JUDGE YELLAND ADDRESS CLUB

WELFARE MEMBERS WILL FAVOR ESCANABA OFFICIAL AT ELECTION

Probate Judge Judd Yelland gave a fine address to the members of the Child Welfare Club at the kindergarten building Monday evening and during the course of his remarks he complimented the local club very highly for the work it has done in Gladstone. He stated that the organization here was a model and that nowhere else in the county or in the state for that matter, was there so much good being done by an organization of this nature. He said he would like to see organizations of a similar character in every part of the county and that he would do all in his power to get them started. Mr. Yelland stated that his principal ambition in life was to be of service to humanity. Earlier in his life he thought that money was the only thing that mattered, but as he grew older and saw the suffering and want in the world he knew that his earlier impressions were wrong and that he has since tried to alleviate as much of this suffering as is in his power to do so. His office as probate judge has brought to light many instances where he has seen a wrong and in this way he has gotten into close touch with the work done by the local welfare society. Many cases of dire distress and want have been brought to the attention of the judge through this channel and always being of a sympathetic nature, he has been of great help to the society.

Judge Yelland touched upon various phases of the state charitable institutions and that many of his suggestions for their better treatment of the patients sent to them had been carried out. Conditions at the industrial school for girls especially had been changed from an almost unbearable state of affairs to one where the girls were given a broader view of life instead of turning them out at the end of their terms in a worse condition morally than when they had entered. The judge told of how he never allowed minors to be classed and associated with criminals and how he always did all that was possible to keep children who had gone wrong with their parents and only as a last resort did he send them to state institutions. He said he had been especially considerate to widows and orphans and thru his efforts he had saved them many hundreds of dollars as well as getting the widows' pensions for some of the widows who otherwise would have been overlooked.

The address by Mr. Yelland was so inspiring and complimentary to the welfare club that a series of resolutions was adopted stating supporting the judge for re-nomination at the coming primaries and pledging the unanimous support of the club as well as any outside votes that can be swung in line. The resolutions are as follows: "The members of the Welfare Society of the city of Gladstone fully realize that the welfare work carried on through the probate office is the most important part of the work of that office; that it is for the purpose of repairing, as far as possible, the wreckage of human life, and to assure every person hereafter that as possible. The office of Judge of Probate should be and is, a non-partisan office and no change should be made in that office without the best of reasons. Judge Yelland has cooperated with this society in our work and has cheerfully given us his advice and assistance in every possible way; he has kept in touch with the welfare work of this city and throughout the county, which is being carried on without publicity, but very effectively.

"IT IS HEREBY RESOLVED, by the Child Welfare Society of Gladstone, that it would be a great loss and hindrance to our work to make any official change in the office of Judge of Probate, and we therefore call upon the voters of Delta county, and especially the ladies who are interested in this work, to give Judge Yelland their active support in his nomination and election to this office.

"IT IS FURTHER RESOLVED, that this society pledges to Judge Yelland, the undivided support of its members, of more than two hundred strong in his nomination and election to the office of Judge of Probate of this county.

MRS. JAS. D. McDONALD, Secretary.

BARBERS WIN CHAMPIONSHIP

DEMONSTRATE THEIR ABILITY BY WINNING FROM CITY EMPLOYEES, 16-12

The amateur baseball championship for the city of Gladstone was settled in the field of battle this afternoon, and the barbers clearly demonstrated their prowess over the city employees and in the pages of history you will find a hundred years hence from now that the score was 16 to 12.

Owing to the fact that the Reporter went to press shortly after the game ended it is not time to comment on the features—such as there were.

The battery for the Barbers was Ohman and Joyce; for the City Employees, Buck and Habermann.

WILL MOVE BACK TO CITY OUTFIT TRUCK TO CITY

Herbert Weber, who has just completed a large dredging job in Marinette, came home Tuesday night and spent a couple of days with his family. While here Mr. Weber closed a deal for furnishing about 1000 sacks of gravel for the new All Saints' church and when this order has been filled, he will start on a big contract for the Casperage company. This latter job will keep him busy until cold weather sets in. Next year Mr. Weber has another big job in sight at Marinette.

Gladstone Man Is Arrested, Charged With Speeding Car

Fred Brassick of Gladstone was arrested in Escanaba Sunday night by traffic officers charged with exceeding the speed limits and driving his car without license. While joy riding with several others he struck the rear of a Chevrolet car carrying considerable damage.

When arraigned Monday morning, Brassick admitted he and his friends had been riding but denied they were intoxicated. He was fined $25 and costs by Judge Glazer.

Secretary Of State Sends Out Notices

Secretary of State Coleman Vaughn has sent a letter to all county clerks advising them to postpone printing of tickets for the primary until the supreme court has disposed of the case in which William A. Harrington of Gaylord attacks the constitutionality of the election law requiring a declaration of party fealty on all candidates seeking a place on the ticket. Arguments of the case has been set for next Saturday.

The attorney general's department, it was learned, has declined to appear for the secretary of state, pointing out that an opinion previously handed down by Attorney General Grosbeck held the law unconstitutional. Oliver Spaulding of Secretary Vaughn's staff will represent him before the superior court.

Should the court uphold the law, the name of Guy W. Wilson of Flint, democratic candidate for lieutenant governor, would be one of those left off the ballot.

The men who have the most to do in the world don't waste much time in telling about how much they have to do.

The man whose fame lasts a little longer than that of others, are those who, in making names for themselves, also make names for others.

It has astonished quite a number of old-timers to discover that it is possible to have a good cheer without good beer.

FLORENCE GLEASON DIES IN DETROIT

FORMER RESIDENT OF THIS CITY SUCCUMBS TO DIPHTHERIA THIS MORNING

A telegram received by Miss Florence in the city today stated that Miss Florence Gleason, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. M. J. Gleason, 296 W. Warren avenue, Detroit, and up to a few months ago a resident of Gladstone, had passed away at her home early this morning after a siege of diphtheria.

She had been ill for barely two weeks and the news of her death is a great shock to the family's acquaintances in Gladstone. Miss Florence was born in Gladstone June 23, 1902, and lived here all her life up until last September, when Mr. Gleason sold the Gladstone steam laundry of which he was the owner and moved with his family to Detroit. In June, 1919, she graduated from the Gladstone High school and last fall attended the University of Michigan for a short time, and later was a student at the Detroit Normal. Florence was an unusually bright girl, and was talented in the musical line. Her sunny disposition made her a decided favorite among her classmates, and the fact that she is gone has cast a gloom over her many friends here.

She is survived by her parents and one sister, Vivian, who are prostrate with grief.

She will probably be buried in Detroit or thereabouts, as all the relatives of the family reside in that section of the state.

AUGUST BRODIN FINED 37.69 FOR DISTURBING PEACE

August Brodin, who was arrested Monday, charged with disturbing the peace, particularly that of his neighbors in the east end of Gladstone, needed equity and fined about $37.69 including costs, in Justice Hays' court. The neighbors objected to the loud talk and profanity of his visitors who celebrated with him Sunday night. Large quantities of some of the inspiring liquor were consumed on this particular night, and Chief of Police Danielson and Mayor Miller were called to investigate.

The marriage of Miss Lillie Granberg of Gladstone and Lars Truism of Edgemoor, S. D., took place Saturday evening at the Swedish Methodist parsonage in Escanaba. The Rev. O. R. Palm officiated at the ceremony and the attendants were Mr. and Mrs. Hilding Granberg.

Following the ceremony the young people left for Edgemoor, S. D., where they will make their home.

PUBLIC LIBRARY REPORT FOR JULY

ATTENDANCE SHOWS A SLIGHT FALLING OFF DUE TO THE HOT WEATHER

Warm weather and the absence from town of many of our most interested patrons, produced during the month an unusual decrease in attendance, etc. which will, doubtless, be made up, later, after school begins, and when the new state traveling libraries arrive. Following are the figures:

Total attendance for July	1059.00
Average per day	32.87
Total number of books loaned	296.00
Average per day	11.90
Total number of periodicals loaned	65.00
Average per day	2.50

Among recent additions to the library are the following: "American Comprehensive Encyclopedia (8 vol.) by W. H. DePrey, editor-in-chief; "Salathiel: the Wandering Jew," by George Croly; "History of England" (Vols. 3 and 4); by Thomas Babington Macaulay; "A Cardinal Sin," by Eugene Sully; "Terrible Tales"—French and English; "Spinning of Unknown Authorship"; "Errors of Mind Healing" by Reinhold Willman; "Rienzi, the last of the Roman Tribunes," by Sir Edward G. E. Bower-Lytton; "Morton Montague," by C. B. Marzhan; "Armstrong's Giant Cyclopaedia," by Katherine L. Armstrong; "The Amazing Interlude," by Mary Roberts Rinehart; "The Girl of the Limberlost," by Gene Stratton-Porter; "When a Man is a Man," by Harold Bell Wright; all having been donated by friends of the library.

Much of the librarian's time during July, was engaged in preparing and shipping the old traveling libraries, to the temporary neglect of the mending and cataloging, which are now receiving attention here, their work and progress is again being made on those points.

The new organization is beginning to show some friction, but as it gets under way, and is carefully and frequently oiled (with cash), it will soon be running smoothly and efficiently.

Legion Gets Dope On State Meeting

The local post of the American Legion are in receipt of a communication from Lyle D. Tabor, adjutant of the Michigan department of the legion, announcing the dates of the state convention at Escanaba as Sept. 7, and 8, Tuesday and Wednesday, with convention headquarters in the Auditorium.

The election of officers for the ensuing year, as well as delegates to the national convention, will take place, and amendments to the Michigan department constitution and by-laws are also to be considered.

Application has been made for reduced rates to Escanaba, and it is probable that a fare and a third rate will be obtained.

Delegates and visiting legion members attending the convention will register at headquarters in the Auditorium, which will be opened Sept. 5th. Each delegate may have as his guests members of the legion and their families, who will be tendered all possible conveniences by the officials of the Escanaba post.

The state headquarters of the legion will pay the fares of delegates, as well as Pullman fares, where travel over distances exceeding one hundred and twenty-five miles is necessary.

Every red-blooded man hates in his heart the sweet type of man movie star, but there seems to be nothing to do about it.

BODY OF JOHN FLETCHER LAID TO REST YESTERDAY

Funeral services of the body of John R. Fletcher were held yesterday afternoon first at the Lancaster home and later at the Methodist church. Mr. Fletcher, 800 Line engineer, passed away at a Minneapolis hospital and was brought here, where he lived for many years, Monday morning.

The following friends acted as pall bearers: Frank Hood, Thomas Jachor, Otto Habermann, James Laidlaw, R. C. Ostrander and Paisley Miller.

Chaplain Charles Brown conducted the service.

POSSE LOOKING FOR MURDERER

DICKINSON COUNTY MAN BELIEVED TO BE HIDING NEAR DELTA COUNTY

In response to a call issued by Sheriff Carroll of Dickinson county, Sheriff Frank O'Desa and a party of deputies started search of Delta county this afternoon looking for Frank Shields wanted in Iron Mountain to face a charge of murder.

A tight look place there last night the details of which are meagre and should it be found that he is here the murderer of a man whose name was not learned here followed.

Shields, according to the long distance call headed for the woods. Authorities took after him but were lost in the dark of the night. It was believed that Shields was heading for Delta county in an effort to offset his chance of escape. The Delta county men were notified.

Sheriff O'Desa set to work with his men at once and are scouring the county. Every deputy has been given a description of the man being sought and should it be found that he is here an arrest in all probability will follow.

The murder according to information received took place at Channing.

It is believed by some that the man has headed toward the woods of the Stephens company where he would try to conceal his identity.

He is a man of nearly six feet in height, dark hair, blue teeth and middle aged. A reward of $500 has been offered for his arrest.

FAIR TO HAVE BIG ATTRACTIONS

COMMITTEE HAS SECURED FINE ENTERTAINMENT FOR SEPTEMBER FAIR.

Attractions for the Northern State fair in this city on September 21, 22, 23 and 24 promises to exceed the excellence those staged for any previous county fair here.

The stellar attraction will be offered by Lucille Belmont, in a triple parachute drop from a balloon. Miss Belmont is the only aeronaut presenting a triple drop from a balloon and the popularity of the thriller is shown by the fact that she is booked solid from July 1 to November 15.

Two torpedo sacks only one of which is visible as the balloon ascends. Each parachute makes a separate and distinct drop of from 1000 to 1,000 feet, requiring an ascent to an extreme height. The parachutes are colored, red, white, blue, and as all of them are in the air at the same time, the act is said to present a very pretty picture.

In addition the committee on attractions has booked Jimmy Logan, comic comedy juggler; the flying La Pearls, in a high double trapeze act that is pronounced a real thriller; Hassan & Sullivan, trick horse comedy act.

Members of the attractions committee, consisting of J. A. Allo, R. E. MacLean, C. W. Kates and H. R. Rammer, have been at work for several weeks in securing a program of attractions, and when their work was completed yesterday members of the committee were satisfied, they had booked for the coming fair the best entertainment program ever provided for a county fair here.

The appearance of all of the acts booked is assured by irrevocable contracts from a responsible booking concern, and with the completion of the preliminary work of the attractions it is certain that the success of that part of the county fair program is assured.

F. H. VAN CLEVE PASSES AWAY

WELL KNOWN ESCANABA MAN EXPIRES FOLLOWING STROKE OF APOPLEXY.

Frank H. Van Cleve, one of the principal stockholders in the Marble Armas & Mfg. Co., and the Marble Card Electric Co., of this city, and president of the First National bank in Escanaba, died at 2:19 yesterday morning at his home, 413 Second avenue south. Only a trained nurse and S. M. Oliver were with him at the time of death.

Regarding the death of Mr. Van Cleve the Escanaba Mirror of yesterday has the following:

Yesterday afternoon while Mr. Van Cleve was sitting in leisure on the front porch of his home, he was stricken with what was believed to be an intense heat. He was hurriedly taken to his room after which Dr. Snyder was called and pronounced the trouble, apoplexy, declaring the aged man was in critical condition.

All night long, the nurse stayed at his bedside watching for the change which was expected. When it did come it was for the worse and a few minutes later with the shades of night drawn and with daylight creeping through the windows, one of the best known men in the Upper Peninsula of Michigan passed away.

Immediately close business acquaintances were notified and the first thing this morning telegrams were sent to relatives in other cities notifying them of the death of the late gentleman. The body was taken into care by the Anderson-Buchanan Undertaking company and will be held until word is received by the relatives.

Health Good.

Up to yesterday Mr. Van Cleve's health was considered favorable considering his age. Each day he would arise in the morning apparently feeling well. His drives to the bank and other places were frequent and which were interested were conducted with the greatest of regularity. His friends were always greeted in the same manner and his appearances were that of the aged man would live for several years yet.

His death came as a shock to those with whom he was personally acquainted and to the members of the community of which he has been a part for so many years.

Lived Here Long Time.

Mr. Van Cleve came here over forty years ago. His boyhood home was in Epifania, Michigan, where he was reared and received his early education. Coming to Escanaba in the old days, he affiliated himself with the Chicago & Northwestern Railway company as land agent.

From the bottom step of the ladder he rose to the highest, accumulating a fortune in his days of business. During that time he speculated in private enterprise more by investment and was successful in his business efforts.

When the city of Gladstone was in its making, Mr. Van Cleve was one of the most formidable promoters of the business interests which now thrive there. Having held much land, he disposed of it to private interests where business were later established. Deeds were made and signed by him in the possession of many of the old citizens of this county to this time.

Business Ability.

As a business man, Mr. Van Cleve rated with the highest of this community. He was one of the founders of the First National Bank and up to the time of his death was president of that institution.

During his incumbency in that office the bank has grown to its present size all the time increasing the community it holds on public interest.

He was a man of the highest character and moral standing. His response to the many vital questions was always quick and ready for an charitable appeal. In the interest of civic improvement and with a view to the municipality he was not surpassed by any. His patriotic endeavors during the recent world war were of the best but with inevitable earned and shared to all men, he will be missed by many.

In Other Businesses.

Mr. Van Cleve was also closely allied in the business of the Marble Armas Manufacturing Company and the Marble Card Electric Company, both of Gladstone.

In these industries like the other of his interest, his advice was at times solicited. As the man of business and great ability, he was the acknowledged leader.

Mr. Van Cleve was a bachelor as is survived by a sister, two nieces and one nephew as far as known. His cousin, the late J. A. Van Cleve was one of the most prominent a.

ANNOUNCES THE EXPRESS AWARDS

EXPRESS EMPLOYEES ENTITLED TO SOMEWHAT LARGER INCREASE IN WAGES

Chicago, Aug. 10.—$30,000,000 today was added to the nation's express bill when the United States railroad board awarded the 80,000 employees of the American Railway Express company an increase of 16 cents an hour.

The decision is retroactive to May 1, 1920. Under its terms of the Esch-Cummings transportation act the express company will be permitted to raise its rates sufficiently to meet the increased labor cost.

The order of railway express men, presidents of the express unions who were present when the award was handed down were noncommittal on the acceptability, but the general impression was that the labor board had been slightly more generous than either the unions or express company had anticipated.

Increase in Express Rates. Washington, Aug. 10.—Recommendations that express rates be increased $30,000,000 to absorb the wage award announced today by the railroad labor board will be filed with the interstate commerce commission, it was announced today by T. B. Harrison, general counsel for the American Railway Express company.

NANCY'S LAST TANTRUM

By GEORGE E. COBB

"In one of her tantrums is she?" "Worse than ever!" Mid-mannered Harvey Mills rubbed his head and looked unprospered. Ned Carson, boy of all work about the Mills home and a half nephew of Mrs. Nancy Mills, looked excited and eager. His eyes were snapping, his lips moving in an erratic way.

"That isn't all," proclaimed Ned. She has been raising a rumpus all day long. Threatens to get a constable and have you dragged home in handcuffs. Says she'll sue you for desertion. Says Mr. Mills is too sorry for you. She is my relative, but the way she treats you is scandalous.

"You're foolish," advised Ned. "I've been thinking it all over, and now is your chance to get Aunt Nancy a severe and a sound spanking. She's a good woman. She's a real good to me, and I know, thinks there's nobody in the world like you, when she isn't stirred up with that stationery paper of hers. You're a peaceful, quiet man, Mr. Mills, and she imposes on you, and you let her. Now then, you follow the advice of a young fellow who likes you, and you'll be glad. See if you aren't."

"What you driving at, Ned?" projected his puzzled expression.

"Well, Aunt Nancy is in the trouble of her life."

"Yes, sir, I'm speaking the truth. She's rumpusing to the limit, and you've got her where you can't let her stay and cool off that hot temper, that's sure. Just this has happened: Aunt Nancy went into the little ice house, snuck in the back yard. You know it's got a heavy door with a big double lock. Usually we prop the door open when we go in. She didn't do this time. She left the key in the lock and slammed the door, and shut her in."

"Why, Ned, she'll half freeze. Why didn't you get her out at once?" "Because I got an idea. It's your chance. I didn't let on I was in hearing when I found out about it. I just crept around the ice house. The door has a ventilator slot at the rear. I edged close to the wall. I could hear her scolding like a mad hen. She raved that, 'You've done this to me. You've purposely to shut her in.'"

"We must get the poor thing out at once, Ned," spoke Harvey so solemnly.

"You listen to me, please, Mr. Mills, and you'll thank me later. I've thought it all out. See that, and Ned drew an old-fashioned pistol from his pocket."

"Why, what are you doing with that?" challenged the startled Harvey. "I brought it from the house. That will do for poison, and Ned produced a bottle filled with a dark colored liquid."

"He set both the articles on a bench in the middle of the shop. Then he hunted around until he found a piece of rope. He noosed one end and tied the other to a low rafter overhead. Harvey viewed all these operations in a mass of wonder."

"Whisper, now," said Ned mysteriously, a grin of satisfaction on his face, and as he spoke he outlined a plan enthusiastically inspired Harvey. He seated himself near the table, he poised fortly."

"If Nancy suspects any play acting she'll be madder than ever," he observed unseeingly.

"You leave it to me," chirped Ned and sped from the shop. When he got back to the house he stationed himself near to the ice-house and began shouting out the name of his next victim. From the direction of the ventilator three faintly floated out a muffled call. "Is that you, Ned?" "I'm shut in. Quick! let me out. Oh, they've shut me in as Ned opened the door. I'm nearly frozen to death. Let me get in the house and start a fire."

DECIDE FREIGHT RATE INCREASE

INCREASE WILL BE FROM TWENTY-FIVE TO FORTY PER CENT DEPENDING ON LOCALITY

The freight rate increases which were granted the railroads by the Interstate Commerce Commission will all be figured on a straight percentage basis and not vary with the different articles of shipment with a maximum increase on such as was first predicted. The percentage of increase will not be the same throughout the United States, however, as the United States has been divided into four sections, to know as the Eastern, Southern, Western and the Mountain-Pacific groups.

The eastern group, which will have an increase of forty per cent, comprises the territory which has for its boundary the Atlantic seaboard from Canada to Norfolk, Virginia, the main line of the Norfolk & Western Railway from Norfolk to Kenova, W. Va., the main line of the Chesapeake & Ohio Railway from Kenova, W. Va. to Cincinnati, Ohio, the Ohio river to the mouth of the Illinois river, or at near Graton, Ill., the Illinois river from Graton, Ill. to Pekin, Ill., a line south of the mouth of the Illinois river, the Fe Railway from Pekin, Ill., through Joliet and Streator, Ill., to Chicago, to include the southern peninsula of Michigan and thence following the international boundary to the Atlantic seaboard; including that portion of the Virginia railway extending south of the southern boundary and including those portions of the Southern railway, Louisville & Nashville railroad, Mobile & Ohio railroad, Atlantic Coast Line railroad, and Seaboard Air Line, extending north of the southern boundary.

The Southern group will have an increase of twenty-five per cent and include the territory commonly known as the southern classification territory, embracing that section of the United States lying west of the line of the southern boundary, the main line of the Norfolk & Western railway from Norfolk, Va., to Kenova, W. Va., from Norfolk, Va., to Chesapeake & Ohio railway to Cincinnati and thence south of the Ohio river to Cairo, Ill., thence east of the Mississippi river to New Orleans and the mouth of the Mississippi river; and north of the Gulf of Mexico to Mexico City, and Mississippi river to the Atlantic ocean.

There are portions of the Southern railway, Louisville & Nashville railroad, the Ohio river, the Atlantic Coast Line railroad and Seaboard Air Line railway extending north of the northern boundary and including that portion of the Virginia railway extending south of the northern boundary.

An increase of thirty-five per cent will be added to the freight rates in the Western group. This group includes the territory lying west of the western boundaries of the eastern and southern groups as above described, south of Lake Superior and of the international boundary line; north of the Gulf of Mexico and the Rio Grande, and on and west of a north and south line running as follows: Following the boundary line between the state of North Dakota and the state of Montana and the boundary line between South Dakota and Wyoming, and Nebraska and Wyoming to the line of the Union Pacific extending east from Cheyenne, Wyo., then following the line of the Union Pacific extending westward to Cheyenne and from Cheyenne running southward thru Colorado Springs, Denver, Pueblo and Trinidad, then following the line of the Atchafalaya, Topinka & Santa Fe railway through Raton and Las Vegas, N. Mexico to Albuquerque, N. Mexico; then south along the line of the Atchafalaya, Cheyenne & Santa Fe railway to El Paso.

The Mountain Pacific group, which includes all of the territory lying between the line last described and the Pacific coast, not including Alaska. An increase of thirty-three and one-half per cent will be added to all shipments going from one section to another, except on those going to some place located on a natural boundary in which case the percentage increase between White and Red guards for the defense of the city.

Government Tax Recouped. By reason of the increased passenger rates, the United States treasury officials are of the opinion that the government will collect taxes amounting close to $100,000,000. They expect $25,000,000 from the three per cent tax on freight bills, $15,000,000 from receipts for passenger fares, and $60,000,000 from the charge on transportation for the privilege of using the Pullman, the last two at the rate of eight per cent.

The other $40,000,000 also in round numbers, they expect to obtain in the form of income tax. The carriers will have to pay by reason of their increased earnings under the higher rates, and from the workers on the railroads by reason of the

It is clear there is the greatest reluctance to go," says the correspondent, "since the departure of the cabinet would probably be the signal of the appearance of a rival government."

Danger for the Poles, the dispatch intimates, lies largely in the lack of organization and existence of rivalries between White and Red guards for the defense of the city.

COX ACCEPTS

One important and noticeable difference between the acceptance speech of Governor Cox and Senator Harding is the difference in modesty displayed. While the democratic candidate has not set that mastery of the use of pronoun "I" that the democratic incumbent of the presidential chair has, he does pretty well for a beginner. With practice it is evident that he can assume the character of royalty with just as much ease and grace as Mr. Wilson does.

"If there doesn't happen to be any law to cover the case," he says, "I expect, if I am elected there will be the exact words of the speech are 'I am called to service as president means will be found, if they do not already exist.'"

In short Governor Cox proposes to continue the unconstitutional activities of President Wilson and to be a law-maker as well as chief executive. The governor devotes more space to be league than to any other subject, a good deal of space to defending the administration, a good deal to attack Senator Harding, all things to be expected from the democratic candidate. He doesn't say anything to offend the wet vote and to offend the dry vote he says only, "Morals cannot be produced by statute."

The dry voters are so familiar with that argument however, that they may take in itself as enough to label Governor Cox as an absolutely wet man, if there were no other evidence at hand. Aside from the main points, the oration of the league, the patriotic in fear of the "fabulous" republican campaign fund—it does not appear whether the governor calls it "fabulous" from an innate sense of honesty or the defense of administration errors the over attention to the league, there are a whole lot of voters who did prefer a candidate who would not avoid the attack of his professor and whole lot of others think talk about the league is a way of getting out of saying anything on more important matters.

A FAVORABLE OUTLOOK.

The present outlook is for a continuation of prosperity during next year on a somewhat moreervative and substantial basis than in the past. There have been predictions of coming calamity but these are still being expected to extent but as the year advances general aspect of affairs becomes promising.

It was feared in the spring that a bad crop acreage produced by dry farm labor would mean daily shorter crops. Now with season well advanced it is apparent that the country is to have excellent crops. There is a prospect of one hundred and thirty-three million bushels more corn this year than last year, of nearly two hundred million bushels of oats, of nearly twenty million bushels of wheat, of nearly forty million bushels of potatoes, of two million bushels of cotton.

In the hay crop shows a falling some eight million tons, yet is actually the same as last year, a about fifty million bushels in excess of the average production before war. Wheat is the one important crop which there is a material fall, and the conditions of the old market and of the world wheat make this falling off of little consequence because of the available supply in spite of a reduction this year of more than one hundred and one million bushels in production only fifty million bushels less than made good by the abundance of other crops.

Disturbances to trade usually find in a presidential campaign by little in evidence or in prospect. The nature of the Cleveland does not seem to be concerned with industrial and conditions. The labor situation is improving and radical agitation is becoming less marked. There is an increase in thrift among wage earners. Credits are somewhat tighter, but the influence of this fact is on the whole beneficial. A somewhat lower price level in a number of important articles, with no sharp decline in prices seems certain. Demand for goods is still good, business failures are few, trade is getting down to a somewhat more conservative basis without any panic.

The two worst features in the industrial sky are the coal and transportation situations. If these can be taken care of in even a fairly satisfactory way continued prosperity is assured.

Mrs. Housewife--- We all know that aluminum ware is a premium on the market today due to strikes, freight congestion shortage of material etc. Still we have quite a few pieces of No. 1 Aladdin and Vihlo aluminum at the old prices, and wouldn't you be further ahead to get these than wait until we get in our new shipment which will be higher. SYNOPSIS.
 CHAPTER I.—Hearing only the call of love and mutual awe, the Lovings, visionary and impractical, and Mary, daughter of the dead wealthy parent, unite their lives. Henry and Mary, seat off by her family, give up the struggle for life. John, a young man, the city taking care of the baby, comes. After two years John takes his child and takes him on his travels. In San Francisco, Lovings becomes a victim to "morph," a drug of the deadliest type. Returning to the grave of his wife, Lovings dies and little Con is "farmed out" by the city.

 Cecil Wedger sat opposite his guest, Lovings, and talked candidly of the numerous motion picture stars in his golden orbit. The guest, while attentive, and never missing his host's callow pleasantries, was merely bearing up as best he might under boredom, and at the same time concealing the commotion in his heart. Con was aware of destiny.

The wine was expensive if not melior, and the cooking was undeniably good, having been accomplished by Cecil's own attaché—a Chinese, whose existence seemed to begin and end in the nightgown of the Wedgers.

Con, taller than his father, held a likeness to John Lovings only about the eyes and temples, something grave and tense, that disappeared when he laughed. He tried not to show the grave. Now Cecil, to show his democratic spirit, spoke to the servant, very nearly as one man might address another.

 "Chee Ming, what do you think of a chap who turns deacon and won't drink anything at the age of twenty-five?"
 The Chinese countenance unfolded a few more small wrinkles near the nose, and a light appeared in the narrow eyes. "The Chee Ming made reply, "Thoughtless wise."
 "Deacon is hardly the word," declared the young man of twenty-five. "Deacons are a thirsty brotherhood." Cecil considered this remarkable humor. He was glad he had asked Lovings to come.
 The servant's face was the yellow-green of summer dust, and when the light of a moment vanished from his eyes, they became smooth wet stones. His body was spare, a kind of unnaturally prolonged youth in it; and Cecil, to publish his own magnanimity and good taste, had insisted that Chee Ming continue to robe in native dress, a loose blousing smock with white sash and narrow straight trousers. Chee Ming was scorned and brushed clean. He was not young, had never been young, and possibly would never grow old. A power that was wiry-nerved and psychic radiated from his motionless form. The essence of sober cunning showed in his countenance; a grace of calm dignity had wrought in the lore of his soul; his was a face impossible to read, while a well-tamed scorn lurked in his hands. He unobtrusively pointed to the pantry. "Coffee" said he to the pantry. He "I was telling you about my little friend, wasn't I?" resumed Cecil, bending to the task.
 "Yes," resumed his guest, "you were going to show me her picture."
 "Pikest little thing you ever saw," asserted the pride of the Wedgers. "Coffee" said he to the pantry when you see—"

Cecil left the table and hastened for the photograph of his newest darling. Con heard him whistling as he went up through the deserted mansion.
 Alone in the dining-room, Con arose from the table. The tension about his eyes was more marked. Half a smile drew at his mouth, a close-gathering of faculties. He went to the door of the butler's pantry, and passed on through.
 In the low light beyond was Chee Ming, taking care of the silver. The face was shadowed, showing neither surprise nor interest at the approach of the young man. He had moved along the shelf toward the handle of the breadknife. The two men came together as swiftly as wringing phantoms.
 Chee Ming was built of live tendons. The breadknife came around in the grip of yellow fingers closer over Lovings' stomach, but could not go on. Con plucked his arms and, with a strait that his hour held for him, although in the luminous haze of cigarette smoke his features were a dream drawn and pale. His voice had a natural slowness. The eyes, blue-gray and steady, seemed to hide none of the secrets that hovered in the lines around his mouth. The gentle excellence of his brow and head ranked him one with those who had been carefully directed, well combed at the start. Con was a good listener. His were well-built limbs, the shoulders almost too massive, though the neck was slim behind the waist, and sometimes abashed at the fineness of his hands.

 The integrity of this only son of two consummate lovers had been tempered in the roaring pits of the world. Con had never been one to wait for temptation. As the reluctance of childhood had been rubbed away, and before a man's dignity had come to him, he had been famously ready. He had scaled the walls around the garden of Blagdon, battered his way joyfully along its paths, and plunged into every swimming pool. He had found its pleasures worthless, and had aged in a dozen years. His inner prompting had taken a false lead, but he had no regrets. With help he had at length found his way out into the clean and cooling winds of humanity. He had discovered again the treasures of a small-town boyhood, the satisfaction of open fields, the sun in his eyes, stirring air on the slopes was wine to him. In the blue rash of the sea he tried his strength, and found it sufficient. These were what he had wanted all the while. But the golden days had all pelted the other way.
 Cecil Wedger's invitation to dinner was part of a plan. The loquacious Wedger sprang had no notion that he had been duped. Nor did Con see guffiness in the deception, for he was stepping into a work that claimed all his best energies.
 The Chinese servant entered like a thief, bearing a fragrant fresh coffee. Cecil made his own cup into a Gloria by blending it with brandy. Lovings smiled and wiped the beads away. This was not so easy as it appeared. His nostrils twitched at the fragrance from his host's cup. Perhaps the Chinese understood, for he nodded and hastened. Cecil was humming as he returned. Lovings released the yellow hands that weakly held one ankle, lifted himself out at the pantry window, and dropped into the bushes below.

 In the darkness he ran across the lawn, where he had walked two hours before, listening to the endless half-feminine chatter of his host. He mounted a stone urn. The hissing rattling of the wall was within jumping distance from this as he had noted in daylight. He sprang, slithered, and his wrists burned against the tiles. Drawing himself up, he dropped down on the other side, and was in the street.
 It depressed him for a moment to think of the bitter misery he had dealt Chee Ming. This was not his idea of something noble. But he had wanted the small leather sack, still warm with Chinese heat.
 Hatless, out of breath, he brushed the gravel from his knees, and looked both ways. The suburb was quiet, and this the continuation of a city street that became a road beyond the town. A bluish arc-light at the corner showed no one. Con turned to the left and walked rapidly. As he neared the next cross-street a large black motor-car crawled out of the shadows, and drew in at the curb on his side of the road. The door opened—no light from the car. Lovings stepped into it and the door swung shut after him. The leather packet was placed in the hand of the person who sat beside him. "Have any trouble?" asked the other.
 "No. It was much as you had said." "How did you slip your friend Cecil?"
 Con explained, adding, "It was a shame to fool him."
 "I understand," replied the other, "it isn't his fault. Maybe you can straighten it out with him some day."
 "I hurt that 'Chinee," said Lovings, half to himself.
 There were no congratulations upon the small success. These two had expected to succeed, and were not surprised.
 The other man was of middle age, rather slight and small. Under a soft black hat his hair showed long and gray. The lean-fibred strength of his hands and neck might not have been considered beautiful; but to Con Lovings this man was chief, and more—a comrade and second father.
 It was Andrew March who had found him roaming wild one spring night in lower Cincinnati, with a gun speaking from each hand. The riot call was in. Andrew March had, by the grace of God, appeared, beheld and understood. The elder man had recognized the equinoctial madness of one whose head was filled with beauty, the heart passionate for life and more of it, the feet rebelling against the ugliness of pavements. March had hurried him away, and later at his leisure scabbed some of the devilry out of the young frame, steaming him clean and reasonable. He had needed to be patient with Lovings while the rioter found a new sensation called health.
 Presently the car turned beneath a vine-covered archway, and stopped at the door of a great house. A lantern that was mellow and friendly hung at the step. There was a terraced garden riding gently down to a pond far back from the road. These terraces with lanes of roses and columbine were Lovings' respites from the wine-sogged streets that wanted him.
 March's housekeeper, Mrs. Ames, a cheerfully deacon woman whose narrow body never recovered from the exertions of yesterday, opened the door to them. They went directly to the stairs and ascended to a room that from which freight danced out into the hallway.
 As they entered, a very old man put down his book and turned to face them. There were no glasses before his eyes, and through the pallor of age on his face showed yet a seasoned strength.
 "I knew it is early for a fire. I was not cold," he said smiling, "but there are certain thoughts one cannot think without a bank of coals to look into. And my fire here has been out nearly four months."
 "Yes, and think of the people who can always get along without an open grate," said Andrew March.
 The very old man had the manner of one who has found a vital peace, filled with more than memories. His head was strangely long, and something like nobility hovered about the wasted shoulders. He was the father of Andrew March.
 Now the gray-haired son closed the hall door, and brought to his father's chair the tiny leather packet. He said: "Lovings has done very well."
 The father looked, and the light in his eyes meant long acquaintance with defeat. Expectancy caught his features and turned them almost youthful. The bit of leather was placed in his hand, and he drew from it a square of white silk. It was tightly creased, of finest texture. Traced in purple upon one side was a line curiously crooked and trailing. It was dotted and crinkled, fanciful as some river of the moon. Along the margin of the silk, certain Chinese characters were etched.
 "This is not a mantra, as we had hoped,—at these words Con felt a rush of disappointment. But the old man went on—"though it may be of great help to us. It is a map."

Con Pinned His Arms and With a Pang of Regret Bent Him Backward With a Force That Might Have Snapped a White Man's Spine.
 pang of regret bent him backward with a force that might have snapped a white man's spine, but the Chinese would not be broken. Neither uttered a sound. An instant they locked. Their feet seemed fast to the floor. Then, under necessity, the white young man forgot to be tender-hearted, a quick gasp of pain came from the Chinese, and he drew from his pocket a crumpled in Lovings' arms. On the floor he quivered, while the victor plunged a hand into the blouse and searched. Against the skin Con touched a tiny packet of leather, warm and soft and precious. He snatched the thing, withdrew it, stood erect and hastened. Cecil was humming as he returned. Lovings released the yellow hands that weakly held one ankle, lifted himself out at the pantry window, and dropped into the bushes below.

 In the darkness he ran across the lawn, where he had walked two hours before, listening to the endless half-feminine chatter of his host. He mounted a stone urn. The hissing rattling of the wall was within jumping distance from this as he had noted in daylight. He sprang, slithered, and his wrists burned against the tiles. Drawing himself up, he dropped down on the other side, and was in the street.
 It depressed him for a moment to think of the bitter misery he had dealt Chee Ming. This was not his idea of something noble. But he had wanted the small leather sack, still warm with Chinese heat.

IT STRUCK.

Laporte, Indiana.—"If a bolt of lightning should strike this tent tonight, how many would be ready for it?" the Rev. John Timber, Evangelist, asked a congregation of Free Methodists crowding a tent at Springfield, six miles of here last night. Outside a storm was threatening.
 A few moments later a bolt of lightning entered the canvas top, killed two ministers on the platform, seriously burned the Rev. Mr. Timber, whose home is at Jackson, Mich., and knocked down many of the worshippers. The Rev. Timber was unconscious for several hours.
 The dead are the Rev. Henry Leaz of Belvidere, Ill., and the Rev. L. P. Huston, field agent of the Evansville Seminary, Evansville, Wis.

NEWS OF THE MOVIES

Buck Jones, the new sensation of the screen whose work in his first screen production has made him a solid favorite with all lovers of thrills, is coming to the Lyric Theatre next Sunday, in his latest William Fox picture, "Forbidden Trails." Love, daring and intrigue mark the plot of this picture. The story is by Charles Alden Seltzer, the noted author.

The scenes are chiefly laid in the Western town of Dawes, where a corrupt political ring headed by William Carrington is in control. Larry Harlan, a prosperous rancher, on his death bed entrusts his entire property—which he has left to his pretty daughter Marion—to "Squint" Taylor, who owns the Arrow Ranch. On a train Taylor overhears that Carrington is the Henry Parsons, Harlan's brother-in-law, and plans to get the property away from Marion.

Taylor learns in Dawes that he has been elected sheriff, but through crooked work the defeated candidate is installed. Taylor denounces the gang and soundly thrashes Carrington and Danforth. Taylor subsequently saves Marion from Carrington and wins her love and the Sheriff's office.

When the war clouds began to gather, Carlo Liron, the Belgian master of tragedy, who plays the Marquis in the "The Strongest" which will be shown at the Lyric theatre tonight and Friday, was playing respite in Cologne. He returned immediately to Antwerp. Later he was approached by German agents who knowing his histrionic genius and the favor in which he was held all over Europe, sought to enlist him in their service to extend German propaganda throughout Belgium and France. His reward was assured to him.

Liron spurned their advances with a determination that won him the sincere enmity of the Teutons. He was forced to flee his native country when the German invading advanced, and to this day knows nothing of the fate of some of his relatives.

The eminent Belgian actor spent some time lecturing in the United States in an effort to bring about a closer cultural understanding between this country and the French-speaking world.

As wholesome and refreshing as a mountain breeze on a spring day is the story unfolded in the picturization of novel of "The Shepherd of the Hills," which comes to the Gladstone theatre, matinee and night, Tuesday, Aug. 17.

Through it all runs a sentiment of buoyant optimism and a sturdy faith in the finer qualities of human nature that is splendidly inspiring in its effect. So simple in outline, yet so true to the rugged but sincere human nature it portrays is, "The Shepherd of the Hills," that its popularity is readily explained. It deals intimately with the lonely lives of the Ozark dwellers when luxury was unknown and when the rough hard work of pioneer existence was met with fortitude and industry. In its heart warming fashion it tells of the stranger who comes to the little community from a most pretentious life and how from a simple tender of sheep he becomes a shepherd of men. With such a splendid subject matter as this the scenes follow each other in kaleidoscopic variety, forming a picture drama which is being viewed by thousands of theatre-goers with wonder and intense interest.
