*Beautiful Services Mark
Funeral of the Late John K. Stack*

Unquestionably the largest funeral ever held in the city of Escanaba was that of the late John K. Stack Tuesday morning. Shortly before 10 o'clock the home in Lake Shore drive was filled to capacity by friends and mourners of the late financier.

The body was taken to St. Joseph's Catholic church where a requiem high mass was celebrated, the Rev. Father Eugene Butternut of Metamora, Ill., as celebrant. He was assisted by the Rev. Father Jacques and Feldhaus while the Rev. Father Dooley served as deacon.

Special music furnished by St. Joseph's choir was rendered, bringing tears to the eyes of the hundreds of people who thronged the church. For many blocks on either side of the edifice, cars were lined making the longest procession this city has ever seen at the last rites of any person.

During the mass when the special music was not being heard, solos were sung by Mrs. John Seiner, Frank Hirm and William Belongez. The three vocalists added considerably to the impressiveness of the service.

At the conclusion of the ceremony it was necessary for part of the large crowd to make way for the pall bearers to carry the coffin to the car outside. The honorary pall bearers consisting of J. C. Kirkpatrick, D. E. Gray, H. W. Reade, Solomon Greenhood, J. B. Moran and J. F. Carey, formed the lead in the procession which marched slowly by the air of the hymns to the outer halls of the church. They were followed by the active pall bearers carrying the coffin. They were Con J. Driscoll, James Moran, E. S. Zulke, Nick Dugonez, Harry Belongez and Will Smith.

At the home a most beautiful spectacle was to be seen. The parlor residence was literally covered with floral offerings from the many friends of the deceased. Three cars were necessary to carry the flowers and beautiful wreaths.

Local Young Man Is Drowned at Ashland

Hubert, 19-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. John O'Donnell, 394 S. Norris street, was drowned Monday afternoon in the lake near Ashland, Wis., according to a telegram received by the parents late Monday afternoon.

Only a meager account of the fatal fall of the youth was received in the message. Mr. O'Donnell took the next train to the Wisconsin city to learn the facts and claim the body which will be brought back to Escanaba for burial.

As near as can be learned, the young man was standing on the ore dock and fell, apparently striking some hard substance, before he hit the water. Whether death resulted from a blow or drowning has not been learned.

The young man left Escanaba over a year ago and for many months was in the American Merchant Marine where he learned sailing and working on the waters to perfection. Leaving the service he engaged himself on an ore carrier running to the different lake ports and has been in that work for several weeks. He had anticipated a trip to his home city next week to visit his relatives and many friends here.

Young-Selander.

The marriage of Mrs. L. Y. Young of Escanaba and A. C. Selander of Winnipeg, Can., took place Monday night at the Young home, 824 Hartnett avenue. Following the ceremony, Mr. and Mrs. Selander left on a motor trip to Milwaukee, Chicago and other points after which they will return to make Escanaba their home.

Serious Offense Committed

What the postal authorities of Escanaba consider a most serious offense as committed some time Wednesday night after 8 o'clock mail collection when some person or persons apparently youngsters tore the mail box from its post at the corner of Fifth avenue and Thirteenth street.

When the next mail collection was to be taken the carrier found the box missing and made an immediate search of the near vicinity. The steel mail box was found in an alley nearby with its interior intact, nothing having been taken from it.

Two Years in Germany

Herbert Groesnick of this city, has returned from two years service with the American military forces in Germany and will again make his home in Escanaba. Mr. Groesnick has been away from Escanaba for the past six years, the greater part of the time being in the service of his country.

Railway Co-Op is Owner of Building

By negotiations which have been pending for several weeks yesterday the Railway Co-Operative Association became the owners of the building in which their stores are located in Ludington street. The large building was purchased from E. J. Atkinson, former owner. The consideration was not made known in the announcement.

IT'S FALL—and in our Apparel Dept. (second floor)—one sees nothing but new Fall and Winter things—everywhere one sees the shades of autumn—and the new styles themselves simply radiate newness. An abrupt departure from the modes of last year is apparent in both Suits and Coats. The New Coats accentuate the wrap-piness of past summer, and Suits take on an elaborate air; dresses still display short sleeves, but show the effect of the present mania for embroidery and lavish trimming. As usual if one wants to see the newest New York Fashions, correct to the smallest detail, a visit to Escanaba's big store will put one right in this regard.

IT CAN'T BE DONE

A writer in the Boston Transcript issues a plain warning to those political office seekers who are planning to "get the soldier vote." He says this idea seems to be popular with some of the members of congress at the present time, and he refers to the proposed bonus legislation as one of the steps planned to get the political support of the war veterans.

The world is very beautiful up here and as I dance and splash every one who comes the way steps to admire me. Yes, I pity you and I do not wonder that you admire me and wish you could be in my place.

Getting the soldier vote is not going to be easy for any candidate, unless the candidate can prove he is fair and square, 100 per cent loyal to the government and the best man for the office he seeks.

RIVER AND FOUNTAIN

ONCE there was a Little River and a beautiful fountain in a garden. In the sunlight the fountain throwing its streams of water made wonderful colors and it sparkled and splashed as it fell into the big basin beneath it.

"How I wish I could sparkle and make beautiful colors as it does in the sunlight." The fountain tossed its waters higher and splashed louder when it heard the Little River lament.

"I am sorry for you," it said, "for it must be quite dull down here." Little River never stopped to tell the fountain what it knew. "I can't not be any happier," said Little River, "and it might make the fountain sad to know that its loneliness came from a lovely little river."

Stiff Sentence Demand Here By State "Cop"

That members of the state constabulary are bent on making a campaign in Delta county and in the city was seen in court action taken this morning.

Corporal Baker of the Michigan State Troopers entered the case last night and fined Johnson in a brief, but not that he found the bottle which had the appearance of rain water.

Through the examination he would not say he had bought or received the liquor from any one else.

He asked the court to impose a fine of any amount rather than send him to jail but the state corporal insisted that he laws would have to be rigidly enforced and asked that the court impose the maximum jail sentence and not give the man an alternative of paying any fine.

Yellow Men Sleep

Illustrated by Irwin Myerson

CHAPTER I.—Hearing only the snarl of dogs and human howls, John Levinston, visionary and impractical, and Mary, daughter of his and widow of her first husband, who have been separated since the death of her husband, give up the struggle. The city taking care of the baby, Levinston goes to the grave of his wife's child and takes him on his travels. In the Province, Levinston becomes the "Yellow Man" of the day. A dog of the dead man's type, he is the grave of his wife's child and is called "Yellow Man" by the city.

CHAPTER II.—Con goes out into the world as a man. He becomes an agent for a Chinese firm. He is retained from Chee Ming, a Chinese servant in the Province. He is retained from Chee Ming, a Chinese servant in the Province.

CHAPTER III.—Levinston, in the footsteps of his father, Stephen March, Andrew March has traveled they saw the "Yellow Man" in a remote settlement in the Province. He had been seen, but he had not been seen for many years. He was seen by Levinston's wife and daughter when they were at a place where they traveled through the desert. Eighteen years later he selects Con Levinston to look after him. On the way back home to China Con discovers that the "Yellow Man" is a man.

CHAPTER IV.—Con is shot by a porcupine and is in the hospital. On the way back to the Province, he is seen by the "Yellow Man" and realizes they are seeking the same destination. Levinston, after some weeks of difficulty, reaches the Province. He is seen by the "Yellow Man" and realizes they are seeking the same destination. CHAPTER V.—Levinston, after some weeks of difficulty, reaches the Province. He is seen by the "Yellow Man" and realizes they are seeking the same destination. Levinston, after some weeks of difficulty, reaches the Province. He is seen by the "Yellow Man" and realizes they are seeking the same destination.

Night drew down before they had made any noticeable progress. They rested upon the pink sands, and Con looked at a pillow of proper shape, fearful to the eye in its imitation, although it was solid rock. A dull substrate for sleep claimed their bodies. Levinston's dreams were wrecked by huge tumbling mountains that proved at the striking moment to be ridges, desert robbers with the sun as a protected religion in their tea-colored eyes. All through this wretched slumber, the white man ached and burned from the heating of the storm, nervous in the thought of their capture and plight. At daybreak the wind began again.

"Let's go," said Con.

"My understanding is—as March studied his tattooed foot, he made this pun—"dictates plainly a continuation of that direction."

Levinston followed him over the unfriendly surfaces. An old wind, half asleep, buzzed against rocks, and at moments hurried their ankles. By the flying dust the sun was diminished to a far and hot globe. Con could not look at his friend for the hurt it gave him. He knew that he must himself look as bad. It was not vanity that made him care, but a simple desire to remain human, and not become a thing of rage and beard and thirst.

Toiling up the unequal slopes, to arrive at a new point of confusion, they would note that their shadows no longer fell true beside them, and March would sit down and study the map in its inconvenient location. Then they would go on.

The crest of the first series of hills gave only a sharper view of a broader vista of desolation. Levinston was desperately weary. His step slouched, and the once powerful shoulders lurched sideways. Lonely thoughts passed through his mind, like birds in a ruffled hall. His eyes were puffed. There was Memphis, and that myrtle bird beard feast at the end of the blind alley. There was Bill the yellow cock, twisting his hands together in such a quick fascinating manner; or laughing with a voice like the cry of rulls; again, hearing wonder-tales in a language beyond translation. A phantom ghost stood at moments on the edge of the world. Then the clean woman of Dowagiac appeared, with oily black hair, straggling upon her neck, her body bolging with neglect—and suddenly Levinston was choking. March gave him a hand.

"Control yourself," whispered the older man. "It can be done. Same as walking straight when you're drunk. I've seen men in India go for ten days without water, and fifty days without food. It can be done."

"Thanks," muttered Con hoarsely. "I'll try. Ten days, you say, without water."

"And they haven't as good reason as we."

After a time Con turned again to March, and the twist on his face was meant for a smile: "Do you think it will be ten days this time?"

They pressed down into the narrow valley. The next miniature range did not parallel either to their course or to its dry sister range. Complexity of lines and contours increased. The two sun-catched men could no longer rely upon their own shadows for time was passing, and they could not determine how much to allow for the shifting of the planet. Con's heart pounded with every heartbeat, and earth itself was no longer tolerable.

Much of the former Levinston was broken down. All the cells of his body that had ever cried for bread were now dead and gone. He had been burned down to the pure primitive thirst for water. No trifling attachments could remain here to settle a the hill began to disappear. Their bare bodies were like rough mounds of copper. Levinston's eyes twitched, and he brushed a hand across his face. He wanted to laugh and fling himself down hill. He would ask them for water. For an instant he hated Andrew March for being afraid, and an instant later realized this feeling was merely his own deep-spring fear. He swallowed thickly. A tear stood in one eye, making him wonder the pain in his heart.

"Didn't know I had it in me," he said, grimacing.

March did not see the tear. He had frozen pale beneath the grime.

"Oh, God!" he mumbled, "this isn't what we came for!"

"Suppose we'd better not ask them for a drink," said Con. "We'll go on and hunt for it, because it must grow natural somewhere around here. Shall we follow the dromedary?"

The little men had gone in. Trust rose like smoke from the open shaft. The laden beast was ending his way across the valley. March had roared from his spathly. He looked at Con, who asked:

"Can you make it down hill?"

"Boy," said March steadily, "you've got a function nervous system."

Commanding their scant energies, the white men made a final play for life, and walked along the crest of the ridge, to keep the animal in view with-

Closer, he saw the glitter upon a long gray cloak. The sentinel had no weapon, and gave no sign other than to watch with curiosity the two jaded wanderers. The pony was well groomed and restive, Arabian in build. From beyond the crest of the road a valley of shouts came down into the ravine, and the swift beat of hoofs. All these oncoming riders were as yet invisible, but the cries were resonant with hate.

March called out to the gray sentinel, in the best Chinese he could frame with swollen lips. In response, the left arm of the rider came up glittering, to shield the face below the eyes.

A rushing cloud of horsemen, thundered into the ravine from the upper levels. Swords were bare, flashing in the rusty light. Harsh battle-chanting filled the dust. The riders sounded down to trample the intruders.

Levinston was not accountable. He leaned forward to breast them. His hands worked with strange power. Something elemental lived in him; something like the centaurs that had ridden the night horizons. His throat rattled the whistles of the wind. The wild horses swerved as if he were a crouching wolf. Con rocked forward, and seized a sword-wrist as it swung low at March's head. And abruptly all strength left him. He fell in the road.

A mass of hoofs tangled about him, but through that clear voice sounded—and again. The gray figure, the sentinel, was standing up in the stirrups, with right arm upraised, and the clear call of command was repeated. Swords thrusts were halted, and the mad horsemen reared back in obedience to an imperious gesture.

A circle widened around the two white men. The wild horses stood trembling and disappointed. A further command came from the person whose face was again hidden by the left forearm upraised, and who now spurred away out of sight. A whispering loomed among the battalions, a low crying and taking of advice. Fear of their number dismounted, and Con felt the familiar leathern thong tightening about him. The white men were lifted up and set behind two broad-backed horsemen, and the entire party moved at a walk up the ravine road.

"Ask for water," called Con to his comrade.

March did so, in native speech, but no heed was given. The party emerged abruptly upon an open plain at the head of the road.

Here was the wonderland they had come to find, the treasure for which they had risked their lives. Levinston stared dumbly, believing it all a mirage.

Lazy persons usually are sympathetic, probably because they have plenty of time for sympathy.

At 20 he doesn't need much sleep, so he needs it but he has to hustle so hard to make a living he doesn't get it.

You're taking the right step when you switch to Spurs

YOU can't do better. After you've smoked through a pack of Spurs, you won't want to go back to other cigarettes. You'll find your old kind sort of flat and uninteresting, like last year's politics. For Spur's good tobacco taste can't help but win you for keeps. There's rich, mellow Turkish, flavorful Burley and other home-grown tobaccos blended in a new way that brings out to the full the all-round goodness of this top-notch cigarette.

And Spurs top all—all ways. They're crimped. That means slow burn, smooth taste—no paste. The smart "brown-and-silver" package is three-fold to keep Spurs fresh and fragrant. Twenty cents will prove that Spurs are your kind of cigarettes—top-notch quality at rock-bottom price. The sooner you try them the gladder you'll be.

E. M. JOHNSON, City Treas.

No objections being offered, the mayor ordered the above report received and placed on file.

Alderman Clark offered the following resolution, and moved its adoption, which was supported by Alderman Buck:

Whereas, due notice has been given that the City Council has deemed it a necessary and desirable public improvement to construct a sewer in Wisconsin avenue between Fifth street and Sixth street, inclusive, pursuant to resolution of the City Council passed June 21st, 1920, and of the district to be assessed and of the time and place of hearing of suggestions and objections concerning the same.

And Whereas, said hearing was set for August 2nd, 1920, at eight o'clock P. M.;

And Whereas, all persons then appearing to suggest and object thereto were heard;

And Whereas, final action on the matter was deferred until the present time, awaiting the approval of the plans by the State Sanitary Engineer;

And Whereas, said approval has now been received;

Now therefore, Be It Resolved, that said sewer be constructed in Wisconsin avenue, between Fifth and Sixth streets, inclusive, in accordance with the above mentioned resolution of the City Council passed June 21st, 1920, and in accordance with plans and specifications therefor, on file in the office of the city clerk.

Motion carried unanimously.

Alderman Tostenson offered the following resolution, and moved its adoption, which was supported by Alderman Malloy:

Whereas, due notice has been given that the City has deemed it a necessary and desirable public improvement to construct a sewer in Wisconsin avenue, between Eleventh street and Fifteenth street, inclusive, pursuant to resolution of the City Council passed June 21st, 1920, and of the district to be assessed and of the time and place of hearing of suggestions and objections concerning the same;

And Whereas, said hearing was set for August 2nd, 1920, at eight o'clock P. M.;

And Whereas, all persons then appearing to suggest and object thereto were heard;

And Whereas, final action on the matter was deferred until the present time, awaiting the approval of the plans by the State Sanitary Engineer;

And Whereas, said approval has now been received;

Now therefore, Be It Resolved, that said sewer be constructed in Wisconsin avenue, from Eleventh street to Fifteenth street, inclusive, in accordance with the above mentioned resolution of the City Council passed on June 21, 1920, and in accordance with the plans and specifications therefor, on file in the office of the City Clerk.

Motion carried unanimously.

Moved by Alderman Malloy, supported by Alderman Tostenson, that sealed bids be asked, for the construction of a sewer in Wisconsin avenue, between Eleventh street and Fifteenth street, according to the plans and specifications on file in the city clerk's office.

Said bids must be deposited in the City of Gladstone on or before five o'clock P. M., September 20th, 1920. The work to be done as soon as possible.

Motion carried unanimously.

Alderman Clark offered the following resolution, and moved its adoption, which was supported by Alderman Buck:

Resolved, that it is deemed necessary and advisable to vacate, discontinue and abolish an alley laid out on the plat of the Central Avenue addition to the City of Gladstone, Michigan, between lot 10 of block fifty-seven of the First Addition to the Village (now City) of Gladstone, Michigan, and lots eight to thirteen inclusive of block five of the Central Avenue Addition to the City of Gladstone, Michigan.

Resolved further, that this Council will meet on Monday, the 18th day of October, 1920, at eight o'clock P. M. at the Council Chambers in the City of Gladstone, Michigan, for the purpose of hearing objections to the vacating, discontinuing and abolishing of said alley.

Motion carried unanimously.

Moved by Alderman Clark, supported by Alderman Buck, that the street committee be instructed to look over said alley in block 57 and report same to the City Council.

Motion carried unanimously.

The committee on public property was instructed to investigate a site for disposal plant, and see what can be done for same. Also look up the Sixth street crossing and report to the City Council regarding same.

Moved by Alderman Clark, supported by Alderman Buck, that the Council adjourn.

Motion carried unanimously.

ARTHUR L. WILLIAMSON, City Clerk.

NEW METHODS OF GETTING FUEL

AMERICAN CHEMISTS TO CONSIDER INCREASING GASOLINE SUPPLY

Chicago.—New ways of obtaining gasoline, including the extraction of it from natural gas, will be described at the sixtieth general meeting of the American Chemical society opening here September 7, it is announced.

How more power can be obtained from the derivatives of petroleum forms one of the important subjects of discussion. Dr. A. C. Fiedler, supervising chemist of the chemical section of the United States Bureau of Mines and his associates, A. A. Strub and G. W. Jones, have prepared an elaborate report on "Gasoline Losses Due to Incomplete Combustion in Motor Vehicles." It will be shown, the society reports, that the automobilist can get far more power out of a given quantity of gasoline than has been assumed to obtain.

Another paper to be given in the fuel symposium describes how artificial gas can be produced in larger quantities and at lower cost by cracking it with natural gas in regions where that vapor is available. Utilization of the large deposits of lignite in this country as a substitute for coal will be discussed.

In the cellulose symposium a number of speakers will discuss the paper famine and the new print situation and suggest methods by which production can be increased by conserving wood pulp supplies and also by employing new substances in paper manufacture.

Why We Sell Goodyear Tires

YOU rely on us to sell you good tires. If the tires we sell you fall our reputation with you is gone.

That is why we carry Goodyear tires, tubes and accessories—we are absolutely sure that they will not fail to give you satisfaction. They get you there and they get you back.

Then we make your business doubly secure by rendering a real check in the wood service. By regular inspection of your tires and real advice to you from time to time, we make it possible for you to get all of the miles out of your tires that Goodyear has built into them.

He thought the handwriting was his wife's. And it WAS his wife's, but not the wife he thought. He had confused Wife No. 1 with Wife No. 2 and it almost caused a dissolution of the family. His old wife's love letters were produced as testimony to the perfidy of his second wife. You will find this complication the theme of the most interesting photoplay in years.
