"I LOST MY MIND"

Because the taking of one's own life is a spectacular act it demands publicity. Thus we often read in such cases—'had been very despondent because of ill-health' as the explanation of an act so horrible and unnatural.

More frequently still does the same cause lead to the living death of insanity, though we hear of it less often. If at all. Dis-ease if left to work its way unchecked, can lead but to destruction.

It is not sufficient merely to alleviate pain or to suppress a symptom. The cause must be removed. The most frequent cause of disease is spinal interference with nerve transmission and this cause is reached only by Chiropractic Spinal Adjustments.

The Misses Marion and Elizabeth Miller returned home Tuesday after a week with the Delta County Girl Scout at Camp Garth. In all, there were 50 Scouts, a considerably smaller number than last year.

There were no plans presented for the heating system the company could take care of it or the School Board could let the heating out on bids. The outward appearance of the building is very simple. In fact it resembles a large garage, roller rink or hypodrome and really would not in any way beautify the school surroundings.

Mr. Arntzen presented a plan and specifications for a building, of which the plate on display here for some time was a model, the building to be 50 by 90 feet. The entrance is on the side with a ladies retiring room on the right and a community room on the left of the entrance.

The best doctor in town treated me but could give no relief. I was sent to a sanitarium for a month but still received no relief. My wife brought me back home, to die—I expected—but it happened that a chiropractor had located here, and it was insisted that I try him. I would not consent, having no faith, but my wife took me against my will. When I had finished taking 30 adjustments, I was much improved. # The Secret Adversary

By AGATHA CHRISTIE

(Copyright Dodd, Mead & Company)

SYNOPSIS

PROLOGUE.—Realizing that she has a possible chance of being set free, as a Lutanian is making a strange move, she asks her father to deliver to the American ambassador in London, a letter she has written.

CHAPTER I.—In London, former East Tommy Vandemeyer and Miss Prudence Currier, Tippecanoe's mother, form an organization, "The Young Adventurers Club." Tippecanoe is a business appointment with a man, Edward Whittington, who has been her employer, but on giving her name as "Miss Prudence Currier," she is recognized as the daughter of the man who has been her employer.

CHAPTER II.—In the morning the spy, Edward Whittington, calls on her in her apartment. He tells her that he has been in an advertisement signed "The Young Adventurers Club," and that he has been in contact with her father.

CHAPTER III.—Next day she meets the Herkimer, American millionaire, living at the Ritz hotel. He is looking for his cousin, Jane Finn, who has disappeared after leaving a boat, and she tells him that she has been in contact with her father.

CHAPTER IV.—The Herkimer is a Lutanian survivor. Seeking information from her, she receives recognition Whittington in a call on Mrs. Vandemeyer. Tommy tells him:

"The room, when was unattended, was furnished as a bureau. Like everything else in the house, the furniture was falling to pieces, and the dirt was if anything, more abundant."

But what interested Tommy was the thing he had hoped to find, a communicating door between the two rooms, opening from the left by the window. Carefully closing the door into the passage behind him, he stepped across to the other end and examined it closely. The bolt was short across it. It was very rusty, and had clearly not been used for some time. By gently wriggling it to and fro, Tommy managed to draw it back without making too much noise. Then he repeated his former maneuvers with the handle—this time with complete success. The door swung open—a crack, a mere fraction, but enough for Tommy to hear what went on. There was a velvet portiere on the inside of this door, which prevented him from seeing, but he was able to recognize the voices with a reasonable amount of accuracy.

The Slim Felner was speaking. His rich Irish voice was unmistakable: "That's all very well. But more money is essential. No money—no results!"

Another voice, which Tommy rather thought was that of Boris replied: "Will you guarantee that there are results?"

"In a month from now—sooner or later as you wish—I will guarantee you such a reign of terror in Ireland as shall shake the British empire to its foundations."

There was a pause, and then came the soft, sibilant accents of Number One: "Good! You shall have the money. Boris, you will see to that."

Boris asked a question: "Via the Irish Americans, and Mr. Potter, as usual?"

"I guess that'll be all right!" said a new voice, with a transatlantic intonation, "though I'd like to point out, here and now, that things are getting a little difficult. There's not the sympathy there was, and a growing disposition to let the Irish settle their own affairs without interference from America."

Tommy felt that Boris had brushed his shoulders as he answered: "Does that matter, since the money only nominally comes from the States?"

"The chief difficulty is the landing of the ammunition," said the Slim Felner. "The money is conveyed in easily enough—thanks to our colleague here."

"That is settled, then," said the sibilant tones. "Now, in the matter of the loan to the English newspaper, you have arranged the details satisfactorily, Boris?"

"I think so?"

"That is good. An official denial from Moscow will be forthcoming if necessary."

There was a pause, and then the clear voice of the German broke the silence: "I am directed by—Mr. Brown, to place the summaries of the reports from the different fronts before you. That of the miners is most satisfactory. We must hold back the railways. There may be trouble with the A. S. E."

For a long time there was a silence, broken only by the rustle of papers and an occasional word of explanation from the German. Then Tommy heard the light tap-tap of fingers, drumming on the table.

"And—the date, my friend?" said Number One.

"The 29th."

The Russian seemed to consider. "That is rather soon."

"I know. But it was settled by the principal Labor leaders, and we cannot seem to interfere too much. They must believe it to be entirely their own show."

The Russian laughed softly, as though amused.

"Yes, yes," he said. "That is true. They must have no inkling that we are using them for our own ends. They are honest, and they value their value to us. It is curious—but you cannot make a revolution without honest men. The impact of the populace is inflexible." He paused, and then repeated, as though the phrase pleased him: "Honest men. They are honest men. They are honest men. They are honest men."

There was a sinister note in his voice.

The German resumed: "Clydes must go. He is too far seeing. Number Fourteen will see to that."

There was a hoarse murmur.

"That's all right, go on." And then after a moment or two: "Suppose I'm nabbed."

"You will have the best legal talent defend you," replied the German quietly. "But in any case you will wear gloves fitted with the fingerprints of a notorious housebreaker. You are able to fear."

"Oh, I ain't afraid, Governor. All for the good of the cause. The streets is going to run with blood, as they say. He spoke with a grim relish. "Dreams of it, sometimes, I does. And diamonds and pearls rolling about in the gutter for anyone to pick up!"

Tommy heard a chair shifted. Then Number One spoke: "Then all is arranged. We are assured of success?"

"I—think so." But the German spoke with less than his usual confidence.

Number One's voice held suddenly a dangerous quality: "What has gone wrong?"

"Nothing; but—"

"But what?"

"The Labor leaders. Without them, as you say, we can do nothing. If they do not declare a general strike on the 29th—"

"Why should they not?"

"As you've said, they're honest. And in spite of everything we've done to discredit the government in their eyes, I'm not sure that they haven't got a sneaking faith and belief in it."

"But—"

"I know. They abuse it unceasingly. But, on the whole, public opinion swings to the side of the government. They will not go against it."

Again the Russian's fingers drummed on the table.

"To the point, my friend. I was given to understand that there was a certain document in existence which assured success."

"That is so. If that document were placed before the leaders, the result would be immediate. They would publish it broadcast throughout England, and declare for the revolution without a moment's hesitation. The government would be broken finally and completely."

"Then what were you want?"

"The document itself," said the German bluntly.

"Ah! It is not in your possession? But you know where it is?"

"No."

"Does anyone know where it is?"

"One person—perhaps. And we are not sure of that even."

"Who is that person?"

"A girl."

Tommy held his breath.

"A girl? The Russian's voice rose contemptuously. "And you have not made her speak? In Russia we have ways of making a girl talk."

"This case is different," said the German sullenly.

"How—different?" He paused a moment, then went on: "Where is the girl now?"

"The girl?"

"Yes."

"She is—"

But Tommy heard no more. A crashing blow descended on his head, and all was darkness.

CHAPTER V

Tippecanoe Enters Domestic Service.

When Tommy set forth on the trail of the two men, it took all Tippecanoe's self-command to refrain from accompanying him. However, she contained herself, at best she might, considered by the reflection that her reasoning had been justified by events. The two men had undoubtedly come from the second floor flat, and that one slender thread of the name "Rita" had set the Young Adventurers club move upon the track of the abductors of Jane Finn.

"The question was what to do next! The Russian had set the entrance hall of the mansion. It was now flanked by a small life-boy, who was polishing brass fittings, and whispering the latest news with a good deal of vigor and a reasonable amount of accuracy.

"He glanced round at Tippecanoe's face. There was a certain amount of the panic element in the girl; at all events, she invariably got on well with small boys.

"Yes," Williams, she remarked cheerfully, in the best approved hospital-early-morning style, "getting a good shine up?"

Tippecanoe responded promptly.

"Albert, miss," he corrected.

"Albert he is," said Tippecanoe. She glanced mysteriously round the hall. The effect was purposely a hood one in case Albert should miss it. She leaned toward the boy and dropped her voice: "I want a word with you, Albert."

Albert ceased operations on the fittings and opened his mouth slightly: "Look! Do you know what this is?" With a dramatic gesture she swung back the left side of her coat and exposed a small enamel badge. It was extremely unlikely that Albert would have any knowledge of it—indeed, it would have been fatal for Tippecanoe's plans, since the badge in question was the device of a local corps originated by the archdukes in the early days of the war. Its presence in Tippecanoe's coat was due to the fact that she had used it for pinning in some flowers a day or two before. But Tippecanoe had sharp eyes, and had noted the corner of a three-pronged detective novel protruding from Albert's pocket, and the immediate enlargement of his eyes told her that her tactics were sound, and that the fish would rise to the bait.

"American detective force!" she hissed.

Albert fell for it.

"Lord!" he murmured ecstatically.

Tippecanoe nodded at him with the air of one who has established a thorough understanding.

"Kiss me I'm after," she inquired generally.

Albert, still round-eyed, demanded breathlessly: "One of the stars?"

Tippecanoe nodded and jerked a thumb up the stairs.

"No. 20. Calls herself Vandemeyer. Vandemeyer! Ha! ha!"

Albert's hand stole to his pocket.

"A crook?" he asked eagerly.

"A crook! I should say so. Ready Rita, they call her in the States."

"Ready Rita," repeated Albert dejectedly. "Oh, ain't it just like the pictures! Annie always said as how she was a bad lot."

"Who's Annie?" inquired Tippecanoe idly.

"One parlmaid. She's leaving today. Many's the time Annie's said to me: 'Mark my words, Albert, I wouldn't wonder if the police was to come after her one of these days. Just like that. But she's a stunner to look at, ain't she?'"

"She's some peach," allowed Tippecanoe carelessly. "Find it useful in her layout, you bet. Has she been wearing any of the emeralds, by the way?"

"Emeralds? Them's the green stones, ain't they?"

Tippecanoe nodded.

"That's what we're after her for. You know old man Ryedale, the oil king?"

"It seems sort of familiar to me."

"The sparklers belonged to him. Finest collection of emeralds in the world. Worth a million dollars!"

"Lumme!" came ecstatically from Albert. "It sounds more like the pictures every minute."

Tippecanoe smiled, gratified at the success of her efforts.

"We haven't exactly proved it yet. But we're after her. And—she proved a long-ways-winner. She won't get away with the goods this time."

Albert uttered another ejaculation indicative of delight.

"Mind you, sonny, not a word of this," said Tippecanoe suddenly. "I guess I oughtn't to have put you wise, but to the States we know a real smart lad when we see one. What's this about the girl you say is leaving?"

"Ain't? Regular turn-up, they 'ad."

An idea was dawning in Tippecanoe's brain. She thought a minute or two, then tapped Albert on the shoulder.

"See here, son, my brain's got busy. How would it be if you mentioned that you'd got a young cousin, or a friend of yours had, that might suit her? You got me?"

"I'm there," said Albert instantly. "You leave it to me, miss, and I'll fix the whole thing up in two ticks."

"Some lad!" came from Tippecanoe, with a nod of approval. "You let me know, and if it's O. K. I'll be round tomorrow at eleven o'clock."

"Where am I to let you know to?"

"Rita," replied Tippecanoe laconically. "Name of Cowley."

Albert eyed her enviously.

"It must be a good job, this tea business."

"It sure is," drawled Tippecanoe, "especially when old man Ryedale backs the bill. But don't fret, son. If this goes well, you shall come in on the ground floor."

THE NEWSPAPER are admittedly the greatest power for good in this country today, hardly excepting the churches and schools. The value of the newspaper is discounted considerably however by the glory and glamour that the daily newspapers and the sensational sheets inject in their accounts of the terrible crimes that are now so numerous. Instead of picturing these sordid deeds in the same unhealthy light in which they are committed, the newspapers have a way of speaking of the daring of the criminals in such a manner that heroes instead of criminals are made of them in the eyes of the weak minded who in turn may be inclined to follow the path of "glory." The notoriety is made to appear desirable instead of deplorable.

THIS was one story that broke just last week at Negaunee. A boy of 15, likely with a diseased mentality, shot an aged man for the money he carried. The boy was aided by a younger brother of 11. The circumstances that surrounded the murder were the most repulsive imaginable. And any account of such a story should be made to have just that impression upon the reader. But that wouldn't make good newspaper fiction and so the story is written in a way to call to mind the exploits of the famous Jesse James. Boys read these stories. They talk about them who will say that harm is not done. For the impression made is such that it may easily incite another to attempt a similar crime. It is wrong, we say, and the newspapers power for good will continue to be discounted until all make it a set policy to depict crime without glamour.

HERE is a thought for the law-abiding citizen. The prohibition law is right, what do they think about the present tactics to get the evidence? A citizen is made to break the law in order to get evidence against another also breaking the law. Until the coming of the Volstead law, our courts have quite generally agreed that evidence submitted by a witness breaking the law to get the evidence is not admissible. This is not intended as an argument against prohibition. We simply question the position of a government that must stoop to questionable means of enforcing a law. The United States is big enough, powerful enough, rich enough, to enforce its laws. It is a well known fact that the Volstead law is being made a joke of. This should be stopped. The law should be enforced rigidly in its every provision, a failure to succeed in this should be sufficient evidence that public sentiment is not wholeheartedly in favor of such a course. It would then be time to repeal the law or to amend it in such a way to meet with public requirements and favor.

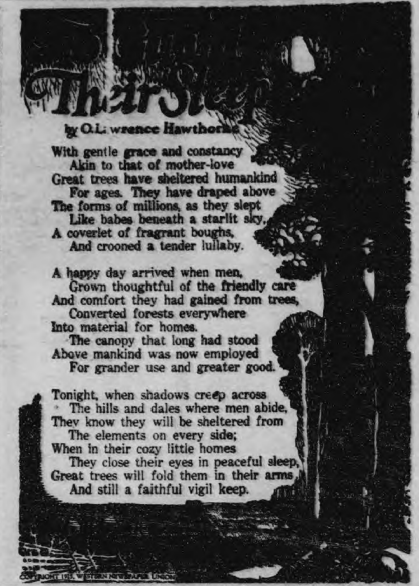

BUSINESS goes where it is invited. The salesman who can tell the public about his goods, can also sell them. If he is an honest salesman and does not misrepresent his wares, he can get repeat orders. The merchant located in a town must be honest. Otherwise he will not get repeat orders and his business will dwindle. It is different with the peddler. Well might he say, "I shall pass this way but once." That is usually as often as he dares come around. Witness, for instance, the fur coat peddlers who worked Gladstone in the week. There were four of them and they travelled in a car with a Louisiana license. They claimed to have fur coats that regularly retailed at all the way from $200 to $400. They asked but $100. Now it should stand to reason that if they were in a position to buy fur coats at such prices that permitted them to retail at so much below the regular value, it would not be necessary to travel from town to town to make sales. The buyers would seek them out. But instead of that they were peddlers seeking buyers. They found four of them in Gladstone. Think of it, perfect strangers, collecting no less than $400 in a few hours. Naturally when it was discovered that the coats were nothing but cheap fur, the peddlers had left town. They were on their way to find easy marks in other places. Fortunately, the Gladstone police apprehended them and compelled them to return and refund the money collected and take their cheap coats back. It is fortunate because it should be a lesson that a good article does not have to be peddled. WHILE on the subject of trade, we wonder how many of our readers are aware of the fact that authentic reports show that it costs one mail order house 33 per cent of its sales to do business. There are few business firms found in the average city of Gladstone's size that cannot do business at considerably below that cost. That is why, even though the large mail order house can buy more cheaply than can the home merchant, it cannot underbid on the reliable and staple merchandise. It does have "leaders" that can be bought at a saving but these are but bait to catch the unwary. And nowadays, every wide-awake small town business offers special inducements for the thrifty buyer. Just watch the advertising columns of any newspaper in any town to find out who the live wires are. Then you won't need to worry about peddlers and mail order houses.

THE auto traffic at the Straits of Mackinac has increased to such an extent that the state has announced its plans for providing a third ferry for next year. The placing of state-owned boats at the straits in 1925 was the wisest move ever attempted to bring into the peninsula closer communication. This is attested by the rapid growth in the traffic. Before the state provided service, tourists and travellers were at the mercy of the single railroad ferry whose trips were few and uncertain. And the cost was excessive. Last season the one state ferry more than doubled the traffic and even though the cost of ferrying a car and all its passengers was reduced to $2.50, the profits were such that the state road department felt justified in purchasing two larger boats and building more adequate docks at both Mackinac City and St. Ignace. The boats make regular trips and traffic has been augmented to such an extent that it is reported sometimes there is a string of cars waiting to be taken across. And so next year another boat will be added. Should the same rate of increase continue, it will be only a matter of a few years when it will take a whole string of boats to take care of the traffic.

WHILE on the subject of the ferries mention should be made of the fact that it was Senator Bohm of Newberry who finally put through the legislature the law that made them possible. It is only one of the several instances in which the Newberry man showed his ability to have enacted legislation of benefit to the people of the state. Senator Bohm will be a candidate for Congress from this district in the 1928 election, and voters may have every assurance that this man as he was in the Michigan Senate. In the latter seat, Gladstone has a candidate in E. E. Carter who promises to make a worthy successor to Senator Bohm. Two terms in the lower house as representative from Delta county, with considerable good work to commend him, make Rep. Carter the logical choice to succeed in the election for the Michigan senate.

COME of the folks in our neighbor county of Schoolcraft are divided on the question whether a charge should be made for the use of the county camp sites. Schoolcraft had two sites, one at the fair grounds and the other at Indian Lake. The supervisor voted to set a 50-cent fee for use of the sites. That was early in the season.

Later the camp site committee of the board decided not to charge. The result was one caretaker continued to charge and the other did not.

Our Reporter Observes--

THAT outsiders comment favorably on the way local homes are kept up and beautified.

THAT the rose bush and apple tree in the yard near the fire hall were planted by Hugh McMillan about 22 years ago.

THAT Escanaba with a population of about three times ours, has approximately five times our total of telephones.

THAT our local parks are more beautiful than many so called city parks, because they are as nature made them. The trees have not been planted, nor the true beauty spotted by the leveling of the ground.

ADD TO OUR REPORTER OBSERVE THAT the U. P. will have 10 more Fire Towers constructed this year, by the Conservation Department. These greatly aid in detecting fires, and thus in conserving timber and game.

THAT pitching horseshoes is becoming a favored local sport. The "Railroad fellows" have challenged the Firemen to show their stuff.

THAT Gladstone hasn't such a bad reputation after all. Out of 5000 population, 266 have appeared in local court during the past five years for violating some law.

THAT the old Mason dock should be done away with if it is of no value and merely a fire trap, endangering the surrounding territory. The land is built up by rotten wood and despite the inter-mixed moss and rubbish creates a slow but steady fire.

THAT we are to have two new additions to our business district. Ewald Erickson will have a new building for his Dry Goods Store on the vacant lot between the Erickson Jewelry Store and Swenson Furnishings. Loyal Hanson and Einar Olson will open a Men's Store in the hub building.

THAT the summer line of vacations are in order at all business places.

THAT several new homes are "going up."

THAT we have a woman on our Board of Education for the second time in local history.

THE STORY OF A DROPPED FLY

GLADSTONE BEAT IRON MOUNTAIN 2 TO 1 WHEN ERROR DECIDES PITCHER'S BATTLE

Gladstone won from Iron Mountain Sunday. And the story of the game is largely the story of a fumbled fly ball, a lucky break that came to the locals in the seventh inning, which netted them two runs, enough to win as Millard had held the visitors except in a single inning when they had scored a lonely tally.

When the seventh came, Gladstone's warriors decided that the "hour had come." It was the appointed time for the winning of the ball game, and Harry Knapp who had been kept out of the game because he had developed a "Charlie" turned out to be the hero, thanks to the happy break that came to Gladstone. It was all like this. Williams, first up walked. White sacrificed him on to second, and Williams went to third on Johnson's infield out. Tedeschi, Iron Mountain hurler, took no chances with Patten, walking him to bring up Ackley. That's where he guessed wrong. For Harry Knapp was sent in to pitch and he stood two and two when he sent a high fly to center. Williams and Patten were around to home when the ball landed in the hands of Outfielder Grogan. He hesitated momentarily, then slipped to the ground, allowing the two runs to score. Grogan ended the inning with a snap throw to first which caught Knapp off the base.

Iron Mountain made its lone tally in the second, after one was out. Hoffman tripped to deep right field corner. He scored on Soderburg's infield out. That was all the scoring for the visitors although they had another taken from them by a beautiful throw from left field by Gottfried Johnson which caught Rabot at the plate after he had doubled and Tedeschi had singled.

Gladstone had not so further than the second sack up to the seventh. Tedeschi, resorting to his famous emery ball when in the pinches, threw the trick delivery very effectively when runners were in scoring position. Gladstone got one hit in each of the first four innings. Jensen getting one in the first and third, Johnson, singling in the second and Williams in the fourth. That was all the hitting for Gladstone's sluggers, and the two runs were made without a hit, two walks, an infield out and an outfield error providing them as already related.

The game was one of the most exciting ever seen here. There were thrills in almost every inning and the game was kept going at a steady clip, the only delay occurring in the ninth when Iron Mountain protest Umpire Haberman's decision at first base, they claiming that Grogan, second up, was safe. Umpire Snyder of Iron Mountain, had agreed to umpire balls and strikes throughout the game. It was he that announced that Iron Mountain would finish the game under protest. Afterward when the protest was filed at Marquette, Iron Mountain made it on the grounds that Umpire Haberman was not an official umpire. The local management will not make an answer to the protest except by request. It is not likely to be necessary as there seems little ground for it, as Iron Mountain could have entered its objection before the game started. Had the local management been looking for an unfair advantage, it certainly would not have been the one to suggest permitting the visitors to have their own umpire officiate back of the plate to the whole nine innings.

Michigan last year paid an average of $31.590 per mile for all concrete roads built.

There remains little question in this writer's mind as to whether baseball on the scale now conducted in the Upper Peninsula Baseball association is advisable. It absolutely is not. First of all the gate pays little more than half of the expense; the race for a championship sets too fast a pace and each town is compelled to spend more than it wants to to keep a team that will be

Base Ball Gossip

Stanley Millard pitched a wonderful game, allowing but five hits, striking out seven, and neither hitting or walking a batsman throughout the nine innings.

That Millard was not pitching the same stuff as he usually did last season, is shown by the fact that Gervais had 13 put outs at first base. Last year there were not that many in any two games pitched by Millard.

Lefty Patten played a nice game at center. He was slated to pitch Thursday at Escanaba, and Millard will probably be the pitching choice for next Sunday's game against Marquette.

Gladstone was just a half game out of first place after Sunday's games, as Houghton beat Calumet and went to the top and Marquette losing to Munising dropped to second place, just a fraction of a game ahead of the locals.

It was a hard game for Iron Mountain to lose, especially on a misplay. And the visitors are a bunch of good fellows, but when they saw the last chance go a glimmering in the ninth inning they forgot their sportsmanship long enough to protest a base decision that was as right as a fable can be. Gervais leaned over to take Knapp's throw, and the ball rolled over. The claim was that his foot was lifted before catching the ball. Gervais is experienced enough at first that he would hardly have fallen had it been necessary for him to pull his foot off there that he did go over. And the writer was on the visitors' bench at the time, so we know exactly how the play looked from that direction.

The response to the management's appeal for a larger attendance fell on deaf ears, apparently. There were just a few over 400 paid admissions at the Iron Mountain game. The situation was such that the five directors were asked to meet Monday night to decide whether the team would be disbanded or kept going. The decision was to put out season tickets, good for two admissions to all remaining games, and if no less than 150 of these could be sold within the next ten days to keep going; otherwise the money would be returned to the purchasers and the team disbanded. There is now a shortage of $250 despite the fact that business men, industries and individuals have donated close to $800.

Miss Astrid Skoquist returned Monday from a weeks vacation spent with relatives at Manistique.

An attraction. The towns in the peninsula should go through with their schedules but next year they should decide to go back to something else, on a smaller scale.

Kircher played a nice game on second Sunday, taking eight chances without an error. On Feeny, also a local product, had a big chance for the visitors. Con also got a hit but was out trying to steal on his former team mates.

Lloyd Ackley started out with an error on the first man but Lloyd showed he had the right baseball stuff by coming back and accepting a chance a moment later. He was played at short stop because Knapp had a pair of bum legs. All Ackley needs is a little more experience.

Gottfried Johnson's peg to get Rabot in the fifth was really a wonderful throw. It saved a run and as it developed, the ball game.

Saturday afternoon at 3:30 the McCoy Nolan Giants will play a game here. This colored team travels from Milwaukee and are a big attraction in this country each year. Walter Vanderwehe is slated to pitch against them for Gladstone.

The Judge:

HE HAD NO JUDICIAL MIND—BY M. B.

(A Weekly Panorama of Events in the National Capital. By Peter Keegan for the Delta Reporter.)

THOUGH ABSENT from Washington, President Coolidge is keeping in close touch with governmental affairs through conferences with Cabinet officers and other officials who he summons to Swampscott whenever he wants information as to what is going on in domestic or foreign affairs. Secretary Kellogg was summoned to the summer White House to discuss the foreign debt situation and the trouble in China. Secretary of Labor Davis has been there to report on the labor troubles in the anthracite coal fields, and Secretary of War Weeks, now recuperating from his serious illness, also has been a visitor. The President's summer home at Swampscott is in its instant communication with the White House here by telephone and telegraph, while a special motorcycle mail service carries presidential mail to and from Washington.

COUNT ALEXANDER Skrzybski, Foreign Minister of Poland, has left Washington after a short visit here, during which he conferred with a number of Government officials and European diplomats. The Count will visit in New York and the Middle West before going to Williamsstown, Mass., where he will address the International Institute of Politics.

WOMEN ARE BETTER automobile drivers than men, according to tests just completed and made public by the American Automobile Association. The tests were made at George Washington University under the eye of experienced psychologists. They found that women were steadier than men when trouble loomed and that their minds worked quicker in an emergency.

THE BUREAU of Education of the Interior Department is keeping strictly neutral during the evolution row in Tennessee. Although the Bureau is charged in general with overseeing the development of education and schools, both public and private, in the United States, the director declares that he would be sure to get in bad, with one side or the other, if he revealed what he thought about teaching evolution theories and the doctrine of Darwin. It seems probable, however, that Washington and the federal government will not escape the fight that has started in the South as a movement is underway to introduce a bill in Congress this winter to prohibit the teaching of evolution in any schools in the United States and to adopt a constitutional amendment to make such legislation legal beyond any doubt or objection. There would be no end to a controversy of that kind in Congress.

HIS EFFORTS to take prohibition enforcement out of politics have brought the politicians down hard on General Andrews, the Assistant Secretary of the Treasury in charge of drying up the country. Not only does the contemplated reorganization provide for a large reduction in the number of those on the prohibition payroll, but it provides for technical men, many of whom will be of different caliber and type than those who came into the service during the time that Commissioner Roy Haynes directed prohibition enforcement. Some observers have gone so far as to predict that the reorganization would fall through as a result of Andrews' attempt to ignore the politicians picking his men, but the Secretary denies this and says the plan will go through as scheduled.

INDICATIONS that the tax fight in the next Congress will not be so bitter as had been expected are seen here in the announcement that Senator Joe Robinson of Arkansas, the Democratic leader, has tax revision views almost like those of President Coolidge and Secretary Mellon. The President wants to reduce taxes on incomes of all sizes, although he is in favor of cutting down rates on very large incomes in the belief that this will more money be released for use in private business and industry. This was one of the results of last year's tax revision, the Treasury finding that the law brought in a lot more money than had been anticipated simply because there were greater profits which could be taxed.

WASHINGTON OFFICIALDOM is watching the interest in the argument legal and otherwise, in Illinois over the efforts of the City of Chicago to get itself separated from the rest of Illinois and established as a separate state with a star of its own in the flag. If Chicago should be successful in this move, it is expected that New York City would follow suit. Chicago's kick is that the city contributes the most money to the support of the state, but is not permitted to exercise legislative control. Large cities in many states have similar complaints, but Chicago is making the most fuss about it.

During 1924 there were 1,593 bus lines started in the country, many of them being in Michigan. These lines operate 5,400 cars that cost around $30,000,000.

The Watervliet Paper company is installing two new wells with a capacity of more than two millions gallons daily which will be consumed in paper making activities at the plant.

Many Gladstone Folks Have Felt That Way

Feel all out of sorts? Tired, achy, blue, irritable? Back lame and stiff?

It may be the story of weak kidneys!

Of toxic poisons circulating about upsetting blood and nerves. There's a way to feel right again. Help your weakened kidneys with Doan's Pills—a stimulant diuretic. Doan's are recommended by many Gladstone people.

Mrs. Roy Eagle, 528 N. Eleventh st., says: "I had the flu and when I recovered, my kidneys were in a disordered condition. I had constant backache and when I bent over, sharp twinges caught me across my kidneys. I had headaches and dizzy spells and at times everything seemed to be whirling in front of me. My kidneys didn't act regularly, either. I used Doan's Pills from Dehlin's Drug store and they cured me." Co., Mrs. Buffalo, N. Y.
