 inches. Normal amount so far this season is 89 inches.

Overnight, the low temperature in Marquette was 13 at 7:30 this morning.

Six Below At Airport

At 7 a.m., the Marquette County Airport in Negaunee Township reported a low of six below and this summary as the coldest temperature for all reporting weather stations.

Other low temperatures this morning were one above at K. I. Sawyer Air Force Base, three at Calumet and at Sault Ste. Marie, and 12 at Escanaba.

Mild temperatures are forecast, but with a snow depth of 23 inches this morning, the melting process will probably take a long time.

Up To 40 Tomorrow

The temperature was expected to rise to the mid-30s today and a low tonight of 20 is expected. Tomorrow's high is expected to be near 40. Partly cloudy skies and continued mild temperatures are predicted Sunday.

For the next five days, temperatures are expected to average two to four degrees above normal. Normal high for the period is 26 and normal low is 23. Comparatively mild readings are predicted, until slightly colder temperatures about Tuesday or Wednesday.

Precipitation in the next five days is expected to total less than one-fourth of an inch in scattered showers during the first part of the week.

City Issuing Large Number Of Absent Ballots For Election

Indications are that a sizable percentage of voters in Marquette will cast absent ballots in the spring election scheduled for Monday, April 1.

Absent ballots have already been issued by City Clerk Everett H. Kent to 60 persons, a high figure for this point in the election period. By the time the election rolls around at least three times that number probably will have voted here by that method.

This year the biennial state election coincides with the municipal election. In addition to the races for city commissioner and supervisor on the city ballot and the regular partisan and non-partisan races for state offices, there are two referendums to be voted on.

One referendum is on the proposed new constitution for Michigan and the other concerns the millage limitation for Marquette County, which is to be used for welfare purposes.

Another referendum is on the proposed new constitution for Michigan and the other concerns the millage limitation for Marquette County, which is to be used for welfare purposes.

Can Vote At Office

Kent noted that persons who so desire may cast their absent ballots right in his office, immediately after being issued the set of ballots.

Otherwise, those who wish to take the ballots home or who have the absent ballots mailed to them must, the clerk noted, mark and return them to his office before the close of the polls on election day.

Return By April 1

If the ballots are mailed back to the clerk, care must be taken to deposit them in the mail soon enough so that they'll reach his office by April 1.

At the same time, County Clerk Lloyd LeVasseur of Marquette urged all voters in Marquette County who know they will be out of their voting area on election day, or who are ill, to apply as soon as possible for absent ballots from their respective city or township clerks.

Kent expects a rush for absent ballots to develop next week, which is the last week before the election.

"Those who know they will have to cast absent ballots would be wise to apply for them as soon as possible," he said, "and thereby avoid the necessity of waiting in line later."

Saturday, March 30, is the deadline for issuance of absent ballots for the spring election. This deadline is set by state law. Kent's office will be open continuously from 8 a. m. to 2 p. m., March 30, for the issuance of absent ballots, with none permitted after 2 p. m.

"However," he said, "we'd advise persons wanting to vote by this method not to wait until the last day, as they may forget to apply and be unable to vote."

One Set Per Request

LeVasseur noted that only one set of absent ballots may be issued per request. In other words, if more than one person in a family votes by absent ballot, separate, written requests must be made to the city or township clerk for the absent ballots.

Neither may requests for absent ballots be made over the phone, he emphasized.

"The signature of the person applying for the absent ballots must be checked by the clerk with the signature on the voter registration rolls," he pointed out.

Information To Be Included

Those requesting absent ballots must include the following information with their requests:

(1) The reason the voter is unable to go to the polls on election day (such as illness, out of the city during the time the polls are open, etc.)

(2) The address to which the ballots should be mailed (which must correspond to the address in the voting records).

(3) The signature of the voter making the request.

Escanaba Called Good Place To Test Winter Ore Shipping

Escanaba is a "made-to-order" starting point for winter movement of iron ore on the Great Lakes, Rear Admiral E. H. Thiele of the U. S. Coast Guard (retired) told the recent mining symposium of the University of Minnesota at Duluth.

"If we accept the facts as I have presented them," said Admiral Thiele after describing winter navigation in ice in Scandinavia and elsewhere and the feasibility of converting Great Lakes bulk ore carriers for winter use, "the question arises: How and where could a start be made to apply these principles and practices for the best interests of the Great Lakes?"

Controlling Month

"February is generally conceded to be the controlling month when temperatures are lowest and maximum ice is formed. I call your attention to the amount of open water in Lake Michigan. Green Bay is solid ice, but the prevailing surface winds are from the west. This situation prevails practically all winter.

"Escanaba is a major ore port, presently handling about 10 per cent of the ore shipments from Upper Lakes mines. For all practical purposes, these shipments all go to the steel plants on southern Lake Michigan. Here is the made-to-order starting point. With maximum expense for conversion of equipment both ashore and afloat, 10 or even 11 months ore movements could be maintained between Escanaba and the southern Lake Michigan mills. Instead of 8 million tons, you could move 9 million tons with the same size fleet.

Suffered Little Damage

"Using the experience gained on this run, navigation could be extended into Lake Superior and down to the lower lakes as the necessary changes are made. Once the operation is proven feasible, there will be adequate justification for the federal government to appropriate the necessary funds for building additional icebreakers and for winterizing harbors, channels and locks for year-round service."

As late as World War II, said Admiral Thiele, carteries and fish boats were about the only ships moving on the lakes for almost 5 months of the year. World War II made the big change. Navy ships built in Great Lakes yards were sailed through the lakes and down the Illinois River after the normal closing of navigation, and these thin-skinned ships suffered remarkably little damage from ice. Most of the techniques needed to extend the season were developed in the war emergency.

Prof. Harry Benford of the University of Michigan told the Society of Naval Architects and Marine Engineers in Duluth in 1961 this his economic study of Great Lakes shipping clearly established that to extend the operating season to 11 months seems to have the most merit of all, at least from the ship owners' point of view. Profitability varies almost directly in proportion to the length of season.

Said Admiral Thiele, "I would say that the economic climate is ripe for year-round operation of ore carriers on the lakes.

Baltic Sea Parallel

"How can it be done? Normally the maximum thickness of lake ice in this (Duluth) area is about 30 inches. Present ore fleet operators shudder to think of even attempting to put a boat into any of the lakes under these conditions. It is not until mid-April when the break-up is almost complete that the lakes fleet normally ventures forth.

"But the conditions here are not unique in the world. The Baltic Sea is a very close parallel. The water is practically fresh, the latitudes are much further north and the average conditions worse. In spite of this, due to economic requirements, navigation is maintained all year round. Ships must be built with these conditions in mind. The Scandinavian countries have done just this and are reaping the rewards for which we are seeking. Tankers, bulk carriers and general cargo vessels have been built to operate the year round into the northern ports of Finland and Sweden.

Remarkable Operating Record

"Another fleet which has learned to successfully operate in winter are the oil boats on Lake Michigan. None of these ships has actually been built for winter service, but due to very fine cooperation from the Coast Guard and Weather Bureau a remarkable winter operating record has been established.

"Not too many changes in ship design are needed for year-around service on the Great Lakes. The bow and stern are the real problem areas. The new bow is commonly referred to as an ice-working bow. The stern treatment is much simpler, in that fin protection for propeller and rudder are about the only hull form changes. Excellent Example

"Why hasn't it been done before? It wasn't necessary. One adverse effect will be reduction in the size of fleets. Ore boats built or converted for winter operations still cannot be expected to operate independently under all conditions. Icebreakers will be required to keep channels open and render assistance when the going gets tough. The Coast Guard Cutter Mackinaw is an excellent example of the type of vessel capable of maintaining year-round traffic under almost any condition.

"Several years ago the Swedes installed the first bubbler system to prevent ice formation in slips and harbors. Today many installations are in use throughout the world."

Three Plead Guilty Before Davidson; Sentencing Slated

Circuit Court Judge Bernard H. Davidson of Negaunee accepted guilty pleas from three defendants during criminal arraignments held in Marquette County Circuit Court here yesterday afternoon.

Sentencing for the three was scheduled for Wednesday at 10:30 a. m. in the county courthouse here.

Guilty pleas were accepted yesterday from:

Kenneth Taube, 18, Laurium, breaking and entering in the nighttime;

George LaBeau, 20, Route 1, Box 255, Ishpeming, breaking and entering in the nighttime;

Duane Aanderud, 21, of 608 N. Fifth St., Ishpeming, breaking and entering in the nighttime.

Taube was arraigned in Marquette Municipal Court March 12 for a theft which occurred Feb. 7 at Burbey's Confectionery, at the corner of Hampton and Division Sts. in Marquette.

Taube and another Laurium youth, Bruce Pyntila, 18, escaped from the Baraga County Jail Feb. 6, where they were being held by the Houghton County Sheriff's Department on a charge of unlawfully driving away an automobile.

They allegedly stole an automobile and drove to Marquette, where they took cigarettes, wine, rolls and $2 in pennies from Burbey's Confectionery.

After stealing two more cars, they arrived in Detroit, police said.

They have been cured of the disease.

Research Funds Needed

Progress goes hand-in-hand with the amount of research and money is needed to promote research, he said. "If we do our share," he said, "we will help conquer a disease which, if present rates continue, eventually strike 46,000,000 Americans."

Myers said the Houghton-Hancock area regularly has raised more money to fight cancer than has Marquette, and that this year he would like to see this area exceed the Copper Country's total.

Myers Heads County Cancer Drive Division

Richard H. Myers of Marquette has been appointed chairman of the Marquette County retail and business section for the Marquette County Cancer Crusade to be held next month.

Announcement was made today by Robert M. Bourdeau, Marquette, county drive chairman.

Here Since 1958

Myers, manager of Stern & Field's Store since 1958, has been in the retail clothing business since 1948.

Born and raised in Des Moines, Iowa, he attended State University of Iowa. He is a member of the Marquette Elks Lodge, Rotary Club and the Marquette Chamber of Commerce.

Myers and his wife, Dorothy, and their four children, Martha, Lucy, Polly, and Richard Jr., reside at 426 Spruce St.

In accepting the appointment, Myers said he was "pleased to have the opportunity to do my part in combating a disease that is the second largest killer of Americans."

He noted that real progress is being made in the fight against cancer and that more than 1,200,000 persons are alive because

U. S. Civil Service Job Opening At Sawyer Base Listed

Officials of the U. S. Civil Service Commission have announced a job opening at K. I. Sawyer Air Force Base for the position of recreation specialist, GS-3, at a salary of $6,090 per year.

Appropriate education, experience and training is required.

For further information, interested applicants may contact the civilian personnel office at Sawyer or Percy C. Chubb, civil service examiner in charge, Marquette Post Office Building.

Pyntila Suffered Broken Leg Jumping From Roof of Two-story Detroit Building

Pyntila suffered a broken leg jumping from the roof of a two-story Detroit building, after he was seen stealing a pair of shoes.

He is being held by Detroit police on a larceny charge, and will later be turned over to authorities in Marquette.

After apprehension in Detroit, Taube was turned over to the Houghton County sheriff's department and was then released to Marquette authorities for prosecution.

Arrested In Ishpeming

LaBeau and Aanderud were both arrested by Ishpeming police Feb. 23 for the theft of $91.53 from the Feltner Plumbing & Heating Co. store at 115 S. First St., Ishpeming.

LaBeau appeared in court yesterday with his attorney, Nicholas E. Bridges, Negaunee.

Aid Asked For 2 Competing Hospitals

LANSING (AP) — Gov. George Romney said he will seek a change in Health Department policy in an effort to qualify two competing private hospitals in Monroe for federal aid under the Hill-Burton Act.

In a letter to Dr. Albert Heustis, health commissioner, the Governor asked that the state request federal funds for both the Monroe Hospital, a private community facility, and Mercy Hospital, a Roman Catholic hospital.

Separate Building Programs

The money, an estimated $1 million, would be divided between the two hospitals to help them complete separate building programs started a few years ago with private funds.

Romney said he would request the state seek Hill-Burton funds to be "allocated equitably" to both hospitals, withdrawing its sole endorsement of the Monroe hospital.

Had Fund-Raising Race

This, said the Governor, would be "simply a recognition of the state's moral obligation to try to

Interest In U. P. At Lure Show Indicates 'Biggest Year Ahead'

Interest in the region's attractions being promoted at sports and travel shows throughout the Midwest may indicate one of the greatest years yet is ahead for the Upper Peninsula's fastest growing industry.

Upper Michigan Tourist Association officials in Marquette today expressed amazement at the highly receptive attitude of persons visiting the Chicago, Detroit and Milwaukee shows.

More literature concerning the Peninsula's tourist and resort accommodations and facilities is being distributed than ever before, leading to belief that the 1963 summer tourist season may be a "bumper" one.

It will have its large, attractive exhibits at the American and Canadian Sportsmen's Show in Cleveland and also will be at sports and travel shows in Minneapolis, Indianapolis and Green Bay, Wis.

Additional Supplies Asked

The demand for U.P. attractions literature was far greater than anticipated at the Milwaukee Sentinel Sports-Boat-Vacation Show which runs through Sunday.

Poison Prevention Week, Unit At St. Luke's Noted

Each year 500,000 children under five years of age are involved in accidental poisonings. The majority of accidental poisonings are caused by carelessness and ignorance on the part of adults, through improper storage, handling and discarding of potential poisons.

The four classes of products most often involved in the reported accidental poisonings are internal medicines, particularly aspirins; cleaning and polishing agents; pesticides, and petroleum distillate products.

Base Air Service Personnel See Runway Electronically; Equipment Aids In Landings

Air weather Service personnel at K. I. Sawyer Air Force Base are now seeing both ends of the runway electronically with new dual instrumentation equipment.

This equipment package, known technically as a duplicate precision-approach weather - observation facility, puts weather instruments in approach and landing areas for USAF aircraft landing by radar or automatic instrument-landing systems.

The USAF Air Weather Service's Sawyer is related to the first of 87 installations to be made at USAF bases and civilian airports for military flying.

Included in the package are wind-measuring equipment, visibility-measuring equipment (transmissometer), and cloud - base height-measuring equipment (rotating beam ceilometer).

Instantaneous Reports Given

Each set of the dual equipment, located at both ends of the all-weather runway, gives instantaneous information on touchdown wind direction and velocity, landing visibility and approach ceiling (cloud height).

Recording instruments for the equipment are in a representative observation site building located in the Base Operations building, beneath the control tower, and manned continuously by highly skilled weather observers.

This weather information is continuously displayed, enabling the observer to pass along highly accurate weather information for either end of the runway any time of day or night.

Information on landing approach visibility, provided by the transmissometer, is related to the pilot by the weather observer through approach control.

The machines constantly report what they see and never blink, thus decreasing the chance of human error.

Don't Eliminate Observer

They have not, and will not, eliminate the human observer. Rather, the observer becomes more important to the system. As certain weather elements are measured more closely with instruments, the portions of the observations made by the observer must be more accurate as well, to make the entire report meaningful.

Air Defense implications of the system are many. Sawyer is one of the primary bases in Air Defense Command's defense system for the northern area of the mid-western United States. Sawyer also serves as the home of the Strategic Air Command's 410th Bombardment Wing.

Aircraft recovery capability is greatly enhanced for local aircraft and air defense aircraft, located at other bases throughout the area, now have a more reliable recovery point in case of attack against the U. S. and Canada during extremely bad weather.

Specifically, this means that the base can recover aircraft from either direction on the instrumented runway, wind permitting. It means this can be undertaken with full knowledge that complete and full weather information is available at all times.

Critical Points Noted

Also, it means that ceiling is given at a point, 30 seconds from touchdown, where the jet pilot first has visual contact, visibility, wind direction and velocity are given for touchdown — all critical points with today's high-performance aircraft.

Dual weather instrumentation means that high-speed weather reporting and analysis is keeping pace with high-speed aircraft. This could mean the difference between saving or losing irreplaceable crew members and an expensive aircraft.

This extra margin of safety will mean much to all aircraft arriving at a fully instrumented base.

The 4th Weather Wing furnishes functional weather support to North American Air Defense Command (NORAD) and ADC elements, with its 33rd Weather Squadron Supporting the 30th Air Division located in Madison, Wis.

Detachment 2 of the 33rd Weather Squadron supports Headquarters, Sault Ste. Marie Air Defense Sector, the 56th Fighter Wing and the 410th Bombardment Wing (SAC).

Judicial Article Commanded Most Time In Con-Con Debate

By GENE SCHROEDER

LANSING (AP) — The largest helping of legal advice in Michigan's history was served to the Constitutional Convention when it began considering the judicial branch of government.

Some of the advice was followed, some was rejected. It consisted of 5,254 questionnaires completed by members of the state bar and covered matters of judicial selection and tenure and court administration.

Major Recommendations Listed

Among the major bar recommendations embraced by the proposed new constitution were: —Elimination of justices of the peace as constitutionally recognized court officers.

—Immediate establishment of a court of appeals.

—Election of Supreme Court justices on a non-partisan basis.

—Requiring that probate judges be lawyers.

Convention delegates devoted more time to debate on the new judicial article than on any other category.

One Of Nation's Best

There was general agreement Michigan's legal system now is one of the best in the nation, but proponents of the revised constitution contend the system will be greatly improved and opponents insist the document is a step backward in some ways.

Findings of the Inter-University Faculty Committee on Constitutional Revision indicate the new judicial article has both merits and demerits.

'Balanced' Viewpoint

The committee, composed of 31 professors from Michigan colleges and universities, undertook its study with the avowed purpose of presenting a "balanced" viewpoint to Michigan voters, who will decide the fate of the proposed constitution at the polls April 1.

The committee report on the judicial provisions declares most legal issues, particularly on the appellate levels are at root political.

Merits, Short Comings

'Judicial decision-making involves a response on the part of the individual judge both to societal values which he deems important, and to the role which he sees himself fulfilling," the report added.

The educators said they found three basic merits in the judicial article and three serious shortcomings.

They listed the improvements as the establishment of the intermediate court of appeals, abolition of the justice of the peace as a constitutional township officer (along with elimination of the fee system of salary payment) and a sharper focus on the concept of a unified court system.

Demerits, they said, are: —Nomination and election of the judges of the court of Appeals on a district basis.

—Depriving the governor of authority to fill judicial vacancies.

—Election of Supreme Court justices need not be done on a statewide basis.

'Worst Aspect Of System'

Establishment of a Court of Appeals will relieve the Supreme Court of its overload of cases, the professors said, thereby allowing the state's highest tribunal to concentrate on cases in which guidance is needed in development of the law.

Barring the payment of fees to judges, the committee said, "does away with the worst aspect of the J. P. system—the venality possible in the fee system of salary payment."

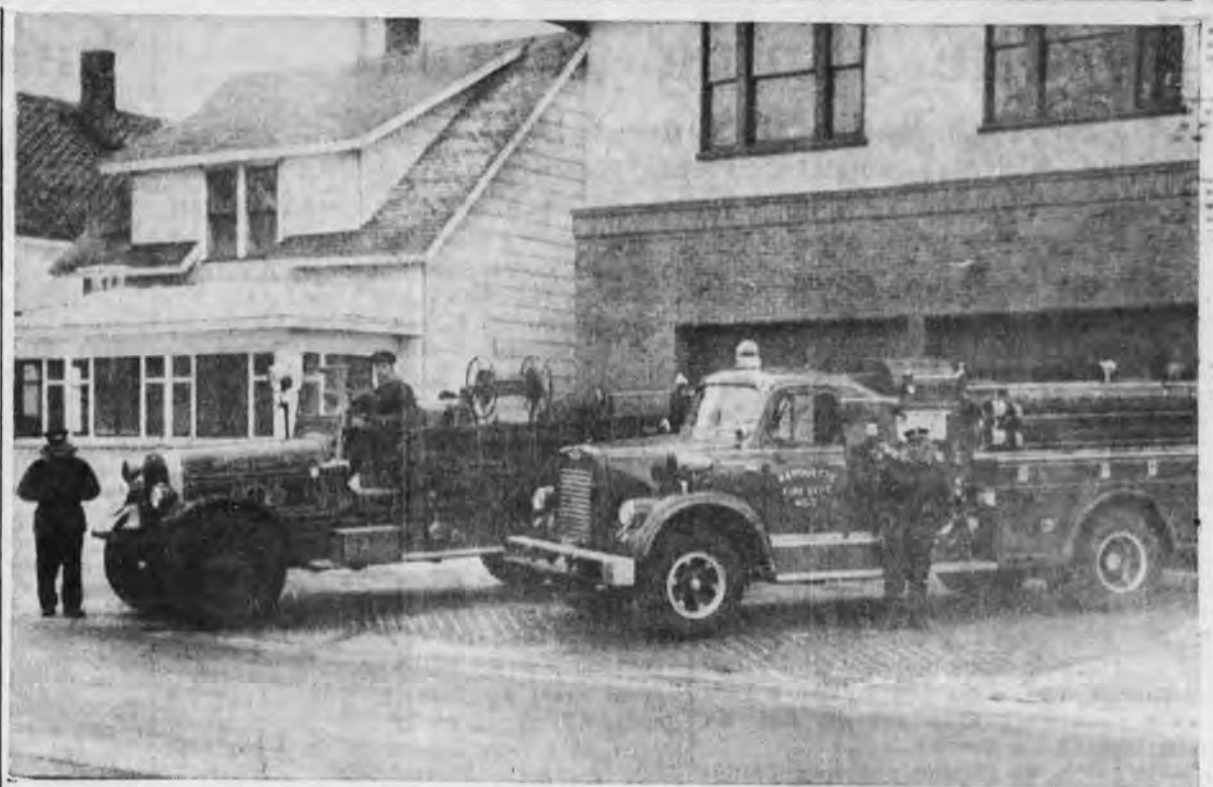

'Decided Step Backward'

Discussing what were considered shortcomings, the educators said that the selection of appeals court judges on a geographical district basis would have the effect of over-representing outside Michigan among the court's personnel.

'Denying the governor authority to fill judicial vacancies is a decided step backward,' the report declared.

Advantage Of Good Name

As proposed, the Supreme Court would be empowered to appoint judges to fill vacancies on its own

'Old Jerry,' First Motorized City Fire Engine, Replaced

"Old Jerry," Marquette's first motorized fire engine, was retired from service this month.

The fire department's old No. 1 pumper, it was delivered in the summer of 1926. It cost $11,500.

Old Jerry was replaced by a 1,000 gallon pumper, now called the No. 2 pumper. It cost the city $20,400. (The old Nos. 1 and 2 pumps were traded in, with a $900 allowance given, on the new No. 2 pumper.)

Durable "Old Jerry" stood the years well. It out-lived the fire department's second piece of motorized equipment, the old No. 2 pumper, which was purchased in 1929 and retired from service in 1958, when it was no longer operable.

Old Jerry was still being used as a reserve truck until it was traded in for the new pumper.

Original Drivers Retired

The original drivers of the old No. 1 pumper, now retired, are J. Alfred Johnson, Paul Pachl and Louis Riedinger. The old No. 2 pumper was originally driven by Assistant Chief Ray Lawrence, now retired, and the late Henry Bauman.

On July 30, 1936, the old No. 1 pumper answered an alarm at the old state tourist park on M-28. "No one seems to know why the name stuck, but a reporter from The Mining Journal dubbed the pumper "Old Jerry," Fire Chief John W. Myers said.

Soundings Set To Determine Road Breakup

Soundings were begun this week by the Marquette County Road Commission for the determination of ground conditions during the spring breakup.

"We don't know yet when the breakup will begin or how rough it will be on roads," H. L. Shroeger, Marquette, county road commission superintendent-engineer, said today.

Thaw Determines Degree

Although the winter has been unusually cold, the type of spring thaw will determine the effect on roads, Shroeger said. A slow break-up with warm days and cold nights, doesn't create much trouble on the county's roads. However, Shroeger added, a fast thaw is extremely hard on roads.

When the break-up begins, road restrictions will go into effect. "This is an inconvenience for drivers of heavy trucks, but it's a necessary part of the spring season," Shroeger noted.

It has enclosed compartments to carry fire equipment and boasts a 2,500-watt electric generator, three 500-watt flood lights, a 30 foot extension aluminum ladder and a 16-foot roof ladder.

Well Over Requirement

The fire department's pumping capacity is increased to 3,250 gallons by the addition of the new truck. The city's requirement, set by the Michigan Bureau of Inspection, is 2,850 gallons pumping capacity.

The fire department also has another 1,000 gallon pumper, a 500 gallon front-mouth pumper, with four-wheel drive, which is used mainly for grass fires and small township fires, and a 750 gallon pumper, similar to the new 1,000-gallon pumper.

Threat To Dairy Industry

A few years ago the Upper Peninsula had 950 dairy farms producing milk for bottling. Today it has 624.

Whether it is to have any at all a few years from now is probably now being decided in the contest between Upper Peninsula dairies and big Wisconsin dairies selling in the Upper Peninsula market.

The public holds the trump cards in this game. The public buys the milk. If it chooses to pinch a few pennies for a momentary advantage it will probably kill an Upper Peninsula dairy industry which now contributes more than $12 million a year to the stores, churches, garages and tax collections of the Peninsula.

Jack Little of Chatham, Upper Peninsula Extension dairyman, says that at the present drop price of 28 cents a half gallon to stores "farmers are not going to survive—even in the Milwaukee area." After the little dairymen have been wiped out by the effort to compete with such low prices the big companies will add a profit margin and the public will pay what milk costs.

But after this cycle has run its course Upper Peninsula dairy farms, and dairy industry plants may well have been killed off, and with them the $12 million income they provide for the U.P.

Mr. Little has asked the legislators of the Upper Peninsula to support House Bill 602 in the Legislature to save the Upper Peninsula's dairy industry.

Two years ago Gov. Swainson vetoed a similar bill passed by the Legislature which contained a requirement for an 8 per cent profit margin on dairy products. There is no such profit clause in this new bill. It would merely prohibit retail sale of selected dairy products at less than "cost to the retailer," which is defined as invoice plus business expenses.

The public should understand that this bill, rather than raise the ultimate cost of milk, will permit competition to survive and assure that milk will be priced near its production and marketing cost.

"The bill," explained Mr. Little, "is designed to prohibit large volume dispensers of dairy products from underselling our small dairy plants. These practices are rather widespread in Escanaba, Ironwood, Iron River and other border cities and have occurred periodically in the Soo, Marquette and Houghton areas.

"At present Michigan does not have regulatory measures that control these unfair marketing practices. Thus, after a small plant is forced to retire from competition, it leaves the market open for Wisconsin milk. This eliminates our local dairy plant and loses the bottled milk market for our dairy farmers.

"Our dairy people have not asked for favors in marketing their products. They only desire a market where fair trade practices exist. I believe that this kind of legislation is essential to the continued operation of the dairy industry of the Upper Peninsula. My purpose in writing is to inform you of the precarious position that the large out-of-state dairies have created in an effort to gain control of our market."

There it is from the man who knows most about U. P. dairying. This important industry is in its death throes unless there is helpful legislation.

Delta County Dairyman Clayton Ford told the Agriculture Committee of House in public hearing on the bill that it is pointless for government to concern itself with area development and spend tax money in such efforts if it neglects one of the Upper Peninsula's major industries in a time of crisis.

Cage Edition Lauded

Dear Sir: This morning the usually fine 1963 Special Basketball Edition of The Mining Journal for March 5 arrived at this office. I may be repeating, but I want to say again that the coverage by The Mining Journal in connection with the tournaments held in the Upper Peninsula is the most complete of any newspaper in the state. There are some others that put out sections, but The Mining Journal edition is outstanding in every way.

Again, thank you for having sent me this interesting and complete edition for the tournaments, and I know that the information in it must have been helpful to the people in the Upper Peninsula in connection with tournament play.

'Imagineering' Brings Better Fire Fighting Equipment For State

Engineers at the conservation department's forest fire experiment station near Roscommon are letting their imaginations and technical know-how run full speed ahead these days in planning, research and design development.

This "imagineering," as they call it, has been the feed belt for new and better fire-fighting equipment in Michigan ever since the station came into being 34 years ago. Nothing tells its story of success more powerfully than forest-fire damage records whose yearly totals have been trimmed from hundreds of thousands of acres to a small fraction of this toll over the last three decades.

Crown Fire Threat
In recent years, added impetus has gone into the station's free-wheeling format of planning, testing and designing. Most of the push comes because of a growing threat to forest lands—the crown fire.

As Michigan's forests have grown from brush to tree size, the crown fire poses the most serious new danger to northern forest lands.

Hard-hitting as it has been in beating down fire losses, the department's present lineup of standard equipment is not designed specifically to control this latter-day threat.

Five-Ton 'Sandcaster'
Here is where imagineering comes into the picture and it may already have produced one answer to crown fires—a five-ton "sandcaster" now under construction which may be ready for tests and wild fire duty this spring.

Working in principle much like a rotary snowplow, the sand-thruster is a refined offshoot of two pilot models built and tested at the station since 1937. Unlike the earlier trailer-types, this newest model is a self-powered unit with two rotors mounted in front. Each rotor will squirt a 70-mile-per-hour shower of sand 25 feet high, reaching out 50 feet from the

Lays Out Barriers

Because Model No. 3 is faster, more compact and throws sand farther than the earlier types, it gives promise of taking the offensive against some fires rather than merely working as a defensive weapon.

The present plan to control crown fires is to build fire-proof barriers around them. The sandcaster would do this by throwing up a screen of dirt on tree tops in front of the fire's head, cutting off a potential supply of fuel. It would then run along the flanks of the fire to box in the blaze. Its two-way stream of sand would also lay out a barrier on the ground.

Skylanders Studied
This is important because when a crown fire reaches a relatively "open" area, it will drop to the forest floor and advance along the ground only to explode in the tree tops again when the fuel supply becomes richer.

Department engineers are also studying the possibility of spraying crown fires from portable platforms which would tower above the tree tops. These platforms or skylanders are already being used in changing streetlights in some cities.

Keen Eye On Progress
Hydraulically powered, they raise and lower a platform to the desired height with relative ease. Mounted with high-pressure spray guns in swing-action turrets, they could work in close range of crown fires, above the tree tops.

A keen eye is being kept on industry's progress with chemical fire retardants in hopes that a spray solution will be developed for building another type of wild

April ushers in another dangerous wild fire season in Michigan as thousands of landowners take to their yards and fields to burn leaves and other debris. It's during this month and May that the costs of carelessness run particularly high, posing a serious threat to private property as well as public land values. Last year, wild fire damage to real and personal property (houses, barns, livestock, orchards, etc.) totaled tens of thousands of dollars with much of the toll caused by fire barrier. This is, of course, just part of the thinking, searching and doing that's going on at the station in an effort to develop better controls against ground fires as well as crown fires. By far, the most useful area of the station's "imagineering" is in the field of "fire as a friend." "Controlled burns" are already used on a limited scale to provide wildlife openings and improve timber stands. And the day may not be far off when fire will become a standard, much-used tool of land management in other ways—for removing or thinning undesirable tree and plant species on a broad scale; to prepare sites for tree planting and natural reproduction; and to control insects and diseases which today take a heavy toll of timber.

'Just Remember, I'm The Longhair Around Here'

The National Whirligig News Behind The News

By ANDREW TULLY
WASHINGTON — Since this is essentially a religious country, despite its varying degrees of practice, most Americans must feel the Supreme Court is on the spot again as its nine members ponder the second public school "prayer case" to come before them. Last summer, in a case that brought vigorous criticism of the court as anti-religious, the nation's highest tribunal by a 7-1 vote declared unconstitutional a rule in a New York school system requiring recitation of an officially composed prayer in all classes every morning. Now it is faced with deciding whether use of the Bible and Lord's Prayer in the schools is also in violation of the First Amendment.

Stewart Lone Dissenter
Neither the Bible nor the Lord's Prayer, of course, are "officially composed" prayers, but they have been officially prescribed in Baltimore and Pennsylvania public schools. Thus it could be construed that the practice violates the words of the First Amendment that "Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion." In Baltimore the highest state court upheld the constitutionality of the practice; in Pennsylvania a federal court struck it down.

Against the Supreme Court's majority which cited the ban on establishment of a religion, Justice Potter Stewart, the lone dissenter last summer, has emphasized a second clause in the First Amendment. That declares there shall be no law "prohibiting the free exercise" of religion, and Justice Stewart insists that to bar recitation of a prayer in schools interferes with this "free exercise."

Justice Hugo L. Black, leader of the so-called "absolute" thinkers on constitutional matters, has a short answer for this. The First Amendment, he asserts, "says 'no law,' and that is what I believe it means."
What Of Buddhists?
These conflicting opinions illustrate the complexity of the issue. For example, Chief Justice Earl Warren has cited the situation in Hawaii, where a majority of students in some schools are Buddhists. He asked, during oral argu-

The Dilemma Over Castro

By WALTER LIPPMANN

The President was in Costa Rica to confer with the leaders of the five Central American republics, which lie, we must note, not only across the Caribbean from Cuba, but between Panama and Mexico on the mainland. For some time, trouble has been brewing in Panama over the canal. In the future it could become quite serious trouble. And Mexico, which is a friendly neighbor, is at the same time the critical link in air communications between Cuba and the rest of Latin America.

Without the cooperation of Mexico, a tight containment of Castro's agents is vitally impossible. For once the agents are out of Cuba and on the mainland, the administrative task of checking them in 20 different countries is gigantic. One of the undiscussed problems of diplomacy is how to persuade Mexico to cooperate in the containment of Castro. For Mexico maintains diplomatic relations with Cuba and is unimpressed by our anxiety about Castro.

Problems Of Invasion

Since the October crisis about the Soviet missiles, American anxiety about Cuba has shifted. In October the anxiety was about a military threat against the United States. Since then the anxiety has turned to Cuba as a staging area for revolutionary movements in Latin America.

It is fair to say that there is no clear and certain solution in the present phase of the Cuban problem. That is because there is only one way to get rid of Castro quickly, and no responsible person, not Sen. Goldwater and much less Sen. Keating, wants to take that way. It is to invade Cuba, occupy it and govern it. The trouble with invasion is that it would be illegal; it would be very costly, not only in men and money, but in influence all over the world. Above all, invasion would be inconclusive. For Castro's men are good guerrilla fighters, and they would be given help from many American countries and of course from the Soviet Union. We should have on our hands the kind of nasty war which the French had in Algeria, and the great majority of our people, though they are much disturbed about Cuba, know that unless Castro commits overt aggression against some other American state, the remedy of invading Cuba would be worse than putting up with the existence of Castro.

There are many who think that a substitute for invasion would be a blockade of goods, and especially oil. The blockade would be designed to bring about the collapse of the Cuban economy. The President has called this an act of war, and the advocates of a blockade imply that the October quarantine of offensive missiles was also an act of war, which fortunately the Soviet Union did not choose to fight. Of course, it might be that once again the Russians would choose not to fight and that they would accept a blockade designed to destroy the Cuban economy. But those who are sure that they wouldn't fight can't possibly know that. What we do know is that it would be much harder for the Soviet Union to accept a blockade to destroy the Cuban economy than it was to accept the very specific quarantine of offensive missiles last October.

Long, Frustrating Course

Moreover, a blockade would bring us into direct conflict with Soviet ships, and therefore to the verge of a great war. Yet it would not necessarily eliminate Castro. It can be argued, in fact, that as between invasion and blockade, invasion would be the lesser risk. Either way, however, the risk would be incalculable. That is to say, while it would be easy enough to launch an invasion or to institute a blockade, nobody would be able to calculate the consequences, to foresee the course of events and to define the conclusion.

So we are left with surveillance, containment and the effort to immunize the hemisphere against communism by promoting the Alliance for Progress. This is a long, frustrating course to take. Again and again we shall be looking around for some sharp, decisive, surgical solution. Those who think they have such a solution will sound like a brass band with all the flags flying as compared with an organ grinder and his monkey. They will have all the good tunes, and the prosaic plodders will have to do the dirty work of keeping the peace.

NEW RACE RELATIONS PHASE

The present terms of the U. S. Supreme Court will bring new applications of constitutional law to the troubled area of race relations. No one should assume, at this point, that the high tribunal necessarily will follow the pattern laid down in the school decisions.

There are important differences in the present cases. There are seven of them coming up in the high court from South Carolina, North Carolina, Georgia, Alabama, Louisiana and Maryland. In all, about 3,000 Negroes are involved, most of them facing jail sentences and fines on trespass or "disturbing the peace" charges growing out of sit-in cases.

Basically, what is different about these cases is that they involve store lunch counters, private employers, clubs and other institutions and individuals not in interstate commerce or operating as part of a common carrier system.

Associate Justice Hugo L. Black, as he so often does, probably put his finger on what is really at issue here when he asked a probing question during argument of the first case. Assuming that a store owner has a legal right to choose who may enter his place of business, Justice Black said, then can it be argued that the state has no business protecting that right?

A major basis for appeal of these cases has been that the powers of the state (arrest, prosecution, imprisonment) have been used through the trespass law to enforce racial discrimination. Proponents have argued that even though private individuals may have the right to discriminate on the basis of race (objectionable as this may be) they have no rights to the powers of the state to punish infractions of their personal beliefs.

Justice Black's probing question should by no means be taken as any indication of the mood of the court, but it does indicate what a fine legal point is at issue here. No one can say at this juncture how the high tribunal will rule but it is certain that a whole wide area of race relations and the law will presently be illumined one way or the other.—

More Than R's Needed By Retarded: Authority

The education of mentally-retarded youngsters should not be directed primarily at the three R's, according to a University of Pittsburgh authority.

Subjects other than reading, writing and arithmetic are necessary for the education of the retarded, says Dr. Godfrey D. Stevens of the department of special education and rehabilitation at U-P.

Speaking at Michigan State University to some 400 teachers of mentally-handicapped elementary students, Dr. Stevens said the teaching of these youngsters should include instruction in such areas as health education, the skills of safe living and how to get along with other people.

"Vital Areas" "Health education and safe living are vital areas for the retarded child because many of them are not top physical specimens," he noted. "But if their health is good and they feel good, they will learn better."

He said getting along with people is "one of life's fundamental tasks," and added that because retarded children do not generalize as well as others, they must be taught the means of effective person-to-person relationships.

Although he felt the goals of education need re-stating, starting first with the school curriculum, Dr. Stevens complimented the teachers on their work with handicapped youngsters.

Advance Planning Gives Anyone Time To Eat Breakfast

Advance planning is the secret for having time to eat breakfast, according to dietitians at the University of Michigan Medical Center.

For people in a hurry, here are some tips for a quick, but nutritious breakfast, your most important meal of the day:

— Pour a glass of orange, grapefruit or tomato juice for your daily source of Vitamin C.

— Cook an egg the night before to be eaten the next morning as hard boiled or in an egg salad sandwich.

— If you don't have time to cook an egg, put protein in your diet by eating cheese on crackers or a cheese sandwich, plain or toasted.

— An egg nog, made in advance, or simply milk and cereal, also provide needed proteins.

To save even more time, dietitians at the Medical Center suggest planning your menu and setting the table the night before. Put your dishes and silverware on a tray so that you don't waste time in the morning.

By using these handy hints, even the busiest people will have time for a nutritional breakfast.

Scanlon Airs Goals In Bid For 2 Posts

ISHPEMING — Walter R. Scanlon, 660 Jopling Ave., is a candidate for councilman and supervisor posts in the spring election to be held Tuesday, April 1. Scanlon, active in civic and industrial affairs and lifelong resident of the city, said: "My goal as a member of the Ishpeming City Council has always been to give the people of Ishpeming the best possible local government."

"If re-elected to the council, I will continue to work for the best interests of all the people in this community and I intend to carry these efforts over to the county level if elected to the county board of supervisors."

Speaking on mining evaluations, Scanlon declared: "All indications are that our city and county will continue to be faced with a decrease in the valuations of our mines, and therefore less taxes from the iron ore industry. Other communities in the Upper Peninsula, such as L'Anse and Iron Mountain, faced a similar problem in past years when they lost a major industry, but they have since been successful in attracting new industries to help the employment and tax problem. I believe this can be done in Marquette County."

"I will direct my efforts toward this end along with all other possible ways to make the tax burden on individuals less severe. This would include, insofar as possible, the stimulation and encouragement of the mining industry which we presently have."

Scanlon, who has served as manager of the Ishpeming Chamber of Commerce for four years, also is a member of the Ishpeming Youth Council and several clubs and organizations in the city of Ishpeming and Marquette County. He is married to the former Pauline Cody of Negaunee. They have two children.

Alger Crews Begin Big Task Of Plowing Clogged Highways

MUNISING — Alger County road crews in Munising, Trenary and Chatham started the huge task of opening highways and secondary roads last night after winds died down following a two-day storm which caused drifts up to eight feet.

By this morning, all school bus routes were passable and many county roads had been opened. However, county officials say that conditions will not be back to normal for at least two days.

At the peak of the blizzard, plowing efforts were concentrated on M-28 west from the pumping station to AuTrain, where crews used a Sno-Go, a heavy grader with a bulldozer blade and two large diesel V-plows to keep one lane of the highway open to traffic.

One minor accident was reported by state police this morning. It occurred at 11:45 yesterday morning on M-94 one-half mile east of Sundell when a car driven by William Virta of Sundell backed into one driven by Ubald Noblet of Houghton.

Virta told police he had been following a snowplow and was backing up to get clear of it when he backed into the front end of the other vehicle, which had stopped because of the blowing snow. Both cars were driven away.
