CLEANER LIVING CAMPAIGN ON

STATE BOARD OF HEALTH
WORKERS TO GIVE ADDRESS
AT OPERA HOUSE

Two members of the State Board of Health are in the city for a few days to instruct Gladstone people in the "Cleaner Living Campaign" which is now being held throughout the state. An address was given last night to a union meeting at the M. E. church and on Tuesday night at 8 o'clock a lecture illustrated by slides and moving pictures will be given.

The following letters regarding this visit by the state health board officials is self-explanatory:

Lansing, Mich.
September 25, 1920
Mr. E. J. Williams,
Supt. of Schools,
Gladstone, Michigan.

My Dear Mr. Williams—
Two of our special hygiene lecturers, Miss Hutzel and Mr. Plews, are to be in the lower half of the Upper Peninsula during the month of October. They are sent upon the repeated requis of Gogebic, Iron and Schoolcraft counties. We are very anxious that while they are there they should touch as many of the important Upper Peninsula towns as possible. They will be in Delta county about the third week in October.

Their work in the schools for the past two years has consisted of a showing of the splendid film "How Life Begins" to all school children down through the fifth grade, followed in the case of the high school boys and girls by special lectures. You are perhaps familiar with the film. It is thoroughly scientific and a splendid adjunct to any biological courses. It shows the process of reproduction from the protozoan through the sweet peas, the frogs, the butterflies, the chickens and the white rats. The film does not deal with human reproduction. It is equally interesting to a group of children or an adult audience. We have shown it to 35,382 school children throughout the state with not a single adverse criticism.

Our lecturers are equipped with a portable moving picture machine which has the approval of the state health department and can be used with the ordinary lighting current. The film showing is during the day the room of course must be darkened. We have followed the rule in all of our state work of having the film showing and lecture during school hours. We wish to make the work as much a part of your biological and hygiene courses as possible. We are also anxious to have a general meeting for mothers and fathers.

I am writing Mayor Miller, Mrs. Conahan, Mrs. Barnum, Dr. Miller, and Mr. Woodport and asking them to get in touch with the Mayor relative to the matter.

Will you please write me at once whether you wish the lecturers to stop and whether the date will be convenient for you. We shall hope for a prompt response.

MARJORIE DELAVAN,
Director Bureau of Education,
Gladstone, Mich.,
October 9, 1920.

Miss Margery Delavan,
Lansing, Michigan.

Dear Madam—

Your letter, of Sept. 29th, relating to special hygiene lectures, received. I took this matter up with the Board of Education. We admit that conditions in Gladstone are bad—very bad. We are not sure what methods to pursue. We do, feel however, that if a meeting of the parents can be arranged, as you suggest, it will be the best possible way of attacking our social problems. I believe that much of the trouble rests here. We are not so sure about the lecture to children. However we feel that if any one can do this right, your department can, and we are willing to cooperate with you. The third week of October is the time of the meeting of the Upper Peninsula Education Association. Our meeting will be closed on Thursday and we will try to organize a meeting to prepare the committee. These meetings are very successful. We may have in regard to this much appreciated. Truly yours,
E. J. Williams, Supt. of Schools,
Gladstone, Mich.

During the fiscal year 1919-20, 1920-21, Miss Hutzel gave Polish Works and 48,770 people. Miss Plews delivered through the state. Total number of people for all states, boys and 28,117 audiences. So in Every Drop

MEMORINEE TAKES FOOTBALL GAME YESTERDAY BY SCORE
OF 72 TO 0

The Gladstone Legion football team was overwhelmed at Memoinnee yesterday afternoon, the boys not having the least bit of a show against the Memoinnee Legion team, which included four former University players. The final score was 72 to 0.

The locals told their own in the first quarter and neither side scored. In the second inning Memoinnee made a total of 28 points and in the third and fourth quarters increased this to 72 points. The Memoinnee boys were very rough in their play and this had considerable to do with the poor showing of the locals.

CITY WATER MUST BE BOILED

WARNING

Supt. Alfred Raddant of the water plant issues a warning to the people who use the city water for domestic purposes. In the analysis, conditions were found that are not really alarming but it is deemed advisable that the water be boiled first before using it. The city water department will keep close watch of the situation and analysis is made every day at the city laboratory.

People will be informed of the results but at present Supt. Raddant advises every one to boil it.

Auction Sale
The Ladies' Aid of the Swedish Mission church will give an Auction Sale at the church parlors Thursday evening at 8 o'clock. Donations will be taken and refreshments will be served.

FATHER OF THOMAS JACHOR DIES IN MANISTIQUE

(Manistique Couriers Record)

One of the oldest inhabitants of this city passed his reward, when Frank Jachor, for thirty four years a policeman here, died Wednesday night at his home on Maple avenue.

Frank Jachor was born in the province of Quebec on the 8th of June in 1846. He spent the early part of his life in Canada and came to this city about thirty five years ago to take charge of a lumber camp for the Chicago Lumber Company just across the Manistique river from what is now known as the High Rollway. A year later he was appointed constable of what was then the town of Manistique even at the end of the year from a farmer lead a few hours was proscribed to a market and payment for the price of a twin six. It police a lump in his throat as big as a football.

STATE BUDGET IS TO BE INCREASED

POLICING STATE COST $500,000
WHILE FIRE WARDEN DE-
PARTMENT IS $75,000

Policing Michigan during the two fiscal years ending June 30, 1923, will require approximately 400 men, whose salaries will cost the state nearly $500,000 annually according to estimates of expenditures filed with State Budget Commissioner Charles R. Foster.

These figures do not include the 100 or more game wardens patrolling Michigan forests, but are confined to the departments of food and drug, oil inspector, state police labor commissioner and fire warden. Nor do they include the traveling expenses, hotel bills, maintenance of automobiles and other equipment, which amount in itself, would more than double the estimate for personal service.

State officials here are discussing with favor the plan being successfully tried in Illinois by which departments of related activities have been consolidated and much duplication eliminated. The total cost to operate the state during the last two years was $25,000,000, an annual average of $12,500,000.

Not a single estimate received by the budget commissioner gives indication that Michigan's expenses during the next two years will be reduced. Increases sought range anywhere from $20,000 to $200,000. Opinion has become general that it will cost more than $20,000,000 annually to run the state.

In the estimate furnished by the food and drug department, provision is made for 71 inspectors, whose salaries are fixed at $14,500 from $1,000 to $1,000 a year for inspectors. Twenty five are listed at $1,500 exclusive of expenses.

The game warden's department will have 50 fire wardens in addition to the regular fire warden's department. These salaries are paid by the day at the rate of $3.50 and $4. A fund of $75,000 annually will be necessary. It is said in the estimate.

The state labor commissioner asks for 24 inspectors, at salaries ranging from $1,400 to $1,800. Fifteen inspectors in this department are listed at the lowest rate.

Twenty-six men will be necessary to enforce the laws of this department, the state oil inspector estimates, of which 20 men will receive a monthly compensation of $95 exclusive of expenses while the remaining six will be paid $100.

At present there are on the Michigan state police payroll 101 troops at an annual salaries of $900, exclusive of their living expenses paid by the department in the estimate for this fiscal year ending in 1922. Major Robert E. Mack, commander, makes provision for 200 troopers at $1,650 a year.

U. S. AID SHOULD HAVE VILNA RETURNED

Washington, Oct. 16—The charge that the seizure of Vilna is a dispute of Lithuanian territory took place with the connivance of President Pilsudski of Poland, was made in a memorandum today to the state department by the unrecognized Lithuanian representative in the United States, of Vilnius.

"In the name of the Lithuanian government," the memorandum included, "and of the Lithuanian people, we demand that the acts of Poland be put in jail."

No part of the work of the State Police has shown more effective in the work of making the highway safe and in assisting in catching auto thieves. It may happen in some cases that State Police officers find it necessary to also question several drivers in order to catch one guilty person, but good citizens realize that this is unavoidable if the law is to be enforced.

FIRE FRIDAY NIGHT DOES $300 DAMAGE

A fire that probably originated from an overheated chimney set fire to the adjoining walls at the Buckeye boarding house Friday night about 7 o'clock, and before the firemen had got it under control had done about $300 damage, of which $100 was on the contents. The blaze was extinguished with chemicals or the damage might have been much larger.

HUNTERS WHO USE AUTOS ARE WARNED

AUTOS USED IN HUNTING MAY BE CONFISCATED, WARNS GAME
WARDENS DEPARTMENT

To discourage the use of automobiles for partridge hunting, which is a violation of the state game law, game warden Hays sounded a warning that owners of cars are liable to have their machines confiscated if they are caught using them for any purpose not contemplated by the law. The state law on the subject says, in part:

"Automobiles may be used to transfer hunters to and from hunting grounds, but must not be used in any manner that can be construed to be an act of hunting."

The law does not deny the hunter the privilege of driving his car into the woods, leaving it on the side of the road and going into the brush to hunt. However, if the auto is used for the purpose of running close up to a partridge in the road and then steps out of his car to shoot the bird, such action is construed as using the car for the pursuit of game and is unlawful.

Since the opening of the partridge season many complaints have reached warden's to the effect that automobile owners are not living up to the law. It is a well known fact that hunting partridge with an automobile is a simple procedure because birds will not move from the road until an automobile gets within a few feet of them.

Wardens are not to be surprised if they find their cars loaded with game and ready to be sugar beets would be open to suit sixty to seventy cars and with the state game department a campaign especially watched for one year in the automobile hunting since River.

FATAL HUNTING ACCIDENT NEAR MANISTIQUE

LAKESIDE RESIDENT INSTANTLY
KILLED WHEN GUN GOES
OFF ACCIDENTALLY

The first serious hunting accident of the season, in this section, occurred Sunday morning when Emil Larson, Lakeside was shot and instantly killed by the accidental discharge of the gun with which he was hunting.

Larson in company with his brother Rudolph, John Danielson and Mrs. Anna Anderson, motored from town Sunday morning, intending to spend the day hunting and resting in the woods. At Farley's clearing about five miles below Barque Point, the party separated with the understanding that they would rejoin the auto at 10 o'clock in the afternoon. At the appointed time Emil failed to show up and a search was made and shots fired to attract his attention. Finding it locate him the party returned to town and on Monday morning notified Sheriff who immediately organized a searching party and repaired to the spot where Larson had last been seen. Arranging the searchers at intervals the sheriff conducted them from this point to the beach intending to comb every inch of the ground until some trace of Larson was discovered. As the party reached the beach they were attracted by a shout from John Soderback on the extreme left of the line.

Hurrying to the spot they discovered the body of Larson and near it the shotgun with the left barrel discharged. In reconstructing the scene Sheriff is of the opinion that when Larson reached the beach that he placed the gun on a log and stood with his left arm resting on the muzzle. The butt of the gun slipped off the log striking the hammer and discharging the piece. The shot tore through the forearm and literally blew the top of the unfortunate man's head into fragments.

A body was found at 2:30 p. m. and it is thought that the accident occurred shortly before noon, Sunday of this week.

NEWS OF THE MOVIES

From the sordid slums of New York's Chinatown to the grandeur of the high mountains and the majesty of the ocean—that is the range of the setting in "The Miracle Man" a big new Paramount-Artcraft picture...

The central figure is a white-haired patriarch, who lives in the hills near the sea and who has reputed power to heal the sick and crippled. Tom Burke had his hand in their haunt in the New York underworld road of his miracles and conceive the idea of capitalizing them for their own gain.

Gradually under the beneficent influence of their new environment there is worked a transformation in the hearts of the crowd that makes Rose, the gangster's beautiful decoy, the charming girl she is at heart, that evolves a farm hand out of a dope fiend, and finally, brings out the better nature of even the hardened, sophisticated Tom Burke himself.

THE $16 HOG

THE $16 hog is a successful attempt to discourage people from eating meat three times a day. The American people, as a class, have paid very little attention to the hog in recent years.

Some of the scientists go so far as to attribute dreams of swimming to an atavistic reminiscence of the days "when you were a tadpole and I was a fish." It is a generally accepted theory that all life on this planet began in the primal sea from which the continent afterward emerged.

The mystics account a dream of swimming to be a most favorable omen, especially if the water of the sea of dreams is clear and you seem to swim easily. To dream of swimming yourself or even seeing some one else swimming, prognosticates a reconciliation with a friend with whom you are now at odds.

The $16 hog has been a priceless blessing to the farmer, however, as it has enabled him to take nine full-grown pigs and four runtlets to market and return with enough money to check a safety deposit box.

BIG GAMBLERS NIPPED IN RAID

STATE POLICE CLOSE MACKINAC ISLAND MONTE CARLO AND ARREST OPERATORS.

FASHIONABLE PATRONS FLEE

While the State Police have been busy in closing up and prosecuting professional gamblers in all parts of the state, the most notable raid made this year was that on the Casino operated in connection with the Grand Hotel at Mackinac Island.

Last year the State Police raided the Grand Hotel and took away a number of roulette wheels and other gambling devices but the temptation to get the easy money of the island visitors was so great that the gamblers opened up again this year.

When Major March of the State Police learned that gambling had been resumed again at Mackinac Island, he sent Corporal Harold Muller to investigate the report.

The party which closed the gambling place consisted of Captain A. A. Downing, Corporal Black and Troopers Liljegren and Kutter, in addition to Corporal Muller. They entered the ballroom of the hotel in the morning and followed the dancers from the ballroom to the Casino.

Ballard was also charged with serving liquor. He will be tried in Federal court at Sault Ste. Marie for that offense. The gamblers were fined $100 apiece by a justice of the peace.

DOG LAW ENFORCEMENT FAVORS SHEP RAIERS

STATE POLICE GIVE VALUABLE AID TO IMPORTANT AGRICULTURAL INDUSTRY.

Enforcement of the state dog law by the State Police, which is being rigorously carried out, is expected to have an important effect with regard to the sheep-raising industry of the state.

One of the reasons for the success of the sheep-raising industry in Michigan are more suitable for sheep-raising than for any other purpose and all through the state climatic conditions are favorable for sheep.

MANY AUTO THIEVES ARE PUT IN JAIL

No part of the work of the State Police has shown more effective improvement than the highway patrol and this has been especially the case with regard to catching automobile thieves and recovering stolen cars.

Anthony J. Halloran was arrested in Jackson, Sept. 15, and the car was returned to Mrs. A. Curtenius of Kalamazoo, the troopers having covered the loss of it on Sept. 8 and was surprised to learn the next day that the State Police had recovered it the same night it was stolen.

ESCANABA

Local Woman Chosen To Head Badger Library

Word was received in Escanaba Friday morning from Marinette to the effect that Miss Gladys Andrews, daughter of Mrs. C. R. Andrews of his city had been elected president of the Wisconsin Library Association at its annual meeting held last week.

Miss Andrews has been engaged as chief librarian at the Stephenson Public Library for several years during which time she has revived the system of education there and made the institution one of the leading reading homes in the state of Wisconsin.

At all local functions Miss Andrews has taken a prominent part working toward higher ends each year. Through her efforts the Escanaba Institute in the city of Marinette and later the whole county were established.

Miss Andrews worked harder and more efficiently than any librarian Marinette ever had, a newspaper from that city not long ago stated and her election as president of the Badger Association has been received in that city as well as Escanaba with the greatest pleasure and pride.

Her work will now extend beyond the borders in which she has been working and some of the ideas she has put into practice in the city will be started throughout the state.

Ran-dom Reels

By HOWARD L. RANN

CATALINE

LUCIUS SERGIUS CATALINE was a well-known Roman citizen who invented the modern home-tent village, although lacking the string, tentacle and electric thrill reels of the latter. He was born of a patrician family and brought up in a home which had every luxury except the low-winded gas meter, yet he became one of the crookedest men in the Roman empire and died a brutal and unbecomingly death.

Cataline was a man of great natural talent and might have succeeded in a business way, but instead of opening a general store or a first-class livery barn, he engaged in politics, which has been the ruin of so many men who could not earn $1.50 a day in any other way. One of his opponents was Cicero, the silver-tongued orator, who was running for consul. Cicero was a fine man, who treated himself strictly to one wife, and when they got through counting the votes Cataline could not see for the dip. Enraged by this, Cataline hired two of his election judges to assassinate Cicero in a stealthy and unheroic manner, but Cicero's life was saved by a lady.

friend and he lived long enough to compile all his orations in one book and bury them at the head of the high school. Cataline then gathered up an alleged army and sought to put the Roman eagle on his back. After fighting bravely, however, his troops were defeated and he was roughly handled himself, being found prone on his stomach with several short Roman swords imbedded in his person, death being due to heart failure.

Cataline was married twice, he was disappointed in his first wife, who was a plain, homespun body, and he is accused of having poisoned her in the boudoir and successful fashion of the times. History does not say anything about his second wife, but as he was away from home most of the time after the marriage ceremony it is presumed that retribution overtook him in due juncture.

Last Night's Dreams

-What They Mean

ADAM AND EVE!

AMONG the modern scientific dream investigators one school, led by Freud, regards all dreams as having for their primal source a wish, which wish may be being dormant, as it were, in the "psychic" of the dreamer without his being conscious in his waking hours of the existence of it. Another school of which Havelock Ellis may be taken as a representative regards only a portion of our dreams as "wish dreams," while a third rejects the wish theory altogether.

The Freudian school would explain a dream of Adam and Eve as the coming to life in our dream consciousness of a longing for a return to the state of innocence and bliss of our first parents, for paradise, as an attempt of the dream ego to "come to the married gate and softly slough through where the serpent of Eve lies on the turf as she left it long ago." Ellis would accept this explanation with doubt while others would declare that the dream was only a morose or distorted recollection of something which we had seen, heard or read during the day.

The scientific school rejecting the theories of the scientists, boldly proclaim the prophetic symbolism of the dream. To them the dream of Adam and Eve means many good things coming to you, including a birth in the family. Adam seems to play the principal part in this dream. Watch his face. If he has a good-natured look success is yours in love and business. To the farmer it means abundant crops and high prices. It would appear as if most farmers had had this dream of late. If you have a lawsuit on hand you will win. If Adam looks displeased be very cautious in your affairs, for others are seeking to do you mischief, though by being careful you will get the better of them. Don't take a sea voyage for a month or two.

Singularly enough, perhaps from an association of the birthplace of the human race with our own, this dream is an omen that success is coming to you in your native town and you should not leave it for other scenes of activity. If you are away from your native town return there; for there lies your fortune. It is a good dream anyway whether a dream-fulfilling longing for paradise or an omen of home and prosperity.

The Woods

TO A CAGED BIRD.

Voice of the forest, tongue by which it speaks. The thrilling gladness of its verbal time. No more, no more, your rising phinon week. The heights sublime.

Voice of the forest, once your gay wing, beat Against the mountain clad with stars; Now do men bid you sing a song as sweet. To prison bars.

Only a singer that they, passing heard And they desire, like look and pipe and lool— Knowing no caring when they cage a bird. They cage a soul.

STATE POLICE UNCOVER FLINT ELECTION FRAUD

ILLEGAL REGISTRATIONS SHOWN AND OFFICIALS WARNED TO STOP VOTE FRAUDS.

Before the holding of the primary election in the city of Flint, the state police, under command of Lieutenant C. J. Steward, since promoted to captain, uncovered glaring frauds in the registration lists. They found that a large number of persons who were not eligible to vote were enrolled as voters. Most of these registrations had been made by affidavit and the persons involved declared that they had been deceived by notorious public.

The lists were placed before prosecuting attorney Roy Howard, who communicated them to Judge Edward D. Black. An inquiry was at once begun by Judge Black to fasten the responsibility for the frauds. Witnesses were brought in by state police officers and questioned by the judge and prosecuting attorney.

All those who had been illegally registered were warned not to attempt to vote and lists were given to challengers in the various booths so that arrests might be made if these persons appeared. In some cases names were found on the election lists of persons whose alleged residences were found to be vacant lots. State police were also sent to Mt. Clemens on request of prosecuting attorney Lyon Johnson in order to prevent election trouble.

AUGUST BUSY MONTH FOR STATE TROOPERS

During the month of August members of the state police made three hundred and eighty arrests, gave aid and assistance after the automobile accidents of a more or less serious nature, and recovered forty stolen cars from a comparative standpoint this is an excellent record. An interesting point which is worthy of mention is the large number of different cases upon which the state police have been called. Never before in the history of the organization have the services of the troopers been kept unusually busy in every section of the state. If the following month prove as highly satisfactory as the first month in the fiscal year, a new record will be established by the state police for 1929.

Bill Bled, illicit stills and rum-running all came in for their share of attention during August. Eight stills were successfully raided and more than two thousand gallons of liquor have been brought to the attention of the troopers in the past. In some cases the concoctions were boiled up in oil cans and the mash was allowed to steam in dirty tin vessels. Fully seventy-five per cent of the liquor confiscated during the past month was of a poisonous nature, containing many oxides.

THREE ORCHARD ROBBERS PAY FINES IN MUSKOGON

Vincent Keller, Milton Bean and Clarence Pickett, Muskogon trio, paid fines of twenty dollars and costs each when arraigned before Justice O. G. Clement at Muskogon Heights, when they pleaded guilty to stealing fruit from the orchard of William E. Norton, Norton township, Muskogon county farm. The men were arrested by state troopers O. G. Marsden and Harry Olson of the Grand Rapids detachment. Three young women, who accompanied the men, were released. The arrests of the three men came in response to complaints of farmers throughout western Michigan to Captain R. G. Strope of the state constabulary stating that motorists were stripping their orchards. Captain Strope has assigned men to patrol duty in Kent, Muskegon, Ottawa, Oshtemo, Barry, Van Wert, Berrien, St. Joseph and Cass counties in an attempt to put an end to the "help yourself" motorists who have caused Michigan farmers heavy losses during recent years.

FRUIT THIEVES CAUGHT BY THE STATE TROOPERS

Seven fruit thieves were caught by Sergeant A. McGuire near Pontiac during a period of three weeks. State police troopers have been patrolling the fruit belt daily, with the result that there have been remarkably few thefts this year. The number of reports from farmers in the fruit districts asking for protection have been so numerous this summer that it was impossible to send troopers into every rural community where the fruit help was needed. However, a special help was worked out whereby the fruit belt was patrolled effectively, even though there were not few men available for this service.

The city was shocked Tuesday by the news of the untimely death of Mrs. William McDonald residing at 523 Superior avenue. Mrs. McDonald had been busy cleaning and fixing up her home which she had just purchased and had a few moments ago to her neighbors, Officer and Mrs. Charles Brunet.

The body was taken to the Alle parlor in Escanaba where it was prepared for burial after which it was returned to the home of her parents who will hold the funeral which will be held tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock.

The date was agreed upon and final arrangements completed as a result of a conference yesterday between Superintendent L. C. Wolfe and Director H. H. Hughes who accompanied her by Commissioner C. T. Wolfe and is the beginning of a series of meetings which will take place every two weeks.

There will be free moving pictures along both educational and amusement lines and the main object of the whole plan is to make a community center of the schools of the county.

The whole family is invited to the only condition being that the children are to be accompanied by their parents. The meetings are not children gatherings exclusively in any sense as Mr. Hughes is anxious to meet the fathers and mothers as well as the children.

Special stress is laid on the meeting because of the fact that there is such a class co-operative spirit between the school and the new association. Both organizations are working jointly for the success of the movement which is expected to bring happiness to the families throughout the district.

Other meetings of this nature have been held in other points in the county, the organization has established headquarters at Escanaba and other meetings are to be held at other points throughout the county.

August Anderson, resident of the Alton district had the misfortune to lose a valuable team of farm horses to one day last week when they strayed away from home and fell into a poorly covered well recently dug by the roadside by the county road commission.

Crystal Falls—The city of Crystal Falls is under arrest for violating the game laws. A warrant was sworn out before Judge Davison by State Game Warden Bostwick of Traverse City, charging the city with a violation of the game laws in neglecting or refusing to place a fish chute in the river below the power dam. City Attorney Dwyer appeared for the city and persuaded Judge Davison that an adjournment of the case should be had until some arrangements could be made as to what disposition to make of the complaint. His honor, remembering the source from which he secured his justice toga, thought it wouldn't be out of the way to adjourn the case long enough to find out which city official will have to go to jail if a conviction is secured, so he set the date of hearing for two weeks from the date, Oct. 19. The question of a fish chute at the power dam, an old one it has bobbed up periodically since the dam was built and each time it has died out so that the action of the fish and game department came as a real surprise. It is very probable that the matter will be adjusted by the city installing the requisite passage way and the state withdrawing its complaint, at least that is the temper of the city authorities. In the meantime the matter of who is to bear the cost of the fish chute is a much mooted one. The selection seems to lie between Mayor Bridges and Manager Saunders but each passes the buck. The only compromise suggested is that City Attorney Dwyer be made the goat but Wilson objects on the ground that Dwyer is too big an ester.

Yellow Men Sleep

In some subtle, potent manner, the Gods were too much for white men. They could not remain the same. March was slipping down hill. Levinton was not his former self, every one could see it. He had grown tense of nerve, keyed up strangely high, with a whole new set of passions in his breast. He was expanded, set free, despite the piteous caverns.

He arose now and moved away from his comrades, eluded through the shifting crowds, a Goliath by contrast. They made way for him. The Arab called something he did not catch. He had a desire for a breath of upper air, and was going toward the base of the shaft.

It was dark at the top, still night, the blot of a sentinel there. One went up by the aid of the long vine, which had been worn smooth by the pulling of many hands day after day. The hunched one who watched at the top made way for him, but did not offer a hand. The stars were fading by the nearness of new day. Leaving behind him all the smothered life below—the warped, sapped, wadded hands, with the mentalities of sad children—Levinton left the mouth of the shaft and strode up the rise. He drank the cool air of the open.

To the east a low band of dusty yellow, above and around the pale smooth smoke of the morning. Only the larger stars remained aloft, white and friendly points, familiar, seeming closer than America. Westward the city. Its palace like something built in a mighty yesterday by giants, and left behind for men—dark now, but plainly outlined. From the crest Levinton viewed the shadowy secrets of the Sha Mo, and presently his eyes stopped on a point in the road, at the head of the ravine. He stared through the twilight and saw a footman horseman there.

"They Are Coming for You at Sunrise," she said. "They Will Kill You."

"He must know. Taking his former path, down the further side of the ridge and around to the cut, he hastened in the loneliness of that gray dawn. Creeping near he could not mistake the shadowy figure of the distinctive fling of the cloak, the pony. He stood up and ran toward Helen.

"What is it?" he asked. "They are coming for you at sunrise," she said. "They will kill you." "We are ready to receive them," he said. "The miners are not at work, and are not sleeping. They are waiting armed. The plan is to fall upon the soldiers if they come into the mines."

"You have caused this?" "Yes," he answered. "For what reason?" "Freedom, for your father and myself; for the four workers who were taken yesterday; for the whole underground city of miners; and for you."

"For me? I do not ask it." "You want to be queen?" "Yes." And she implied that nothing could be so natural. She was surprised at the question.

"You can be a queen in America," he said, with his soul ringing. "And who will remain here for your rule, when we have done with your army?" She did not know whether to smile, or be severely displeased. He dared not be serious, lest his heart break. In the gray of the morning she was as lovely as a great moth in an enchanted garden.

"You would not be interested in rating here," said her lover. "If you really loved me, you would be interested in that gives you this strength. All Asia is only a stage-setting for you. Let me fight today for you, let me lead in your name. Is it so simple to be queen of a solitary city where strangers never come?"

"Never?" she repeated. "After a pause, he asked: 'What brought you out so early this morning?'"

"Yesterday you were displeased because I rode in the full sunlight," she parried him. "He saw at once that he could not expect to be given any true reason for her absence here now, unless—"

"I am thankful I did not miss you," he said. "The dawn colors are full of wonder," she replied, evading again. "That is true."

"Are you afraid to die?" she asked point-blank. "Yes, I'm not going to. I want to live. Yesterday I told you why, but you were asleep."

"I could not respond," said the princess, glancing away at the dark horizon. "But I heard distinctly your words." Levinton's cheeks burned suddenly at the revelation. She continued to look away from him.

"I meant my words, all of them," he said steadily. "Still she did not turn back to him, and he asked, 'Why do you allow them to give you the drug?'"

"I will not go away without you," said Levinton. "It places you more securely in the hands of Chee Ming and he is no man's friend."

"He has been my father, always," she said. "This step of yellow men is not like the step of white men."

"Would you give me unhappiness again?" "Again he felt the tremendous doubt, that she might be laughing at him from behind her earnest, lovely eyes. She looked full in his face for her answer."

"I will not go away without you," said Levinton. "You may not go at all," said Helen. "That is why I came here. It was troublesome to arrange. But I wanted—to tell you."

"If my soldiers kill you, it is not because I had you on." "Thanks," murmured Levinton. "I could have died for less."

"Come with my father, the way you came yesterday, and I will do what I can." "You humble me with so much honor," said the one who stood below her. "But I expect to be very busy with the miners."

The copper light touched her face. The pony blinked at the east, and far away from the purple mantle slip from the city, a line of faint gold upon the loftiest tiles of the palace. Swoosh across the empty world came the voice of the hurrying from the city. The last stars were melting into a pallid sky that was shot across with crimson, violet, and russet gold. Levinton's heart was full, but all he longed to say he had told her yesterday.

That intimacy was renewed by the thought that she had heard and remembered everything he had said. He hesitated. Something came to him of her struggle—a fantastic kingdom almost within her grasp, a throne from which every which was law, a city of world power and much gold, her own for the taking; and only one young white man, almost a stranger, to draw her away from it all. She had been born to love, yet all her training was toward power and conquest. And there was koreah.

"Helen!" he said softly. "Speak!"

He could not. The wave on which he had ridden had passed. The old silence was upon him, the wordless intensity in the presence of beauty, timidly before the woman who could set him free if she would.

A quick sparkle crossed the dead world of the east. Twilight fled away, and the world whitened. Still the princess did not move. She was silent. Then from the distant gate a horseman stood forth. Levinton waited.

"Go," she said. "There is only one coming." "It is the prince, Yekutoi." "I will be led by your soldiers."

"He will never lead anything." Helen's voice had become suddenly filled with weariness. Levinton roared again the joy of making her unhappy. "I shall ride away," she threatened.

"Please wait. Let him come." "I won't hurt him," said Con. "You have no weapon," said the princess.

"He may have enough for both of us." "I see no others upon the road. They are very sure. They do not haste. It is early."

Yekutoi came on, doubtless having learned of the absence from the city of his bride-elect. Levinton waited beside the horse, hidden from the prince. A world of meaning came to him from the fact that Helen remained. She was not unwilling to deny her prince. Levinton himself was acting more upon intuition than by any reason or plan.

"What would you?" she inquired. "I will be with him," he repeated. "I don't know."

In her calm way, she was looking straight at Levinton, and he had no thought of retreating to return her gaze. His eyes were robbers, now boldly taking the slender curves that lay beneath the gray cloak. Another wave was coming, that would carry him— The prince was on horse along the head of the ravine, was a more pale shot of yellow with the sun dazzling his eyes. He was long-limbed, languid, his slinky eyes peering from beneath white, sun-saturated, ringed, with pearls. The pension hung limp from his lips. He was dressed in white. His horse-leathered arms were lax, evidently weary with holding out the lance. He made no bow of greeting to his intended lady, giving her but a word of Oriental speech. Helen scarcely noticed him, but continued to study the sunrise. Levinton arose from concealment and took the jeweled bride.

The fright of Prince Yekutoi was pointed. He poured a rapid series of syllables upon the white man, who grinned at him and took down the lance. Then the waxen face, shining in the new sun, was obscured by a pair of upraised hands. Yekutoi dared not face what had befallen him. He looked behind the flowered sleeve. Levinton relaxed him from the saddle, a lifted form. The prince had faintly.

Conceded the didated mound down the ravine to the valley floor beyond and started the animal away to the south. Helen and Yekutoi's horse ran, with one sparkling bit of color in one straggling, dangle. Still Helen had not changed her position. The prince lay upon the sand.

Levinton said to her: "This is the story to tell them, when you scold back. Your father and I secured horses from a large party of white men who came in from the south. You saw them, a great number, all mounted. The wind is coming up, so it can cover the tracks they made. But they seized Yekutoi and bore him away. Each moment the prince is being carried farther and farther away, to the south."

"You wish me to speak falsely?" "Yes," replied Levinton. "It is no desiring of my own." "It is for your choice," he said simply.

Quietly Helen said, glancing down at the fallen one, "I will go and tell them."

CHAPTER XV

The Tawny Rose Droops. She touched silver spurs to her mount, and collapsed to the city, bearing the false alarm. Levinton regarded his perfumed prisoner. Yekutoi had revived, but was playing dead, no doubt feeling each instant a happiness of agony of imagination. One person, an agony of imagination. One picked him up and bore him along the slant of hill toward the deep shaft. Figured silks fluttered about his chin. One of the royal sandals was missing. The other, sparkling brightly, flapped on a long foot.

Levinton was keenly alive to the press of time. He realized that the swift, delicate affairs of the moment, and all brutal consequences, were now in the lap of the gods.

Before Helen had reached the city gate, he had shoved the helpless Yekutoi over the ridge and down to the big hole. The Mongolian's slim hands were consulted with horror, and he shrilled like a mouse when he felt the emptiness below his legs. Con let go, and the shaft swallowed up the prince. He went down after him through the flying dirt.

Terches again in the heavy gloom of the pit-bottoms. His eyes grew accustomed to the depths. From all directions the strange little men came running. The babble of excitement fell into sudden hush when they saw the prisoner more slowly. They pressed backward, murmuring. Levinton felt a great need for March.

He found the Arab and still did not see his comrade. "Where is my friend?" "The executioner made inquiry round about. Then one timid hunchback with knotted queue came forward. He nudged Levinton's sleeve and showed willingness to lead on."

Out of the confusion, high upon one of the ledges in the adjoining rock room, sat Andrew March. They had flushioned him upon a pallet of grass, and his sleep was deep. Con had difficulty in getting him to open his eyes. There was a lightning bolt of suspicion and he held a torch down close to March's face. The story was plain. His eyes were grayed over with horror. It was a black moment, a cold rising wave of failure.

"We have the prince down here," Helen said, Helen is sending the warriors on a posse-chase. We must move upon the city while they are away."

March's mouth twitched, and with a great effort he mumbled, "Do not wait."

"But I need you. They trust you because you speak their language. Try to rouse yourself."

"Don't wait." "You may not have time to come back. Helen is sending the warriors on a posse-chase. We must move upon the city while they are away."

March's mouth twitched, and with a great effort he mumbled, "Do not wait."

"But I need you. They trust you because you speak their language. Try to rouse yourself."

"Don't wait." "You may not have time to come back. Helen is sending the warriors on a posse-chase. We must move upon the city while they are away."

position near the base of the shaft. Here Yekutoi still lay upon his back, and James should both of Bark River. The packages had been sent out from Iron River and Iron Mountain respectively and the C. O. D. charges were $25.00 on one and $25.00 on the other. Each contained some diamond jewelry and were sent out by jewelers from the two points named. Now the packages were just too large to be put in the safe and it was evidently figured that the agent would put the packages away somewhere in the office the best he could and say nothing about it. The fellows who bought the jewelry or their confederates would then arrive and search the office and get the goods. But.

The well laid schemes of mine and men (sang off softly) and agent Huss subconsciously or otherwise just guessed the conspirators and had the packages safe and as a consequence the express company is $100.00 in the past. The shoes were evidently carried off by the burglars to compensate them for their advances to the jewelers before shipment was made.

Mr. Huss at once notified the superintendent of the express company at Duluth, the railway superintendent at Escanaba, the express route agent. The county sheriff was also here Tuesday looking over the ground. The company officials say that the scheme is an old one and is but one of the many used to loot the company in the past.

Mr. Land and children are visiting friends at Iron Mountain this week. Mrs. Johnson and baby left yesterday for their home at Iron Mountain after an extended visit with Mrs. Johnson's parents in the Fred Holmes.

Dr. Benson was called to Manistung professionally Saturday. He returned Monday morning.

Erick Falk was notified yesterday that the serious illness of his sister Mrs. Stevens at Escanaba. He left at once for Chicago.

Arvid Wedell was in the village yesterday. He still lives in Escanaba.

An increase in express shipments went into effect. The increase applies only to interstate shipments. The new rate to Milwaukee on butter is $1.36 instead of $1.16 under the old schedule. To Chicago $1.57 instead of $1.76.

MILL COUNCIL PLAN ADOPTED

NORTHWESTERN COOPERAGE COMPANY INAUGURATES A NEW SYSTEM

Through an arrangement recently made operative, the Northwestern Co. Paper Company has inaugurated what is known as the Mill Council plan of relationship between employer and employees.

The purpose of the plan is explained as follows:

The employees and the management of the Northwestern Co. Paper Company propose under this plan to establish their relations upon a definite and durable basis of mutual understanding and confidence. To this end, the employees and management shall have equal representation in the consideration of all questions of policies relating to working conditions, health, housing, safety, hours of labor, wages, recreation, education and other similar matters of mutual interest.

Mill Councils

This plan shall be carried into effect by means of committees or councils, as follows:

A council of eight (8) from the Veneer Mill, four (4) from the Flooring Plant, four (4) from the Saw Mill, two (2) from the Yards, Boom and Planning Mill, two (2) from the Coopers Mill.

"One-half of the representatives in each department or mills shall be elected by the employees of such departments and one-half shall be appointed by the management.

"The employee representatives shall be elected by secret ballot as herein provided. The management representatives shall be appointed by the management and shall not exceed the number of employee representatives. Both at all times shall have an equal voice and voting power in considering matters coming before the council. Through these councils, any employee or group of employees, or the management, may at any time present suggestions, requests or complaints with the certainty of a full and fair hearing. Matters which cannot be disposed of may, by mutual consent, be submitted to arbitration at the winter provided.

"The purpose of this plan is to establish under this plan a basis of mutual understanding and confidence between the employees and the management in all matters of mutual interest, and to provide for the settlement of all disputes arising out of the employment of any labor or other organization."

"There are the essential features of the plan under which the management and employees will conduct negotiations in the future. Officers and representatives of the mill and the new organization have been elected and the plan is in operation, although there are a few details to be discussed later.

NOTICE OF SPECIAL ELECTION

Notice is hereby given that a special election, to be held in the City of Gladstone, Michigan, on Tuesday, November 2, 1920, for the office of Assessor, will be held at the City Hall, Gladstone, Michigan, at 10 o'clock a. m.

Assistant City Assessor David Kingstadt at the wheel. We made the return in an exciting though scarcely a hazardous trip. This is the story of our arrival and departure but a great deal could yet be said about the entertainment on the island and the behavior of the many friends we made there and the pleasures which were marred only by the thought of pressing matters at home during our few days' isolation in a miniature wilderness just far enough away from the beaten path that a world full of business worries and political intrigues could be forgotten in a riot of imagination.

EDWARD LACOMB DIES THURSDAY EVENING

Edward Lacombe, one of the older residents of this city, passed away yesterday afternoon at the home of James Knigh on Minnesota avenue following an illness of several years due to the infirmities of advanced age. Mr. Lacombe was in his 84th year. He was born in Canada and still has a number of relatives there. His family lives in this city are Luther Lacombe, a nephew, and his mother, Mrs. Annie Lacombe. Two nephews, Ed and Albert Lacombe live in Detroit.

Funeral arrangements were not announced yesterday.

BOOSTER CROWD BACK TEAM

SOO LINE RUNNING SPECIAL COACHES TO MANISTIQUE NEXT SATURDAY

WANTED—Three Hundred Men, women, girls and boys, to have one of their lives. Boosters of the high school football team which plays Manistique at Manistique next Saturday, are planning a head hunting party. They are going to Manistique for the purpose of bringing back the dripped scalp of the Manistique team and its going to take a lot of pep and ginger and strong lungs to help the local lads put it over.

Arrangements have been made for running special coaches on the Soo line train leaving here at 7:30 Saturday morning and returning the train will leave Manistique at 4:55 in the afternoon arriving at 6:30. A round trip fare of $2.36 has been made for this occasion and boosters confidently look for 300 or more loyal Gladstone fans to accompany the team. The affair will partake something of the nature of a picnic, as excursionists are urged to pack their lunch baskets, and a big dinner will be eaten on the grounds at noon. Plans have been made to serve hot coffee on the train.

Friendly Rivalry

It is the desire of those behind the movement to show Manistique that the Gladstone boosters have the solid support of her football-loving citizens and that the boosters appreciate the fact that a good team can be employed while opposing teams are contending for the trophy.

The locals have shown splendid form this year and it is confidently predicted for this game, while being a test of the local team's mettle, will demonstrate that Gladstone has a team of which she may well feel proud.

Catch the spirit! Join the crowd at the depot Saturday morning and give yourself a swell holiday. Cook up all of your own cooking, baking, washing and other household duties. Everything is spick and span. We carried with him at intervals for four days and nights, missed but a few meals when we accepted the hospitality of the cabins and never, of course, paid a cent. We were guests. We slept, when we did sleep, in the best of beds and ate of the best of foods while we have run this race and rap at St. Peter's outer entrance, the first question we are going to ask is, "Is Ben Pizala here?" And if for any reason he is not here we are sure to hunt him up and where ever we find him, there we will camp throughout eternity and any place that is good enough for Ben Pizala is good enough for us.

We spoke of one of the chief inducements of the island and will pass lightly over the other. We have nothing to be particularly proud of except our optimism which would not do you. They use the Joker as an ace there as Mr. Peterson (dad) will attest. The roof is used principally for keeping the weather out and beyond that can be used to throw them. They are a fine bunch of boys Mr. Moore has about him. They would beat their last million but the heat and the water and when they lost they would give a stranger their last cigarette as we can attest and roll their own with a handful of "Nigger Hair" and a paper sack and call it good. Most of them have the A. E. F. dialect honestly acquired and any man who won't take off his hat to that is a sink or the first water. Here is to you boys. May you continue betting on pairs, and winning until you can cover your head with the skin of a porcupine.

Well, as stated before, we got off the island on Friday noon about two days late for our best interest. Being stowed aboard on an island when one's affairs demand their attention, is not a pleasant proposition at best. If one is going to meet with such an incident and know of it in advance, one would be best to get in touch with A. C. Moore or St. Martin's Island. A. C. Moore is to set the stage for the big show. Not a single detail will be omitted and every detail will be arranged.

CHANGE IN OWNERSHIP

With this issue of The Reporter, a change of management takes place. W. R. Jaeger, who has guided the destinies of this publication with success for a number of years, retires from the business, which has been taken over by H. F. Uish and Frank Kraus, both of Escanaba. Mr. Uish has been manager of the Gladstone department of the Morning Press since the establishment of that department last April and previous to that with Escanaba newspapers for about two years. Mr. Kraus has been a resident of Ontonagon since 1899. He has been superintendent of the mechanical department of the Morning Press in Escanaba for a number of years and was for two years superintendent of the Quiff Printing plant in Marquette.

This issue of the Reporter is gotten out by Mr. Jaeger, who has courteously consented to assist Messrs. Uish and Kraus until they can take full possession next Monday.

The public is asked to suspend judgment until the new men have an opportunity to familiarize themselves with the prevailing office conditions. An outline of the aims, purposes and policies of the new firm will appear next week. Briefly stated, they are to attempt to accurately reflect the true Gladstone spirit in a cheerful, helpful, optimistic manner and to "shoot square" with everyone in this community.

This announcement would be incomplete without an expression of the deep appreciation and profound gratitude the new management feels toward the Gladstone business men who have made this change possible.

It will be the constant endeavor of the new firm to measure up to the Gladstone standard of fairness, good fellowship and square dealing and to produce a better, more helpful, more readable newspaper each issue. Gladstone and the advancement of Gladstone interest will be the paramount consideration in the future conduct of the publication.

It is our desire to progress by merit alone.
