Nhu. There was some nonsense about the coups d'etat in Latin America not being as bad as the ones they used to have. Soviets Haven't Reformed

But on the big issue, the sum and substance of the talks was that none of the officials thinks that Soviet Russia has reformed. Nobody thinks sale of wheat to Russia and the satellites means the beginning of a new era of expanded trade.

Nobody thinks the Russians are going to pull out of East Germany. Nobody thinks disarmament, Communist country co-operation with the United Nations or settlement of the Korea, Viet Nam, Laos and Cuba crisis is just around the corner. It was emphasized that there is no "detente"-general disengagement or relaxation of cold war tensions. Agreements are being sought with the Russians on minor points, without making concessions. The problem is to draw the line between illusion and reality.

The hot line for crisis communications between Moscow and Washington is open and being tested every hour on the hour. Other Possibilities

Other possibilities for improved communications with the Russians include a civil-air agreement for one or two flights a week between New York and Moscow. Opening of more consular offices in both the United States and Russia is being considered to facilitate travel. Both will require long technical talks before anything is signed. The possibility of new explosions in Laos, Viet Nam, Cuba and other trouble spots is known to be real. There can be no relaxation of tensions with Russia under such condi-

A detente in Europe is out of the question because Soviet Russia has no intention of abandoning East Germany and permitting its reunification with West Germany.

Disarmament will be talked about some more in Geneva and an East-West nonaggression pact may be further explored. But neither offers any real hope because the Russians will not permit arms inspection within their borders.

'Won't Be Boring' While Soviet Russia's split with Red China is regarded as the primary reason for the Russians' apparent eagerness to improve relations with the West, American officials realistically realize that this feud between the two big Communist countries could reverse direction without warning.

Full consideration is given to the probability that if Red China and Russia should patch up their quarrel, it would mean bad news for the U.S. and the rest of the world.

For all these reasons, American policy makers seem determined not to relax on their foreign aid programs, on maintaining North Atlantic and other alliances, on keeping America's defenses strong and at the ready.

As the situation was analyzed in one summary: "We are on the front end of large events. We do not know for sure what they will be. We do not know if they will be good or bad for us. But they will not be boring."

It would be wrong, of course,

Should the same principle be applied rigidly to members of Congress when they vote? Should a senator who owns a farm, for example, feel free to vote increased price supports for crops he raises? Or, if he's a railroad stockholder, should he stand aside on a bill designed to help the railroads?

Occasionally, a member will stand aside. For example, on Feb. 27, 1958, Sens. Harry F. Byrd, D-Va., and J. W. Fulbright, D-Ark., both asked to be excused from voting on a postal rate bill. The bill dealt with mail

Javit's Belief In the current situation, Sen. Jacob K. Javits, R-N.Y., expressed hope that the Rules Committee would go beyond the Baker case and "recommend a permanent code of ethics for the Congress."

Javits told his colleagues that senators have a responsibility for their own conduct.

"This, I believe, is the main thing the country wants to hear from us: What are we going to do, not only about those who and Russia take off for the high public office, such as cabi- work here, but also about ourselves?' he added. It would be interesting if Baker could come back to the Capitol long enough to check on the prospects of the Senate adopting the code that Javits asked. That was Baker's main jobkeeping in such close touch with the senators that he could tell how they intended to vote, or might be persuaded Webster Precedent Anyone looking for a precedent in conflict of interest can find a famous one in the case of Daniel Webster of Massachusetts, 19th Century orator and statesman. Sen. Webster once wrote Nicholas Biddle, president of the controversial Bank of The United States, "I believe that my retainer has not been renewed or refreshed as usual. If it be terests in newspaper publishing bank should be continued, it may be well to send me the usual retainers."

Hidden by daily headlines of demonstrations is daily progress toward a fuller, freer life for the American Negro. Also expected to come up is a hardy quadrennial - the number of persons at a Democratic convention.

Republicans limit their state delegations to a one man-one vote basis. But Democrats over the years have split things up into half votes. That way more delegates get to go to the convention, a form of reward for party faithful.

Can Be Confusing But it also can be confusing. James Pickands gates authorized to cast 1,521 votes at the Los Angeles convention. And that didn't include more than 1,400 persons present as alternates. To the politician, however, the number of delegates isn't nearly so important as the number of votes allotted each state. Some critics felt the 1960 convention was weighted in favor of many-but not all-Southern and far Western states.

DEAR ABBY: I gave my fiancee a ring which I considered adequate for the time being. (I bought it at a loan shop.) I told her when I gave it to her that I ings? knew it wasn't much, but I'd get her a better one when I could afford it. She accepted it, wore it for a week and then she returned it to me saying her mother had had it appraised and it was a fake diamond. She said I had cheapened her before her family and friends, and then she dropped me like a red hot poker. I am a commissioned officer in the state militia, and am supposed to be a leader of men, and this has made me look pretty foolish. My question is, was it proper etiquette for her mother to have the ring appraised?

Things Chevrolet has developed since the last time you bought to give you more for your money: Double-wall construction. This feature of Chevrolet cabs and the Fleetside pickup body has two advantages. Insulation and sound-deadening material is sandwiched between the two layers of steel in the cab to give you more comfort; in the body, the lower inner wall acts as a buffer against load damage, preserving the outer appearance of the truck.

Suspension to fit the truck. Conventional half- and three-quarter-ton models have independent front suspension with variable rate coils in the rear. Variable rate coils do not "bottom out" as readily. Mediums and heavies have I-beam suspension with variable-rate leaf springs. It automatically stiffens as the load increases-and vice versa. It means a smoother, flatter ride regardless of load, a better handling truck.

The right engine. Chevrolet never has been in better position to give you the type and size you need for maximum efficiency. Today there are many different capacities of gasoline and diesel

Chevrolet truck engines-fours, sixes,

Stronger frames. Every conventional 1964 Chevrolet truck has a ladder-type frame. This type is more resilient, better able to give with the load and terrain. Its simple design also makes it easier to mount special bodies on the truck. Its riveted side rails are stronger.

Greater model selection. This time you're going to find it a simple matter to pick the exact type of Chevrolet truck for the kind of work you do. In delivery, trucks, for instance; in addition to regular panels and pickups, we have eleven different sizes of ready-made walk-in vans, some with full-width rear doors. Quality and value. Chevrolets today are a lot more truck than your money bought the last time, and yet the price tag is just about the same as 5 or 6 years ago. Call your Chevrolet dealer for infor-
