A Large Crowd At Timber Meet Monday Evening

A large and enthusiastic audience attended the Timber Workers' meeting at Unity Hall Monday evening to hear Ray Canterbury, vice president of the International Union who came direct from Washington headquarters, and Peter J. Christ, mayor of Rhineland, Wis., in their addresses on the lumber and working situations of the country.

Mr. Canterbury is a speaker of national fame and an orator of eloquence. On some occasions he brought the auditors to their feet when he recalled some of the instances in the fight of labor.

The meeting from the start was a success. With not little advertising of the evening, crowds from all parts of the city and Wells and Gladstone well turned out to hear the Washington official give a true and clear picture of the timber world and its advantages and disadvantages in industry.

Future meetings will be planned and the men will perfect their organization during the course of time.

40 Carloads of Cheese

Eight carloads of cheese, valued at more than $40,000, are stored in the Panley & Panley cheese company's warehouse in this city. It is one of the largest stocks the company has had in its "freezer" storage here since it began operations in this city several months ago.

The cheese is made at a score of factories in the upper peninsula. At the Escanaba storage it is coated with paraffine and placed in the cooler to await shipping orders.

Most of it is going to the Atlantic coast, a large shipment to Baltimore being the latest.

Panley & Panley is among the biggest cheese concerns in the country. Their local plant is the only one they operate in the upper peninsula.

Much of the cheese comes to this city by truck, although a few of the more distant factories ship by rail. "The quality of the cheese produced here, as well as the quantity, is steadily being raised," said Manager Shyne yesterday. "We can see a steady improvement in the goods we receive. That speaks well for the dairy industry. It means better cows in Cloverland and more of them."

Eastern Star Party

A large number of people attended the Eastern Star dancing party at South Park Monday night. Music was furnished by Johnson's orchestra. Many young people from Wells and Gladstone were present at the party.

DADDIES.

I would rather be the daddy
Of a rumpling, coughing crew;
Of a bright-eyed, chubby toddler
And a little girl or two,
Than the monarch of a nation
In his high and airy seat
Talking empty adoration
From the subjects at his feet.

I would rather own their kisses
As at night to me they run,
Than to be the king who misses
All the simpler forms of fun,
When the drowsy day is ending
He is dimly alone,
But when my sun is descending
There are joys for me to own.

He may ride to horses and drumming,
I must walk a quiet street,
But when once they see me coming
Then on joyous flying feet
They come racing to me noddily
And I catch them with a swing
And I say it proudly, gladly,
That I'm happier than a king.

You may talk of lofty places,
You may boast of pomp and power,
Men may turn their eager faces
To the glory of an hour,
But give me the humble station
With its joys that long survive
For the fuddlers of the nation
Are the happiest men alive.

Last Night's Dreams

—What They Mean

DID YOU DREAM OF CHILDREN?

Nearly all those who claim to be versed in the affairs of Dreamland declare the dream-child to be a blessing. There are others—a few old cynics—who seem to look upon dream-children from the viewpoint of a modern laundress of the actual world. According to the majority it is a good omen to hear or see many children

Peterson, 1822 First avenue South. Miss Peterson took a fifteen minute ride Sunday afternoon, flying over Escanaba and Little Bay de Noc. "It's just great," said Miss Peterson today, speaking of the trip. "You're not a bit afraid and everything looks so different from the air. Auto rides have lost their attraction for me."

Must Obey Laws Inspector Says On Duties Here

Strict enforcement of the food and drug acts with particular attention being placed on the sales of milk, cream and ice cream in Escanaba is the keynote of the work which was started Wednesday morning by Anton Bushek, state food and drug inspector who came to Escanaba to launch a city-wide campaign to learn and make public the different ingredients used in the mentioned substances.

"I will call on every dealer in this county and take samples," Mr. Bushek said, "after which I will run my experiments and send a similar sample to Lansing for them to determine the contents themselves at the state laboratories."

"After I see his information, I will give it to the newspapers and the dealers who are doing the right thing will stand before the people in the right light. Should it be found that there are any whose goods are below the required test, that also will be made known," he said.

It is the purpose of the state inspector to make his findings public from time to time to safeguard against selling any substances which do not meet with the requirements of the state laws.

Mr. Bushek will remain in the city for a few days to complete his work.

Naval Deserter Taken Back

George A. Gibbs, deserter from the United States navy, who attempted to dig his way out of the Delta county jail and nearly succeeded, was taken back to the training station Tuesday by Chief of Police John J. Tolan of Escanaba. There were other minor charges here against Gibbs, including one for carrying concealed weapons, but it was decided to dispose of him entirely by turning him over to naval officials.

Miss Marie Olson.

Mrs. Marie Olson, 67, died at the family home in 902 Tenth street, So., Wednesday morning after a prolonged illness. She was born in Norway and lived in this country for many years.

Mrs. Betty Eronson.

Mrs. Betty Eronson, 56, passed away at the family home, 720 12th street, Tuesday afternoon. The deceased is survived by two daughters, Sages and Mrs. Louis J. Nolden, both of Escanaba, and one son, David, of Spokane, Wash.

laughing and playing about the house-of-dreams. The little ones will bring you success and if you join in their play there is much happiness in store for you, especially if you have no children of your own. To the childless married and to the unmarried the dream-child brings all the happiness and good fortune which actual children ought to, and frequently do not, bring their parents. Girls are thought to be a luckier omen than boys; but both mean good fortune—and be sure to play with them if possible.

It is not necessary, however, to dream of seeing children in order to be fortunate; though for a generally all-round good luck dream there should be many of them. To dream of a single child means, if you are married, that one is soon to be born to you. If the child is pretty, great pleasure and considerable good fortune await you. If the child is ugly the omen is not so favorable.

If you have a child and dream of seeing one in illness it is a warning to you to look more carefully and with better judgment after your child's health. This is the generally accepted rule regarding dream-children.

The old grouch on the other hand, say that to dream of talking with a lot of children means losses, and to see a child at its mother's breast, illness if you are not more careful of your health. However, the lovers of the dream-child are in a great majority.

NEAR TO NATURE

By GENEVIEVE ULMAR

It was a bird and a book that led Dale Worden to become acquainted with Bella Vance. Both had caught his eye as he was passing along a busy city street and paused to gaze into the show window of a taxidermist. It was a small and dainty bird, as are most window givers to the exhibition of inanimate nature in the shape of stuffed and preserved entities, but next to a diaphanous eagle with one eagle's eye bulging and an articulated eye minute foot there was a fair specimen of a tailor bird, neat and foppish of plumage as in its native woods.

The pretty singer, once just now, touched a chord of memory in the mind of Worden that was pleasing. Here he had passed his life in the (Gladstone) bird life was at its most enticing and interesting stage. His father had lived and died among them, had given years to their study, had written two books on their history and habits and both had become standard in the scientific libraries of the world. In the window lay one of these volumes, it showed a picture of a dainty placed there to attract a purchaser.

BUY AT THE MINT.

Philadelphia, Pa.—The Philadelphia mint turned out 50,000,000 coins in the last fiscal year. Raymond T. Zaker, director of the United States Mint, gave out the figures after inspecting the institution. New die-cutting machines, electric furnaces and carrying devices have been installed within the last year and efficiency methods have been adopted which greatly increased the output of the mint. The increase last year was about twenty-five per cent over 1919. In 1916 a little over a million coins were produced. Mr. Baker recently returned from San Francisco mint where he is preparing to install improved machinery similar to that in the Philadelphia mint. "With the recent additions," said Mr. Baker, "the Philadelphia mint is now not only the largest mint in this country but manufactures a larger number of coins than any other mint in the world." Great Falls, Mont.—Forty-two prisoners of soft drink places were arrested here, charged with selling liquor.

WORSE THAN HEATHEN UNITED STATES DIVORCE CONDITIONS A STEVEN BEFORE HIGH HEAVEN

The divorce situation in the United States in no way worse than it was in Japan in its worst days of heathenism according to Francis M. Moody, executive secretary of the international committee on marriage and divorce. Mr. Moody, whose committee represents a large group of religious denominations, is attempting to get uniform laws bearing on marriage and divorce throughout the United States. "In 1920 Japan had one divorce to every seven marriages, approximately," said Mr. Moody. "Seventeen of our states had ratios ranging from one divorce for every six marriages in Kansas to one divorce for almost every marriage in Nevada. That is how we compare with Japan. "Our divorce situation is worse than Japan's before that country passed a national divorce law. In 1916, eleven of our states, Oklahoma, Indiana, (the paradise of free lovers) Texas, Ohio, Michigan, Kentucky, Illinois and Tennessee had almost as many divorces as the average of Japan for ten years and Japan had a population of 20,000,000 more. "Mr. Moody said the purpose of the committee is not only to get an amendment for the constitution providing for uniformity in marriage and divorce laws throughout the country but also to "induce the clergy to take more care about performing the marriage service for persons about whom they know nothing, with a view of preserving its sacredness. "If you don't expect anything of any kind anytime, you'll constantly be receiving pleasant surprises. Hours—9 to 12 a. m. 2 to 4:30 p. m. DR. THE MOTOR GENIE

You will remember the Arabian Nights story of the fellow who got a lot of a fortune and had a pack of trouble over it before he got the genie back into the bottle again.

The gasoline motor seems to have become a modern genie, capable of vast services to mankind...

Motor cars at rest like the ancient genie, wherever they are allowed, they parade in solid lines...

On country roads the motor trucks have rendered obsolete what only yesterday passed for a good road.

Making automobiles a highly profitable trade that is able to pay high wages because it can hardly make more cars fast enough to meet the demand...

People are buying automobiles right and left and having a good time riding in them...

Also, they are killing people pretty freely—a hundred people in one season...

Keeping all of them up to a bear-keen on society—a charge we bear as the people of a generation...

It will work out of course. We shall see the traffic problem if we have to check our streets and parks...

THE DALLAS AND ASTERS

It was getting to be very odd weather, but the Dallas and Asters growing in the garden by the high stone wall did not seem to mind it.

The leaves had fallen from the trees the night before, and as they started out they called to the flowers. "You better get to sleep, for these trees are a terrible sight to see in the night."

"We have been asleep all summer," said the Dallas and Asters. "The leaves had fallen from the trees the night before, and as they started out they called to the flowers."

"You silly fellows! Don't you know it is cold and you will freeze?" said the trees.

And When You Do Build, Be Sure!

You don't build a house or barn every day, and when you do build, it certainly pays to BE SURE on every point, particularly the lumber you use.

The old idea that lumber is JUST LUMBER is a dead one and everybody appreciates nowadays that each wood has its own best uses.

One thing you ought to know is that "Old Faithful" HEMLOCK can't be beaten for frame siding and underfloors—and why.

If you tell us what you are going to build we will send you an "Old Faithful" book on that very subject and supply you FULL SIZE WORKING PLANS FREE when you are ready.

SYNOPSIS

CHAPTER I—Hearing only the call of deep and musical voice, John Levington, vainly and bravely and the arrival of a baby are simultaneous, and Mary, cast off by her family, great up the stairs, the city taking care of the baby. Convinced that the baby is the child and takes him on his travels. In San Francisco, Levington becomes a victim to "Korah," a drug of the deadliest type. Restored to the grasp of his wife, Levington dies and little Con is "turned out" by the city.

CHAPTER II—Con goes out into the world as an only son, takes him and the wife is retained from a life of crime by Andrew March. Con proceeds from China. A Chinese servant in a house where he is dining, a fish trap.

Chapter III—Continued

More than three score years before, Stephen March had faced the West. A boy of seventeen, he had taken the prairie-wagon trails to San Francisco, and here he had heard strange stories. Seaman blew upon the flame in his young heart, when they told of Carhay and the Indies. Stephen would stride along the board walks, showing the world, and rubbing in his backskin pocket the gold that meant nothing to him except the unlocking of life. Often his long knees rubbed the table in a certain place, where he could drink the wine of Dusanteria, and once, as the slow rich blaze crept into his veins, some one spoke of the Gold. It seemed then he remembers many things he had never known. He went next day to the same table and the next, but could not find the man who had spoken. He almost believed that the wine itself had beckoned to him, but now the deepest cup was mute. Stephen's ears were shut to the cries of gold. The Mormons, with solemn words and maidens, could not detain him. Adventurers from Spain drew him into their plans of raid, but he failed their appointments. There was a call to him from across the shining bay, and beyond. In the wet-shops the discussion of yerba buena was nothing to him until a Swedish captain reared from out his thirst a comparison with the good herbs of Asia, making pointed reference to the poppy and the hemp-resin, also to the magic koreth. Stephen March went with the Swedish captain. Numerous sailing-ships had anchored in the bay, many of them forever. Their crews had scented gold in the hills, and their decks were deserted. Perhaps the red and shooting smoke was glad of the boy's homage. Certainly it was good business to ship him. When repairs were finished, the un-painted sloop nosed out of the bay and breathed the timeless blue. The captain had whipped three Chinamen into the crew, and the lad loved them. The mate, also Swedish, but inclined to silence, had frightened two negroes up from the back rooms of the city, to add to the quota. A Hindu, wide-eyed and they hailed at the sheets, frequently punning to weed his own ignorance. On these later occasions, the silence of the mate was broken. Their cook, a salty Irishman, whose life was for some reason forfeit in the gold in his misadventure. They were with a frantic might his good-will to the new-comer, Stephen March, when they continued in himself a line of the gold. The mate, however, was happy. Mice were filled with strong drink, and in dreams. The captain had read three books in English, and he now read them again, alone in his misadventure. They were the "Travels of Marco Polo," a fatherless "treasure on "The Art of Torment" ries. She was drawing closer to the heart of beauty and romance. They halted in a bleak settlement where a stream had once passed. Now but a muddy spring remained. Mid-summer heat into their bodies. Eithna's child was born—the only new, clean thing within a thousand miles.

Stephen's Ears Were Shut to the Cries of Gold.

Perhaps the immensity of sky, the staring emptiness of the horizon, affected the rosy newcomer. There was no wall of sorrow from her tiny lips, only a deep-seated mourner. In their hut the Tartar woman, gaunt and hairy, was an unsuspected miracle of tenderness and sagacity.

In the following spring, when by the glare of the distance was accompanied by swelling heat, Andrew with his wife and child set forth again. There was no trail. The camels were un-owned. Andrew was weak. He longed to go on, as Eithna did; yet the impulse to turn back was strong within him. But she had told him lightly, and perhaps truly, that China to the south and east would be quite as inconvenient and much less sanitary than the pathless land before them. The child gravely regarded sand, rocks and the clear sky, and learned to laugh happily whenever Andrew came to take her. A doll was made of silks and a jacked bone. A shining lizard was also added to the March family for her entertainment.

The beasts grew thin and dry. The wind, a monster serpent of the air, swept before them and over them, reddened the camel's eyes and darkened their milk. In Eithna's cheeks the color deepened, and she refused to turn back. Andrew lost count of the days. Two of the pack-animals were killed for food and drink, and a third went down for the lack of the same. The baby girl prospered, and Eithna whispered her songs under the starlight of a grotesque world.

The riders came. From out the west, a little to the north they appeared, a dozen or more—huge men mounted on short-legged horses, shaggy and hairy. They were silver-eyed. Eithna noted their movements as incomprehensible as their words. They circled about the young father, and as they drew in closer, he was ready to fire on them and light it out. But his legs became suddenly weak, and the sky reeled eastward—and when he awakened it was deep night. The desert was silent and horrible. His body ached, felt thick and clammy. Then he found the day feathered dark, still clinging to his shoulder where they had blown it, the poisoned barb under the skin. Andrew had been unconscious for hours. Eithna and the child were gone.

Madly he kicked the camels and reared. In the pale far light of the heavens he thought he could follow the tracks of the horses. He was able to do so without difficulty, but found to his terror that each rider had taken a different direction, radiating out from the point of attack. He did not know which to follow. He was alone. Sanity left him. The camels whinnied and started back the way they had come. Andrew roused from his delirium in the hut where his baby Helen had been born, and the familiar bearded female was watching him. Fever had held him in this for many days. From caravanaries to the south he gathered up camels and men and horses and provisions and started northward again in search of his own. Most of the men refused to ride with him beyond the trees, into the forbidden land. Bright-eyed alarm prevented, although a few consented to accompany the white man. Sixty mules, and they covered their tracks as they went. They moved in large irregular circles, always northward, searching, until they deserted Andrew for a mule. Stephen March came to find his son, and ended these desperate wanderings. He placed out the story Andrew could not tell, and gently guided him back to Peking.

A ransom was raised, great enough to impoverish the house of March. Now, to carry the ransom to the riders, came the British expedition, and its failure is still on the tongues of certain old timers. Out of thirty starved, sweating, sun-helmeted men, four staggered back to Shan-sung, with a tale of skin-wounds that brought bitter death, and whole mirages of hell. Their mouthings were not taken down officially. The stories were tinctured with luxury, so decided the wise listeners as the legend. Eithna March was never found.

In eighteen years some of the bitterness had faded out of this Andrew March. His ways were as reconcile as those of his father, his desires far flung in shadowy worlds. To him Eithna was lost, but not forever. His sorrow was never a blank. He realized how completely an Easterner he was, how Oriental in character. The blessing was that it gave him a Chinese patience.

About the time that Con Levington was finding the deep places of America, and dipping in rather freely for a young person, Andrew March's attention had centered upon Chee Ming, newly arrived in Dory street. This Chinese shared his business with no man intentionally. March had been so light a shadow upon him that the attack in the Wedger house was a real surprise. Levington had worked delicately, and March permitted himself to hope as he had not dared hope for eighteen years. He had seen a peculiar promise in the way Levington had made that stamped down the street in Chinatown. One was close to the elements, had imagination, vigor, and a laugh. In him were centered now all the hopes of an unhappy man.

NEWS OF THE MOVIES

"Daddy Long Legs" in which Mary Pickford will be seen, at the Lyric theatre is filled with the most delicate and artistic imagery throughout. One of the most effective incidents deals with a comparison of the raising of Judy Abbott, the orphan system girl, and Angelica Wyckoff, a spoiled rich child.

Judy (Miss Pickford) the little girl who, despite cruel treatment and bad living conditions in the asylum, brings sunshine and aid to the smaller children is symbolized by a lily, rising from a dumping ground for old rubbish. Angelica is symbolized as a hot house rose, beautiful because of intense cultivation, but unable to stand the rigors of the ordinary out-of-doors.

There is a pretty bit showing the court of Ivan Cupid who sends forth his emissaries to see that Judy falls in love. Eubies, whimsely elay with wings and thin draperies play the part of Cupid's attendants.

The master stroke of directional genius takes place in the scene showing the death of an orphan baby, who had not had proper care in the asylum, and who dies in the arms of Judy. The dead mother of the child is seen in the form of a beautiful white shade which moves forward, passing like air through the furniture and gently taking the baby from the arms of "the little mother."

Marshal Neilan directed the picture, and in its exquisite symbolism proven himself a master of the art, as well as of the humorous situation, which last accomplishment has won him the title of "The Mark Twain of the Screen"—Tonight and Friday.

"Flames of the Flesh," a new William Fox photoplay starring Gladys Brockwell, will be shown at the Lyric theatre on Sunday. In this play one receives a vivid impression of a wide variety of human emotions.

Gladys Brockwell, the girl of a thousand expressions, "gives a forceful impersonation of wail of the world who experiences a series of transformations of character. It is said that in this production the players hold the audience in spellbound silence as they enact a drama teeming with intense situations.

These well known players support Miss Brockwell. William Scott, Ben Deely, Charles K. French, Louis Fitzroy, Harry Springer, Nigel de Brulles, Mene Rosita Martin and Josephine Crowell. The story is by Forrest Halsey and the production was directed by Edward J. Le Saint.

BATTER KILLED BY PITCHED BALL

RAY CHAPMAN OF CLEVELAND DIES AS RESULT OF BEING STRUCK ON HEAD.

New York, Aug. 17.—Ray Chapman, shortstop in the Cleveland American baseball team, who was hit on the head by a ball thrown by Pittsburgh Carl Mays in yesterday's game with the New York Americans, died in St. Mary's hospital at 4:59 o'clock this morning. He never regained consciousness after an operation which was directed upon shortly after, although when a portion of his crushed skull was removed by surgeons who hoped against hope that he might recover.

Since the accident, gloom settled over the members of both teams and the baseball world in general feels the deepest regret for the accident. Mays was overcome with grief when told of Chapman's death. All games for today were postponed.

Mays barred himself even to his friends today so inconsolable was his grief over the death of Ray Chapman. Efforts of his most intimate friends who called, failed to pacify him.

The death of Chapman is the worst tragedy that could come at this time. Coming at a time when the pennant's title is in the hottest, and Chapman was his greatest help next to his manager.

MARQUETTE COUNTY HAS DROP IN POPULATION

Population figures, made public on Monday in Washington, give Marquette county, Michigan, 47,786, a decrease of 750 or 2.4 per cent from the census figures of 1914.

Los Angeles—The California railroad commission issued a decision authorizing intrastate railroads and boat lines to increase intrastate passenger rates 20 per cent, and freight rates 25 per cent.

ALL SLACKERS PUBLISHED BY THE WAR DEPT.

WILL MAKE KNOWN THE LIST OF THOSE WHO EVADED MILITARY DUTY.

Washington, D. C.—The war department will shortly publish to the country the names of 172,911 men who are listed in the record of the department as men who "willfully failed" their country in its hour of peril. The statement issued from the office of the secretary of war in part reads:

"Out of over 24,000,000 registrants, the maximum number chargeable with willful desertion is 172,911, considerably less than 1 per cent of the total registration, and a tremendous improvement over the draft record of the civil war.

"The war department will shortly publish to the country a list of men classified as willful deserters, and desires the cooperation of the various state and local officials, patriotic societies and other agencies, including the department of justice, in bringing about the apprehension of these men. Assurance of such cooperation have in many cases already been given. Exact copies of the list of names grouped by states, or other convenient divisions, will be available for postmasters, police stations and other agencies.

Pay Surrender.

"Pending publication of the list of deserters any man charged with draft desertion who wishes to avoid the humiliation of arrest may voluntarily surrender at the nearest army post, camp or station, in order that his case may be investigated and his status be definitely determined. In the event that an such man's case shall have been finally disposed of prior to the publication of the list of deserters, his name will be omitted from that list.

"Any draft registrant who is in doubt as to his draft status may write to the adjutant general of the army, Washington, D. C., and find out how he is classified, notwithstanding the fact that ignorance of such status is the registrant's own fault, because of his lack of interest in keeping track of his obligations to the government.

Did Not Report.

"Draft deserters are men who registered and who were ordered by the draft authorities to report for military duty at a specified time and place and who did not so report.

"Draft delinquents are men who were required by law to register, but who failed to register, or who, although they registered, as required, failed to report for physical examination, or failed to return properly executed questionnaires.

"These delinquents have not been inducted into the military service and consequently are civilians, not subject to trial by military courts. The department of justice is charged with bringing these offenders to punishment, and has indicated thousands of them before the federal courts, of whom a considerable number have been convicted."

A Traveling Man's Experience.

You may learn something from the following by W. H. Ireland, a traveling salesman of Louisville, Ky. "In the summer of 1885 I had a severe attack of cholera morbus. I gave the hotel porter fifty cents and told him to buy me a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic and Diarrhoea Remedy and to take no substitute. I took a double dose of it according to the directions and went to sleep. At five o'clock the next morning I was called by my order and took a train for my next stopping place, a well man."

Last Night's Dreams

—What They Mean

DID YOU DREAM OF HENS?

THIS is not a common dream but it is a most favorable one, partaking of that generally beneficent character which appertains to nearly all lucid visions. Dream-hens and dream-chickens are equally of fortunate omen.

If the hens are making that peculiar noise called "singing" then is the dream more than ever propitious, as it foretells thrift, many children and domestic happiness. If you see a brood of chickens instead of hens it is true that you will probably have many petty cares and worries before you will attain your good fortune, but you will eventually get there and all your vicissitudes turn out to your advantage.

Any one about to embark in a business venture attended with some risk should by all means dream of chickens

DeWine's Fulfilled. In line with the desires of upper peninsula sportsmen, the State Game Commission's advice recommendation that the open season on deer hunting be cut from twenty to ten days is being considered by the public domain commission.
