

Old men

cranky and ~~sick~~ ^{ailing} and chronically ~~poor~~ falling down ~~the~~
the cellar stairs
^

cranky & breaking wind and

I don't want to sit around farting & gumming & aching and bally down the all the
at the

Doc

I ~~don't~~ never want to live to be a ~~hell~~ ^{dollering} ~~old~~ man, ^{whispering} ~~whispering~~ and ^{whispering} ~~grounding~~ and falling down the altar stairs

C. Doc had recently put it more pungent:

Dad

All I hope is ~~that~~ I don't ^{ever} get to be a daddery
senile old man, groping ~~my way~~ (shudders) farting and grunting and falling down
the cellar stairs

Parnell

I'll forgive
anything a newspaper prints about me except my obituary. ~~I'll~~ If that ^{ever} happens I'll be so mad I'll never speak to the bastards again.

Fame is the sum ~~total~~ of the misunderstanding
that gathers
about the tree.

^
nature of its possessor.

(Also failure)

Perhaps now so

"Fame is the sum of the misunderstandings that gather about a new name."

Rilke

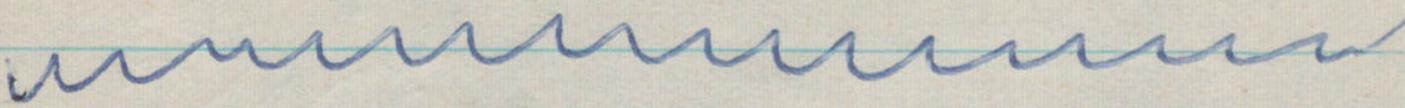

Man & Kite

A man is like a kite; ~~for him to~~ ^{be able to} soar ~~at~~ all he must be ^{firmly} tethered to the earth. (Jov)

[An artist]

A man is like a kite; ~~for him to~~ soar at all he must ^{first} be ^{firmly} tethered to the ~~earth~~ ground.

as quoted [the]
"He was an unfinished sketch of a great man," Yeats said of Wilde on p. 25 of Edmund Spenser's Manuscript.

A fiercely compelling courtroom story compellingly told.

During my rolled oats

"We have no recognized hypothesis to account for the apparent interaction of mind and matter in a simple act of consciousness, nor is there any special hypothesis to account for the phenomena of hypnosis or of memory."

'In the words of a very able contemporary psychologist, Dr. H. J.
Eysenck: [Above quote]

[Quoted by Aldous Huxley on pp 87 & 88 of Literature & Science]

As Parnell and described an illiterate harrier who had invaded our office, "She's a woman of few words -- who uses them after, ~~our~~ ~~own~~

Parnell

A lawyer trying to practice law without (law books) [a library] is like a carpenter trying to carp without a saw and a hammer - - he's up shit creek without a paddle.

"There is no
Irishman quite as Irish as an American - from Irishman; for when every day is Saint Paddy's day, he ^{can't} help it."

Daniel M'Naughten
murdered Robert Peels' secretary in 1843.

Bellingham was hanged in 1812 for the murder of his Prime Minister

Hadfield shot at George III

Stress added.

Freud.

The doctrine of repression is the foundation-stone on which the whole structure of psychoanalysis rests, the most essential part of it, and yet it is nothing but a theoretical formulation of a phenomenon which may be observed to recur as often as one undertakes an analysis of a neurotic without resorting to hypnosis.

One notices a resistance then making itself evident in opposition to the work of analysis and inducing a failure to recall memories in order to frustrate it. The use of hypnosis is bound to hide this resistance; the history of psychoanalysis proper, therefore, begins with the new technique that dispenses with hypnosis." (From p. 279 of 20th. Century Culture ed. by Robert Phelps, quoting from Sigmund Freud's The History of the Psychoanalytic Movement pub. in 1914.)

after all a doctor's is the only profession where a man can put his finger in a woman without getting arrested.

Yet
Bering from NY is not an extraordinary offense

He was a sort of professional -- to put it quintly -- lover of women

Viola Karas

Sanka

HC

"[The artist] need not know it all, merely master what little he knows."

Wright Morris, supra

P. 13

Robert Oppenheimer:

"There are children playing in the streets who could solve some of my top problems in physics, because they have modes of sensory perception that I lost long ago."

(Devoted p. 4 of Wright

Morris' "A Bill of Poles a Bill of Yramp, a Bill of gulls.

The Small Town Lawyer

(From The Practical Cogitator, p. 454 et seq., quoting ^{my 1904 Assoc} Justice Robert H. Jackson [who was reviewing a book in the Am. Bar Assoc ^{Assoc} Journ & reasoning the passing of the small town lawyer])

"More men now come to the [legal] profession from the cities, fewer from farms. There isn't a whip of the stables in a carload of college freshmen."

"The county-seat lawyer and the small-town advocate are pretty much gone, and the small-city lawyer has a struggle to keep his head above water.
Control of business has been concentrated in the ~~city~~ larger cities, and the good law business went to the city with it. The lawsuit has declined in ^{public} interest before the rough competition of movie and radio. "Most rural controversies are no longer worth their cost to litigate.
Much controversy has now shifted to the administrative tribunal, and the county lawyer hates it and all its works."

"But the remaining country lawyer left his mark on his time, and he was worth knowing. [...] He resolved problems by what he called 'first principles'.
He did not specialize, nor did he pick and choose clients. He rarely declined service to worthy ones because of inability to pay. Once enlisted for a client, he took his obligation seriously. He insisted on complete control of the litigation - he was no mere hired hand. But he gave every power and recourse to the cause. He identified himself with the client's cause fully, sometimes too fully. He would fight the adverse party and fight his counsel, fight every obvious counsel, and fight the court, fight public sentiment, fight any obstacle to his client's success. He never quit. He could think of mortars for every purpose under the sun, and he made them all. He sought for new trials, he appealed, and if he had out in the end, he joined his client at the tavern in damning the judge - which is the last rite, in closing an unsuccessful case, and I have observed at many [...]. He lived well, worked hard, and died poor."

Lawyer & the Open Mind

"When he [the lawyer] goes to interview a witness as well as when he goes to the law library, he goes to get something. He will waste a lot of time if he goes with an open mind."

John H. Finley, Jr., quoting ^{the lawyer} Charles Curtis (also one of the two editors of the Practical Cogitator -- Ferris Greenolet was the other -- on p. 17 of the Introduction of the Third Edition of that book.)

OW Holmes Jr. page 443 -- et seq.
The law is most prophecy and "... a legal duty, so called, is nothing but a prediction that if a man does or omits certain things he will be made to suffer..."

"The law is full of phraseology drawn from morals... The law talks about rights and duties and malice and intent and so forth, and nothing is easier or more common in legal reasoning than to take these words in their moral sense..."

Take the fundamental question, what constitutes the law? You will find some text writers telling you that it is something different from what is decided by the courts... that it is a system of reason, a deduction from ethics or opinions or what not? But we accused man does not care two straws for the opinions or deductions -- he wants to know what the court is going to do in HIS case. I am much of the same mind. The prophecies of what a court will do in fact, and nothing more pretentious, are what I mean by the law.

"The life of the law has not been logic: it has been experience. . . . The law at any given time corresponds with what is then understood to be convenient."