The Dilemma of the Liberal.

The dilemma of the liberal is that he is one against the crowd; that the qualities in him that make him a liberal are ~~the~~ too often the same qualities that ~~make~~ <sup>mark</sup> him, <sup>as intensely,</sup> individualistic and rebellious that make him impatient and rebellious of the political  ~~necessities~~ <sup>and compromises</sup> expedients necessary to ~~settle~~ <sup>put</sup> his liberal ideas across. The reactionaries ~~too~~ sense this, and with the dull, dogged patience that marks their number all over the world let the liberals batter their brains out and snarl the movement in
